PREFACE TO THE TWELFTH E.

THE last edition of this work was published in May, 1924, after the Amending Acts XII and XVIII of 1923 had come into full force. These two Acts effected amendments of an important nature with regard to quality as well as to quantity. The last edition was all sold up in less than a year and for the last year or more there has been constant demand for the book and incessant enquiries were made of the editors and publishers as to whether the copies of the last edition could be obtained. So we were obliged to bring forth this edition after nearly three years from the publication of the last one. In this edition the reported and unreported case law has been brought up to the January, 1927. The Bombay Children Act is newly added to the Appendix. The Sale of Contract Act XIII of 1859 is omitted from this edition, as it is repealed by Act III of 1925. The passing of the Indian Workmen's Compensation Act made the Sale of Contract Act useless for many purposes; so the Legislature thought it desirable to repeal it.

In this edition much interest centres upon the new cases interpreting and defining the effect of the important amendments made by Acts XII and XVIII of 1923. These cases have been very carefully noted in their proper places and thorough attempt made to reconcile them as far as possible.

In the preparation of this edition, my special thanks are due to B. C. Vaidya, B.A., Bar-at-Law of Lincoln's Inn, who was of great use to me in the preparation of the Index and also in discussing and pointing out to me the new case law on the topics of this code.

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE

(WITH NOTES ON CLAUSES).

We, the undersigned Members of the Joint Committee to which the Bill further to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, and the Court Fees Act, 1870, was referred, have considered the Bill * * * and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us annexed thereto

The Committee at its first meeting proceeded under rule 42 to elect the Honourable Dr Sanyal as its Chairman. The statement appended to our Report shows the number of the meetings held and the names of the Members who attended each meeting.

The following notes on the clauses of the Bill refer to all the important changes which we have made in the Bill. We have made a large number of small drafting amendments to which we do not think it is necessary to draw attention in detail —

Clause 2 — We do not see sufficient reason for differentiating between sections 437 and 528 on the one hand and sections 192 and 407, on the other, and we have therefore included the first mentioned sections in the proposed sub-section (3) of section 10. We think that the suggestion that this sub-section should be transferred to section 17 of the Code should be considered if and when the Code is consolidated. We would not attempt any definition of the word 'inferior' used in sections 435 and 436 as suggested by the Calcutta Bar Library Club. The Courts do not seem to have experienced difficulty in interpreting the word. Nor do we agree with the same critics that any amendment is necessary in the last column of Schedule II, against section 124 A. Their point appears to us to be covered by sections 10 (2) and 18 (4), as proposed, read with section 28 (c).

Clause 3 — We think there is force in the suggestion of the Calcutta Bar Library Club that it is not necessary to restrict the appointment of an Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate to persons who are already Presidency Magistrates, and have therefore substituted the words "any person" for the words "any Presidency Magistrate".

Clause 5 — This clause was introduced by the Committee which sat on the Bill in 1916. They refer to it in their note on clause 2 which makes certain amendments in section 10 of the Code regarding the appointment of Additional District Magistrates. We think that if it is necessary in section 29 (1) to refer to the provisions of section 10, then it is also necessary to make a reference to section 18 which as amended will provide for the appointment of Additional Chief Presidency Magistrates. But in view of the fact that sections 10 (2) and 18 (4) as proposed provide for the conferment on Additional District Magistrates and Additional Chief Presidency Magistrates respectively of all the powers exercisable by District Magistrates and Chief Presidency Magistrates under the Code and also under any other law for the time being in force, we are not satisfied that any amendment of section 29 is necessary in this respect. We have, however, amended the opening words of the section to bring them into conformity with the language of section 28.

Clause 6 — In view of the fact that the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897, has to a considerable extent been repealed in Madras by the Madras Children Act, 1920, and may be repealed elsewhere we have proposed an addition to the new section 29-A, to provide for such cases.

the amendments proposed by this clause, but, as a matter of words "in which" for the words "to which"

Clause 8 — 10 — Some of our non-official members deprecated any extension of the drafting, have suggested, and on the whole, in view of the fact that prosecution for contravention of the section are rare, we thought that the matter was not one of great importance score, therefore, deleted clause 9

We are agreed, however, that the same considerations do not apply to section 45 where the obligation to give information to the police is laid on a restricted class of persons, and we have maintained the additions made to clause (c) of sub-section (1). We think that, in the cases referred to in clause (d), the obligation to give information should only arise when a reasonable suspicion exists that a non-bailable offence has been committed. We have made an amendment in sub-section (3) to meet a difficulty pointed out by the Central Provinces Government.

Clause 11 — We think that the amendment of section 54 as drafted, might lead to the interpretation that a requisition could only be issued in cases where arrest was lawful under the first clause of sub-section (1). We do not think that this was the intention, and we would therefore add a separate clause for arrest on requisition. We agree with those critics who desire that some safeguard should be provided, and we have, therefore, proposed to lay down that the requisition shall reveal the offence or other cause for which the arrest is to be made, so that the arresting officer can satisfy himself that the arrest could lawfully have been made without warrant by the officer issuing the requisition.

Clause 13 — We think that the words "without unnecessary delay" should govern all that follows and we have made a slight drafting change to effect this.

Clause 14 — The sub-sections which the Bill adds to section 88 imply that the Court which issues an order of attachment or endorses the same under sub-section (2) is to investigate and determine a claim or objection. We think that a limited power to transfer claims and objections for disposal to subordinate Magistrates would be useful and we have, therefore, provided that District Magistrates may transfer such cases to Magistrates not below the rank of second class Magistrates, and that Chief Presidency Magistrates may likewise transfer cases to Presidency Magistrates subordinate to them. The other amendments that we have made in this clause are consequential upon this.

Clause 15 — We consider that the words "if necessary" add nothing to the section and that they may cause difficulty in that a person charged with an offence under sub-section (5) of section 103 might raise the defence that there was no necessity for an order in writing. We have, therefore, deleted them. We also think that a prosecution should not be launched under sub-section (5) unless the order in writing has been delivered or tendered to the person to whom it is addressed.

Clause 16 — We agree generally that convictions for offences under Chapter VIII of the Indian Penal Code should justify action under section 106 but we have made an exception in the case of section 153-A of the Indian Penal Code.

Clause 18 — In view of the recent amendments made in the Press and Registration of
 No. 18 of Act 1887 — 1
 nual amendment
 ould only extend

Clause 19—We notice that clause (d) of section 117, which makes reference to the counterfeiting of currency notes which are therefore included offences under sections 489 A to 489 D of the Criminal Code, is omitted by the Bill, omits the same. We have also included amendment to the present law. We have

We considered a suggestion that clause (f) of section 110 should be deleted in the clause that it should be possible to bring every case under clause (f) within the remaining section. We decided by a majority to retain the clause on the ground

Clause 20—In view of the numerous objections to the addition proposed by sub-clause (1) to sub-section (2) of section 117 we are doubtful of the wisdom of the addition and we have therefore omitted it.

We approve of the principle of new sub-section (3) of section 117 which is an alternative to the immediate arrest allowed by the proviso to section 114 enables a Magistrate to make an interim order for security. But we see no reason why the interim order should not be in certain cases one for security for good behaviour provided that an order of this nature is not made in proceedings under section 107. We have also re-drafted the proviso to new sub-section (3) in the hope of making its intention clearer.

We decided in favour of maintaining the amendment of present sub-section (3) which will enable the fact that a person is so desperate and dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community to be proved by evidence of general reputation. Our colleague Sayyad Raza Ali dissents from this view. On the other hand we think that the deletion of the words "or otherwise" would be a mistake as the Courts might hold that some change in the law was intended by their omission and that the sub-section was intended to be exhaustive of the methods of proof.

Clause 21—We have adopted the suggestion that the provisions of new section 122 should be elaborated so as to enable a Magistrate to reject a surety previously accepted by him or his predecessor. This involves a few consequential amendments in the section which we have made. We think that the procedure set out in sub-sections (2) and (3) of section 126 should apply in the case of a surety subsequently rejected and we have added a new clause which makes the necessary amendments in section 126. We have also laid down the grounds on which a Magistrate will be justified in rejecting a surety as an unfit person for the purposes of the bond. The three points which we have included are the only points that have been considered by the High Courts.

Clause 22—We accept the amendments made in section 123 by this clause. We have added another amendment to provide that sub-section (6) of section 123 as it stands shall apply only to cases for security under section 110. We think that in cases under sections 108 and 109 imprisonment in default of furnishing security should be simple.

It has been pointed out that though the object of new sub-section (3-A) is to avoid differences of opinion in a single case between the Magistrate and the Sessions Judge yet the amendment proposed by clause 106 in section 406 may have this very result inasmuch as in a single case one accused person may appeal to the District Magistrate while the case of another accused person will be referred to the Sessions Judge. The Bombay Government have suggested that where the case of one accused has to be referred to the Sessions Judge under section 123 the case of all should be referred whether they have given security or not. We have adopted this suggestion.

Clause 25—The principal question in connection with this clause is whether as proposed in the Bill questions of title in relation to rights of way and the like should be provided for the pur-

the Magistrate, or whether the almost uniform decisions of the that the Magistrate must stay proceedings if he is satisfied that the the Chapter, be finally bona fide should be followed. We prefer to accept the latter view as laid High Courts, why v Bidhu Bhushin Sircar 11 R., 42 Cal 158, and, as the case will not question proceedings under this section and more especially as we incline to the opinion that the down redrafting of section 135 is not altogether satisfactory, we have provided for it as a special and a new section 139 A. Our proposals involve the necessity of laying down clearly that the Magistrate only is competent to inquire into a claim relating to title. In view of section 142 and of the fact that in a case of any importance either the person against whom the order was originally made or some member of the public will bring the matter before a Civil Court, we do not think it necessary to lay down that the Magistrate may resume the proceedings upon the failure by the person against whom the order was made to institute civil proceedings within a reasonable time.

Clause 26—We accept the amendment made in section 144 by this clause. It was suggested to us that section 144 should be elaborated so as to enable a person aggrieved by an order made under the section to require the Magistrate to make a judicial inquiry regarding the truth of the information on which he had acted and thereby to bring in the revisional powers of the High Court. With the exception of Sayad Raza Ali we think this proposal goes too far, and that it is necessary to maintain the executive character of proceedings under section 144. We are however prepared—and we have proposed an amendment to this effect—to lay down that a person aggrieved shall be entitled to apply to the Magistrate and show cause against the order and that the Magistrate shall give him an opportunity to be heard in person or by pleader and shall record an order in writing on the application giving his reasons where he rejects it.

Clauses 27 to 30—In view of the objections of the Bengal Government, we do not think sections 145, 147 and 148 should apply to the presidency towns. We have therefore, omitted the first amendment made by clause 27, and the references to 'Presidency Magistrate' and 'Chief Presidency Magistrate,' respectively, in clauses 29 and 30.

In order to meet certain difficulties which have arisen in connection with the words receive the evidence produced by them in section 145 (4) we have made an amendment adopting the phraseology of section 244 (1) and have also added a new sub-section (8-A) on the lines of section 244 (2). We have made an addition to the first amendment made in sub-section (6) of section 145 to make the intention clearer. We have introduced a new clause which, by an amendment of section 146 will enable a District Magistrate to withdraw the attachment of property at any time when he is satisfied that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace.

Doubts have been expressed as to the procedure to be followed in cases under section 147 and we have introduced amendments here to make it clear that the procedure is to be that laid down by section 145.

Clause 31—In view of the general objection to the amendment which confines investigations to officers not below the rank of Sub-Inspector, we have made an amendment which enables Local Governments to specify a lower rank. We recognise that police work in some Provinces might be severely hampered by the first amendment made by the Bill in section 157.

With regard to the second amendment we observe that investigations are made under section 157 'from information received or otherwise.' There will not necessarily, therefore always be an informant and we have inserted the words 'if any' after the word 'informant'.

Clause 33—We discussed the provisions of the Bill considered in detail the opinions received in connection with the criticisms directed against the section but we do not think new section 162 at length and contradict by means of police officers a prosecution witness who harness the force of some of should power be given in respect of a defence witness. We have therefore, should be given to

Clause 34—The intention of the Bill was to leave the position in regard to, and still less made under section 164 unaltered but to confine the recording of confessions under the unaltered superior Magistrates. We approve the Bill in so far as it deals with confessions and wants that statements also should not be recorded under the section by third-class Magistrates at an by second-class Magistrates unless specially empowered

We consider that a statutory obligation should be laid on a Magistrate acting under the section to warn an accused person about to make a confession that the same may be used against him and we think that the certificate prescribed by sub-section (3) should record the fact that the warning had been given

Clause 35—Suggestions have been made that section 165 as re-drafted by the Bill goes too far and that it should only permit a search to be made for something specified. We think the utility of the section would be largely impaired if effect were given to these suggestions, but we have provided a safeguard by requiring that an officer acting under sub-section (1) or sub-section (3) shall record in writing his reasons for making a search or requiring a search to be made.

Clause 36—In the Bill as introduced an investigating officer could not be below the rank of Sub-Inspector. We have proposed to some extent to remove this restriction but we are inclined to think that the powers conferred by section 166 should not be exercised by a police-officer making an investigation who is below the rank of Sub-Inspector. We realise, however, that there may be administrative difficulties in this connection and if such difficulties are pointed out by Local Government we should be prepared to retain clause 36 unamended

Clause 37—In section 167 however, which confers a power to ask for a remand we would confine the operation to investigating officers not below the rank of Sub-Inspector

We consider that the Bill does not go far enough in its restriction of the Magistrates who should be authorised to remand to police custody. We would confine the power to first-class Magistrates and second-class Magistrates specially empowered

Clause 38—We see no cogent reason for the first amendment of sections 169 and 170 which substitutes the words upon the completion of an investigation for upon an investigation. In the case of 169, we agree that the power contemplated by the section should be exercisable by investigating officers and we see no reason in this case to restrict the power to officers not below the rank of Sub-Inspector. With regard to section 170 however, we consider that the direct responsibility for sending up a case should rest with the officer in charge of the police-station. Section 168 undoubtedly contemplates that the officer in charge is to assume responsibility, and to enable all investigating officers to send up cases under section 170 without reference to the officer in charge would tend to make section 168 of no effect

We considered whether the power to admit to bail in bailable cases should not be extended to investigating officers but on the whole we are inclined to confine this power also to the officer in charge of the police station

Clause 39—We have deleted this clause as we think that the power to send a witness to the Court in custody should only be exercisable by the officer in charge of the police-station

the Magistrate or whether the almost uniform decisions of the that the Magistrate must stay proceedings if he is satisfied that the Chapter be final bona fide should be followed. We prefer to accept the latter view as laid High Courts why Bdu Bhushan Sircar I I R 42 Cal 153 and as the case will not question proceedings under this section and more especially as we incline to the opinion that the down redrafting of section 135 is not altogether satisfactory we have provided for it as a special and a new section 139 A. Our proposals involve the necessity of laying down clearly that the Magistrate only is competent to inquire into a claim relating to title. In view of section 142 and of the fact that in a case of any importance either the person against whom the order was originally made or some member of the public will bring the matter before a Civil Court we do not think it necessary to lay down that the Magistrate may resume the proceedings upon the failure by the person against whom the order was made to institute civil proceedings within a reasonable time.

Clause 26—We accept the amendment made in section 144 by this clause. It was suggested to us that section 144 should be elaborated so as to enable a person aggrieved by an order made under the section to require the Magistrate to make a judicial inquiry regarding the truth of the information on which he had acted and thereby to bring in the revisional powers of the High Court. With the exception of Saiyad Raza Ali we think this proposal goes too far and that it is necessary to maintain the executive character of proceedings under section 144. We are however prepared—and we have proposed an amendment to this effect—to lay down that a person aggrieved shall be entitled to apply to the Magistrate and show cause against the order and that the Magistrate shall give him an opportunity to be heard in person or by pleader and shall record an order in writing on the application giving his reasons where he rejects it.

Clauses 27 to 30—In view of the objections of the Bengal Government we do not think sections 145, 147 and 148 should apply to the presidency towns. We have therefore omitted the first amendment made by clause 27 and the references to Presidency Magistrate and Chief Presidency Magistrate respectively in clauses 29 and 30.

In order to meet certain difficulties which have arisen in connection with the words receive the evidence produced by them in section 145 (4) we have made an amendment adopting the phraseology of section 244 (1) and have also added a new sub-section (8-A) on the lines of section 244 (2). We have made in addition to the first amendment made in sub-section (8) of section 145 to make the intention clearer. We have introduced a new clause which by an amendment of section 146 will enable a District Magistrate to withdraw the attachment of property at any time when he is satisfied that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace.

Doubts have been expressed as to the procedure to be followed in cases under section 147 and we have introduced amendments here to make it clear that the procedure is to be that laid down by section 145.

Clause 31—In view of the general objection to the amendment which confines investigations to officers not below the rank of Sub-Inspector we have made an amendment which enables Local Governments to specify a lower rank. We recognise that police work in some Provinces might be severely hampered by the first amendment made by the Bill in section 157.

With regard to the second amendment we observe that investigations are made under section 157 from information received or otherwise. There will not necessarily, therefore, always be an informant, and we have inserted the words 'if any' after the word informant.

Clause 33—We discussed the provisions of the Bill considered in detail the opinions received in connection with the criticisms directed against the section but we do not think new section 162 at length and contradict by means of police officers a prosecution witness who harness the force of some of should power be given in respect of a defence witness. We have, therefore, should be given to Clause 34—The intention of the Bill was to leave the position in regard to the recording of confessions under the superior Magistrates. We approve the Bill in so far as it deals with confessions and wants that statements also should not be recorded under the section by third-class Magistrates at an by second-class Magistrates unless specially empowered.

We consider that a statutory obligation should be laid on a Magistrate acting under the section to warn an accused person about to make a confession that the same may be used against him, and we think that the certificate prescribed by sub-section (3) should record the fact that the warning had been given.

Clause 35—Suggestions have been made that section 165 as re-drafted by the Bill goes too far and that it should only permit a search to be made for something specified. We think the utility of the section would be largely impaired if effect were given to these suggestions, but we have provided a safeguard by requiring that an officer acting under sub-section (1) or sub-section (3) shall record in writing his reasons for making a search or requiring a search to be made.

Clause 36—In the Bill as introduced an investigating officer could not be below the rank of Sub-Inspector. We have proposed to some extent to remove this restriction, but we are inclined to think that the powers conferred by section 166 should not be exercised by a police-officer making an investigation who is below the rank of Sub-Inspector. We realise, however, that there may be administrative difficulties in this connection, and if such difficulties are pointed out by Local Government, we should be prepared to return clause 36 unamended.

Clause 37—In section 167, however, which confers a power to ask for a remand, we would confine the operation to investigating officers not below the rank of Sub-Inspector.

We consider that the Bill does not go far enough in its restriction of the Magistrates who should be authorised to remand to police custody. We would confine the power to first class Magistrates and second-class Magistrates specially empowered.

Clause 38—We see no cogent reason for the first amendment of sections 169 and 170, which substitutes the words "upon the completion of an investigation" for "upon an investigation." In the case of 169, we agree that the power contemplated by the section should be exercisable by investigating officers, and we see no reason in this case to restrict the power to officers not below the rank of Sub-Inspector. With regard to section 170, however, we consider that the direct responsibility for sending up a case should rest with the officer in charge of the police. Section 168 undoubtedly contemplates that the officer in charge is to assume responsibility to enable all investigating officers to send up cases under section 170 without reference to the officer in charge would tend to make section 168 of no effect.

We considered whether the power to admit to bail in bailable cases should be extended to investigating officers, but on the whole we are inclined to confine this power to the officer in charge of the police station.

Clause 39—We have deleted this clause, as we think that the power to send a person to the Court in custody should only be exercisable by the officer in charge of the police station.

we think that the functions contemplated by section 173 should be exercised by the Magistrate only

Clause 40—We have considered the objections raised to clause (b) which the Bill adds to section 173 (1) but we are in favour of retaining it. But we have, as in clause 31 introduced, many amendments to meet the case where there is no informant.

Clause 45—We approve the amendment made in section 190 by this clause, but we think that Courts should take cognizance under section 190 (1) (b) only upon reports in writing.

Clause 47—We approve generally the amendment of section 195 proposed by the Bill but in sub-clauses (b) and (c) of sub-section (1) instead of providing for a complaint by the Local Government or some officer duly authorised in this behalf we prefer to have a complaint made by order of or under authority from the Local Government as in section 196.

The drafting of sub-section (7) which now becomes sub-section (3) has been the subject of severe criticism and we have introduced an amendment which we think removes the objections which have been raised to the existing sub-section.

We have here introduced a new clause in the Bill making a consequential amendment in section 196-A which has apparently been overlooked.

Clause 48—New section 196-B is designed to meet the difficulty which arises from the fact that cases under sections 196 and 196-A cannot be properly investigated by the police before complaints are made. Doubts have arisen as to whether investigations can be ordered under section 155 (2) by a Magistrate without his taking cognizance of the case. The new section will provide for a preliminary investigation (we have substituted the word investigation for the word inquiry). We recognise that it does not altogether meet the case where the desirability of adding a new charge arises in the Sessions Court. It has been suggested that this difficulty might be met to some extent by substituting the words proceed to the trial for the words take cognizance in sections 196 and 196-A. But on the whole we prefer not to make this change and to leave clause 48 of the Bill unaltered in substance. In addition to the alteration referred to above we have made a slight drafting change.

Clause 49—It has been pointed out to us that difficulties with regard to section 197 have recently come to light. There are certain public servants who are only removable from office by the Secretary of State and it is unreasonable that they should obtain no protection under the section. Further in view of section 4 (2) of the Code the word Judge has to be interpreted according to the definition given in section 19 of the Indian Penal Code with the result that Magistrates acting in certain capacities under the Code e.g. when holding inquiries obtain no protection. We have therefore proposed a re-draft of sub-section (1) of section 197 to meet these difficulties. We have confined the operation of the section to public servants removable by a Local Government or some higher authority and have provided that the sanction required for a prosecution will be the sanction of the authority which has power to remove. Mr Chaudhri would prefer to leave section 197 unaltered save in so far as the Bill proposed to amend it. He considers that the amendment proposed by us would enhance the difficulty of obtaining sanction.

Clause 51—We note that the case of the absent husband will in view of the amendment proposed in the Bill be provided for twice. Under section 199 of the Code as it stands any person who had care of the woman on behalf of the absent husband at the time when the offence was committed can make a complaint whereas under the proviso any other person may with the leave of the Court, make a complaint. We think this was provided for by the proviso removed. We have, therefore, removed the case of absence from the proviso and have provided for it in the case where the husband is absent.

Clause 52—We have adopted the suggestion that the new section should apply to lunatics as well as to minors. We note that there has been some criticism of this section and we have re-drafted a portion of it so as to provide that, where the person applying to leave to make a complaint has not been declared by competent authority to be the guardian of the person of the minor or lunatic, and where the Court is satisfied that such guardian has been appointed, the Court shall give such guardian a reasonable opportunity of objecting to the application.

Clause 53—We have re-drafted the new proviso to section 200 to bring it more into line with the existing provisos and also to remove the idea that when the complainant is a Court there is any possibility of examining the complainant.

Clause 54—We approve the alterations made by this clause in section 202 subject to the following remarks. The words "where such examination is prescribed by this Code" cover the case of a Presidency Magistrate referred to in proviso (b) to section 200. We consider that Presidency Magistrates should be required to examine the complainant and to record his statement in cases where the Court intends to postpone issue of process and order an inquiry under section 202 (1).

Clause 55—We see no force in the introduction of the word "previous," and we have deleted it. We have also made a slight drafting alteration in this clause.

Clause 58—We have given effect to the suggestion of the Calcutta High Court that powers under section 219 should only be exercised by Magistrates who are empowered to commit for trial.

Clause 63—We consider that the re-draft of section 239 proposed by this clause is a great improvement on the existing section. We have discussed the various criticisms which have been levelled against the clause and have not seen our way to make any amendment of substance. We think it would be dangerous, if not impossible, to attempt any definition of the phrase "in the course of the same transaction." An exhaustive definition is not feasible and if the phraseology is altered the Courts would be deprived of the guidance which they now have from a long series of rulings on the point. We do not find that there has been any pronounced conflict of opinion, the reason being that the Courts, instead of attempting to lay down general principles as a rule discuss each case on its merits. We have adopted a suggestion to substitute the words "is alleged to have been transferred" for the words "has been transferred" in clause (e).

Clause 65—We have introduced an amendment in section 244 to provide for the case when a complaint is made by a Court, and we have introduced a new clause 67 A in the Bill making a similar amendment in section 252.

Clause 66—We are doubtful whether a Magistrate acting under section 349 records a finding. All that the section requires him to do is to record his opinion. We have, therefore, proposed a re-draft of this clause.

Clause 67—We think that the words "or to a Magistrate" near the beginning of this clause were left out on the ground that information to a Magistrate from any person other than a police-officer must be a complaint. We think that this view overlooks the words "with a view to his taking action under this Code" which occur in the definition of "complaint." We also think that there is some force in the fact pointed out by the Calcutta High Court that section 190 (1) (c) seems to draw a distinction between information received and a complaint. We have, therefore, restored the words "or to a Magistrate."

we think that the functions contemplated by section 173 should

Clause 40—^H considered the objections raised to clause (b) which the Bill adds to section

We consider that Presidency Magistrates should be required to examine the complainant and to record his statement in cases where the Court intends to postpone issue of process and order an inquiry under section 202 (1).

Clause 55—We see no force in the introduction of the word previous and we have deleted it. We have also made a slight drafting alteration in this clause.

Clause 58—We have given effect to the suggestion of the Calcutta High Court that powers under section 219 should only be exercised by Magistrates who are empowered to commit for trial.

We have adopted a suggestion to substitute the words is alleged to have been transferred for the words has been transferred in clause (c).

Clause 65—We have introduced an amendment in section 244 to provide for the case when a complaint is made by a Court and we have introduced a new clause 67 A in the Bill making a similar amendment in section 252.

Clause 66—We are doubtful whether a Magistrate acting under section 349 records a finding. All that the section requires him to do is to record his opinion. We have therefore proposed a re-draft of this clause.

Clause 67—We think that the words or to a Magistrate near the beginning of this clause were left out on the ground that information to a Magistrate from any person other than a police-officer must be a complaint. We think that this view overlooks the words with a view to his taking action under this Code which occur in the definition of complaint. We also think that there is some force in the fact pointed out by the Calcutta High Court that section 190 (1), seems to draw a distinction between information received and a complaint. We have restored the words or to a Magistrate.

does not provide for the case where the complainant is absent, and we think power should be given in such a case to summon

Sub-section (1) use

at the time judgment is given that there is some anomaly in enabling a Magistrate who cannot impose a fine of Rs 50 to award compensation up to Rs 100 and we have, therefore, proposed to limit the amount of compensation which third-class Magistrates can award to Rs 50 of In view of section 547, we do not see any necessity to provide in the new sub-section (2-A) that compensation should be recoverable as if it were a fine

We have re-drafted the proposed addition to sub-section (4) to make the intention clearer

We discussed at some length the various merits of the phrases—'frivolous or vexatious' as in the present Code "false and either frivolous or vexatious" as in the Bill, and "false or vexatious to the knowledge of the party" as in Act IX of 1922 recently passed to provide for compensatory costs in respect of false claims and defences. On the whole, we are in favour of the Bill as drafted. We do not think that the procedure of section 250 should be used in every false case unless the case is also either frivolous or vexatious. In more serious cases it is desirable that the Magistrate should act under section 476 with a view to the institution of a prosecution

Clause 68—It was suggested to us that the new section 255-A is unnecessary, on the ground that though a procedure for the proof of previous convictions is necessary in a Sessions Court to prevent the jury or the Assessors from being prejudiced by anything they may hear as to the accused's previous record, yet in warrant cases the same considerations do not apply. On the whole, however, we think the new section may serve a useful purpose and we have retained it

Clause 69—The criticisms of the amendment introduced by this clause go to two extremes. On the one hand it is suggested that the accused should have a right to postpone his decision as to the cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses till the commencement of the next hearing of the case. On the other hand it has been suggested that this provision is likely to be grossly abused for purposes of the defence and that the introduction of the words "if the Magistrate thinks fit" is an inadequate safeguard. We think that the amendment proposed by the clause is a reasonable compromise between these divergent views and we therefore propose no change

Clause 70—We have re-drafted this clause for the reason referred to in our remarks under clause 66

Clause 71—The amendment proposed by the Bill would give the Magistrate discretion to discharge the accused when the complainant was absent in any case instituted upon complaint. We are inclined to think that this went too far and we think it is sufficient to extend the application of the section to cases of non-cognizable offences

Clause 72—On the whole, we are not satisfied that it is desirable to make offences under section 309 of the Indian Penal Code triable summarily, and we have, therefore, deleted this clause

Clause 76—We think the amendments proposed in section 288 effect a considerable improvement, but we would lay down that the evidence of a witness before the committing Magistrate can only be treated as evidence for all purposes 'subject to the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act.' We considered the suggestion that the power conferred by this section should be exercisable by Appellate and Revisional Courts when the lower Court had refrained from exercising it, but on the whole, we were of opinion that no provision should be made in this respect opinions on the Bill, it does not meet the case where the accused adduces only documentary evidence only. In that case the prosecutor has no right of reply under section 292. We have provided that he intends to produce oral evidence the prosecutor shall have a right of reply, but when the accused adduces only documentary evidence which is proved by the prosecution witnesses only or which the accused adduces proof then the prosecutor shall sum up and the defence shall have the right of reply.

Clause 80—We think there are two defects in this clause as drafted in the Bill. In the first place we consider that it should be clearly laid down as in the present section that the Magistrate should state his opinion separately. Secondly, the amendment made in the Bill did not necessitate the recording of the opinions. We have re-drafted the clause so as to remove these defects.

Clause 85—After considerable discussion of the provisions of section 337 and examination of the large body of opinions on this clause we have unanimously come to the following decisions—

- (a) Instead of including all offences punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years we have made the limit ten years and have added, as special cases, sections 211, 216-A, 369, 401, 435 and 477 A of the Indian Penal Code.
- (b) The Magistrates who should be allowed to tender a pardon should, in our opinion be Magistrates of the first class who are inquiring into the offence and any District Magistrate, Presidency Magistrate Sub-divisional Magistrate or, with the sanction of the District Magistrate, a Magistrate of the first class having jurisdiction in any place where the offence might be inquired into or tried.
- (c) The power to tender a pardon should be exercisable during an investigation as well as after a magisterial inquiry has begun.
- (d) We have deleted the words 'other than a Presidency Magistrate'. We see no reason why Presidency Magistrates should not record their reasons for tendering a pardon.
- (e) We do not agree with the Committee of 1916 that it should not be necessary to produce as a witness in the Sessions Court an accused person who has accepted a pardon.
- (f) We think all cases in which there is an approver should be committed for trial and we have deleted the provision which enabled cases to be transferred to section 30—Magistrates.

Clause 86—We accept clause 86 so far as it goes except that we would substitute a certificate by the Public Prosecutor for an allegation by the prosecution as the basis of the prosecution of a person who has accepted a tender of pardon. We consider, however that it is desirable to lay down some procedure with regard to the plea contemplated by the proviso to sub-section (1). The Bill contains no indication as to when this plea is to be raised and what is to be the effect of it and difficulties of procedure may obviously arise with reference to sections 255, 271 (2) and 272. We, therefore propose a new section to be added after section 339 which lays down that when a person to whom a pardon is tendered is being tried under that section he shall at the commencement of the proceedings be asked whether he raises the plea that he has complied with

It was granted and if he does so plead, the Court shall record findings that the conditions have been complied with, shall acquit the accused on the grounds that the conditions have been inserted as a new clause 86-A in the Bill.

We have added offences under 417, 418, 419, 420, 482, 483, 486 and 494 of the Criminal Code to the offences which may be compounded with the permission of the Court.

We understand that an amendment of sub-section (4) of section 345 is necessitated by the fact that its provisions have at times been grossly abused where the person competent to contract has compounded an offence in which he was to some extent implicated himself. We think, however, that the new sub-section (3-A) which the Bill introduces is likely to create great difficulties. The reference to section 198 is unsuitable because that section deals with a very small class of offences whereas sub-section (4) as it stands applies to all cases which are lawfully compoundable. Further, the words 'may be compounded by any other person who would be competent to file a complaint on his or her behalf' lead to nothing definite because under section 198 any person will be competent who obtains the leave of the Court. In cases other than those referred to in sections 198 and 199 any person is competent to file complaints and in such cases the Bill would enable any person to compound an offence. We think the most satisfactory solution is to retain sub-section (4) as it is but to make the permission of the Court necessary. We have substituted the words 'under the age of 18 years' for the words 'a minor'. We have further provided by a new sub-section that a High Court acting in the exercise of its powers of revision may allow offences to be compounded.

Clause 90—We have introduced a small amendment into section 348 to make it clear that the section does not empower the Magistrate to pass sentence in a case which he is not competent to try.

Clause 92—Our colleague Sir B C Mitter pointed out that in regard to sections 346 and 350 the general principle is recognized that a Court which convicts an accused should ordinarily act only on evidence heard by itself and suggested the advisability of applying the same principle to cases coming under section 349. The official members of the Joint Committee were of opinion that a distinction could be drawn in the case of section 349 inasmuch as under that section a Magistrate who is competent to try the offence has heard the whole of the prosecution evidence and has formed his opinion thereon whereas under section 346 a Magistrate who finds that he had not jurisdiction has only heard part of the evidence. The official members also thought that, if the provisions of section 350 were to be applied to cases under section 349, the latter would probably become inoperative as Magistrates would prefer to dispose of cases themselves and pass what in their opinion was an adequate sentence rather than run the risk of having the cases re-heard. The non-official members were of opinion that in those circumstances section 349 might be repealed. The Committee however as a whole agreed that they would not be justified in making such a drastic alteration in the Code until the point had been specifically put to Local Governments and their opinions had been invited. Clause 92 has therefore in this respect been left unaltered.

We think however that the new sub-section (4) which has been introduced in the Bill to deal with the case of Benches goes somewhat too far, and we have substituted for it a new section after section 350 which in our opinion gives effect to the law as laid down by the High Courts. Briefly, it provides that a judgment of a Bench shall be valid when the Bench is duly constituted at the time of passing the judgment and the judgment is passed by Magistrates all of whom have heard the proceedings throughout.

Clause 94—We are inclined to agree with the suggestion proposed by sub-clause (2) in sub-section (1) of section 364 that a Magistrate has to make up his mind as to the sentence point out that the re-draft begins trying the case. We do not see how this difficulty can be got rid of the difficulty amendment proposed has the advantage of bringing the language of this impose before he with the language of sections 263 and 264 and we would therefore retain this with the conformity

In order to meet difficulties that have arisen we have introduced a sub-section down that Presidency Magistrates in cases subject to appeal shall make a memorandum substance of the examination of the accused, and we have introduced a new clause making a consequential amendment in sub-section (4) of section 364

The non-official members who constituted a majority in the Committee expressed their dissatisfaction with the distinctions drawn in the Code between Presidency Magistrates and other Magistrates, and in particular with regard to this clause would have liked to see Presidency Magistrates required in warrant cases at all events to keep as full a record as any other Magistrate. But the Committee as a whole held that there was some force in the contention put forward by numerous High Court Judges that no change should be made in the Code affecting to any extent the special powers of Presidency Magistrates until a much fuller inquiry had been made into the question of their status power and procedure. We desire to take this opportunity of placing on record our hope that it may be possible to appoint a small Committee to undertake this investigation

Clause 95—In view of the objections taken by the Judges of the High Courts to the amendment of section 365 we have modified the clause in such a way as to provide that rules shall be made prescribing the manner in which the evidence shall be taken down in cases coming before the Courts, and that the evidence shall be taken down in accordance with those rules. We do not think it necessary that the Judges of the Court should take down the evidence themselves but we are of opinion that there should certainly be some record

Clause 96—We do not see any necessity to limit the privilege of dictating judgments in the manner provided by the Bill and we have therefore re-drafted this clause. We think it desirable to lay down that orders under sections 118 and 123 (3) should be deemed to be judgments for the purposes of the section

Clause 97—The proposal to repeal the words 'other than a High Court' was intended to remove the possibility of reading section 369 as if it gave High Courts unlimited powers of altering or reviewing their judgments. But there are cases other than those referred to in sections 395 and 484 in which a review of judgment is possible. We would refer to section 434 and also to clause 26 of the Letters Patent of the Presidency High Courts. The Indian Legislature has power to amend the Letters Patent of the High Courts and the amendment introduced by clause 27 might be interpreted as an intention to amend the Letters Patent in this respect. We have therefore re-drafted the amendment so as to provide that no Court shall alter or review its judgment save as provided by or under any law from the time being in force or, in the case of a High Court in its Letters Patent

Clause 98—This amendment of section 378 has been condemned by a majority of the Judges who have expressed an opinion on the Bill. In view of the fact that the difficulty which the amendment is intended to meet is probably of rare occurrence and that the second portion of the proviso will be inapplicable in the case of Judicial Commissioners' Courts which do not at present consist of five Judges we prefer to leave the law as it is, and we have deleted this clause generally of the principle embodied in this clause in that it is dealt with by procedure against immovable property through the agency of the Civil Court. Clause 99—We do not think that the matter can suitably be dealt with as a proviso to enables a fine to be dealt with with warrants of attachment against movable property. We have the Civil Court a great deal of this clause, introducing execution through the Civil Court as a rule of procedure. We think it should be made clear that the Civil Court should not arrest or detain an offender who has already been sentenced to imprisonment in default of payment of the

We recognize that the procedure prescribed may in some cases involve considerable delay and we attempted to find some more summary method of proceeding against immovable property on the lines of those laws which enable moneys due to the Crown to be recovered as arrears of land revenue. We have however, found ourselves unable to devise any procedure which will not be open to most of the objections put forward against the present clause.

Clause 103—We agree with those critics who point out that the drafting of this clause will not have the effect which the Committee of 1916 contemplated. The result of the amendments introduced will ordinarily be that imprisonment for a subsequent offence will not be concurrent with detention under section 123. The Bill in fact appears to alter the law as laid down by the High Courts, which is that when a person is in jail in default of giving security, a sentence of imprisonment for a subsequent offence passed subsequently must take effect at once. We think that in most cases this is what the law should be, that is to say, in cases where an offence has been committed prior to the order under section 123 but the conviction takes place subsequently, the sentences should ordinarily run concurrently, but where the offence is committed after the order under section 123 has been passed, e.g., cases of escape from custody or jail or of offences committed in jail, then we think that the imprisonment for the subsequent offence should ordinarily not be concurrent, otherwise the prisoner might in some cases receive no further punishment for his subsequent offence. We have, therefore, re-drafted this clause on these lines.

Clause 104—We have substituted the word 'law' for the word 'Act' so as to enable the provisions of section 401 to be applied in the case of persons sentenced by tribunals constituted by Regulations or Ordinances.

Clause 107—We note that there has been considerable criticism on this clause which provides for an appeal against an order refusing to accept a surety. But we think that, if no appeal is provided, most cases are bound to be taken up in revision and we would retain the clause. We have made a slight amendment consequential on our proposals regarding section 122.

We do not agree that all appeals under sections 406 and 406-A should lie to the Sessions Judge. Sayad Raza Ali dissents from this view.

Clauses 109 and 111—In view of the fact that the whole question of the trial of European British subjects has recently been under examination by a Committee appointed for the purpose, we do not think that the present Bill should attempt to deal with isolated provisions of the Code, and we have therefore deleted the amendment of clause (a) of the proviso to section 408.

It has been pointed out that, even with the amendment proposed by clause III, there will still be anomalies in that the cases of persons who will have a right to appeal under section 415-A and who do not appeal will not be covered. We think, however, that the Legislature has gone as far as it can in giving a right of appeal in the cases referred to and if injustice results, the powers of remission can always be exercised under section 401.

There is some force in the criticism that, if the accused with an appealable sentence postpones the presentation of his appeal until the period of limitation is about to expire difficulties may arise in the case of the other accused whose right to appeal then accrues. It is possible that their case could be met by action under section 5 of the Indian Limitation Act 1908. But on the whole, we think it safer to lay down that notwithstanding anything contained in that Act the period prescribed by the Act for an appeal shall in the case of such persons run from the date when their right to appeal accrued—that is the date on which a first appeal is preferred by a co-accused who received an appealable sentence.

Clause 113—For the reasons given under clause 98 we have deleted this amendment of section 429. We notice that the proposed amendment would also have applied in the case of revisions in view of the last words of section 439 (1).

Clause 114—It has been suggested from various quarters that revision should be allowed in respect of proceedings under sections 143 and 144 and Chapter XII. We do not agree that any change should be made in the law in this respect. Sayid Raza Ali dissents from this conclusion so far as cases under section 144 are concerned.

The non-official members of the Committee who were present when this clause came under discussion were unanimously of opinion that a revision should be allowed in respect of proceedings under sections 476-A and 476-B. The official members on the other hand thought that this was unnecessary in view of the facts that a right of appeal is allowed under section 476-B and that there are no revision proceedings in connection with a complaint filed by a private individual. In this connection however it was pointed out by non-official members that a Court making a complaint cannot be held directly responsible and cannot be prosecuted under section 211 of the Indian Penal Code whereas this possibility in the case of a private complainant acts as a safeguard against the indiscriminate filing of complaints. We have amended the Bill in accordance with the opinion of the majority.

Clauses 115 and 116—We are doubtful of the necessity for the amendment introduced by clause 115. The words instead of directing a fresh inquiry in section 436 appear to us to refer to the inquiry which can be directed under the next following section and to substitute the words direct that further inquiry be made into the case are to some extent redundant. We think that an interchange of sections 436 and 437 would make the intention clearer. We have added a proviso to the present section 437 to give effect to the rule laid down by the Courts that a fresh inquiry should not be made into the case of a person who has been discharged unless he has had an opportunity of showing cause.

Clause 117—We have in the interests of brevity re-drafted the amendment proposed by this clause.

We have introduced here an amendment of section 439 consequential upon the alterations made by the Bill in section 195.

Clauses 120 to 125—Since the amendments of Chapter XXXIV were drafted by the Committee which sat in 1916 the Legislature has made an amendment of section 35 (2) of the Indian Lunacy Act 1912 and that section now covers exactly the power given to the Local Government by proviso (b) to section 466 (2) and by section 471 (2) to direct any person in respect of whom an order of confinement has been made under those sections to be detained in a jail, lunatic asylum or other place of safe custody. In so far therefore as these two provisions purport to give the Local Government power to vary an order of detention by prescribing any other place of safe custody they are superfluous as the power already exists in the Indian Lunacy Act, 1912. We do not consider that a power is required to vary the order in any other respect in view of the provisions of sections 473, 474 and 475 of the Code which appear to provide for all contingencies including absolute release or release on security. We would therefore, omit proviso (b) to section 466 (2) and sub-section (2) of section 471 and would retain in section 474 the words 'section 466 or' which clause 124 of the Bill proposes to remove. We see no reason why the provisions of section 474 should not apply to cases coming under section 466. We would however draw attention to the fact that the word 'detain' in the Code being substituted for the word 'confine', and would recommend that an opportunity should be taken to make a corresponding amendment in section 35 of the Indian Lunacy Act.

With regard to the first proposed proviso to sub-section (1) of section 471 we note that the Local Government has power under section 475 to deliver lunatics to relatives after an order has been passed under section 471 and the Local Government only exercises its powers under that section on receipt of expert advice. We do not think it desirable to enable a Court to exercise the same power on its own responsibility, and we would point out that the Committee of 1916 itself expressed the opinion that once a person has been ordered by a Court to be detained as a lunatic provision for his care periodical examination release etc. should be a matter for the Local Government and not for the Courts. The inclusion of the proviso which we have referred to is inconsistent with this opinion and for these reasons we have deleted it.

Clause 126—The changes that we have made in the proposed section 476 are not of great importance. We have provided that a Court can act on application made to it or suo motu and after such preliminary inquiry, if any as it thinks necessary. For the words 'committed before it or brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding' we have substituted the phraseology used in the proposed new section 195. We have substituted 'may make a complaint for' shall make a complaint and in view of the criticism of the words 'nearest first-class Magistrate' we have provided that a complaint should be sent to a first class Magistrate having jurisdiction. For the words 'if he thinks expedient in the interests of justice' which we think might hamper a Magistrate in the exercise of his powers of adjournment we have substituted "if he thinks fit. In order to give effect to the decision arrived at in our consideration of clause 114 that proceedings under section 476 etc. should be subject to revision we have introduced words which will make it necessary for the Court to record an order.

We have entirely re-drafted sections 476-A and 476-B. Section 476-A in our re-draft is now confined to the case where a superior Court takes action after no action whatever has been taken under section 476 in an inferior Court. Section 476-B provides specifically for an appeal against the making of a complaint or against a refusal to make a complaint.

Section 477 is inconsistent with section 476 as proposed by the Bill because the latter section made it obligatory on the Court to make a complaint and send it to a first class Magistrate. This defect has been removed by one of the amendments we have made in section 476 but we are doubtful whether section 477 should stand. We considered a proposal to enable a Court of Session to try a case committed to it after a complaint had been made by itself but we do not think it desirable that a Court which has instituted the proceedings should dispose of the case itself and we have therefore introduced a clause into the Bill repealing section 477.

Clause 127—We notice that the original Bill proposed to raise from Rs. 50 to Rs. 100 the amount awardable as maintenance under section 488. This proposal was rejected by the Committee of 1916 but in view of the passing of the Maintenance Orders Enforcement Act, 1921 which enables our Courts to enforce summary orders up to an amount of £2 a week we think the limit in our own law might well be raised to Rs. 100. This involves a consequential amendment in section 489.

Clause 128—We do not consider that the addition made by this clause to section 491 is particularly necessary or desirable. It is true that in respect of extradition proceedings an alternative procedure is laid down in section 3 of the Indian Extradition Act 1903 but, having regard to the view taken by the Calcutta High Court in I L R 39 Cal 164 as to the scope of its functions under the section we think this clause might well be deleted.

Clause 129—We are doubtful whether the second amendment made by the Bill in section 492 really effects what was intended. In some places there are special Police Acts and they do not invariably give the Local Government power to delegate to Assistant Superintendents the powers of a District Superintendent. Moreover there is a variety of nomenclature and we think it better to leave it to the Local Governments to prescribe the rank of police-officers who may be appointed Public Prosecutors for the purposes of a particular case.

Clause 132—It was pressed upon us that the provisions as to bail in non bailable cases are much too stringent. One suggestion made to us was that in section 497 we should delete all words after 'may be released on bail' in sub-section (1) and the whole of sub-section (2). The result would have been to give all Courts full discretion in the matter of allowing bail in non bailable cases and we felt generally that this was going too far. What we have done is to allow the Court or police-officer to refuse on bail in a non bailable case unless there appear to be reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has been guilty of an offence punishable with death or transportation, and, as some safeguard against this we have provided for a review by the Sessions Court or the High Court of any order admitting to bail in a non bailable case. Some of us—including all the official members of the Joint Committee—are of opinion that this decision goes too far and that in the end it will not tend towards the administration of justice.

Clause 135—We note that preference has been expressed for the draft of sub-section (7) as contained in the original Bill and on the whole we have preferred to restore the original draft. It provides that in proceedings against a surety a certified copy of the judgment may be used to prove the commission of the offences which constituted a breach of the bond but that this proof may be rebutted. It was indeed suggested to us that we should make a certified copy of the judgment conclusive proof, but we are inclined to think that this would go too far.

Clause 139—We have extended the scope of the proposed sub-section (3) of section 522 to Courts of confirmation and reference.

Clause 141—We have found section 526 somewhat difficult to deal with. One class of opinions presses for greater safeguards against frivolous, vexatious or dilatory applications for transfer. Another class deprecates any measures which makes a transfer more difficult to obtain. We think it is unavoidable to retain in the Code some provision for the compulsory adjournment of a case when an intention to apply for a transfer has been notified. But we recognize that the provisions of the section as they stand have lent themselves to gross abuse and, therefore we feel that greater safeguards are necessary. For these reasons in the first place, we maintain the principle of the new sub-section (6A) which enables the High Court to award costs in dismissing an application. We have, however, modified it to this extent that it will enable the High Court in cases where it is of opinion that the application was frivolous or vexatious to award such amount by way of reasonable costs in the High Court and the Court below as it thinks fit. We think the last sentence of new sub-section (6A) was superfluous in view of the provisions of section 547.

We consider that the new sub-section (8) proposed by the Bill was unsatisfactory in several respects. The opening words of the sub-section contemplated notification at any stage of the case provided that it was made before the commencement of a day's hearing. But words occurring later in the sub-section indicated that its application was confined to a notification made before the accused was called upon to enter on his defence. The proviso, therefore, which dealt with an intention to apply for a transfer formed after the accused had entered on his defence was not a true proviso to the sub-section. We considered whether sub-section (8) should not refer to another application made at any stage and whether in such case discretion as to an adjournment should not be left with the Court except when the applicant gave security, in which case the adjournment should be compulsory. On the whole, however, we have decided in favour of rejecting the proposal to provide for a bond. Apart from other objections we think it was calculated to enhance the delays already involved by section 526. Our amendment of the Bill, therefore, provides for a compulsory adjournment at any stage of the case except that a Sessions Court may refuse to adjourn when it is of opinion that the application has been unreasonably delayed.

It was suggested to us that we should add a new clause to section 526 providing for a transfer of a case when the accused has reasonable ground for apprehending that he will not get a fair and impartial trial. We think, however, that the rulings of the High Courts are quite clear on the point and that it would be a mistake to amend the section.

Clause 143—We think that some of the powers which the new sub-section (4) proposes to confer are already provided for by sub-section (2) of section 192. We also think that this new sub-section goes too far in providing unnecessary powers of transfer of cases within the district and actually in enabling a District Magistrate to confer on a Subordinate Magistrate powers which he does not himself possess. We think it sufficient to provide first-class Magistrates with a power to withdraw cases or recall cases made over to Magistrates subordinate to them under sub-section (2) of section 192 and we think it unnecessary to confer any further power in respect of the transfer of cases upon Presidency Magistrates.

Our colleague Snyad Raza Ali would remove altogether the power of District Magistrates and Sub-divisional Magistrates to transfer cases under section 528 and would place the power of transfer in the hands of the Sessions Courts. This proposal met with little or no support. We think on the whole that it would cause administrative difficulties and would hamper applications for transfer in view of the fact that there are many districts in which there is no resident Sessions Judge.

Clause 146—We have omitted the proviso contained in sub-section (1) of the proposed new section 539 providing that an accused person shall not be compelled to make an affidavit, as in the first place it will be extremely difficult to say what the expression "accused person" means and secondly the proviso is in conflict with the provisions of sub-section (4) of section 526. In view, however, of the opposition manifested in certain quarters we think that sub-section (3) of the proposed new section 539 A might be omitted.

We think it desirable to provide that the copy of the memorandum referred to in sub-section (2) of the new section 539 B shall be given free of cost.

Clause 148—In the new sub-clause (c) to be added to section 545 we have added a reference to the offence specified in section 414 of the Indian Penal Code.

Clause 149—We think the Court should not be bound to exercise the power conferred by the new section 546-A in trivial cases and have accordingly substituted the word "may" for the word "shall" in sub-section (1) of the proposed new sub-section with consequential alterations in sub-section (2).

Clause 151—It would appear that the retention of section 559 in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1893, was accidental, its provisions being covered by those of section 14 of the General Clauses Act, 1897. We have accordingly inserted the new section 559-A proposed by the Bill as section 559 in place of the present section.

Clause 152—We have slightly elaborated the provisions of this clause. We understand that a High Court has recently held that it had no power to direct the expunction of objectionable matter from a record. We think it desirable that it should be made clear that this clause is intended to meet such a case.

Clause 153—We are of opinion that the salutary provisions of section 562 of the Code are capable of extension—more especially in view of the provisions of sub-section (3) of the new section proposed by the Bill. We have accordingly provided that any offender who is over the age of 21 years may be bound over on conviction of any offence not punishable with imprisonment exceeding seven years, and that all women and all persons under the age of 21 may be so bound over when convicted of offences not punishable with death or transportation for life. We have altered the proviso to sub-section (3). We think that the High Court should in no case inflict a more severe sentence than could have been inflicted by the Courts which tried the case.

Clause 154—We think that the penal provision introduced by this clause is out of place in a Code of Procedure. We have proposed an alteration which in part meets this objection.

Clause 155—We approve generally the changes made in Schedule II. We have made certain further amendments consequent upon the changes we have made in the clause which amends section 345 of the Code and the amendments made in the Indian Penal Code by Act XVI of 1921.

Clauses 156 and 157—We have made the necessary changes in Schedules III and IV of the Code to bring them into line with the amendments which we have made in the body of the Bill.

Clause 158—In view of our proposals with regard to section 526 we have deleted the form of the bond originally referred to in that section. We have added a form of bond under section 388.

2. The Bill of 1917 was circulated for opinion as a result of a motion in the Indian Legislative Council on 26th September, 1917. The present Bill contains a few additions to the Bill of 1917. We understand that these deal with defects in the Code brought to light after the Bill of 1917 had been circulated, and that for the most part the opinions of Local Governments and High Courts on these additions were invited by the Government of India. It is, we presume for these reasons, that the Legislature did not direct circulation of the present Bill, and we do not think that the Bill has now been so altered as to require republication. We recommend that it be passed as now amended.

The Committee which will submit its report to the Government of India will assemble at Delhi, on the 5th January 1922 It will conduct its enquiries in public but any part of its proceedings may be conducted in camera if the President considers such a course desirable in the public interest Persons who desire to be called as witnesses should apply in writing to the Secretary, care of Home Department, Government of India Delhi giving their full names and addresses together with a brief memorandum of the points in regard to which they desire to give evidence. It will of course rest with the Committee to decide what evidence they will hear."

Mr T C P Gibbons KC Barrister at Law, Advocate-General Bengal was subsequently added as a Member of the Committee

4 The origin of the privileges in question can probably be traced to the jealousy with which in the eighteenth century and later the jurisdiction of the Courts of the Honble East India Company over Europeans was regarded. For a long time the Courts of the Company exercised no such jurisdiction at all the administration of civil and criminal justice in India being confined in such cases to the Courts of the Presidency towns. The system was undoubtedly based on the idea that the Crown from the earliest introduction of its subjects into India provided for the administration of justice among them a system analogous to that which existed in England. Moreover previous to 1833 British subjects not in the service of the Crown or Company, were not allowed to reside at a distance of more than ten miles from a Presidency town without special permission. On the repeal of this provision the Court of Directors in 1834 gave instructions that British born subjects should be subjected to the same tribunals as Indians. They observed that —

"The 85th clause of the Charter Act of 1833 after reciting that the removal of restriction on the intercourse of Europeans with the country will render it necessary to provide against any mischiefs or dangers that may thence arise proceeds to direct that you shall make laws for the protection of the Natives from insult and outrage—an obligation which in our view you cannot possibly fulfil unless you render both Natives and Europeans subject to the same judicial control. There can be no equality of protection where justice is not equally and on equal terms accessible to all.

Accordingly Europeans were made amenable to the Civil Courts outside the Presidency towns in 1836 by an Act associated with the name of Lord Macaulay. The question of the trial of Europeans by all the Criminal Courts outside the Presidency towns was raised in 1849 by the Government of Lord Dalhousie and again in 1857. It was decided, however to await the introduction of the revised Criminal Law in such areas. The previous procedure therefore continued until 1861 that is to say European British subjects resident outside the Presidency towns were tried by the Supreme Courts which were stationed in the Presidency towns except in respect of certain minor offences for which they were triable by European Justices of the Peace. In 1861 the Supreme and Sudder Courts were combined into the High Courts of Judicature. English Judges were then enabled to go up-country and try cases against Europeans. Even up to 1872 however the general principle was that criminal jurisdiction over European British subjects was exercised only by Courts established by the Crown and not by the Courts of the country.

5 In 1872 when Sir James Stephen was Law Member, the jurisdiction of the ordinary Criminal Courts was definitely extended to Europeans but at the same time special forms of procedure based on English law and limitations of the powers of the Courts were framed for their trial.

6 In 1883 the well known Ilbert Bill was introduced with the object of giving jurisdiction to Indian Sessions Judges and certain Indian Magistrates to try European British subjects. Owing to the feeling aroused by the Bill its scope was reduced and a compromise was effected, a fresh Bill being introduced and passed as Act III of 1884. The main effect of the compromise was that while Indian Sessions Judges and District Magistrates were enabled to try European British subjects the rights to claim a mixed jury that is a jury consisting of not less than half Europeans was allowed in all sessions cases (not merely in those triable by jury in the case of Indians) and also before District Magistrates. The provisions contained in that Act are still in force.

7 In the Presidency towns European British subjects have had and have no privileges before the Presidency Magistrates, but they can claim a mixed jury before the High Court.

8 It is interesting to note that, whereas, at the time of the Ilbert Bill controversy, the question was whether Indian Judges and Magistrates should try Europeans or not, the subject which excites most interest at the present moment is the right of an European British subject to claim a mixed jury

9 Prior to 1882 the law provided that in the case of Europeans (not being European British subjects) and Americans in any trial before the Court of Session the accused had the right to be tried by a jury of which not less than half should consist of Europeans or Americans, if such a jury could be procured. By the Code of 1882 this right was retained only in respect of sessions cases normally triable by jury, while in cases triable with the aid of assessors it was provided that half the number of assessors, if practicable and if claimed, should be Europeans or Americans. This provision is still in force

10 In anticipation of the examination of witnesses who appeared to give evidence before the Committee, the Government of India consulted Local Governments on the question under examination. The Committee have also received and studied a large amount of important documentary evidence including memoranda from all the chief European, Anglo-Indian and Indian Associations Chambers of Commerce and other leading Associations in India. Appendix A to this report gives the names of the witnesses who gave evidence before the Committee, and also of those who were invited to give evidence before the Committee but who were unable to do so. We examined at considerable length the twenty six witnesses, some of whom came from distant places at much personal inconvenience. They were from the following provinces: six from the United Provinces, four from Bengal, including one who also represented non-official Europeans in Assam, four from Madras, three each from Bombay, Bihar and Orissa and the Central Provinces, two from the Punjab and one from Burma. They were distributed as follows: thirteen Hindus, seven Europeans, four Muhammadans, one Parsi and one Anglo-Indian. The witnesses were mostly leading members of the legal profession who practise either in the High Courts or in the Mofussil and we have had the benefit of their valuable experience. Every endeavour was made to ascertain public opinion, and in order to secure the most competent witnesses in the country, invitations to give evidence were issued by the Government of India on three occasions, that is, in October, December and January last. A statement of all the evidence placed before the Committee is given in Appendix B.

11 The most important provisions requiring examination are those contained in the Criminal Procedure Code, especially Chapter XXXIII and sections 4, 22, 111, 188, 275, 408, 416, 418 and 491 of that Code, together with section 65 (3) of the Government of India Act, section 56 of the Indian Penal Code, the Penal Servitude Act XXIV of 1855 and the European Vagrancy Act IX of 1874.

12-A The principal distinctions between the provisions relating to Indians and those relating to European British subjects are as follows —

- (1) By virtue of the provisions of section 443 of the Criminal Procedure Code, European British subjects are not triable by a second or a third-class Magistrate and are only triable by a Magistrate of the first class if he is a Justice of the Peace and save in the case of District and Presidency Magistrates, an European British subject

- (ii) The jurisdiction of Additional and Assistant Sessions Judges over European British subjects is restricted by section 444 of the Code to cases where they are themselves European British subjects and in the case of Assistant Sessions Judges to those who have been Assistant Sessions Judges for at least three years and have been specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government
- (iii) The sentences that may be awarded by first-class Magistrates, District Magistrates and Courts of Session in the case of European British subjects are limited by sections 446 and 449 of the Code to three months' imprisonment and a fine of Rs 1,000, six months' imprisonment and a fine of Rs 2,000, and one year's imprisonment and unlimited fine, respectively
- (iv) In the case of trials before a High Court, Court of Session or District Magistrate European British subjects are entitled by sections 450 and 451 of the Code to be tried by jury, of which not less than half shall be Europeans or Americans
- (v) Section 456 of the Code gives to European British subjects remedies in the nature of habeas corpus which are more extensive than those provided for Indians by Chapter XXXVII
- (vi) Under the provisions of sections 408 and 416 of the Code European British subjects have more extensive rights of appeal in criminal cases than Indians, in that they may appeal against sentences in which an appeal would not ordinarily lie, and they also have the option of appealing in the alternative to the High Court or to the Court of Session
- (vii) Under section 111 the provisions of the Code regarding the taking of security for good behaviour in sections 109 and 110 do not apply to European British subjects in cases where they may be dealt with under the European Vagrancy Act of 1874, and
- (viii) The definition of High Court is not so wide in the case of European British subjects as it is in the case of Indians

B The only distinction between the provisions relating to Indians and those relating to Europeans (not being European British subjects) and Americans is that under the provision of section 460 of the Code in every case triable by jury or with the aid of assessors, in which an European (not being an European British subject) or an American is an accused person, not less than half the number of jurors or assessors must, if practicable and if claimed, be Europeans or Americans

13 To turn to the particular changes which are proposed

The first one is the amendment of the definition of European British subject in section 4 (1) (i) of the Code—It is generally admitted that this is not a satisfactory definition, for instance it includes a non-European domiciled in Natal but not an European domiciled in East Africa. Having regard to all the facts we recommend that the definition of European British subject should be amended by striking out all the words in clause (i) of section 4 (1) (i) after the word Ireland, thus omitting all reference to the British Possessions or Dominions outside Great Britain and Ireland. If this alteration is made, there will still be a difference between the definition of European British subject in the Criminal Procedure Code and the wording of section 65 (3) of the Government of India Act which runs as follows —

The Indian Legislature in Council to the purpose of such subjects or abolishing any High Court.

State sentence children

We are of opinion however that the definition of European British subject should not be assimilated to this description in the Government of India Act. We recommend two additions to our proposed definition. The first is that subjects of His Majesty born naturalised or domiciled in any of the European American or Australian Possessions or Dominions of His Majesty or in New Zealand or in the Union of South Africa should be classed as European British subjects when they are actually serving in India in His Majesty's British Army Navy or Air Force. The reason for this addition is that when such persons are transferred to India they have no option. They are not in the same position as those who of their own free choice come to reside in India. The second addition that we recommend is that subjects of His Majesty born naturalised or domiciled in any of the European American or Australian Possessions or Dominions of His Majesty or in New Zealand or in the Union of South Africa who at the date of the adoption of our proposals are in His Majesty's Indian Army Royal Indian Marine or Indian Air Force should be classed as European British subjects.

Both the proposed additions will affect only a comparatively small number of men. A minority of the Committee including the Government members are of opinion that no distinctions should be made between persons serving in the British Forces and those serving in the Indian Forces.

14 The next question is the definition of High Court in section 4 (1) (j) of the Code — We recommend that the definition of High Court should be the same in the case of Europeans as in the case of Indians the Secretary of State in Council being requested to give his previous approval to this change having regard to the provisions of section 65 (3) of the Government of India Act. We are however of opinion that in regard to certain sections of the Criminal Procedure Code only the Chartered High Courts the Chief Court of Lower Burma and the Courts of the Judicial Commissioners of the Central Provinces Oudh Sind and Upper Burma should be included in the term High Court.

15 Section 22 — We do not think it necessary to express any opinion on the question whether Justices of the Peace should be retained outside the Presidency towns. We are however of opinion that whether the title is retained or not it should not be a qualification for the trial of an European British subject. We are also of opinion that such appointment outside the Presidency towns should not be restricted to Europeans. In regard to the trial of European British subjects generally we consider that outside the Presidency towns the only distinction should be that the Magistrate in question if the accused so desires should not be below the rank of a first class Magistrate. We recognize that in this respect a slight distinction will still remain between European British subjects and Indians but we believe that no objection will be taken on that account so far as offences punishable with imprisonment are concerned. We recommend however that offences punishable with fine not exceeding Rs 50 only (and no other punishment) in respect of which an European is accused may be tried by any Magistrate having jurisdiction normally in respect of such offences.

- 16 Section 111—We consider that this section should be repealed and that sections 109 and 110 should apply equally to Europeans and Indians. But at the same time we recommend that the European Vagrancy Act IX of 1874 should be retained, as it is required in connection with the deportation of undesirable Europeans.

Proviso as to European Vagrants.

The majority of the members of the Committee consider that an examination should be made of the question whether the period of three years prescribed in section 110 as the period for which imprisonment may be ordered in default of the production of suitable security, is not excessive. We are of opinion that the subject is one that deserves the attention of Government and we venture to suggest that Local Governments and High Courts should be consulted thereon.

Liability of British subjects for offences committed out of British India.

- 17 Section 183—This section is in accordance with the provisions of the Government of India Act; no change is proposed.

Person charged out of side Presidency towns jointly with European British subjects.

- Section 214*—Amendments consequential on our proposals will be necessary.

Jury for trial of persons not Europeans or Americans before Court of Session.

- Section 275*—The provision contained in this section should be extended to trials before the High Court—vide paragraph 24 below. Consequential amendments will be necessary.

Right of European British subjects to appeal to High Court or Court of Session.

- 18 Section 403 proviso (a)—We are of opinion that this proviso should be repealed.

- 19 Sections 413, 414, 415 and 416—We recommend the repeal of section 416. We consider however that outside the Presidency towns in the case of all persons both European and Indian there should be an appeal against any sentence of imprisonment passed by a Magistrate. This involves a substantial modification of the general law of the land and will to a certain extent, increase the work of the Sessions Courts. Nevertheless we are of opinion on general grounds and apart from the particular case of the European British subject that an appeal should lie against any such sentence. It is to be noted that short sentences of imprisonment should where possible, be avoided and the number of sentences of one month and under passed by District Magistrates and first class Magistrates should not, as far as we can judge, be very large. In the case of a sentence passed in a trial by a Court of Session we would allow no appeal in respect of a sentence of one month or under. The question of an appeal in the case of sentences of imprisonment raises some difficulty in the case of summary trials. It has been suggested that, in order to meet this difficulty all summary trials should be abolished. We are not however, prepared to recommend such a serious change in the law of the land. We recommend instead that an appeal should lie against any sentence of imprisonment passed by a Magistrate trying a case summarily. Appeals lie even at present in certain cases against sentences passed in a summary trial, and section 264 of the Criminal Procedure Code deals with the record in such cases. Dr Sapru and Sir William Vincent observe that the Government of India will ultimately be guided in a great measure by the opinions of Local Governments and High Courts on the proposal to extend the right of appeal in the cases mentioned in this and in the next sub-paragraphs as it may involve much increase in judicial labour.

We recommend no change in the provisions of section 413 in respect of appeals, from sentences of fine only in ordinary cases but we would in modification of section 414 permit a right of appeal from sentences of fine only which exceed Rs 50 in summary cases

We consider that public opinion should be invited as regards the punishment of whipping, in particular on the question whether the punishment should not be confined to persons convicted of any of the offences mentioned in section 4 of the Whipping Act, and also in the way of school discipline, to juvenile offenders. A minority of the Committee are in favour of the complete abolition of the punishment of whipping except in the case of juvenile offenders. A majority of the Committee consider that if after the proposed inquiry, the punishment of whipping is retained it should apply to Europeans and Indians alike, that it should be provided for the same offences, and that the same classes of officers should have power to sentence to the punishment to Europeans and Indians alike, subject always to the provisions of a right of appeal, even where the sentence is one of whipping only, and to the further provision that the execution of the sentence should be suspended pending the disposal of the appeal.

20 Section 418—We recommend that in all jury trials in which the jury are not unanimous or in which the jury are unanimous but the Judge does not agree with the verdict of the jury both in the High Court and in Sessions Courts, an appeal should lie on facts as well as on law both in the case of conviction and of acquittal (the appeal in the case of acquittal being by the Local Government) in respect both of Europeans and Indians. This right should be specially laid down in the Code and should be as free and unrestricted as in the case of any other appeal. The appeal should be heard by three Judges in the case of an appeal from a decision in a High Court and by two Judges in the case of an appeal from a decision in a Sessions Court. Sections 418 and 423 (2) should be amended accordingly. On this point we invite reference to the English Criminal Appeal Act of 1907. We recognize that this is an important alteration in the general law of the land, but we believe that it will receive considerable support from legal opinion in India. It has been pointed out to us that the English Act of 1907 does not recognize appeals against acquittals. But appeals against acquittals by the Local Government form an integral part of the Indian Law, and it would not be logical to extend appeals on facts to certain jury cases only in respect of convictions and not in respect of acquittals, especially as the chief complaint made against juries is that they are too prone to acquit.

Dr Sapru and Sir Wilham Vincent observe that the Government of India will ultimately be guided by the opinions of the Local Governments and High Courts on the proposals contained in this paragraph. Mr Rangachariar is in favour of allowing such appeals only where a mixed jury has been claimed and only in the case of an acquittal.

Magistrates empowered in cases against European British subjects

21 Section 443—This section will require to be amended in the light of paragraph 15 above

Judges in Courts of Session empowered in cases against European British subjects

Section 444—We consider that this section should be repealed

Cognizance of offences committed by European British subjects

Section 445—Consequential amendments only

- 22 Section 446—In our opinion District Magistrates and first-class Magistrates (whether empowered under section 30 or not) should not be allowed to pass on European British subjects any sentence other than a sentence of imprisonment which may extend to two years including such solitary confinement as is authorized by law or of fine which may extend to Rs 1000. It will be observed that these are the limits of the ordinary powers of a District or first-class Magistrate with the exception that they do not include a sentence of whipping. This is subject to our previous observations in paragraph 19. The majority of the Committee are of opinion that sections 30 and 34 should be repealed on the ground that a sentence of more than two years imprisonment should not be passed without the assistance of a jury or assessors.

Dr Sapru and Sir William Vincent consider that the Government of India must ultimately be guided in a large measure by the opinions of the Local Governments and the High Courts on the question whether it is practicable to repeal those sections. Some members of the Committee are of opinion that, if after enquiry it is decided to retain these sections they should apply equally to Europeans and to Indians.

Commitment to be to the High Court in certain cases.

- 23 Sections 447 and 448—These sections should be repealed.

- 24 Section 449—We are of opinion that Sessions Courts should have power to pass the same sentences on Europeans as on Indians. Accordingly Sessions Judges and Additional Sessions Judges should have power to pass sentences of death in the case of Europeans and Indians alike subject as usual to confirmation by the High Court. This provision is to be read together with our proposal that there should be a mixed jury that is a jury of not less than half Europeans or Indians as the case may be in trials before the High Court and Sessions Court. In the very limited number of cases in the Sessions Court in which Europeans will be tried without a jury they will be tried with European assessors. We develop this point later. We adopt the principle that a Sessions Judge or Magistrate should have power to pass the same sentence in the case of an European as of an Indian and that safeguards should be obtained by other methods than by restricting the punishment which the presiding Judge or Magistrate can inflict. We recommend therefore that the Secretary of State in Council be requested to give his previous approval in accordance with section 63 (3) of the Government of India Act to this change in the law. As in the case of Magistrates we make an exception in respect of the punishment of whipping.

Sentences which may be passed by a Court of Session.

- 25 Section 450—The most difficult question for the Committee to decide is that of the trial by jury of European British subjects. This is the point on which non-official European opinion is most emphatic namely that it is essential that a mixed jury should be retained. We have decided accordingly that the mixed jury should remain both in the High Court and in the Sessions Court in all cases which are to be tried by jury under our proposals subject however to certain provisions and safeguards namely—

Jury or assessors before High Court or Court of Session

Court in all cases which are to be tried by jury under our proposals subject however to certain provisions and safeguards namely—

- 1 The same law as to the composition of the jury shall apply to Indians as to Europeans that is to say the majority of the jury if an Indian accused so desires shall consist of persons who are not Europeans or Americans. This is already the law in Sessions Courts and section 275 should be so amended as to it apply to the High Court also.

- II There shall be a right of appeal both on law and facts both from conviction and acquittal, in the case of Europeans and Indians alike except where the jury are unanimous and the Judge agrees with the verdict of the jury. The further conditions of the appeal are described in paragraph 20 above. This proposal is recommended as an alteration of the general law of the land, but in particular it is intended to form an integral part of our proposal to maintain the mixed jury.
- III The High Court Special Jury List should in our opinion be revised and it should no longer be limited to 200 Europeans and 200 non Europeans. It should include all who are qualified to whatever nationality they may belong. This revision will probably increase the proportion of non-Europeans in the list. This proposal involves the repeal of section 312 of the Code.

In the following respects the existing law should be maintained namely the number of the jury save with the two exceptions noted below will remain as at present the number required for conviction or acquittal in the High Court and in the Sessions Court will continue unchanged and right of reference in the Sessions Court under section 307 will also remain as it is this will be in addition to the right of appeal. As it is proposed to grant a right of appeal from the verdict of the jury and the judgment thereon both on points of law and of fact in certain cases tried in the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction by a High Court a certificate from the Advocate-General as laid down in the Letters Patent will not be necessary in every case of appeal from a decision in the High Courts of Calcutta Madras and Bombay. This proposal will involve the amendment of the provisions of the Letters Patent by the Indian Legislature.

The exceptions that we propose in regard to the number of the jury are —

- (f) In the Sessions Court the number should be any uneven number from five to nine which the Local Government may select. Thus five should be substituted for three in section 274 as the minimum number of the jury in a Sessions Court, and
- (11) in murder cases before the Sessions Court we are of opinion that the number of the jury should if practicable be nine.

26 Another difficulty arises from the fact that an European can claim a trial by jury in any case in a Court of Session whereas a very large proportion of the cases in Courts of Session in which Indians are accused are tried with the aid of assessors. To meet this difficulty we consider it necessary to make special provision for cases in a Court of Session in which racial considerations between Europeans and Indians are involved and also to substitute for the trial of Europeans by jury in certain cases in Courts of Session where racial considerations do not arise trial with the aid of European assessors.

Our proposals are —

- (i) In any district in which for any class of offence Indians are normally triable in a Court of Session by jury the accused whether Indian or European, shall be entitled to claim a mixed jury that is to say a jury consisting of not less than half of persons of his own nationality.
- (ii) In any district in which for any class of offence Indians are normally triable in a Court of Session with the aid of assessors but in which racial considerations between Europeans and Indians are involved the accused whether Indian or European, shall be entitled to claim a mixed jury, on the ground of the existence of such racial considerations. The Sessions Judge will decide the preliminary question whether in any particular case racial considerations are involved and no appeal or revision shall lie against his decision on this preliminary point. He will have to decide who is the person really aggrieved. The exact wording of the provision will be a matter for the consideration of the draftsman, but where the accused and the complainant are of different nationalities, that is where one is an European and one an Indian, racial considerations shall be deemed to arise.

- (iii) In any district in which for any class of offence Indians are normally triable in a Court of Session with the aid of assessors and in which no racial considerations are involved, the accused, whether Indian or European, shall be tried with assessors, who, if the accused so claims, shall all be of the nationality of the accused. We add the further recommendation that in all cases triable with the aid of assessors there shall be, if possible, four, and in any case not less than three assessors. The existing provision in section 284 is that "two or more" assessors shall be chosen, as the Judge thinks fit.

It will be seen that so far as the European is concerned, his right of trial by jury will be taken away only in a limited number of cases in which no racial considerations are involved, and in such cases instead of being tried by a jury of five (the usual number in the Court of Session) of which he can claim that not less than three shall be Europeans, he will be tried probably with four and in any case with not less than three assessors, who will all, if he so claims, be Europeans. In the case of an Indian, he will be able to claim a mixed jury in any case where racial considerations are involved, and in any case triable with assessors, there will be not less than three Indian assessors.

27 In warrant cases outside the Presidency towns, in which racial considerations between Europeans and Indians are involved the accused and the complainant shall each have the right to apply to the trying Magistrate on the ground of the existence of such racial considerations, for committal to the Sessions Court for trial by a jury of which not less than half shall be of the nationality of the accused. If the Magistrate decides in favour of the applicant that is to say, if he finds that racial considerations are involved, he shall proceed to make a preliminary inquiry as in cases triable by the Sessions Court. If the Magistrate finds that no racial considerations are involved, the applicant shall have the right to appeal to the Sessions Court against the decision of the Magistrate on this preliminary point. We would give no right of appeal or revision from the decision of the Sessions Court on the preliminary point as to whether in any particular case racial considerations are involved or not. We have already in paragraph 26 indicated what we mean by racial considerations and when they shall be deemed to exist.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent would prefer to give the right mentioned in this paragraph to the accused only and not to the complainant also.

28 Similarly in summons-cases outside the Presidency towns, we are of opinion that where—

- (f) racial considerations, as already defined, between Europeans and Indians are involved, and also
- (ii) the offence is punishable with imprisonment the accused and the complainant shall each have the right to apply to the trying Magistrate that the case be sent to a Bench of two Magistrates of the first class, one Indian and one European, for trial on the ground of the existence of such considerations. If the trying Magistrate decides against the applicant on this preliminary point the applicant shall have the right to appeal to the Sessions Court against the decision of the Magistrate on the point.

When the case is tried by the above mentioned Bench in the event of a difference of opinion between the Magistrates the case with the opinions of the Magistrates will be laid before the Sessions Judge who after taking such further evidence, if any, as he may think fit shall pass such judgment sentence or order in the case as he thinks fit and is according to law. From the decision of such a Bench there shall be an appeal in accordance with the ordinary law. An appeal against the decision of the Sessions Judge will lie to the High Court if an appealable sentence is passed by him.

Jury before District Magistrate

29 Section 451—We are of opinion that trial by jury before Magistrates should be abolished.

Details of procedure in cases in which European British subjects are concerned

Sections 452 to 455 inclusive—Consequential amendments only

Provisions corresponding to habeas corpus

Sections 456 to 458 to be read with section 491—We are of opinion that the rights which Europeans enjoy of the nature of habeas corpus should be extended to Indians throughout British India. In this and other matters we would not interfere with the existing procedure in respect of Indian States.

Applications of Acts conferring jurisdiction

Section 459—Consequential amendments only

Trials of Europeans or Americans.

30 Sections 460 and 461—These sections deal with Europeans (not being European British subjects) and Americans. We are of opinion that unless any of the privileges in regard to any such persons are found to be based on treaty, they should be abolished.

Procedure in trials of European British subjects Europeans or Americans

Sections 462, 463 and 534—Consequential amendments only

31 The Penal Servitude Act XXIV of 1855 and section 56 of the Indian Penal Code—We are of opinion that section 56 of the Indian Penal Code and Act XXIV of 1855 should be repealed. The commutation of a sentence of transportation can be effected under sections 401 and 402 of the Criminal Procedure Code and the ordinary Prison Rules which apply to Indians and Europeans alike. We do not take objection to the commutation of sentences of transportation in the case of Europeans but we are of opinion that statutory distinctions in this respect are not necessary. We are informed that the question of abolishing sentences of transportation as a form of punishment is under consideration.

32 European Vagrancy Act IX of 1874—It will be for the draftsman to consider whether any change is necessary in the European Vagrancy Act having regard to the proposed repeal of section 111 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

33 No change is necessary in the provisions relating to Presidency Magistrates.

34 To put our main proposals in respect of the modifications of the Criminal Procedure Code into tabular form, their effect will be —

For European British subjects	For Indians
I An appeal will lie against any sentence of imprisonment passed by a Magistrate. There will also be a right of appeal against any sentence of fine exceeding Rs. 50	The same
II In every case before the High Court and Sessions Court in which he is tried by a jury, the accused will be entitled to claim a mixed jury that is a jury consisting of not less than half of the nationality of the accused subject to—
(a) An appeal on facts as well on law in the case both of conviction and acquittal when the jury are not unanimous, or when the jury are unanimous but the Judge does not agree with them
(b) A probable increase in the number of Indians in the Special Jury List.
(c) A provision that the jury shall be not less than five and in all murder cases if practicable, nine.	The same
III The accused in the Sessions Court will be entitled to claim to be tried by jury in any class of case which is normally triable with assessors if racial considerations are involved	The same
This provision is in addition to the right of trial by jury in all cases in the High Court and also in Sessions Courts where such a method of trial is prescribed under section 269 of the Criminal Procedure Code
IV In any class of case in the Sessions Court which is normally triable with assessors and where no racial considerations are involved he will be tried with assessors who will not be less than three in number and who if the accused so claims will all be of his own nationality	The same
V In a warrant-case in which racial considerations are involved the accused and the complainant will each be entitled to claim the committal of the case to the Sessions Court for trial by a jury	The same
VI In a summons-case where racial considerations are involved and where a sentence of imprisonment can be passed the accused and the complainant will each be entitled to claim that the case shall be tried by a Bench of two first class Magistrates one Indian and one European reference in case of disagreement being to the Sessions Judge.	The same
VII In any other case triable by a Magistrate if the accused so desires the trial will be by a first-class Magistrate except in cases punishable with fine of not more than Rs 50 only	It is not practicable to extend this to Indians
VIII Judges and Magistrates outside Presidency towns will have power to pass all sentences which they are authorised by law to pass except whipping, and sentences under section 34 of the Criminal Procedure Code on which subjects inquiry is proposed	The existing arrangements continue pending the result of the proposed inquiry

Note.—Clauses I, IV, V, VI, VII and VIII apply only outside Presidency towns

We also propose the repeal of section 460 which provides for a special procedure in the case of Europeans (not being British subjects) and Americans

35 We regret that one member of the Committee Mr Stuart Rossie, a representative of the non-official Europeans of Assam owing to private and personal reasons was unable to attend the meetings of the Committee and had to resign his seat thereon

Some members of the Committee were unable to attend our final meetings

36 In conclusion we desire to place on record our deep sense of obligation to our colleague Mr Percival I C S M L A who has throughout the proceedings of this Committee acted as Secretary and brought to bear upon the work infinite patience and great industry which has been of great assistance to us in the preparation of this report We also desire to express our acknowledgments to Mr Tonkinson Joint Secretary in the Home Department for the assistance he has given us generally

45 S. 20, Preliminary Note—

General jurisdiction—under s. 20, Criminal Procedure Code, a Presidency Magistrate has jurisdiction to try an offence committed in any place within the Presidency town. Under s. 21 the Presidency Magistrate has power to regulate the conduct and distribution of business in the Courts of the Magistrates of the Town and Island of Bombay 28 Bom. L. R. 1066.

69 S. 37, Preliminary Note—

Section 37 and the fourth schedule of the Code must be read with s. 190 and therefore, under s. 190(2) the District Magistrate can confer upon subordinate Magistrates power to take cognizance of only such offences as such subordinate Magistrate is empowered by the fourth schedule to try or commit for trial. 5 Patna 447.

83 S. 56, Note 3—

The issue of an order under s. 56 does not limit the power conferred by s. 54 on every Police-officer in cognizable cases 5 Patna 333.

153 S. 108, Note 3 at the end—

In 30 C. W. N. 953 (Chakravarty v King Emperor). The decision in 43 C. 591 was commented upon and it was held that the rule laid down in 43 C. 591 was wholly inadmissible. It was also pointed out that by the introduction of the word 'intentionally' into s. 108 the Legislature perhaps meant to overrule the doctrine laid down in the above case. It was finally held that the utmost that is warranted on any view of s. 108 is that a person comes within its scope if he disseminates matter which reveals an intention to promote feelings of enmity between classes. Where there is no such intention, the mere publication of news of a character possibly to promote ill feelings between classes, is not enough to bring it within the mischief either of s. 153-A or of s. 108. It is not for the Criminal Courts to abandon "intention" the ancient and statutory test and to put, in peril of their process, persons of innocent intention.

148 S. 107, Note 11 at the end—

7 Lah. 482.

158 S. 110, Note 7 B—

Proceedings under this section not illegal against persons already registered under the Criminal Tribes Act (III of 1917). 51 C. W. N. 163.

189 S. 112, Note 1—

Where certain persons were arrested under s. 55 and put up before a Magistrate who directed a case to be registered against them and recorded an order purporting to be under s. 112, but which did not set forth the substance of the information received, held that it did not merely amount to an irregularity, but made the order binding over the accused bad in law 34 A. L. J. 908.

220 S. 134, Note 2 (end)—

But in 31 C. W. N. 143 it was held that where the serving peons return showed that personal service could not be effected and therefore service was effected by affixing a copy to some conspicuous part of the house but it did not show that service by leaving a copy with an adult male member of the family was impossible, there was no proper service of the conditional order, and so the order absolute was set aside.

See 53 C. 851 for the meaning of "initutory order" under s. 147

Preliminary Note to Note 22—

The enquiry under s. 147 of the Criminal Procedure Code is instituted within the proviso to sub-section (2) on the date of the drawing up of the initiatory order under the section, and not when the Magistrate, on receipt of the petition for proceedings thereunder, directs the police to enquire and report. He has no jurisdiction to institute proceedings when the right claimed by the applicant has not been exercised within three months went before the date of the initiatory order. 53 C. 851; S. C. 30 C. W. N. 883.

318 B. 162, Note 8 (d)—

The Calcutta police have no power to record a statement under 162, as it does not apply to police investigations by the Calcutta police. So a statement of a person taken down at Howrah by the Calcutta police is inadmissible in evidence against him, as the statement is taken without any legal authority. 53 C. 650.

319 B. 162, Note 9-A—

Distinction between the absence of a statement and a statement under s. 162—The evidence of a witness that he did not make any statement to the police is not within the prohibition contained in s. 162. The absence of a statement is not a 'statement' under s. 162.

It is doubtful whether a statement to the police by a witness under s. 161, that he knew nothing about the occurrence is not a "statement" within s. 162. 53 Cal. 980.

420 B. 188, Note 8—

See 7 Lah. 468 where 25 A. 256 was distinguished.

429 B. 190, Note 18—

The effect of the present amendment was directly in question in 49 Mad. 325 (F.B.) and it is held, that by virtue of ss. 190 (1) (b) and 200 (aa) Magistrates mentioned in s. 190 are entitled to take cognizance of even non-cognizable offences upon a report made in writing by a Police-officer without examining the officer on oath. Perumal Naick v Emperor (1925) M. W. N. 817 overruled. 25 Bom. 150, 46 C. 807 referred to and discussed.

See also 31 C. W. N. 121.

467 B. 195, Note 98—

Where the applicant after filing a complaint of dacoity before a Magistrate, repeated the charges before the police and the police found the complaint to be false, and at the instance of the police the applicant was put on his trial under s. 211, I P. C.—held, that the offence if any was committed in relation to proceedings in Court and for the institution of the prosecution a complaint in writing of such Court was necessary. 24 A. L. J. 816.

495 B. 198, Note 3—

But see 24 A. L. J. 155. Where it is held that the charge of a marital offence of the kind referred to in s. 198 is not excluded from cognizance without a complaint made by some person aggrieved by such abetment.

. B. 202, Note 19 (end)—

See 51 M. L. J. 602 where it is held that a Magistrate ought not to issue process on the accused unless he is satisfied on the examination of the complainant.

528-α B. 209, Note 7—

See 30 C. W. N. 840, where it appeared on the findings arrived at that there was a prima facie case against accused under s 471 which was exclusively triable by the Court of Sessions the High Court in revision set aside the conviction and sentence and directed a committal to the Court of Sessions.

Nineteen persons were tried together and fined under ss. 379 and 447 I P C., for stealing fish in the course of the same transaction. They were separately engaged in fishing and there was no evidence of prior consultation or identity of purpose. Held, that the accused ought not to have been tried together, that their joint trial was bad under s. 239. Where the applicability of s. 239 is doubtful it is better that the accused be tried separately. 51 M. L. J. 692.

The omission in a summons-case to state to the accused when he appears or is brought before the Magistrate, the particulars of the offence with which he is charged is an omission to comply with an express provision of the Code and is an illegality. 31 C. W. N. 167.

610 B. 247, Note 2—

A Magistrate is entitled to call up a summons-case at any time of the day to which it is posted and to acquit the accused under s. 247, if the complainant is not then present. He is not bound to wait for the complainant to appear at any time during the day. 49 M. 853; B. C. 51 M. L. J. 730.

627 S. 252, Note 9—

The effect of s. 252 is to throw a greater responsibility upon the Magistrate than in a summons-case, as he is bound to summon such witnesses as he thinks are likely to give useful evidence. 49 M. 978; S. C. 51 M. L. J. 328.

634 S. 256, Note 7—

But see 51 M. L. J. 687 dissenting from 6 Lah. 554. It was also held that the provisions of s. 256 were applicable to summary trials. Umaje Krishnaje v. King Emperor A. I. R. 1926 Bom. 225 dissented from

It was further held that the omission to record reasons as to why the accused was asked to cross-examine forthwith when he was not represented by a pleader was not a mere irregularity curable under s. 537

651 S. 264, after Note 1—

1 A Whether written charge necessary in a warrant-case tried summarily in which appealable sentence is passed. Held, that in no summary trial, whether appealable or not need a formal charge in writing be framed 7 Lah. 303; Rat. 768 followed See p. 637, Note 2 to Section 257 above

651 S. 264, Note 1 A—

In 53 Cal. 739 it is now held that no formal charge be recorded under s. 264 in a summary trial of a warrant-case 27 C. W. N. 923 (Natobarkhan v. King Emperor) not followed on that point.

668 S. 282, Note 1—

Held, that the language of s. 282 was clear that there is a discretion in the Judge either to postpone the trial to a date on which the juror should be able to attend or to discharge the jury or have another juror and the High Court would not interfere with the discretion of the Judge. It would be improper for persons to be resummoned who have been released from their oath as jurors by the order of discharge and were perfectly entitled in the interim to discuss the matter either with their friends or with the accused or with anybody they liked 31 C. W. N. 144.

697 S. 299, Note 22 (end)—

See also 53 C. 980.

697 S. 299, Note 21 (end)—

Where the mere fact that the accused persons do not admit their presence at the occurrence and raise a case of provocation or that of passion or something of that kind does not render it unnecessary to give the jury a proper direction as to the exception in s. 300 I P C. The question in all cases is whether on any reasonable view of the facts certain of the exceptions can matter. If they can matter, and if a proper direction is not given to the jury, then it is not open to the Court to guess and gamble as to whether or not the jury's verdict would have been different. 30 C. W. N. 912.

728 S. 307, Note 15—

Held (on a consideration of the entire evidence) that the whole case was suspicious and the real facts in connection with the occurrence had not been disclosed by the prosecution, nor was the case of the defence entirely true and to convict the accused would cause miscarriage of justice and so the accused should be given the benefit of the doubt and the verdict of the jury set aside. 30 C. W. N. 859.

727 S. 307, Note 14—

The High Court will not interfere with the verdict of the jury unless it considers that the verdict cannot be supported by the evidence on the record 5 Patna 573.

743 S. 337, Note 5—

Section 337 does not require that a trial or an enquiry should be in progress when a pardon is tendered. 25 A. L. J. 1050.

Warrant issued under the Goondas Act (Beng. I of 1923), s. 4—The High Court has no power to interfere under s. 439 with the warrant issued by a Secretary to the Government of Bengal under s. 4 of the Goondas Act, or with the orders of the Deputy Commissioner of Police refusing to release a person arrested on bail. 53 Cal. 962 (51 C. 460 followed).

935 S. 437, Note 5, 2nd para—

See 53 Cal. 643 wherein 16 Bom. L. R. 80 is referred to and held that when an accused is discharged of an offence exclusively triable by a Court of Session e.g., under s. 436 I P. C., the Sessions Judge is competent to order a commitment for an offence not exclusively triable by such Court, e.g., one under s. 427, I P. C., if it is intimately connected with the former and forms part of the same transaction, but not for an offence of an entirely different character, e.g., under s. 380 committed in the course of the same transaction.

See 28 Bom. L. R. 1054, 5 C. 50 Bom. 783 as to the construction of sub-section (6) of s. 439. The effect of the sub-section (6) is to overrule 32 Bom. 162; S. C. 10 Bom. L. R. 93. It is intended to operate as an exception to what is otherwise laid down or implied in s. 439 itself.

971 S. 449, Note 5—

Limitation for an application for leave to appeal under s. 449 (1) (c).—On an application for leave to appeal under s. 449 (1) (c) of the code, the question of limitation of the appeal arises because, if the appeal is barred the application for leave is necessarily out of time. An appeal under s. 449 (1) from the conviction and sentence by a Judge at the original Sessions of the High Court, is governed by Art. 165 of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908). 53 Cal. 746.

974 S. 465, Note 2—

In committal proceedings the Magistrate had come to the conclusion that the accused was sane. Held, that it was nevertheless incumbent upon the Sessions Judge if he had any doubt about the accused's mental state, to hold another enquiry whether the accused was capable of making his defence and after taking the opinion of the assessors to have come to the conclusion whether to proceed with the further trial or not, and the Judge's neglect to follow the mandatory provisions of s. 465 must vitiate the trial. 54 P. R. 1905 followed 7 Lab. 315.

986 S. 476, Note 10—

Bombay—Bhambhani v. State. The Sessions Judge of Ahmedabad committed a Division at Kalra a successor to the Court of the Additional Sessions Judge of Ahmedabad so as to give it jurisdiction to make such an order. 28 Bom. L. R. 1296.

An appeal from the making or filing of the complaint by a Civil Court under s. 476 of the Code lies to the Court to which the former is subordinate and the procedure relating to such appeals is governed by the Civil and not the Criminal Procedure Code 53 Cal. 877.

Held setting aside the order of the Sessions Judge, that as he had filed a complaint against the applicant he was a party to the proceedings before the Magistrate, within the meaning of s. 556 of the Code, and was, therefore, disqualified from hearing the application in revision against the order of discharge 28 Bom. L. R. 1302.

Whether Court can vary under s. 488 the order of maintenance so as to increase the allowance.—It is held, that under s. 488 a Magistrate has power to increase the rate of maintenance once awarded. 28 Bom. L. R. 669, but it should be noted here that s. 489 expressly provides for the increase and variation of an order of maintenance on a change of circumstances, perhaps s. 489 was not brought to their Lordships' notice in 28 Bom. L. R. 669. In fact there is no necessity to press in service s. 488 in order to justify an increase in the rate of maintenance on a change of circumstances.

1022 S. 488, Note 22—

See 50 M. L. J. 44 for the definition of the word "means" in s. 488. The expression "means" does not signify only visible means such as real property or definite employment, but if a man is healthy and able bodied he must be taken to have the means to support his wife.

1036 S. 488, Note 82 A—

Order cannot be cancelled on the ground that the marriage was null and void.—Where a husband applied for setting aside the order of maintenance on the ground that the marriage was null and void the High Court declined to interfere in revision as the applicant had adduced no evidence as to the illegality of marriage when the application of the wife was heard and disposed of, and it was further held that his proper remedy was to apply to the Matrimonial Court to have declared the marriage null and void 28 Bom. L. R. 1289.

1067 S. 512, Note 6 A—*S. C. 43 A. 375.1113 S. 526, Note 32 (ix)—

The question as to whether a trial before a particular Magistrate is expedient for the ends of justice or not is to be considered from the point of view of the accused person as well and unless it is impossible to get a Magistrate other than the one who has already convicted the accused on the same charge at a previous trial, or unless there be circumstances which would necessitate the trial of the same case before the same Magistrate over again, it is desirable that the retrial should not be held before the same Magistrate 30 C. W. N. 1002.

1154 S. 539-B, Note 1—

Omission by a Magistrate to make a memorandum of any relevant facts observed by him at a local inspection under s 539-B of the Code is covered by the provisions of s 537, where such omission has not occasioned any failure of justice. Magistrates ought to be careful to comply with the provisions of s 539-B. But there is no universal rule that disobedience of a mandatory provision in a statute has the consequence of nullification of all proceedings, irrespective of any question of prejudice 28 Bom. L. R. 1026 (83 C. 46 followed, 52 C. 148 dissented from).

1199 S. 561-A, Note 1—

Under s 561-A the High Court had power to interfere and direct the police to permit such interview inasmuch as that would be necessary to prevent an abuse of the process of the Magistrate who had passed orders under s 70 of the City of Bombay Police Act remanding the accused to police custody. The word "process" in s 561-A means in effect anything done by the Court. 28 Bom. L. R. 1043.

1201 S. 562, Note 5—

The words "offence punishable with imprisonment" in s. 562 sub-sec. (1) contemplate an offence primarily punishable with imprisonment an offence punishable with fine only does not come within the scope of that sub-sec (1) 28 Bom. L. R. 1031.

1204 S. 562, Note 19—

See now 28 Bom. L. R. 671 where it is held that an appeal lies to the Court of Session under s. 408 of the Code from an order passed under s. 562 (1) of the Code releasing an accused on his entering into a bond to keep the peace and be of good behaviour 82 C. 463 followed

733 Note 3—

Since the amendment of sections 307 and 310 Note 3 and the cases cited therein have become out of place. After the Amending Act XVIII of 1923 2 Bom L. R 336 and 30 W 134 have become obsolete In accordance with a suggestion thrown out in the note the sections 307 and 310 have been now amended and now a Sessions Judge in case he desires to refer the case to the High Court can ask the accused to plead to prior convictions after the jury have delivered their verdict or assessor's opinion recorded on the charge of the subsequent offence After recording the plea as to previous conviction the Sessions Judge can then report the case to the High Court under section 307

ACT No. V of 1898.*

(As amended by Acts XII of 1899, VI of 1900, I of 1903, IV of 1909, XV of 1910, IV of 1912, VIII of 1913, X of 1914 and XII, XVIII and XXXVII of 1923.)

[Received the Governor-General's assent on 22nd March, 1898]

An Act to consolidate and amend the Law relating to Criminal Procedure

Preamble WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to Criminal Procedure, it is hereby enacted as follows —

PART I. PRELIMINARY

CHAPTER I

Short title, commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Code of Criminal Procedure 1898; and it shall come into force on the first day of July, 1898

Extent

(2) It extends to the whole of British India but in the absence of any specific provision to the contrary, nothing herein contained shall affect any special or local law now in force or any special jurisdiction or power conferred or any special form of procedure prescribed by any other law for the time being in force or shall apply to—

(a) the Commissioners of Police in the towns of Calcutta Madras and Bombay, or the Police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay

(b) heads of villages in the Presidency of Fort St George or

(c) village Police-officers in the Presidency of Bombay,

Provided that the Local Government may, if it thinks fit, [* * *]† by notification in the Official Gazette extend any of the provisions of this Code with any necessary modifications to such excepted persons Extent I.—Local.

Notes.—1. British India shall mean all territories and places within Her (now His) Majesty's dominions which are for the time being governed by Her Majesty through the Governor-General of India or through any Governor or other officer subordinate to the Governor-General of India' General Clauses Act X of 1897, s. 3 (7). See also s. 15 of the Penal Code

* For Statement of Objects and Reasons see Gazette of India a 1897 Part I p 363 for Report of the Select Committee see ibid a 1897 Part I p 19 and for Proceedings in Council see ibid, 1897 Part I pp 238 and 254 and ibid 1899 pp 22, 101 and 175

† The words with the sanction of the Governor General in Council were omitted by the Devolution Act XXXVIII of 1920

'British India' is not synonymous with 'British possession.' As the Native States and the tributary Mahals are not governed through the Governor-General of India, they are not British India and the Code as such does not extend to them. So it does not extend to the Civil Station at Raykot 10 B. 186; the Wadhwan Civil Station, 14 Bom. L. R. 876; the territory of Mohurbhun, 8 C. 985; the tributary Mahal of Keonjhar, 18 C. 687, and the lands occupied by the Hyderabad State Railway, 23 C. 20 (P.C.). The Civil and Military station of Bangalore is not British India, 12 M. 39. See also 5 Bom. L. R. 873.

2. Places to which the Code has been extended.—(a) Schedule Districts in Ganjam and Vizagapatam (Fort St. George Gazette, 1898 Pt. I, p. 306), 23 M. L. J. 670 = 12 M. L. T. 601 = 13 Cr. L. J. 850; (b) Laccadive Islands (13 M. 353), (c) the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, (d) Sonthal Pargannas (Calcutta Gazette, 1898, Pt. I, p. 665). See 12 C. 836; (e) Angul District (Calcutta Gazette, 1899, Pt. I, p. 799), (f) Districts of Hazaribagh, Lohardaga (now Ranchi) Munbhun Palaman, Purganna Dhalbhum and the Kothen in the Singbhum District, (Calcutta Gazette, 1898, Pt. I, p. 714), (g) Purganna of Manpur, (h) British Baluchistan (Gazette of India, 1898, Pt. II, p. 221), (i) Chittagong Hill Tracts (s 4 of the Chittagong Hill Tracts Regulation I of 1900 see however, 27 C. 656), (j) Upper Burma including the Shan States, (k) Cochin and Chin Hills (portions of the Code are applicable to certain Hill tribes see Burma Gazette, 1898, Pt. I, p. 322 and Burma Code Edition, 1899, pp. 628 and 629) (l) Island of Perim 10 B. 258

The Code has also been extended to the British Protectorates on the East Coast of Africa (order of Council, 1897), Somaliland (order, 1899), the Persian Coast and Islands (1897) and Zanzibar (by an order in Council of 1884 under which Zanzibar is to be treated as a District in Bombay), the Judicial Assistant being the District Magistrate, the Consul-General, the Sessions Judge, the High Court of Bombay, the High Court and the Secretary of State or with his assent the Governor General in Council, the Authorities to exercise the powers of a Local Government and of the Governor-General in Council).

In 24 B. 474, it was held regarding Muscat that though under certain circumstances in virtue of an order in Council of 1876 the Bombay High Court is vested with Original Criminal Jurisdiction, in the exercise of which it would apply the provisions of this Code it had no Appellate or Revisional Jurisdiction.

3. Places where the Code is no longer, in force.—The Garro Hills, the Khasia and Jaintia Hills, the Naga Hills, the North Cachar Sub-division of the Cachar District, the Mikir Hill Tracts in the Nongoung District, the Dibrugarh Frontier Tracts in the Lakhimpur Districts, the Lushai Hills (see Assam Gazette, 1898, Pt. II, p. 788), and the North Cachar Hills, 26 C. 874.

4. Places outside British India in which the Code is in force.—As regards Native States see Macpherson's List of British Enactments in force in Native States, wherein he mentions among others (a) the lands occupied by the following Railways passing through Native States—Madras Railway (Mysore) B.B.C.I G.I.P. (Kurundwar) Nagpur and Chhattisgarh (Khasragarh and Nundgaon), Rajputana Malwa Bhaunagar Gondal, Sindhia (Dhaipur Gwalior), Bhopal Sindh-Pishin, (b) the Cantonments of Quetta, Mitru, Secunderabad Disah Mhow, Nagod, Naogaon Nimach, Satna, Abu, Deoli, (c) the District of Quetta, (d) the Salt Sources in the Rajputana Agency (e) the Rajputana Pargannas under British administration and some Native States in Rajputana Agency, (f) the Hyderabad Assigned Districts, (g) the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore 12 M. 39; (h) Mysore, (i) Kashmir (with certain limitations so far as European British subjects and their native servants, being British subjects, are concerned).

5. Code applicable to all trials in British India though offences committed on High Seas.—Trial of a British seaman for an offence committed on a British ship on High Seas must be conducted under this Code, though the offence charged must be one under English Law, 21 C. 762; 1 B. L. R. O. Cr. 1; 7 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 89; 8 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 63; 16 C. 238. As to substantive law, however, see 14 B. 227 and 25 B. 836, where it was held that the Indian Penal Code applied.

6. Specific provisions to the contrary, see ss. 54, 55, 56, 68, 83, 84, 85, 86, 95, 102, 127, 374, 375, 376 and Sch. II, col. 3 infra. But see s. 2(1) of the City of Bombay Police Act IV of 1902, under which ss. 54, 55, 56 and 33, infra are no longer applicable to the Police in the City of Bombay.

7. Special Law is a law applicable to a particular subject, s. 41, I P. C. The Coroner's Act IV of 1871, is an illustration of a Special Law, 31 C. 1; 16 B. 159; 2 Ind. Jar. (N.R.) 101.

8. Local Law is a law applicable only to a particular part of British India, s. 42, I P. C., e.g. the law for the suppression of outrages in Malabar but rules made under Local Laws are not Local Laws, 22 P. R. 1894.

The Sind Frontier Regulation (III of 1892) is a Special and Local Law conferring special jurisdiction on the District Magistrate and laying down a special form of procedure and therefore the provisions of this Code cannot be invoked to control the proceedings of the District Magistrate 3 B. L. R. 105—12 Cr. L. J. 568

9. Special Jurisdiction—e.g. (1) that conferred by Mad. Act XXIV of 1839 s. 3 regarding the administration of Criminal Justice in the Vizagapatam Agency Tract 15 M. 121; (2) by ss. 20 to 23 of the Cattle Trespass Act I of 1871 (except in so far as the definition of offence [s. 4 (a), para. 2 post]) is made to include a complaint under s. 20 of that Act 23 C. 300; 34 C. 926; (3) by Bom. Act VIII of 1867 (Village Police) except where the Code contains a specific provision to the contrary 19 B. 612

10. Special Power—e.g. (1) power vested in the Governor-General in Council to make rules conferring Original Criminal Jurisdiction on Indian Marine Courts by the Indian Marine Act XIV of 1887 s. 70 (2) (2) the Common Law power vested in the Chartered High Courts as Courts of Record to punish for contempts (10 C. 109 P. C.) (3) the power of superintendence under s. 15 of the Chapter Act and that is to say powers of revision over proceedings of the Subordinate Courts 12 C. W. N. 678—7 Cr. L. J. 499; (4) the power to transfer Criminal Cases under s. 29 of the Letters Patent 6 M. 32; (5) the power conferred on second-class Magistrates by the Bombay Abkari Act V of 1878 s. 3 cl. 5 and s. 56 10 B. 181 See also 25 B. 667

11. Special Form of Procedure—e.g. that prescribed by Act V of 1869 the Indian Articles of War for the trial of Military offences. See the Criminal Law Amendment Act XIV of 1908 in Appendix.

12. Effect of transfer of territory from British India to Native State Pendente Lite—In 34 A. 118 it was held that the British Sessions Court had jurisdiction to proceed with the trial of an offence committed in territory forming part of British India at the date of offence and at the date of commitment to sessions but transferred to a Native State before the case came on for trial. In 33 A. 578 the transfer took place after a conviction but before the appeals therefrom were heard and it was held that the Appellate Court had jurisdiction to hear the appeal

12-A. Applicability of the Code to cases under an Ordinance.—Ordinance issued by Governor General in Council is a law and infringement of it an offence which must be dealt with according to the provisions of Criminal Procedure Code in the absence of any rules made by the Governor General. 10 P. R. (Cr.) 1916

13. What proceedings the Code governs.—It regulates only criminal proceedings. Quære whether proceedings under section 2 (1) and (3) Workmen's Breach of Contract Act XIII of 1859 are criminal. Held that section 370 infra did not apply to such proceedings 27 Cal. 131.

But 43 All. 241 has held that the case under section 2 of the Workmen's Breach of Contract Act XIII of 1859 is triable summarily under the provisions of section 260 of the Code of Criminal Procedure = All. L. Journal, Volume XIX p. 22 See 33 Bom. 22 25 which holds the contrary view Extent II—Personal.

Notes—13. Police and Commissioners of Police—(1) The Code is not applicable except where it has been specially extended to the Police or to the Commissioners of Police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay 31 C. 557 As to Calcutta Police (see Bengal Acts IV of 1866 II of 1886 III of 1890 I of 1898 also III of 1888). As to Bombay Police (see Acts XIII of 1856 XLVIII of 1860 and Bombay Acts II of 1879 IV of 1882 XVI of 1895 and IV of 1902) (2) It applies to the Police but not to the Commissioner of Police Madras (See Madras Act III of 1888 Madras Code 3rd Edition p. 844 (3) Portion specially extended to Calcutta and Bombay Police ss. 42 44 54 55 56 68 83 84 85 86 127 202 and col. 3 of Sch. II also s. 155 15 C. 593 and 21 B. 495 Ss. 386 and 387 have been by notification under the proviso extended to the Commissioner of Police for the town of Calcutta. (See Calcutta Gazette of the 23rd March 1904) As to Bombay see Note 6 supra

14. Madras Village Headmen—In the exercise of the jurisdiction conferred upon them by ss. 10—14 of Mad. Reg. VI of 1816 and s. 6 of Mad. Reg. IV of 1821 (Madras Code 3rd Edition pp. 59 and 77) to try petty cases of assault, abuse, theft, etc. the Code does not govern the Village Headmen. See Weir II, p. 1 In 15 M. 181 and 11 M. 375 it was held that ss. 480—482 do not apply to Village Magistrates.

15. Bombay Village Police officers.—See Bombay Act VIII of 1867 ss. 14—16 and s. 37 of Bombay Reg. XII of 1827 also 19 B. 612

16. Proceedings before village Police patel could be dealt with by the High Court under the general power of superintendence conferred by the Letters Patent and not under this Code which is not applicable. In re Vasudeo Pundlik 21 Bom. L. R. 274.

Note.—The words in bracket were substituted for the words 'Recorder of Rangoon' by the Lower Burma Courts Act VI of 1900 (See s 47 and Sch. I)

*Clerk of the Court—(135) 'Clerk of the Crown' includes any officer specially appointed by the Chief Justice to discharge the functions given by this Code to the Clerk of the Crown

Note.—Functions given to the Clerk of the Crown.—Secs 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221 and 222 infra

f Cognizable offence means an offence, and cognizable case means a case in which a Police-officer with or without the previous sanction, may, in accordance with the second schedule or under any law in the time being in force arrest without warrant

Notes.—1 Under any law—The offence of making in contravention of s 4 any such piece as is mentioned in that section, shall be a cognizable offence s 4 Act I of 1860 (The British India Act) also s 40 under s 450 Bombay Salt Act II of 1890

2 Offence cognizable even if power of arrest limited to particular Police-officers.—Under the Fergal Gombing Act II of 1867 it was held s 37 C. 146 that the words "a Police-officer" in the clause do not mean "any and every Police-officer" The power of arrest may be limited to any particular class of Police-officers.

The offences under ss 4 and 5 of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act were held cognizable offences within the meaning of s 4 (1) (f) of this Code. 50 Bom 344—25 Bom C. R. 272.

3. Power of arrest must be unqualified.—The power of arrest without warrant referred to in this clause is an unqualified power and not a conditional power as in s 24 of Act VIII of 1857 (Opium Act I of 1858) Lower Provinces, which only gives right to a Police-officer to arrest without warrant in case the accused does not furnish the security required by that section 26 C. 691

4. See memorandum of chief cognizable offences under s 154 infra.

*Commissioner of Police. (P) *Commissioner of Police includes a Deputy Commissioner of Police

(P) Complaint means the allegation made orally or in writing to a Magistrate with a view to his taking action, under this Code, that some person whether known or unknown has committed an offence, but it does not include the report of a Police-officer

report of a Police-officer

Notes.—1 Interpretation.—In 30 C. 910 (F B) it was held that complaint must be interpreted throughout the Code as bearing the same meaning as defined but in 60 C. 360 it was held that the word "complaint" as used in s 193 infra is of wider import than the definition of complaint as that section clearly contemplates prosecution at the instance of Police-officers. Under the N A Cr P Code information is defined as 'the allegation made to a Magistrate that a person has been guilty of some designated crime. It corresponds to the term complaint and is used in the repeated cases in the same sense

2 Other provisions as to 'complaints'.—See s 190 for taking cognizance of a complaint s 198 for complaint by or on motion in respect of several offences against public servants and against public justice et ss 196—199 for complaints in respect of particular offences ss 200—202 for procedure after cognizance of complaint ss 203 and 204 for dismissal of complaint, s 248 for withdrawal of complaint s 250 for compensation in the case of false complaint s 439 for further inquiry in cases of dismissal of complaint s 437 for cases of omission etc. in complaint.

3 Complaintant.—(i) Sections of the Code dealing with complaint.—See ss 170 and 171 for directions as to Police-officers regarding complainants, s 200 for examination of complainant s 217 for binding over complainant in Sessions cases, s 229 for consequences of absence of complainant in warrant-cases and s 544 for expenses of complainant.

(ii) Generally anyone may complain.—The complaint may generally be made by any person aware of the commission of the offence and not necessarily by the party injured 13 B 600; 21 B 836; 31 B 445; 41 B L J 18 (A); 20 C. 431; 41 C. 1013; 14 Cr L J 809 (O). A Public Prosecutor can make a complaint. The person making the complaint need not himself be a witness nor have personal knowledge of the facts constituting the offence 7 S L R 77 = 15 Cr L J 269; 41 C. 1013. In 11 C. W N 170 = 8 Cr. L J 13, it was held that before issuing process on such allegations the Magistrate should satisfy himself on proper material for issuing process has been made out. See also 10 C W N. 1090 and 1095; 22 B 112; 14 C. 77

(111) Where statute lays down who should complain, it must be complied with—See ss 132 and 193 to 199 and Note under s 190 as to special provisions in several miscellaneous Acts.

(112) Is the person who institutes a complaint under the authority of another, a complainant?—See Notes 16—20 under s. 250 and Note 7 to s 196

(113) Function of a complainant—The complainant merely sets the machinery of the Court in motion, the Crown is really the prosecutor in all criminal cases, 12 C. W. N. 750 = 7 C. L. J. 375 = 7 Cr. L. J. 342.

4 Essentials of complaint—(1) *Must allege an 'offence'—*1 or definition of 'offence' see (1) (a) at p 21 and Notes thereunder. The very definition of complaint implies that an offence has been committed. Where, as it cannot be said that it was stated that they had committed any 'offence,' 8 B. L. R. 66 = 15 Cr. L. J. 651. A statement to the Magistrate that a person was using his house as a brothel is not a complaint as such a use is not an "offence" under s 41 of the Bombay District Police Act, 6 B. L. R. 254 = 14 Cr. L. J. 320. See also 40 P. W. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 128 and Weir I, 720; II, 149 and Note 11 to s 250.

(114) Must be made with a view to his taking action under this Code.—(1) He must be a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of offences on complaint under s 190 (1) (a). (115) There must be an express or implied request to the Magistrate to take action, 17 C. W. N. 980 = 14 Cr. L. J. 432; 38 A. 222. See 19 B. 51, 6 C. W. N. 926; 35 A. 102; 28 M. 540; 27 M. 127; 15 C. W. N. 1051 = 12 Cr. L. J. 535; 12 C. W. N. 438. (116) Unless the statement is made to induce the Magistrate to take action under this Code, it is not a complaint. Therefore a statement made before a Magistrate with the object of inducing him to take action under s. 82 of the Bombay Gambling Act IV of 1887 that a certain person keeps a gambling house is not a "complaint," within the meaning of s 4 (h), 8 B. L. R. 66 = 15 Cr. L. J. 657. Asking for a departmental inquiry is not a complaint 30 C. 415. But although the petition may not call for the exercise by the Magistrate of his powers, such an intention may be inferred by the subsequent conduct of the petitioner, 11 A. L. J. 629 = 14 Cr. L. J. 425. A petition sent by a husband to a Magistrate, not with a view to his taking action thereon, but to recover jewels alleged to have been stolen by his wife, does not amount to a complaint, 16 Cr. L. J. 466 (M).

5. What the complaint must set out.—(1) A complaint must contain a statement of the facts relied on as constituting the offence in ordinary and concise language with as much certainty as the nature of the case will admit. A complaint in which no facts are set forth, but the words of the sections of the statute are literally copied, is a colourable compliance with the requirements of the statute, 15 C. L. J. 517 = 6 C. W. N. 1105 = 13 Cr. L. J. 609. It need not, however, set out the details of the offence, 32 M. 3. See also 27 C. 985; 22 B. 112.

(117) Whether 'complaint' includes deposition of complainant recorded under s 200.—See Note 3 under s 190

(118) It is not necessary that the section applicable in the Indian Penal Code should be set out in the complaint where on a complaint purporting to be made under ss 193 and 211, I P C, the Magistrate after hearing the evidence framed a charge of defamation, held, the failure in the complaint to mention specifically an offence under s 500, I P C did not prevent the Magistrate from taking cognizance under that section 6 Lah. 378.

6. Error, omission or irregularity in complaint—may be cured by s. 537. See 32 M. 3; 8 P. R. 1901 and Note 21 to s. 537. In 10 C. W. N. 1029 = 4 Cr. L. J. 170, however, it was held that a conviction under s 61 of the Post Office Act, 1898, cannot be maintained in the absence of a complaint.

7. Entire absence of complaint.—For the consequence of the absence of a complaint when one is required by statute, see 16 P. R. 1890; 37 C. 587 and Note 4 to s 196 and Note 19 to s 537.

8. Object of a complaint is not to give information to the accused.—It need not set out all the facts on which he is to be charged. See 32 M. 3, supra.

9. What would amount to a complaint.—(1) A Yadast by a Revenue-officer to a Magistrate charging a person with disobedience of a summons issued by him, 11 M. 443; (2) the submission of records by an Assistant Magistrate trying a rent suit to the Collector who was also the District Magistrate for starting a case under s. 193, I P C, against the plaintiff in the rent suit, 26 A. 514; (3) the petition of a complainant who, having once previously withdrawn his case, again prays to be allowed to prosecute the same, 4 C. W. N. 603, 5 C. W. N. 108. See also 5 C. W. N. 264 and 14 C. 707 (F.B.), (4) proceedings of a Court under s 476, infra, sending a person to the nearest first-class Magistrate, 13 B. 109; 13 M. 144; 7 A. 871 (F.B.); 26 M. 98; (5) the report of a Police-officer in a non-cognizable case, 26 B. 150 (F.B.); so that when the report is found to be false, the Magistrate may make an order under s 250 directing the Police-officer to pay compensation, but see 14 Cr. L. J. 218 (A.), 16 B. L. R. 82 = 13 Cr. L. J. 752; (f) petition presented to a Magistrate in the course of a Police enquiry, impugning its propriety and praying that action might be taken against certain persons who were alleged to have committed an offence, 33 C. L. See also 15 M. L. J. 97 (Journ.); (g) a complaint by a Prosecutor, Inspector of offences under s. 124 A, I P C., put in under the orders of the Local Government is a complaint and not a Police report, 32 M. J.; (h) an information laid by a Police-officer empowered under s. 51 of the Bombay District Police Act, 6 B. L. R. 82 = 13 Cr. L. J. 752, (i) communication by a Revenue Court to the District Magistrate that such action as he may deem fit might be taken with certain forged documents tendered before the Revenue Court 30 P. R. 1905. See also 8 P. R. 1895, (j) information of supposed commission of an offence communicated by the District Judge to a District Magistrate with a view to the latter taking action as a Magistrate, 35 A. 8; (k) an application by a complainant to have his witnesses summoned coupled with his oral allegations, 35 C. 141; (l) the report of an Excise Sub-Inspector, 15 C. W. N. 15; (m) a letter to a Magistrate stating that a certain person used insulting language towards him and therefore asking him to take action, 17 C. W. N. 443 = 14 Cr. L. J. 76, and (n) as to when certain orders for the prosecution for offences mentioned in s. 195 infra ought to be regarded as complaints, see Notes under Heading III to s. 195 infra.

M. 21 A. L. J. 825 it was held, that the trying Magistrate's report expressing an opinion that an alteration in a certain document was made after the document had been filed in Court and that the accused had not only committed perjury but had committed an offence punishable under s. 477, I P C., falls within the definition of complaint under s. 4 (b) and that the District Magistrate had power under s. 190 (a) to take cognizance of the offences and that he could transfer the case for trial to another Magistrate subordinate to him. This case was decided on the 8th of August, 1923, i.e., before the new amended Act came into force. On 1st September, 1923 It is doubtful whether the report above mentioned would be regarded as a formal complaint under the amended s. 476 of the Code. See 26 Bom. L. R. 289.

Where an information is lodged with the Police and the Police on enquiry report it to be false, an informant by an application to the Magistrate insists on a judicial investigation, he is deemed to have preferred a complaint to a Magistrate and a sanction or complaint by the Court itself under s. 195 is requisite before cognizance of an offence under 21 I P C can be taken. 4 Pat. 323.

10. What would not amount to a complaint.—(a) A complaint made to the Police, 6 A. 96, 30 C. 285; 7 M. 563, 30 C. 910 (F B), where, therefore, a frivolous or vexatious complaint is made to a Police-officer and the Magistrate takes cognizance only on the strength of a Police report based upon such complaint, no order for compensation under s. 250 could be made, (b) petition to institute proceedings under s. 110 or s. 145 infra 27 C. 86

(d) a petition praying for the redress of the petitioner's grievances, 30 C. 415, (e) information given to a Police-officer regarding the commission of a crime, e.g., a telegram to a District Superintendent of Police requesting a search to be made in the house of a particular person and alleging that it contained stolen property and upon which a search-warrant was applied for, 22 B. 949, 11 p. 956; (f) a letter from a Civil Court Amin to a Police-officer containing allegations charging the accused with a crime, 1904 A. W. N. 266; (g) a charge of defamation not contained in the petition presented to the Magistrate, but added subsequently by the Magistrate upon statements made by the complainant in his examination under s. 200 infra whether of his own record or in consequence of suggestions from the Magistrate, 10 A. 39; (h) statements made in a deposition by a complainant which disclose an offence, 14 Bom. L. R. 141 = 15 Cr. L. J. 237 and 14 Bom. L. R. 1166 = 1 Bom. Cr. C. 237 = 14 Cr. L. J. 61, where the deposition was made in the course of a trial held in pursuance of an order made by a Civil Court under s. 476. See also 26 A. 183 and 20 C. 481, (i) a petition presented to a Magistrate by a person, alleging that an offence had been committed against the petitioner, but that he did not desire to prosecute the wrong doer, 6 C. W. N. 926; (j) statement made to a District Magistrate as head of the Police alleging certain offences against the Police but that he did not wish to make a complaint, 35 A. 102; see also 11 A. L. J. 529. So also a mere statement made to a Magistrate without any intention of asking him to take action, 36 A. 223; (k) petition making certain charges against a person and asking for an order on the Police to warn that person in the first instance, 15 C. W. N. 1051 = 12 Cr. L. J. 535; (l) the report of a village officer made to a Mamladar in his executive capacity, though regarding an alleged theft of Government property, Ratanlal 554, (m) a letter merely conveying a sanction of the Local Government under s. 196 is not a complaint, but only an authority to institute a complaint, 16 P. R. 1890 discussed in 8 P. R. 1908 = 7 Cr. L. J. 333; (n) an application for issue or process does not fall within the definition of complaint, 25 C. W. N. 98 = 12 Cr. L. J. 2; (o) an order under s. 476, per SANKARAN NAIR,], 32 M. 49—55; (p) a petition put in reply to a notice issued by a Magistrate calling on the accused to show cause why he should not be prosecuted under s. 211, I P C for lodging a false information with the Police is not a complaint, if the petition does not contain a prayer to the Magistrate to make an inquiry himself, 13 C. W. N. XII; but if it contains a prayer for a magisterial inquiry it is a complaint, 5 C. W. N. 254. See Note (9) (c) above, (p) a report by an Amin deputed to demarcate boundaries to the Collector that the accused had destroyed the pillars erected by him and carried away the materials and on which the Collector directed the Amin to look up the sections of the Penal Code and put up the case before a Subordinate Magistrate is not a complaint, 12 C. W. N. 438. The report was merely to bring certain matters to the notice of the Magistrate by way of information and not for his taking action under the Code. See also 26 M. 640, 27 M. 127, (r) so also the report of a peon containing only a statement of what took place when he went to execute a warrant under the Cess Act, but making no express or implied request to the Magistrate to take any action is not a complaint 17 C. W. N. 980 = 14 Cr. L. J. 462; (s) or a statement that H kept a common gambling-house to a Magistrate with the object of inducing him to issue a warrant under the Bombay Gambling Act, 6 B. L. R. 66 = 15 Cr. L. J. 657; or (t) a petition sent to a Magistrate by a husband against his wife, with a view to recover jewels alleged to have been stolen by her, 16 Cr. L. J. 466 (M). A letter written by the Assistant Collector to the District Magistrate in which the former did not ask that any action should be taken by the Magistrate, but merely for directions as to how he should proceed did not amount to a complaint. 40 A. 641 = 16 A. L. J. 662; see also 40 A. 41.

11. Report of a Police-officer when and when not a 'complaint.'—Though the words 'Police report' are not defined in the Code, the Legislature has studiously attached to the expression 'Police report' a peculiar meaning throughout the Code wherever the expression occurs, and has pointed out the occasions when and the purposes for which such reports should be made. See ss 157, 168, 170 and 173 and other sections of Chapter XIV, infra. The only sections outside that chapter where the expression 'Police report' occurs are ss 62 and 114, infra. Where a Police report goes beyond these occasions and purposes it must fall within the definition of a 'complaint.' Therefore when the offence is a non-cognizable one, there is no section in the Code which empowers a Police officer of his own motion to make any report to a Magistrate and if in such a case he does make a report it is a complaint, 25 B. 150 (F.B.), but if the report is made by Police-officer investigating a non-cognizable case under the orders of a Magistrate having power to try such a case, he can send in a 'report' under s 173, infra which would be a 'Police report,' 14 Cr. L. J. 218 (ALL). So also if an information is laid by a Police-officer acting under s 51 of the Bombay District Police Act, 1890, it would amount to a 'complaint,' 6 B. L. R. 82 = 13 Cr. L. J. 752, 46 B. 150. In 32 M. 8 it was held that where a Prosecuting Police Inspector acting under the authority of Government makes reports of offences, under s 124 A, I P C, to a Magistrate, he does not make a report, but a complaint. The report of a Police-officer must be some statement made in connection with or, at least, under colour of, the duty of the maker as a Police-officer and it is not the duty of a Prosecuting Inspector to report to a Magistrate offences under s 124 A, I P C. See also 6 B. L. R. 82 = 13 Cr. L. J. 752 where it was held following 5 B. L. R. 1 = 12 Cr. L. J. 92, that the 'Police report' here referred to is a report made under s 173, infra after the conclusion of a Police investigation, but in 2 B. R. 146 it was laid down, however, that the report here referred to does not refer to report under Chapter XIV exclusively, but includes any report by a Police-officer or any written information, even a verbal report made by him. In U B R. (1914) 2nd Cr. 19 Cr. 19, it was held that a Police report in a non-cognizable case is a Police report within the meaning of s. 190 (1) (d). It is submitted that such a construction is too wide. See also 40 C. 360 where it was held that the recommendation of a Police officer for prosecution of a person under s 211, I P C, in respect of false information given to the Police is not a 'complaint' as defined in the Code, but is one within the meaning of the word 'complaint' as used in s. 195. An application to the Magistrate impugning the correctness of the report of the Police that a certain case brought by petitioner was not true and praying that the case against the accused named may be proceeded with is a complaint and it is irregular not to deal with it. Lalji Singh v Parsjit Singh 18 Cr. L. J. 754.

12. Stamp on complaint.—An eight-anna stamp must be affixed to an application containing a complaint or charge of any offence other than offence for which Police-officers may arrest without a warrant under this Code and presented to any Criminal Court, Court Fees Act VII of 1870 Sch. II Art. I (v) and s 18.

13. Complaint and sanction.—See Notes to s. 195, infra under Heading III.

* European British subject.

(r) 'European British subject' means—

(r) Any subject of His Majesty of European descent in the male line born, naturalized or domiciled in the British Islands or any Colony, or

(ii) Any subject of His Majesty who is the child or grandchild of any such person by legitimate descent.

Note.—The definition of "European British subject" is amended in important particulars by the Racial Distinctions Act (XII of 1823). Under the old definition a non-European domiciled in Natal but not an European domiciled in East Africa would have been regarded as "European British subject." To remedy this the present definition is substituted in the place of the old one. Under the present definition a person who cannot claim European descent will never be included under the definition of European British subject. In the present definition the mention of the particular colonies by name has been dropped and the words "any colony" are substituted.

Notes.—1. An European British subject forfeits his privilege under the following circumstances:—

Any European British subject who, upon the summary inquiry mentioned in s 5 has been determined to be a vagrant or who has been convicted under s. 22 or 23, shall so long as he remains in India, be subject, beyond the limits of the old towns, to the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure [other than those contained in Chapter XXXIII (now Chapter IV) of the same Code] applicable to an European not being a British subject.

"If from any cause he is committed or held to bail by a Justice of the Peace to take his trial before a High Court, he shall not be at liberty to object to the jurisdiction of such Justice of the Peace or High Court, on the ground of any thing contained in the former part of the section."

"An office copy of the declaration recorded under s. 5 shall be prima facie evidence, that the European British subject named therein has been upon such inquiry, determined to be a vagrant."

"Save as aforesaid nothing herein contained shall be deemed to confer jurisdiction over European British subjects on Magistrates, who, if this Act had not been passed would have had no such jurisdiction."—The European Vagrancy Act IX of 1874, s. 30, see Appendix.

2. Legislative powers of Governor-General in Council—An European British subject in the Mofussil was convicted by a Magistrate under the provisions of Chapter VII, Act X of 1872. He appealed to the High Court on the ground that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try the case inasmuch as the Governor-General in Council had not the power, under 24 and 25 Vict., c. 67, to subject an European British subject to any jurisdiction other than that of the High Court, and therefore the provisions of Act X of 1872, under which the prisoner had been tried, were ultra vires and illegal. Held, that the jurisdiction of the High Court, as given by the Letters Patent, is subject to the legislative powers of the Governor-General in Council, and therefore, the Magistrate had jurisdiction to try the case, 14 B. L. R. 106.

3. "Naturalized."—At least five years' residence is required. See 33 and 34 Vict., c. 14, s. 7 (Naturalization Act, 1870), amended by 33 and 34 Vict., c. 102. See also 6 M. H. C. R. 7 and Act XXX of 1852.

4. "Domicile" connotes the place in which a man has voluntarily fixed the habitation of himself and his family, not for a mere special or temporary purpose, but with the present intention of making a permanent home until some unexpected event shall occur to induce him to adopt some other permanent home. Two things are necessary—residence and the intention of making it the permanent residence. Lord v Colvin, 4 Drew 366 = 62 Eng. Rep. 141; Whicker v Hume, 7 H. L. Cases 124. See also ss 5–19 of the Indian Succession Act X of 1865.

5. Child or grandchild by legitimate descent.—A person claiming the privileges of an European British subject under cl. (ii), must prove not only legitimate descent but also the nationality of his father or grandfather as the case may be, 6 M. H. C. R. 7.

6. As to trial of European British subjects, see Chapter XXXIII, infra.

(j) "High Court" means, in reference to proceedings against European British subject, or persons jointly charged with European British subjects the High Courts of Judicature at Fort William, Madras, Bombay, Allahabad, Patna, Lahore and Rangoon and the Courts of the Judicial Commissioners of the Central Provinces, Oudh and Sindh in others cases "High Court" means the highest Court of Criminal Appeal or Revision for any local area, or, where no such Court is established under any law for the time being in force, such officer as the Governor-General in Council may appoint in this behalf.

Notes.—For another definition of High Court, see s 266, infra, Chapter XXIII

1. Applicability of definition to trials of European British subjects.—This definition must be read with "special proceedings," against European British subjects contemplated in Chapter XXXIII, and not with reference to proceedings generally against Europeans, including proceedings in which they waive their rights under that Chapter. When in any particular case the special rules contained in Chapter XXXIII, cease to have any application, the definition in the former part ceases to have any application to such a case, and the definition in the latter part prevails, 12 B. 561. Where the accused, an European British subject waived his right to be tried as such and was tried and sentenced by the City Magistrate of Karachi, it was held revision lay to the Sadar Court in Sindh (as a High Court in other cases) and not to the High Court of Judicature at Bombay as it would be, had the trial been under Chapter XXXIII. See also 7 N. L. R. 93 = 12 Cr. L. J. 436, held that unless and until the accused has definitely claimed to be tried as an European British subject and his claim is allowed, the ordinary jurisdiction of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner as a High Court is not ousted.

2. "In other cases."—Including cases where European British subjects waive their right to be dealt with under Chapter XXXIII, 12 B. 561; 7 N. L. R. 93 = 12 Cr. L. J. 436.

3. Each officer.—The latter part of this definition enables the Governor-General in Council to appoint in outlying territories an officer to perform the functions of the High Court under the Code. 1 or more. ing of High Court in (a) Upper Burma See Reg V of 1892 Sch. s 1 under which the Judicial Commissioner is a High Court, (b) Sonthal Pargannas See Reg V of 1894, s 4, as amended by Reg III of 1896, and 18 C. 247; (c) Ajmere Merwara See Reg I of 1877, s 38, (d) Coorg Reg I of 1901, s 16 under which the Chief Commissioner who is also the resident in Mysore is a High Court, (e) Oudh Act XIV of 1891 as amended by Act XXI of 1897, (f) The N W Frontier Province Reg VII of 1901, s 6(1)(c), (g) Baluchistan Reg VIII of 1898, s 6(1)(i) of Sch. under which the Chief Commissioner and Governor-General's Agent is a High Court.

4. A single Judge sitting on the Original Side of the High Court is not a High Court within the meaning of s 18a (b), infra See 32 C. 379 followed 50 C. 423.

"Inquiry" (k) "Inquiry" includes every inquiry other than a trial conducted under this Code by a Magistrate or Court.

Notes.—1. Other than a trial.—Words adopted from 15 C. 608 (F.B.) 'Trial' is not defined in the Code. See 3 C. 758 = 2 C. L. R. 253, and Notes to s 177, infra. The Draft Bill, however, made an unsuccessful attempt to define the word as follows—Trial means proceedings taken in Court after the charge has been drawn up and includes the sentence (if any) on the offender. It also includes the proceedings under Chapters XX and XXI, from the time the accused appears in Court. See also the judgment of MACLEAN, C.J., in 25 C. 953, Note 14 to s 350 and 32 M. 218. In 27 M. 510 it was held that an order under s 107, infra was made in a 'criminal trial' within the meaning of s 15 of the Letters Patent. In 16 C. 421 it was held that 'trial' as used in s 497 includes appeal. See also 12 M. 431; 23 C. 44 (s 355), 1895 A. W. N. 225 (s 477), 12 C. W. M. (s 191), 28 M. L. J. 307 = 16 Cr. L. J. 303 (s 107), contra 14 B. 160 (s 452). See Notes to ss 107 and 110. Also see 43 M. 511 for the definition of 'trial'. There it is held by the Full Bench that a proceeding under section 107 is a 'trial' and so s 350 applies to such a proceedings, 38 M. L. J. 370.

Held that proceedings under Chapter VIII of the Code are 'inquiries' and not 'trials'. A person called upon for security under the chapter is not an 'accused' nor is he guilty of any offence as defined in s 4 60 C. 985

2. When may a trial be said to begin.—In a case exclusively triable by a Court of Session, the trial begins only after the commitment and the charge is framed. In a summons-case, the trial really begins when the accused is brought before the Magistrate, the particulars of the offence are stated to him and the Magistrate proceeds to hear the complaint and takes the prosecution evidence. Under the definition, therefore, this cannot be an inquiry. The trial must end in conviction or acquittal, there is no discharge. Neither the Magistrate, nor the Sessions Judge can interfere under s 437. In a warrant case it is more reasonable to treat the proceedings after the framing of the charge as the trial and the rest an inquiry as held in 15 C. 608 (F.B.) PER SANKARAN NAIK, J. in 32 M. 220—225. Trial begins when the accused is charged and called on to answer and then the question before the Court is whether the accused is to be convicted or acquitted and not whether the complaint is to be dismissed or the accused is to be discharged. PER WALLIS, J., 32 M. 220—234. It is settled law that the proceedings before a Magistrate in a warrant case under Chapter XXI, infra are only an inquiry until a charge is framed and on a charge being framed become a trial, 27 M. L. J. 589 = 16 M. L. T. 303 = (1914) M. W. N. 644 = 13 Cr. L. J. 673; 22 M. 218 referred to In a warrant case there is, till a charge has been framed, no trial but only an inquiry In a summons-case, the intimation prescribed by s. 242 takes the place of a formal charge, but it is only a charge formal or informal that has to be tried, 9 N. L. R. 42 = 14 Cr. L. J. 230. In revision under ss. 436 and 477, infra, the word inquiry refers to proceedings up to charge and the word trial to those after charge, 15 C. 605 (F.B.), 9 A. 52.

3. 'Inquiry'.—This word is meant to include everything done in a case by a Magistrate whether the case has been challenged or not, 3 P. R. 1897. Under the Code it means not only an inquiry into an offence but extends to inquiries into matters which are not offences. Proceedings under Chapter XII an. inquiries within the meaning of s. 4 of the Code, 22 C. 898; 28 C. 709; 13 C. W. N. 420 = 9 Cr. L. J. 278. So also are matters under ss. 98, 117, 133, etc. As to the meaning of 'judicial inquiry' see 12 B. 36; 'preliminary inquiry,' see ss. 154 and 476, 'local inquiry,' see explanation to s. 556 and Notes thereunder

(2) "Investigation includes all the proceedings under this Code for the collection of evidence conducted by a Police-officer or by any person (other than a Magistrate) who is authorized by a Magistrate in this behalf

Notes.—1 As to investigation by Police-officers. See ss. 150, 156, 157 and 174

2 As to investigation under orders of a Magistrate. See s. 155 (2) and (3). Section 202, infra authorizes the Chief Presidency Magistrate or any Magistrate of the first or second class to cause local investigation to be made by a Sub-Magistrate, Police-officer or any other person whom such Magistrate thinks fit and the definition includes the proceedings of any of these persons so authorized, other than Magistrates as also similar proceedings held under s. 159, infra. See also 26 B. 533.

Judicial proceed (m) "Judicial proceeding" includes any proceeding in the course of which evidence is or may be legally taken on oath

Notes.—1. "We have added the words 'on oath' in this definition, because the power to take evidence on oath [including affirmation and declaration—See General Clauses Act X. of 1897, s. 3 (36)]—is the characteristic test of judicial proceedings. We have omitted the new words 'and it also includes every other proceeding consequential thereon,' providing for consequent proceedings which the Bill as introduced proposed to add to the definition, as they appear too wide. On the other hand, we have altered the word 'means' at the commencement of the definition into 'includes' and have thus given the Courts a certain latitude of construction."—Set Court Rep Cf I P C. s. 193, explanations 1, 2 and 3. See Notes to s. 195 under Heading VI as to what is a 'Court' and Notes to s. 476 under Heading IV for 'judicial proceedings' and Note 16 to s. 435 as to what are 'extra-judicial proceedings'

2 "Legally."—This word has been added in consequence of the ruling in 1 A. 1 at p. 6. As to the distinction between a Judicial and an Administrative proceeding, see 12 B. 36 at p. 42.

3. Definition confined to proceedings under Code.—The above definition must be chiefly applied to the proceedings under this Code, 7 C. 121 (F.B.), 23 M. 544. For other explanations see 2 M. H. C. R. 43; 12 B. 36; 4 N. W. P. 6; 3 W. R. 59, 12 Cr. L. J. 326 (Sind)

4. What are Judicial Proceedings?—(a) The proceedings in which a Magistrate comes to his determination as to the fitness of sureties under Chapter XIII of this Code 2 B. L. R. 11 = 10 Cr. L. J. 225 (referring to 10 M. 232, 20 M. 339 and 24 C. 155). See also 26 A. 371, Note 3 to s. 122 infra. (b) An inquiry held by a Magistrate before issuing an order under s. 144 infra, 19 M. 18. (c) Proceeding in which the statement of a witness is recorded under s. 164, infra, 5 B. L. R. 174 = 13 L. J. 33, 8 Bom. L. R. 589. (d) An investigation under Chapter XIV by a Magistrate, 29 M. 89, 16 M. 421. (e) Proceedings of a Court of first instance on an application under s. 195. The order granting or refusing sanction is a judicial act. Consequently the proceedings of an Appellate Court under sub-sect. (6) of s. 195 in which the Court is invited to review the proceedings and the propriety of the order of the Court of first instance are also judicial proceedings, 10 M. 232; 20 M. 333; 23 M. 210 and see 13 Cr. L. J. 1 (Cal), where these cases are followed and 7 C. W. N. 423 and 16 A. 80 are dissented from. See Notes to s. 195 under Heading XVII. (f) Investigation proceeding under s. 202, infra conducted by a Subordinate Magistrate on a complaint which was taken cognizance of by another Magistrate and sent to him for inquiry and report, 38 C. 72; 2 Cr. L. J. 118 (Mad. Cr. A. 649 of 1903), but see 23 M. 223. (g) The proceedings of a Court holding a preliminary inquiry under s. 476, infra, 37 C. 52. (h) Maintenance proceedings under Chapter XXXVI 5 A. 234. (i) Proceedings under s. 514 25 C. 440. (j) An inquiry conducted by a Magistrate into the truth of an allegation against a subordinate official contained in a petition presented to Deputy Commissioner, 28 A. 89, where 32 C. 367 is distinguished. (k) Proceedings in execution of a decree, 37 C. 642; 10 C. W. N. 55; 10 C. L. J. 450 = 10 Cr. L. J. 584; 1 P. R. 1910 = 2 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 90; 10 N. L. R. 177 = 15 Cr. L. J. 161, See also 10 B. 288. The cases 32 C. 367 and 35 C. 133 are overruled and 7 C. W. N. 423 is no longer law. (l) Proceedings under s 8 of the Reformatory Schools Act V of 1876 (now Act VIII of 1897), 14 B. 531. (m) An inquiry under the Legal Practitioners Act XVIII of 1879, 6 M. 252; 9 A. L. J. 156 = 13 Cr. L. J. 190. (n) An inquiry under the Coroners' Act IV of 1871. (o) An inquiry by the Collector under the Income tax Act II of 1886 hearing objections to assessment, 44 P. R. 1905 = 3 Cr. L. J. 128. (p) Inquiry by the Registrar of the Presidency Court of Small Causes as to proper service of summons, 18 C. W. N. 1323. (q) A proceeding before a Magistrate for the recovery of Municipal cesses under s 84 of the Bombay Municipal Act (VI of 1873), 17 B. 731.

5. What are not Judicial Proceedings?—(a) Proceedings of a Magistrate purporting to be under s 86 infra, taking bonds from an appellant in a criminal appeal to appear (i) before the Sub-Magistrate in connection with the taking of further evidence under the orders of the Appellate Magistrate, and (ii) before the Appellate Magistrate himself in connection with a departmental inquiry into a charge of bribery against the Sub-Magistrate, 29 M. 100, see also 3 C. 742. But see now the amended s 88 which authorizes a Court to enquire into claims as to attached property and so such a proceeding will now be a judicial proceeding. (b) Examination by a Police-officer under s 161, 11 B. 659. (c) Taking of a statement under s 164 by Magistrate not only authorized, 11 B. 702. (d) Giving a sanction under s 197, infra by the Local Government, 27 M. 56. (e) A preliminary inquiry held by a Sub-divisional Magistrate at the direction of a District Magistrate, into the circumstances of a complaint against the Police with a view to ascertain whether the District Magistrate should grant sanction under s 197 or not 23 M. 223, but see sub-note (f) to note above. (f) The proceedings of a District Magistrate under s 125 Cr. P. C. for cancelling a bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour, 37 C. 72. (g) A preliminary investigation undertaken by a Court itself under s 202, infra, per SUNDARA IYER, J., in 21 M. L. J. 795 = 10 M. L. T. 47 = (1911) 2 M. W. N. 9 = 12 Cr. L. J. 323, Weir II, 167. (i) A departmental inquiry falling within s 197 of Bombay Land Revenue Code (Act V of 1879) 22 B. 936. (j) Where Telegraph authorities, having had a claim made against them by the heir of a deceased employee referred it to the District Judge for verification and he inquired into his claims held that proceedings before him were non-judicial, 6 A. 103. See also 30 B. 523 (P. C.); 4 C. L. J. 181, and (k) where the person conducting the proceedings was coram non-judice, 20 C. 719 and 726, 33 A. 102.

"Non-cognizable offence"

"Non-cognizable case"

(n) "Non cognizable offence" means an offence for, and "non cognizable case" means a case in which a Police-officer, within or without a Presidency town, may not arrest without warrant

Notes—1 As to such offences under the Penal Code and other laws. See Col. 3 of Sch. II

2. Effect of an offence being non-cognizable—An offence under s 9 of Act I of 1878 (Opium) is a non-cognizable offence and is therefore one for which, by this section, a Police-officer cannot arrest without warrant, and he has, therefore under s 155, no authority to investigate such an offence without the order of a Magistrate nor under s 165 can he make a search in respect of it, 24 C. 691. See also 27 C. 144.

(o) "Offence" means any act or omission made punishable by any law for the time being in force

It also includes any act in respect of which a complaint may be made under s 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act, 1851

Notes—See Notes 10 and 11 under cl. (k) 'complaint' and

1. Offence includes crimes committed beyond British India—The word "offence" now includes under s. 4, I P. C., as amended by s. 2 of Act IV of 1898, even acts committed out of British India. See also the remarks of WHITE, C. J., in 26 M. 607. See s 188 infra

2. Other definitions of "offence."—This definition is the same as s 3(37) of the General Clauses Act X of 1897. Compare this with the definition in s 40, I P. C. The word 'offence' as used in the Extradition Act XIII of 1879 is not restricted to offences as defined in s 40 I P. C., or in this Code 26 M. 607.

3. What is an offence?—(a) A mere breach of contract is not under cl. (i), s 2 of Act XIII of 1859, an offence within the meaning of s. 4 (a) 4 C. W. N. 253; 4 C. W. N. 201; 4 M. 234. The proceedings of a Magistrate up to and inclusive of the passing by him of an order for either the repayment of the advance or performance of the contract does not constitute a trial for any offence. It is only when the order has been disobeyed that there is an offence, 20 M. 233 not followed, 33 B. 22; 23 B. 23. But see 11 A. 262 and 20 M. 235 at p. 238. See also Appendix VII, Note 7 at p. lxxvi (b) Neglect to maintain wife or children is not an offence and an order under s. 488, infra does not amount to a conviction for an offence, 7 W. R. 10; 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 81; 13 P. R. 1855; 16 M. 234 and see Note 8 to s. 488 (c) Under the Railways Act IX of 1890, s. 113, cl. (4), travelling in a train without a proper pass or ticket is not an offence, 20 A. 95; 11 C. W. N. 100. See also 18 B. 400; 20 M. 285 and 1 Bom. L. R. 166. (d) An application to take proceedings under ss. 107, 110 or 145 is not an accusation in respect of offences, 16 P. R. 1893; 27 C. 662; 20 C. 729. See also 42 P. R. 1905; 1900 A. W. N. 206; 25 B. 48; and Notes under ss. 107 and 110, infra (e) Inability to give a satisfactory account of oneself is no offence, 3 N. L. R. 51 = 5 Cr. L. J. 434. (f) Keeping a disorderly house is not an offence under ss. 3 and 9 of the Eastern Bengal Disorderly House Act 31 C. 257. (g) The mere use of a house as a brothel is not an offence under s. 41 of the Bombay District Police Act (IV of 1870), 6 B. L. R. 224 = 14 Cr. L. J. 232. See also 1897 A. W. N. 25 for non-compliance with the terms of s. 16 of Printing Press Act XXV of 1867

4. What amounts to an offence?—(a) Omission to comply with an order made under cl. (1), s. 2 of Act XII of 1859 is an offence, 24 M. 660; 33 B. 22 and 23, supra (b) Failure to prepare and to retain counterfoils of rent receipts, as specified in s. 58 of the Bengal Tenancy Act VIII of 1885 (B.C.) is an offence, 9 C. W. N. 816 = 2 Cr. L. J. 532 (c) A fine imposed by a Magistrate under s. 8 of Village Chowkidar Act VI of 1870 (B.C.), upon the collecting member of a Panchayat, is in respect of an offence as defined in this clause, 23 C. 241. (d) Omission to stamp a share-warrant under s. 35 of the Indian Companies' Act VI of 1882, 20 C. 676.

5. Cattle Trespass Act I of 1871—See 4 L. B. R. 11 = 6 Cr. L. J. 122; 34 C. 926. It follows from the definition that a person against whom an order is made under s. 22 of this Act is a "person convicted on a trial" and an appeal lies against such conviction under s. 407 infra 29 M. 517 See p. lxxi of the Appendix

(p) 'Officer in charge of a Police-station' includes, when the officer in charge of the Police-station is absent from the station house or unable from illness or other cause to perform his duties, the Police-officer present at the station house, who is next in rank to such officer and is above the rank of constable or, when the Local Government so directs, any other Police-officer so present

Notes.—1. This clause does not apply to the Police in Calcutta and Bombay See 31 C. 557. Cf. Upper Burma Criminal Justice Regulation V of 1892 Sch., ss. 6 and 7

2. Under s. 551, infra the power of an officer in charge of a Police-station may be exercised by Police officers superior in rank to officer in charge of Police-station throughout the local area to which they are appointed. As to such powers see ss. 55, 58, 94 127, 128 153, 156, 157 and 175, infra As to his duties see ss. 55, 62 154, 169, 173, 174 and 175 infra

3. 'Officer in charge of a Police-station' includes the Senior Police Constable in the Madras Presidency.—Under the powers conferred by this section, the Madras Government has directed, by Judicial Notification No. 3, dated 31st January, 1883, that the Senior Constable present at any such station shall be deemed to be the officer in charge of the Police-station for the time being, during the absence of the officer in charge as defined in this section. See Local rules and orders made under enactments applying to the Madras Presidency, Vol I Part II p. 165 1911 (1) M. W. N. 231 = 9 M. L. T. 414 = 12 Cr. L. J. 190. See also 42 Mad 446 = 35 M. L. J. 252

4. Duties of an officer in charge of Police-station, N.-W. P.—The officer in charge of a Police-station is responsible for the conduct of the Police located under his charge. All reports, informations or charges made at the station-house will, during his presence be made to him, and all proceedings taken thereupon will be by his direction. The writing of all station diaries registers, etc., will be committed to the Head Constable writer, but the officer in charge of a Police-station will see that the record made is faithful and true. If the town or city in which he is stationed is provided with a Police for the protection of life and property, he will see that the Police are vigilant and constant on their patrolling duty, that property is protected and crime prevented, and on the commission of an offence he will ascertain whether such offence obtained commission through neglect of duty

He will receive the reports of all village Chowkidars and enquire from them particulars relating to any bad or suspicious characters resident in their villages, or absconded offenders connected therewith.

On receipt of information of crime, he will, in all cases in which investigation is imperative whether by demand of the injured party or by the nature of the offence itself, either proceed himself or depute a subordinate for the local proceedings of the report of his subordinate, that the investigation has taken place.

Whenever on duty in the interior of the circle he will take every opportunity for collecting information of the characters and events of his circle, that he may have an intimate knowledge of the people around him, and more especially of the bad or suspected characters of importance, and he will see that his subordinates (the writer alone excepted) also take every opportunity of acquiring intimate local information.

Sections of Police-station within his circle, as well as all village Chowkidars, will be kept under his constant supervision and control and assisted by his subordinate officers and Police, he will see that duties devolving upon them are not neglected.—Reg. & Ord. N W P., s. 10, p. 265

Place

(g) Place, includes also a house, building, tent and vessel

(*) "Pleader" used with reference to any proceeding in any Court, means a pleader or a Mukhtyar authorized under any law for the time being in force to practise in such Court, and includes (1) an advocate, a vakil and an attorney of a High Court so authorized and (2) any other person appointed with the permission of the Court to act in such proceeding

Notes.—1. When action against pleader may be taken.—Under s. 340 every accused person has a right to be defended by a pleader. A pleader should not be suspended during the pendency of the case for any alleged misconduct 10 C 255. The proper procedure would be to call on him to show cause, after the criminal case in which he had been retained had terminated. A Sessions Judge took exception to the fact that the pleader for the defence had put forward witnesses who, he must have known had been tampered with and threatened to report his conduct to the High Court. Held that the remarks of the Judge were improper and that it was the duty of the pleader to call witnesses for the defence if his client insisted on submitting, their evidence to the Court 3 Bom L. R. 562.

2. Laws in force governing Legal Practitioners.—See the Legal Practitioners Act XVIII of 1879, as amended by Act IX of 1894 and XI of 1896. For Upper Burma, see s. 25 of Reg. I of 1896 and notifications thereunder in Burma Gazette, 1900, Pt. IV, p. 384. For British Baluchistan see s. 20 (1) (c) of Reg. VIII of 1896, for N W Frontier Province, see s. 9 of Reg. VII of 1901 and also Rules in Gazette of India, 1902 Pt. II p. 5, see Bombay Act XVII of 1920

3. What amounts to practise.—A mere petitioner writer who attends Court all day cannot be said to practise 18 W. R. 27. Only persons entitled to appear plead or act in Court can be said to practise 14 C 556 at p. 555.

4. Mukhtyar.—Clause (r) of s. 4 was amended by Act XXXV of 1923 as noted below. The amendment consists in taking out the word "Mukhtyar" from its former proximity with the words "other person" and transposing it to a place after the word "Pleader". The effect of this transposition it is submitted will be to give legal recognition to Mukhtyars and placing them on a level with pleaders so far as criminal proceedings are concerned. It is also submitted that under the new amendment special permission in each criminal case will not be necessary in the case of certificated Mukhtyars certified under the Legal Practitioners Act XVIII of 1879. So the rulings about Mukhtyars in 33 C 408, 30 A 68 have become obsolete in view of the latest amendment.

Another effect of the transposition of the word Mukhtyar from its place in s. 4 (r) under the old Code is that any person without any professional certificate or qualification can be appointed to plead or act in a criminal proceeding with the permission of the Court and it was held in 50 B. 250 that an estate manager can plead for an accused with the permission of the Court.

5. Other person appointed.—Private vakils come under this designation, even outsiders 14 C 556 (F.B.); 7 M. H. C. R. Appx. 37, 6 M. L. 100 and 12 M. L. J. 334. I or representation of accused by her father in law and 6 With the permission of the Court.—Under the Code of 1861 the permission of the Court was not necessary for any person to represent an accused. The necessity for the permission of the Court was first provided for in Act XX of 1875 (now repealed by Act XVIII of 1879). See 7 M H C R App 37.

7. Considerations which should guide Judges in exercising discretion.—In general no person who is not a qualified Legal Practitioner should be permitted to appear in any proceeding except to prevent a possible miscarriage of justice. M. H. C. Circ. Dis. No 1453 Judicial dated 18th October 1899. The Magistrate in deciding whether permission should be given or not to a private vakil should consider the personal character of the vakil. C. M. H. C. Circ. C. No 2493 dated 30th October 1890 and 12 M. L. J. 334. It should be noted however that such rules do not apply to Mukhtyars who are usually qualified. In all cases the Judge must see that the defence of an accused person is not shut out by the fact that he is represented by a Mukhtyar or other private person. See 33 C. 433; 1 M 304, 6 B 14. The discretion should largely depend on the question whether the accused is in a position to employ a vakil or a pleader and whether he elects to do so.

8 License for one district does not confer right to practise in Criminal Courts of another district.—It was contended that a pleader who held a license under rules framed under s. 16 of the Sindh Courts Act XII of 1860 to practise in a particular district was a matter of right entitled to practise in all Criminal Courts in Sindh under s. 4 (r) of this Code. held that the rules related to both Civil and Criminal Courts and that under the definition of pleader, no pleader unless duly authorized to practise in the particular Criminal Court can claim of right to be permitted to practise in such Court. 4 B. L. R. 207 = 12 Cr. L. J. 118. See also 7 B. L. R. 93 = 15 Cr. L. J. 332.

9 Duty of pleader when appearing in district to which his license does not extend.—It is the duty of a pleader, who appears in a Criminal Court in a district to which his sanad does not apply, to inform the Magistrate that he cannot appear as of right and to apply for permission under s. 4 (r). The better course is not to accept a fee or an engagement until that permission has been recorded. But if the pleader accepts an engagement before attending the Magistrate's Court he ought to explain to his client that his appearance will be contingent on the Magistrate's permission. 7 B. L. R. 93 = 15 Cr. L. J. 332.

10 Legality of general orders regulating right of persons to plead in Criminal Courts.—(a) Cal.—Where a Sessions Judge laid down that, as a general practice, Mukhtyars should be allowed to appear in every case in Magistrate's Courts and that as a general practice they should not be allowed in any case to appear in the Sessions Courts. held that both the general rules were equally erroneous. It must be decided in each case whether a Mukhtyar will be permitted to appear. 36 C. 488. Where a Magistrate refused permission to a Mukhtyar to appear in any two cases and also passed a General Order refusing him permission to appear in any case before him owing to the latter's alleged misconduct in Court on a particular day. Held that the orders were bad and that even in punishing the Mukhtyar for the particular misconduct the Magistrate should have dealt with the matter on its own merits giving the Mukhtyar an opportunity of defending himself. 7 C. W. N. 524.

(b) All.—Where the District Magistrate issued a notice that Mukhtyars can appear under s. 4 (r) only with the Court's permission. held that he did not act without jurisdiction.

Per Banerji J.—If permission to act in a criminal case is asked for by a Mukhtyar, who holds a certificate empowering him to practise, such permission should not be refused except for valid reasons.

Per Richards J.—In considering whether or not permission should be granted to a Mukhtyar, who has qualified himself with a certificate provided by the Legal Practitioners Act the Court ought to consider every application on its merits. 30 A. 66.

(c) Mad.—In Madras H. C. Pro No 53, dated 11th January 1875 a Circular by a District Magistrate directing that as a rule, none but pleaders who had passed the prescribed examinations should be allowed to appear in the Subordinate Criminal Courts of the district was held ultra vires. See also 12 M. L. J. 334—Weir II, 400. So too, an order by a Divisional Magistrate to his Subordinate Magistrates that a certain private vakil was not a proper person to be allowed to appear as a pleader in criminal cases. See Mad H. C. Case No 2493, dated 30th October 1890. See also M. H. C. Pro No 263, dated 28th January 1886 M. H. C. Pro No 397, Judicial, dated 8th February, 1907. A Magistrate cannot pass a general order prohibiting a private vakil from appearing and practising in all cases before him. 4 M. L. T. 91.

11 Accused must not be prejudiced by action against pleaders.—The defence of an accused should not be shut out merely by the fact that he is represented by a Mukhtyar, 33 C. 433.

12 Right of pleader to refuse brief.—A pleader is not bound to accept a brief offered to him nor to state his reasons for doing so. 12 C. W. N. 331.

13. Admission made by a prisoner's vakil cannot be used against the prisoner, 11 W. R. 49.

14. Pleader is bound to conduct the case even if fee not wholly paid.—A vakil is bound to appear and conduct his case even if the fee or any portion thereof remains unpaid, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary or at least notice to that effect to the client in sufficient time, to enable him to make other arrangements, per SANKARAN NAIR, J., 37 M. 238.

15 Professional misconduct to abandon case in middle.—A pleader who abandons his client's case while the client is in the dock acts improperly. After having once taken up the case it is his duty to see it terminated. 14 Cr. L. J. 379 (G.)

(s) "Police station" means any post or place declared, generally or specially, by the Local Government to be a Police-station, and includes any local area specified by the Local Government in this behalf

Note—This clause does not apply to the Police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay, 81 G. 857. See also s. 551 infra

(t) "Public Prosecutor" means any person appointed under s. 492, and includes any person acting under the directions of a Public Prosecutor and any person conducting a prosecution on behalf of Her Majesty in any High Court in the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction

Notes.—1 A Public Prosecutor should have no personal interest in the case he conducts.—It is for this reason that a Police officer who has investigated a case is held incompetent to conduct the prosecution [s. 495 (4)]. In 8 B. H. C. R. (Cr. Ca.) 126, the appointment of a Magistrate who had in the first instance tried the accused, to be Crown Prosecutor to conduct an inquiry subsequently directed in the case, was severely censured.

2 A private complainant may retain a pleader and the Public Prosecutor may avail himself of his services. In doing so, the Public Prosecutor does not deprive himself of the management of the case, 11 B. H. C. R. 102. See also ss. 270 and 492–495 (Chap. XXXVII, infra)

Sub-division (u) "Sub-division" means a sub-division of a district,

Note.—See s. 8 infra.

Summons-case. (v) "Summons case" means a case relating to an offence, and not being a warrant-case.

"Warrant-case." (w) "Warrant case" means a case relating to an offence punishable with death, transportation or imprisonment for a term exceeding six months

Notes.—1 "Sessions case" not defined.—The words "Sessions case" are not defined here. But under s. 4 Act X of 1872 they meant and included all cases specified in Col. 8 of Sch. II as cases triable by a Court of Session and all cases which Magistrates have committed to a Court of Session, although they might have tried themselves. They did not necessarily mean a case triable exclusively by a Court of Session. 11 B. H. C. R. 93

2. Summons case and Warrant-case.—The distinction does not depend upon whether a summons or warrant shall issue in the first instance according to Sch. II, Col. 4. Nor does the question whether the Police may or may not arrest without warrant—cognizable or non-cognizable—any bearing upon the distinction between summons and warrant-cases. Chap. XX lays down the procedure to be followed in the summons-cases and Chap. XXI the procedure in warrant cases

Words referring to act. (2) Words "which refer to acts done, extend also to illegal omissions, and

Words to have same meaning as in Indian Penal Code. all words and expressions used herein and defined in the Indian Penal Code and not heretofore defined, shall be deemed to have the meanings respectively attributed to them by the Code

Notes.—1 The definitions of "chapter," "schedule," "province," "writing" and "written" are omitted, as they are given in the General Clauses Act X of 1897. 1 or definitions in the I. P. C., see Chapter II, ss. 5–52

2. Having regard to the provisions of the last clause (which was also in the previous Code of 1882), it was held in 17 M. 258, that the term "adultery" as used in s. 488 of this Code, must be construed with reference to its definition in s. 497, I P C. In 20 M. 470 (F.B.) it was, however, pointed out that the Judges in deciding 17 M. 258 had overlooked the words "unless a different intention appears from the subject or context," in the opening paragraph of 4 (1).

Trial of offences under the Indian Penal Code.

5. (1) All offences under the Indian Penal Code shall be investigated, inquired into, tried, and otherwise dealt with according to the provisions, hereinafter contained

(2) All offences under any other law shall be investigated, inquired into, tried, and otherwise dealt with according to the same provisions, but subject to any enactment for the time being in force regulating the manner or place of investigating, inquiring into, trying or otherwise dealing with such offences

Trial of offences against other laws.

Notes.—1. The amendments indicated by the *italic*s make the Code applicable to proceedings before the Police (Investigations) as well as to proceedings before Judicial officers (Inquiries and Trials) See Notes to s. 177, infra and s. 350 infra, 43 M. 511 33 M. L. J. 370

2 Jurisdiction of the High Court to commit for contempt and the procedure thereof not affected by this Code.—The power to punish for contempt vested in the High Court as a superior Court of Record by the common law of England is not affected by the provisions of this Code, 10 C. 109 (P.C.) The provisions of this section under which offences under the Indian Penal Code and offences under any other law are inquired into, do not include a contempt of the High Court committed by the publication of a libel out of Court when the Court is not sitting, such a contempt being more than a mere defamation and of a different character. See also Ratanlal 614 and Appendix 1

3 Shall be otherwise dealt with, e.g., by delivery to Military authorities of offenders liable to be tried by a Court-martial under s. 549, infra See Bengal Reg. XX of 1825

4. Subject to any enactment.—Such as Act IV of 1893 (amending s. 4, I P C) and s. 188, infra, regarding the application of the Indian Penal Code to offences committed outside British India Rule 4 of the rules framed by the Government of Bengal under the Calcutta Rent Act is not an 'enactment' within the meaning of this section and not having been enacted with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council and its effect being to repeal or alter this Code by providing that offences created by the Act shall be dealt with in accordance with the provisions of this Code is ultra vires of the rule making power conferred on that Government. 22 Cr. L. J. 334.

5 A conviction under the Indian Penal Code and also under a Special Law in respect of one and the same offence is illegal 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 49 See 6 M. 249

PART II.

CONSTITUTION AND POWERS OF CRIMINAL COURTS AND OFFICES

CHAPTER II

OF THE CONSTITUTION OF CRIMINAL COURTS AND OFFICES

A.—Class of Criminal Courts.

6. Besides the High Courts and the Courts constituted under any law other than this

Classes of Criminal Code for the time being in force, there shall be five classes of Criminal Courts s. 5 19 Courts in British India, namely —

I — Courts of Session

II — Presidency Magistrates

III — Magistrates of the first class

IV — Magistrates of the second class

V — Magistrates of the third class

Notes.—1. High Court. See s. 4 (1) (j), supra and Notes thereunder

2 Courts constituted under any law other than this Code, e.g. (a) In places where the Punjab Frontier Crimes Regulation is in force cases may be tried by a Council of Elders. See the Punjab Frontier Crimes Reg. III of 1901 s. II see also s. 13 of the same Regulation for executing sentences passed on the findings of the Council of Elders for bar of second trial before any of these courts see s. 15 of same Regulation (b) Forest Courts under s. 71 of Act VII of 1878 as to Burma Forest see s. 70 of Act XIX of 1881 but under Mfid. Act V of 1882 the power to try Forest offences is vested in ordinary Magistrates (c) Courts of Cantonment Magistrates under s. 7 of Act VIII of 1883 (d) Indian Marine Courts under Act XIV of 1887 (e) Courts martial under Act V of 1869 (see 44 and 45 Vict. c. 38 as amended by Act XII of 1894 the Indian Articles of War (f) Vice Admiralty Courts under 26 and 27 Vict. c. 34 etc. (g) the Courts for the trial of Bengal Pilots under Act VII of 1859 (h) Special Courts for Lower Burma Pilots under Act XII of 1883 etc. (i) Courts of Village Magistrates in Madras

3. Magistrate—For definition see General Clauses Act X of 1897 s. 3(31) for definition of Dist. trial Magistrate see s. 10 infra. A Magistrate as such is not a Court unless he is acting in a judicial capacity 36 C. 433, on appeal the Privy Council held that the terms 'Magistrate' and 'Court' are generally if not always used as convertible terms 39 C 953 (P.C.)

4 The Court of a Police Patel is not a Criminal Court within the enumeration contained in this section Ratanlal 317

5 Presidency Magistrate—Sections 10 and 12 show that District Magistrates and Magistrates of the first class are appointed only in districts outside the Presidency towns. It is thus clear that ordinarily a Presidency Magistrate would not be included in the terms 'District Magistrate' and 'Magistrate of the first class' 32 M 303 and see Notes under ss. 12 and 18 infra.

6 First-class Magistrate in Emigration Act, 1883, includes Presidency Magistrate.—Though a Presidency Magistrate is not a Magistrate of the first class within the meaning of the Code 27 C 125, 32 M, 303, yet for the purpose of the Emigration Act XXI of 1883 it has been held in 31 B 611 and 32 B 10 that a Magistrate of the first class mentioned in s. III of that Act includes a Presidency Magistrate.

7 Deputy Magistrate and General Deputy Magistrate.—These titles are unknown to the Code and therefore ought not to be used 23 M L J 670 = 12 M L T 601 = 13 Cr. L J 650

B—Territorial Divisions

Sessions divisions and districts. 7. (1) Every Province (excluding the Presidency towns) shall be a sessions division or shall consist of sessions divisions and every sessions division shall for the purposes of this Code be a district or consist of districts

Power to alter divisions and districts ss 13 38

Existing divisions and districts maintained till altered
s 14

Presidency towns to be deemed districts.

(2) The Local Government may alter the limits or with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council the number of such divisions and districts

(3) The sessions divisions and districts existing when this Code comes into force shall be sessions divisions and districts respectively unless and until they are altered

(4) Every Presidency town shall for the purposes of this Code be deemed to be a district

Notes.—1. For definitions of the terms Province Local Government and Presidency towns see General Clauses Act X of 1897 s. 3 clauses (43), (79) and (41) respectively

2 A Sessions Division.—(a) In the Regulation Districts of the Bombay Presidency the territorial jurisdiction of a Magistrate of a district is co-extensive and co-terminous with the territorial limits of the Collectorate in which such District Magistrate is in charge as Collector (Bombay Gazette 1873 p. 279). The Island of Perim is included within the Sessions Division and District of Aden and the officer in command of the Trips in Perim is empowered to commit persons for trial to the Court of Session at Aden. (Bombay Gazette 1884 p. 351). The Court of the Political Resident at Aden is not a Court of Session, 10 B 258, 263 and 274; (b) Cachar is a Sessions Division of Assam (Assam Gazette 1874 p. 3) (c) for the purposes of the Code the District of the Town of Rangoon and the District of Rangoon are two Sessions Divisions so too the Town of Moulmein and the District of Amherst are two divisions of the District of Amherst (Gazette of India 1874 p. 62). See also s. 8 of the Lower Burma Courts Act VI of 1900. For Upper Burma see Reg. V of 1894.

Sch. II and X, (d) for Sonthal Pargannas see Reg. V of 1893 Sect. IV (II) (e) for notification dividing the Districts of the N. W. Frontier Province into Sessions Divisions, see Gazette of India 1901 Pt. II, p. 1304 (f) the Ganjam Collectorate consists of two Sessions Divisions one comprising the Agency District and the other of the Non-Agency Tracts 23 M. L. J. 670 = 12 M. L. T. 601 = 13 Cr. L. J. 850

3. The Local Government may alter the limits or number.—The section does not contemplate the constitution of Sessions Divisions by Local Governments. Every Province is by operation of law a Sessions Division or consists of Sessions Divisions. There is no place which escapes the pervading force of this section, 10 B 274

4. For the constitution of a new district of Anjengo in the Madras Presidency separated in the District of Malabar see Fort St. George Gazette of 22nd May 1906 pp. 538 and 542 wherein The Resident of Travancore and Cochin is appointed the District Magistrate and also Additional Sessions Judge for the new district.

5. Two Sessions Divisions in one district.—The old Ganjam Collectorate was long ago divided into an Agency District and a Non-Agency District and the Agency District is also a Sessions Division the Sessions Judge of which is the Agent himself. The Non-Agency District is for the purpose of this Code quite distinct from the Agency District though the same person is the District Magistrate of both. In the same way, the Gumsur Sub-division consisting as it does of a part of the Agency District and of a part of the Non-Agency District must for the purpose of the Code be regarded as consisting of two Sub-divisions though the same first class Magistrate has jurisdiction in both. Magistrates of the Agency District are not in any way subordinate to the Sessions Court of the Non-Agency District 23 M. L. J. 670 = 12 M. L. T. 601 = 13 Cr. L. J. 850 where 30 M. 136 is distinguished. Where it was found (that is in Malabar) that there were existing two Sessions Divisions in the same district it was held that the state of things could not be treated as unwarranted by the law for the same was the case when this Code was passed and paragraph (3) of the section recognize the legality of the then existing Sessions Divisions and Districts unless and until altered 30 M. 136

Power to divide districts into sub-divisions.

Existing sub-divisions maintained.

8. (1) The Local Government may divide any district outside the Presidency towns into sub-divisions or make any portion of any such district a sub-division and may alter the limits of any sub-division

(2) All existing sub-divisions which are now usually put under the charge of a Magistrate shall be deemed to have been made under this Code

Note.—Under s. 7 of the Cantons Act XIII of 1889 a Cantonment Magistrate is to be deemed a Magistrate in charge of a division of a district i.e. of a sub-division.

C—Courts and Offices outside the Presidency towns

9. (1) The Local Government shall establish a Court of Session for every sessions division and appoint a Judge of such Court

(2) The Local Government may, by general or special order in the Official Gazette direct at what place or places the Court of Sessions shall hold its sitting but until such order be made the Courts of Session shall hold their sittings as heretofore

(3) The Local Government may also appoint Additional Sessions Judges and Assistant Sessions Judges to exercise jurisdiction in one or more such Courts

(4) A Sessions Judge of one sessions division may be appointed by the Local Government to be also an Additional Sessions Judge of another division and in such case he may sit for the disposal of cases at such place or places in either division as the Local Government may direct

(5) All Courts of Sessions existing when this Code comes into force shall be deemed to have been established under this Act

Notes—1 A Court of Session of every Sessions Division Sessions Judge has no jurisdiction outside his division—Where a Sessions Judge made a reference to the High Court under s 438 suggesting the revision of an order granting sanction by a Magistrate within his Sessions division and at the same time stayed proceedings based upon such sanction order in a Court outside his Sessions division held that the order was ultra vires 26 M 137 See also Notes to s 7 supra

2 Courts of Additional and Assistant Sessions Judges—These are Courts of Session to the extent of their respective powers and are included within that term when used in this Code. An Additional Sessions Judge can exercise all the powers of a Sessions Judge under Chapter XXVII (Reference and Revision) in respect of any case transferred to him by the Sessions Judge. See s 438 (2) infra superseding 9 B 164. Under the Code any one of the Judges of the Court of Session is competent to exercise jurisdiction in the said Court and hear cases and decide appeals and so it was held in 44 A 157 that a Sessions Judge did not act outside his jurisdiction in withdrawing and disposing of himself an appeal which was previously made over by himself to be tried by an Additional Sessions Judge. 44 A 157 = 19 A 1

3 Joint Sessions Judge—This term has been now omitted. By reason of s 3 (2), supra Joint Sessions Judges appointed under s 12 of Bombay Civil Courts Act XLIV of 1869 will be known as Additional Sessions Judges and all references to a Joint Sessions Judge will refer to an Additional Sessions Judge. See also 2 C W N CCGV and Ratanlal 972

4 Powers of Additional and Assistant Sessions Judges—As to subordination of Assistant Sessions Judges see s 17 (3) infra as to delegation of powers by Sessions Judges in an emergency, s 17 (4) infra, as to sentences which may be passed by Sessions Judges Additional Sessions Judges and Assistant Sessions Judges s 31, infra as to powers of Additional and Assistant Sessions Judges to try original cases, s 193 (2) infra and as to hearing appeals s 409 infra. An Additional Sessions Judge can grant sanction under sub-sec. (7) of s 195 infra where appeals lie from the first Court to the Court of Sessions under s 408, infra 14 Cr L J 195 (Cal)

5 Resident's Court at Aden—Under s 20 of Act II of 1864 the Resident at Aden is not a Court of Session but is a persona designata invested with specific powers described as all the powers of a Sessions Court except as in that Act otherwise provided. The powers of the Court of Session conferred on the Resident's Court are not wholly such as are defined expressly in this Code but only such as are specially provided in the Act itself 29 B 573

6 Jurisdiction of Courts of Session in British Baluchistan—The Courts of Session in Baluchistan have jurisdiction to try European British subjects committed to them by competent Courts. These Courts having been appointed by the Governor General in Council s 3 of Reg VIII of 1896 their jurisdiction is not affected by the fact that they have not been appointed by the Local Government under this Section. The Political Agent and the Cantonment Magistrate Quetta commit to the Chief Court while the Extra Assistant Commissioner and Assistant Political Agent Quetta commit to the Sessions Court. So a commitment of an European British subject to the Court of Session by the Extra Assistant Commissioner Quetta cannot be quashed under s 215 infra 5 P R. 1907 = 41 F L R. 1907 = 26 P W R. 1907 = 6 Cr L J 108

10. (1) In every district outside the Presidency towns the Local Government shall appoint a Magistrate of the first class who shall be called the District Magistrate

(2) The Local Government may appoint any Magistrate of the first class to be an Additional District Magistrate and such Additional District Magistrate shall have all or any of the powers of a District Magistrate under this Code or under any other law for the time being in force* and as the Local Government may direct

† (3) For the purposes of sections 192 sub-section (1) 407 sub-section (2) and 528 sub-sections (2) and (3) such Additional District Magistrate shall be deemed to be Subordinate to the District Magistrate

Notes.—1. Section 7, cl. (2), supra, empowers the Local Government to alter divisions and districts. See Fort St. George Gazette of 22nd May, 1906 constituting the new district of Angengo, separating the same from the district of Malabar.

2. The District Magistrate.—The term Sillah Magistrate used in the Bombay Regulations signifies only the District Magistrate, 3 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 11; 7 ibid. 59; a Deputy Commissioner in a non-Regulation Province comes under the designation of Magistrate, 16 W. R. 1. Secs. 10 and 12 show that District Magistrates are appointed only in districts outside the Presidency towns. Therefore, a Presidency Magistrate would not be included in the term District Magistrate. 32 M. 303.

3. Relation between District Magistrate and Additional District Magistrate.—The addition of sub-clause (3) to the present section makes it quite clear in what respects shall be deemed to be subordinate to the District Magistrate. So cases like 34 C. 918, holding to the contrary are no longer good law.

For the purposes of s. 435 it was held in 25 P. R. 1908 = 9 Cr. L. J. 104 that the Court of a Magistrate of the first class appointed under this section is an Additional District Magistrate was an inferior Criminal Court. An appeal lies under s. 406 of the Code from the order of the Additional District Magistrate to the District Magistrate. The Sessions Judge has no appellate authority thereunder. 43 C. 874 = 25 C. W. N. 333.

4. District Magistrate and Sessions Judge.—On appeal a Sessions Judge set aside the conviction and sentence passed by a Sub-divisional Magistrate, as being illegal and ordered a new trial by a first-class Magistrate. But the District Magistrate, on reading such order wrote that no fresh trial was necessary, as the accused had already undergone sufficient punishment. Held the District Magistrate had no authority to disregard the order of the Sessions Judge for a new trial. 5 L. B. R. 49.

11. Whenever, in consequence of the office of a District Magistrate becoming vacant, Officers temporarily succeeding to vacancies in office of District Magistrate any officer succeeds temporarily to the chief executive administration of the district such officer shall pending the orders of the Local Government, exercise all the powers and perform all the duties respectively conferred and imposed by this Code on the District Magistrate.

Note.—Reversion does not affect Jurisdiction.—Where a Magistrate officiating as a District Magistrate commenced a trial but ceased to act as such and was reverted as a first-class Magistrate in the same district, it was held he had jurisdiction to continue the trial. 3 A. L. J. 825 = 1906 A. W. N. 201 = 4 Cr. L. J. 140.

12. (1) The Local Government may appoint as many persons as it thinks fit, besides the Subordinate Magistrates.

Local limits of their jurisdiction.

District Magistrate, to be Magistrates of the first, second or third class in any district outside the Presidency towns and the Local Government, or the District Magistrate, subject to the control of the Local Government, may from time to time, define local areas within which such persons may exercise all or any of the powers with which they may respectively be invested under this Code.

(2) Except as otherwise provided by such definition the jurisdiction and powers of such persons shall extend throughout such district.

Notes.—1. No order of a Local Government under this section can legally have a retrospective effect. 16 W. R. 79. For notification by the Government of Bengal under this section see Culcutta Gazette 1892, p. 1112, by the Chief Commissioner, Ajmere-Merwara, see Gazette of India 1902, Pt. II, p. 1072. For notification under this subsection by the Government of the Punjab, see Punjab Gazette 1901, Pt. I, p. 715. For notification by the Chief Commissioner of the N. W. Frontier Province, see Gazette of India 1901, Pt. II, p. 112.

2. Local areas.—Local area means a Sessions division, district or sub-division, 25 C. 132. It is clear from the language of the section that in the absence of any express enactment to the contrary it does not contemplate an exercise of jurisdiction by any Magistrate outside the limits of his jurisdiction. 9 B. 40. But see 24 P. R. 1901 (F.B.), Note 1 under s. 14.

3. Jurisdiction of Magistrates extend throughout district unless restricted.—A Magistrate appointed to act as Magistrate in a district, has, unless his powers have been restricted to a certain local area, jurisdiction over the entire district, 29 C. 389; see also 10 C. W. N. 1095 = 4 Cr. L. J. 223; 2 L. B. R. 80 and 3 A. L. J. 823 = 4 Cr. L. J. 140 noted under s 11 above. An officer appointed as a Magistrate of the first class for a whole district but put in charge by the District Magistrate of particular talukas only, is not without jurisdiction if he inquires into or tries a case in another taluka of the same district. An order by the District Magistrate directing a first class Magistrate to take up the case is unnecessary, Ratanlal 177. Where a Subordinate Magistrate tried an offence committed beyond the local limits of what was regarded as his jurisdiction, it was held that a Magistrate in the division in which the offence occurred and as a Magistrate whose powers had not been formally limited to any particular portion of the division, he had jurisdiction to try the case, Wair II, 13. See 24 P. R. 1901 (F.B.) 42 A. 649. A Sub-divisional Magistrate who has had his jurisdiction limited by the order of the District Magistrate cannot take cognizance of matter outside such local limits. 19 A. L. J. 77.

4 Effect of transfer to another district on jurisdiction.—On transfer of a Magistrate to another district, his jurisdiction over the district to which he was formerly appointed ceases the moment he is relieved by his successor and therefore a judgment pronounced after but on the same day as he was relieved was held to have been made without jurisdiction 3 A. 563 (F.B.), 19 A. 114. The Magistrate cannot continue a trial after handing over charge 14 Cr. L. J. 239 (A) but transfer in the same district does not oust jurisdiction, 22 M. 47. There is no authority in the Code which lays down that cases on the file of one Magistrate in a district pass automatically to his successor in the local area merely because the former has been transferred to another local area in the same district. Such procedure is obviously inconvenient as the natural order would be that whatever cases a Magistrate had had seisin of before the order of transfer issued, would remain on his file, always supposing that he is merely transferred to another local area in the same district, and would be disposed of by such Magistrate 9 A. L. J. 448. See Note 3 under s 40, infra and 15 P. R. 1884; 50 C. 664.

5. Magistrate on leave and outside district.—Magistrate though on leave and not in the district in which he has been exercising jurisdiction, is a "Magistrate" within the meaning of s. 28 of the Evidence Act. A confession made in the presence of such person is admissible, 8 P. W. R. 1914 = 38 P. L. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 6.

6 Powers of Bench cannot be exercised by individual members not specially authorized.—An Honorary Magistrate being a member of an independent Bench exercising third-class powers could not unless specially authorized act independently (i.e. when not sitting on the Bench) and cannot record statements under s 162 infra, 29 C. 483.

7. Cantonment Magistrates.—A Cantonment Magistrate is a Magistrate appointed under this section. See s. 7 of Act XIII of 1889 which provides that a Cantonment Magistrate is to be deemed a Sub-divisional Magistrate in charge of a division of a district. All convictions by a Cantonment Magistrate for offences punishable under Cantonment Rules are appealable to the same extent as convictions by other Magistrates of the same class 1 P. R. 1897. As to subordination of such Magistrates see s 17, infra and Notes thereunder.

13. (1) The Local Government may place any Magistrate of the first or second class in charge of a sub-division and relieve him of the charge as occasion requires

(2) Such Magistrates shall be called Sub-divisional Magistrates

Power to put Magistrate in charge of sub-division

Delegation of powers to District Magistrate.

(3) The Local Government may delegate its powers under this section to the District Magistrate

Notes.—1. The Local Government may delegate.—In Bengal, Madras and the Punjab the Local Government has delegated its power under this section to District Magistrates. See Calcutta Gazette, 1873, Pt. I, p. 236, Fort St George Gazette, 1873, p. 717 and Punjab G. O. No 907, dated 8th June, 1874, the powers of the Local Government in Bombay have been delegated to the Commissioner in Sindh. See Bombay Gazette, 1873, p. 473.

2. Sub-division.—In Bengal and Madras it includes the headquarters division of a district, for definition, see s. 4 (u), supra. As to additional powers conferrable on Sub-divisional Magistrates, see s 37, infra.

14. (1) The Local Government may confer upon any person all or any of the powers

Special Magistrates, conferred or conferable by or under this Code on a Magistrate of the first, second or third class in respect to particular cases or to a particular class or particular classes of cases or in regard to cases generally in any local area outside the Presidency towns

(2) Such Magistrates shall be called Special Magistrates and shall be appointed for such terms as the Local Government may by general or special order direct

(3) With the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council the Local Government may delegate, with such limitations as it thinks fit, to any officer under its control the power conferred by sub-section (1)

(4) No powers shall be conferred under this section on any Police-officer below the grade of Assistant District Superintendent and no powers shall be conferred on a Police-officer, except so far as may be necessary for preserving the peace preventing crime and detecting, apprehending and detaining offenders in order to their being brought before a Magistrate and for the performance by the officer of any other duties imposed upon him by any law for the time being in force

Notes.—1 Effect of appointment without specifying local area.—Where a notification appointing a Magistrate specified no local area within which he was to exercise jurisdiction but conferred upon him power to try all such cases as might be instituted in his Court it was held by the majority of the Full Bench that the notification by necessary implication conferred jurisdiction throughout the Province the minority being of opinion that such a notification was radically defective and that the proceedings of the Magistrate in virtue of it were null and void 24 P. B. 1901 (F.B.) See also 25 C. 858 as to the import of the expression local area and Note 1 to s. 12 above.

2. Such term.—We have added a provision to sub-sec. (2) to enable Special Magistrates to be appointed for a term only. This will empower Local Governments to appoint Special Magistrates on probation and also to make appointments to meet temporary emergencies. —See Cons. Rep.

Under cl. (2) of this section it has been notified in Bengal that Honorary Magistrates will in future be appointed for three years unless a different term is specified in the order. On expiry the term of appointment may be renewed on the recommendation of the Commissioners. —Calcutta Gazette No 2702 T dated 9th August, 1898

3. Powers conferred on Police officers.—(a) Madras—The Inspector General of Police in Madras has under s. 7 of Act XXIV of 1859 (Police Madras) the full powers of a Magistrate throughout the Presidency of Madras, except the scheduled districts but exercises these powers subject to the orders of the Governor in Council (b) Bombay—All District Superintendents and Assistant District Superintendents were under Act V of 1872 invested with powers corresponding to the powers referred to in the following sections of the present Code viz ss 83 86 96 98 99 101 143 144 and 176 Under Bombay District Police Act VII of 1867 every Commissioner in Bombay is a Magistrate of the first class throughout the district under his control and exercises his powers subject to limitations imposed by the Government, (c) Assam—Notwithstanding anything contained in s. 14 any Police-officer in Assam not below the grade of Assistant District Superintendent, may be invested with all or any of the powers conferred or conferable on a Magistrate of first second or third class in respect to non-cognizable cases. See Reg. II of 1883 s. 4 (d) in all districts in Burma District Superintendents of Police or other chief Police-officers, are invested with the powers of a Magistrate of the first class. See Burma Gazette, 1893 Pt. I p. 159 (e) Upper Burma—As to conferment of magisterial powers on Police-officers in Upper Burma See Reg. V of 1892 Sch. s. 111 in Salween and Arakan Districts see Burma Laws Act XIII of 1898 s. 9 (f) as to the Punjab Frontier and W. Frontier Province see s. 1 of Reg. VII of 1893 (Punjab Frontier Police officer's Regulations).

4. Any local area.—The words 'any local area' could be extended to cover if necessary all the territories administered by the Local Government issuing the notification Hiralal v. Crown 7 P. R. 1918 (Cr.).

15. (1) The Local Government may direct any two or more Magistrates in any place outside the Presidency towns to sit together as a Bench, and may by order invest such Bench with any of the powers conferred or conferrable by or under this Code on a Magistrate of the first, second or third class and direct it to exercise such powers in such cases, or such classes of cases only, and within such local limits, as the Local Government thinks fit Benches of Magistrates.

(2) Except as otherwise provided by any order under this section, every such Bench shall have the powers conferred by this Code on a Magistrate of the highest class to which any one of its members, who is present taking part in the proceedings as a member of the Bench, belongs, and as far as practicable shall for the purposes of this Code be deemed to be Magistrate of such class

Powers exercisable by Bench in absence of special direction

Notes—1 Invest such Bench with the Powers—Benches of Magistrates in Ootacamund and Coonoor in the Nilgiris District have been invested with the powers of Magistrates of the first class and these Benches have also power to try summarily the offences enumerated in s. 260, infra, see Fort St George Gazette, 1875, p. 1204. See also ibid for 1902 Pt. I p. 293 as to Benches in the Hill station of Kodaikanal (Madura District). As to offences of which Magistrates (including Benches of Magistrates) may take cognizance, see ss. 190 and 192, infra and ss. 260 to 266, infra which deal with the procedure and powers of Benches of Magistrates

2. Part-heard case must be adjourned to date when same Bench will sit.—^d When it is necessary to adjourn a part heard case, the further hearing should be fixed for a date when the same Magistrates will sit again. When two Magistrates form a quorum a case may be disposed of at the adjourned hearing by two Magistrates who have been present at the former hearing, but no Magistrate may take part in the proceedings at the adjourned hearing who was not also present at the former hearing, 12 C. 533. "If a part heard case cannot be completed by a quorum of the same Magistrates who were present at the former hearings the only course is to hear the case again from the beginning —C P Cr Cr Pt II No 2

3. Hearing of part of case by one Bench and decision by another.—The only persons who can decide a case are those who heard the evidence and arguments, therefore an Honorary Magistrate may not give judgment and pass sentence in a case unless he has been a member of the Bench during the whole of the hearing of the case, 20 C. 870, followed in 18 M. 294. A conviction by a Bench of Magistrates one of whom had not heard all the evidence is illegal 38 M. 304, 16 Cr. L. J. 499 (M), 41 A. 116—16 A. L. J. 864, 44 Bom. 400—20 Bom. C. R. 154. Where one Bench after recording the prosecution evidence adjourned the case for the defence evidence, and on such adjourned date another Bench of Magistrates none of whom had been members of the former Bench recorded the defence evidence and acquitted the accused held the order of acquittal was bad 12 C. 533. See also 23 C. 184, 3 C. 754 and 13 C. L. R. 212. One member of the Bench absented himself in the course of the trial and important evidence was recorded in his absence. On the following day he returned to the Bench and signed the final order convicting the accused held that the conviction was bad on the ground of this irregularity, 13 C. L. R. 212, Weir JJ, 13. The procedure by which cases partly heard by some members of a Bench of Magistrates are completed by other members of the Bench sitting afterwards in their turn is illegal. A case cannot legally be finally disposed of except by those Magistrates who have heard the whole of the evidence. S. 350, post has no application to the case of members of a Bench sitting in rotation. —C P Cr Cr, Part II No 2

4. Trial by some members of Bench attending throughout is legal—A trial was begun before a Bench and Note 3 above. See 15 A. L. J. 463.

5. Withdrawal of some of a Bench—trial by rest if legally constituted is legal—The Court hearing a case consisted of a stipendiary Magistrate and a Justice of the Peace. After the evidence had been heard, the Justice discussed the matter privately with the Magistrate and said that the evidence in his opinion, would not justify a conviction. The Magistrate was satisfied that the case for the prosecution was made out and expressed this view to the Justice, adding that he would take upon himself the burden of adjudicating alone on the case. Thereupon the Justice said "Very well" and the Magistrate then convicted the accused of the offence saying that he alone was responsible for the decision, and that the Justice was not a party thereto—Held that what took place amounted to a withdrawal by the Justice from being a party to the decision, and that the Magistrate having jurisdiction to decide the case himself, the conviction was valid, R v Thomas (1914) 1 K. B. 32.

6. Retirement of some—trial by others not constituting a legal Bench is illegal.—A case triable by a first-class Magistrate came before a Bench of Magistrates, neither of whom was individually invested with first-class powers but sitting together the Bench was so invested. At the adjourned sitting only one member of the Bench was present. Held that he was not competent to try the case alone. The order of the Bench being illegal was quashed, 2 C. L. R. 343; 1902 A. W. N. 143. See also 29 C. 483 and Note 9 below.

7. Interestedness of one member vitiates proceedings.—Substantial interest in one of a Bench will, however, vitiate the whole proceedings and the defect will not be cured by any waiver or consent on the part of the accused, 2 C. 23.

8. What cases may be referred to Bench.—A complicated and somewhat difficult case should not be referred to a Bench 2 C. 23. Under the Code of 1872 it has been held that a Bench had no power to deal with miscellaneous matters, other than trials, such as disputes relating to immovable property (dealt with in s. 145, infra), 3 C. 794 = 2 C. L. R. 263. Under the present Code, however, having regard to the language of cl. (2) of this section, Benches have power to deal with such matters, if their power is not specially restricted.

9. Conviction by Bench not constituted according to rules illegal.—Where the rules laid down that in the absence of a salaried Magistrate the Bench should not consist of less than three members and a case was tried by two members only, held that the Court was not legally constituted and the conviction was wrong, 16 M. 410.

10. Bench invested with summary powers trying case regularly.—Where under the rules framed under this section, it was directed that a Bench was to try only such cases as were transferred to them and there was a further rule that only such cases as could be tried summarily should be transferred to the Bench and notwithstanding such a direction, a case not triable summarily, but within the competency of the Bench, was transferred and the Bench tried the case in the regular way and acquitted the accused. Held that the contravention of the rule in transferring a case which the Bench could not try summarily came within s. 529 (f), infra and that the order of acquittal was valid (1918) U. B. R. 1. 70 = 12 Cr. L. J. 383.

11. Bench when equally divided cannot refer case to District Magistrate.—A reference by a Bench of Magistrates when there is an irreconcilable difference of opinion between them and they are equally divided cannot be made to the District Magistrate there being no provision to that effect, 16 Cr. L. J. 113 (A).

12. Right of appeal.—The right of appeal depends on the class of powers vested in a Bench, having regard to cl. (2). It lies under s. 407, infra from a conviction by a Bench invested with second or third-class powers 9 M. 36. There is no appeal from certain summary convictions. See s. 414 infra.

13. Rules for constitution of Benches in Bengal.—The following orders have been issued by the Government of Bengal with regard to the Benches of Magistrates in the Districts of Dinagore, Maldah Rungpore, Chittagong Tipperah Dacca, Bakergunge, Mymensingh Shahabad, Sarun, Tirhoot and Kamrup —

(1) Under the direction of the Magistrate of the District any two or more of the Honorary Magistrates in any district may, in that district, sit as a Bench in company with the Magistrates of the district, or the Sub-divisional Magistrate or any salaried Magistrate subordinate to the Magistrate of the district exercising not less than second-class powers whom the Magistrate of the district may depute for that purpose, and any Bench so constituted is vested with first-class powers in respect of offences cognizable by Magistrates of the first class, and with powers of summary trials under s. 260 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

(2) Under the special order of the Magistrate of the district, any two Magistrates honorary or salaried, of whom one is vested with not less than second-class powers may form a Bench with first-class powers for the trial of any particular case or class of cases, specially referred to them by the Magistrate of the district. Such Bench may also exercise summary powers under s. 260 unless the order of reference is for trial in a regular form.

(2) Under the direction of the Magistrate of the district, anyone of the Honorary Magistrates of the district may sit with any salaried Subordinate Magistrate to form a Bench and the Bench shall, when so constituted exercise second-class powers in respect of offences cognizable by Magistrates of that class and powers of summary trials under s. 225 (now s 261), Criminal Procedure Code unless any member of the Bench have first-class powers in which case the Bench may also exercise those powers If the Magistrate of the first class has summary powers under s 260 the Bench may exercise those powers

(4) Subject to the general orders of the Magistrate of the district any two or more Honorary Magistrates may in their respective Towns or Municipalities sit together as a Bench for the disposal of offences under Municipal or Town Acts and the Conservancy clauses of any Police Act without the assistance of any salaried Magistrate, and such Bench shall exercise third-class powers of summary trials under s. 225 (now s. 261), Criminal Procedure Code in respect of all such cases—Calcutta Gazette 6th May, 1872 p. 662

The Presidency Magistrates in Calcutta are directed by the Lieutenant Governor to submit returns showing the working of Benches of Magistrates to be sent to the Commissioner of Police See Regulation, 31st December 1872 Calcutta Gazette p 29

16. The Local Government may or subject to the control of the Local Government the District Magistrate may, from time to time make rules consistent with this Code for the guidance of Magistrates Benches in any district respecting the following subjects —

- (a) the classes of cases to be tried,
- (b) the times and places of sitting
- (c) the constitution of the Bench for conducting trials
- (d) the mode of settling differences of opinion which may arise between the Magistrates in session.

Notes—1. Rules for settling difference of opinion—In 3 C L J. 492 = 10 C W N. 642 (F B), the majority was of opinion that a rule that the opinion of the Chairman shall be decisive in cases where opinion is equally decided is valid though undesirable. See also 19 C. L. J. 92 = 14 Cr. L. J. 684

2 When there are no rules for settling differences, the accused should be given the benefit of doubt—see 16 Cr L J. 113 (A)

3 Bench equally divided cannot refer case to District Magistrate—see Note 11 to s 15

4 Rules should be consistent with the Code—The Judges have recently had occasion to call for and examine the rules made in each district and they noticed that in several districts District Magistrates have exceeded the powers conferred upon them by s 16 either by making rules inconsistent with the Code itself or by adding rules on the subjects not mentioned in the section in question and so not within the powers conferred by it Care should therefore be taken to limit action under the section to the powers conferred by it —Privy Council No 13-2612 G of 1890

1.—Bengal Rules for Guidance of Benches

1 The Bench shall try such cases as its powers enable it to try and it is authorized to try, arising within the local limits following or such particular cases as are made over to it by the Magistrate of the district or any Magistrate empowered to make over cases It can only entertain of its own motion complaints made in respect of the following classes of offences —

[Here enter local limits]

[Here enter classes of cases]

[Here enter place and ordinary times of sitting]

3 The Bench may hold one or more adjourned sittings if this be found necessary for the disposal of business or of part heard cases but it shall be open to the Bench at the close of its regular sitting either to adjourn to the District or Subordinate Magistrate to transfer from their file any unheard cases or to postpone them to next Bench day as may seem most convenient.

* See e.g. Fort St George Gazette 13th Pt I p 293 see also 260 261 263 264 and 265 infra which deal with the powers and procedure laid down for Benches of Magistrates

4 The Chairman of the Bench for the time being shall be the Magistrate of highest powers present at a sitting. Where two or more are of equal powers, the Bench may elect its own Chairman, provided always that it shall be in the discretion of the Magistrate of the district to appoint the Chairman for each time of sitting or generally.

5. The Chairman shall maintain order, conduct the proceedings of the Court, and exercise all the functions in that behalf usually exercised by a Magistrate when sitting alone. It shall be open to any member of the Bench to put any question to the witnesses, either direct or through the Chairman, as to the latter may deem advisable, and to suggest any matter for the Chairman's consideration.

6 Each member of the Bench shall have a voice in deciding as to the admissibility of evidence and in the finding and sentence. In a Bench of three or other uneven number of members the opinion of the majority shall prevail. When the numbers are even, the Chairman shall have a casting vote.

This rule is still in force in I andpur (Eastern Bengal) 19 C. L. J. 92 = 14 Cr. L. J. 684; but was modified by the British Government owing to the strong disapproval expressed by the Full Bench in 3 C. L. J. 492 = 10 C. W. N. 642 (F.B.) and the rule now reads thus —

"Each member of the Bench shall have a voice in deciding as to the admissibility of evidence and in the finding and sentence. In a Bench of three or other uneven number of members, the opinion of the majority shall prevail. When the numbers are even, the opinion of the Chairman shall prevail in all points, except the finding. In the event of disagreement as to the finding, the case shall be referred back to the District Magistrate or to the Sub divisional Officer as the case may be." Calcutta Gazette, 2nd May, 1906, Pt. I, p. 980. See Note to Rule 8 under s. 21, infra.

7 In the trial of ordinary cases, the Chairman shall generally record the evidence and judgment, but such duty may, with his consent, be performed by anyone of his colleagues.

In the trial of summary cases, where the Bench has been invested with summary powers, the necessary record shall be prepared by the Chairman or one of his colleagues, or by means of the Clerk of the Court, but in every case the record must be signed by each member of the Bench who is present.

8 This rule as to the hearing of any part heard case has been cancelled by Government Notifications 6th June 1893—Calcutta Gazette, 1893, Pt. I, p. 523. See 20 C. 870 and 18 M. 394 noted under s. 15, supra, which declared the rule to be ultra vires.

9. The Bench may refer any point of law for the opinion of the Magistrate of the district or sub-division, or of any first-class Magistrate appointed by the Magistrate of the district for that purpose, and the Magistrate may certify his opinion thereon.

10 Magistrates should ordinarily not make over cases to Benches which are likely to be of a protracted character 2 C. 23. See Calcutta Gazette 1899, Pt. I p. 1071.

7 Each member of the Bench shall have a voice in the finding and sentence which shall be signed by the Chairman and by the members present. 8 No Bench shall take cognizance of any offence committed by any European British subject or Government official. Any such case shall be forwarded to the Magistrate for disposal. Rule 8 above forbids Benches of Honorary Magistrates to take cognizance of any offence committed by any European British subject or Government official but there is no order which debars the Magistrate from transferring such cases to Benches of Honorary Magistrates for trial. The Government assumes however that the Magistrates of districts will before exercising this power carefully consider the circumstances of any such case especially where Police-officers and Policemen are concerned. 17. (1) All Magistrates appointed under ss 12 13 and 14, and all Benches constituted under s 15 shall be subordinate to the District Magistrate, and he may, from time to time make rules or give special orders consistent with this Code as to the distribution of business among such Magistrates and Benches and

(2) Every Magistrate (other than a Sub-divisional Magistrate) and every Bench exercising powers in a sub-division shall also be subordinate to the Sub-divisional Magistrate subject however, to the general control of the District Magistrate

(3) All Assistant Sessions Judges shall be subordinate to the Sessions Judge in whose Court they exercise jurisdiction and he may from time to time make rules consistent with this Code as to the distribution of business among such Assistant Sessions Judges

(4) The Sessions Judge may also when he himself is unavoidably absent or incapable of acting, make provision for the disposal of any urgent application by an Additional or Assistant Sessions Judge or if there be no Additional or Assistant Judge, by the District Magistrate and such Judge or Magistrate shall have jurisdiction to deal with any such application

(5) Neither the District Magistrate nor the Magistrates or Benches appointed or constituted under ss 12 13 14 and 15 shall be subordinate to the Sessions Judge except to the extent and in the manner hereinafter expressly provided

Notes —1 Scope of sub section (1) District Magistrate cannot delegate his power to distribute work — Power to distribute work is confined to District Magistrates alone and cannot be delegated to or be exercised by a Sub-divisional Magistrate. An order of a District Magistrate directing that the senior Honorary Magistrate should distribute work among the other Honorary Magistrates is ultra vires, 36 A 468

2 District Magistrate cannot make rules or issue orders inconsistent with the Code.—The Code does not empower the District Magistrate to pass on his powers of calling up cases from subordinate Courts and re-distributing them vide s. 526 such an order would be ultra vires 36 A 468

3 Shall be subordinate to the District Magistrate,—(a) shall be inferior in rank See the observations of West J in 9 B 100, also 12 C 473, 7 A 853, 8 M 18 (FB) 14 M 399, 33 P R. 1885, (b) Subordinate in respect of judicial as well as executive powers 2 A 205 (FB) It has been held that under s 435 infra a District Magistrate has power to call for and examine the record of a proceeding before a Sub-divisional Magistrate of the first class 7 A 853 (FB)

4 Subordination to District Magistrate ceases on transfer to a different post.—When a Magistrate is gazetted to the office of the Chairman of a Municipal Board and takes charge of that office he is thereby divested of his jurisdiction as Magistrate He ceases to be subordinate to the District Magistrate and the latter cannot transfer any case to him for trial 36 A 513.

5 Cantonment Magistrate subordinate to District Magistrate.—The Cantonment Magistrate as such shall be subordinate to the District Magistrate or to the District Magistrate and the Sub-divisional Magistrate as the case may be, s 7 Act XIII of 1889 (The Cantonment Act).

6 Subordination of Magistrates to Sub-divisional Magistrates, etc.—According to cl. (2) a first-class Magistrate in a division is subordinate to the Divisional Magistrate even though the latter has only second-class powers. As regards original jurisdiction whatever the District Magistrate might do with regard to offences committed outside the division the Sub-divisional Magistrate is competent to do within his local jurisdiction, 4 A 365

7. Within sub-division, jurisdiction of District Magistrate and Sub-divisional Magistrate co-ordinate.—Within a sub-division the jurisdiction of the District Magistrate and the Sub-divisional Magistrate are co-ordinate 4 A 365 A Magistrate who is subordinate to Sub-divisional Magistrate is also subordinate to District Magistrate 14 M 399

8 Subordination of Magistrates to Sessions Judge is restricted to cases mentioned in the Code.—See ss. 123 193 195 (7) 408 431 436 and 437. “District Magistrates should comply with all requisitions for records, returns and informations made by Sessions Judges with regard to any case appealable to them or referable by them to the High Court whether decided by the District Magistrate or other magisterial officers of the district or made by Sessions Judges under orders of the High Court in the exercise of their duty of superintendence over the Subordinate Courts. They should also render any explanation which Session Judges may require from them and obtain and submit any which they may require from Subordinate Magistrates in order to assist the Appellate Courts in respect of the classes of cases above referred to. G. I., No 1753, dated 3rd November 1876. See also 7 M H C. R. Appx XXVIII. A District Magistrate has no authority to disregard the order of a Sessions Judge setting aside a conviction and directing a new trial because he is of opinion that no trial is necessary. 5 L B R 49 = 10 Cr L J 77. A Magistrate passing an order under section 144 of the Code does so only as a public servant and not as a Court and sub-section (7) of section 195 is inapplicable to such a case. Therefore the sanction for prosecution could not be revoked by the Sessions Judge acting under sub-section (6) of section 195. The proper authority to revoke. The sanction in such a case is the District Magistrate. 44 M L J 328, 35 M L J 434. (Dissented from)

9 Subordination is confined to judicial work.—A Sub-divisional Magistrate acting as an executive officer but not as a Court is not subordinate to the Sessions Judge. Weir II, 19 and 185, and under clauses (1) and (8) of this section neither the District Magistrate nor the other Magistrates are subordinate to the Sessions Judge except in so far as is specially provided for in the Code. Hence an order made by a District and Sessions Judge under s. 36 of the Legal Practitioners' Act declaring certain persons to be fouls and prohibiting their appearance within the precincts of his own Court and the Courts subordinate to it was held not to extend to the Courts of the District and other Magistrates. 26 M 596

10. Additional and Assistant Sessions Judges.—As to their original appellate and revisional powers see ss. 193 (2) 409 and 438 (2) infra and only to the extent necessary for the exercise of any of these powers are District Magistrate and other Magistrates subordinate to Additional or Assistant Sessions Judges

11 Subordination of all Presidency Magistrates to Chief Presidency Magistrate.—See Note 1 under s. 21

12 High Court's power of Superintendent over the Criminal Courts in the Presidency.—The High Court has power under section 107 of the Government of India Act to stay the trial of a criminal case by a Magistrate pending the decision of a civil suit between the parties. Quære whether a District Magistrate has no power to stay the trial of a criminal case pending in the Court of a Magistrate subordinate to him in the district? 44 M L J 642 (30 M 228, referred to)

CHAPTER III

POWERS OF COURTS

A—Description of Offences cognizable by each Court

Offences under Penal Code

28. Subject to the other provisions of this Code any offence under the Indian Penal Code may be tried—

(a) by the High Court or

(b) by the Court of Session or

(c) by any other Court by which such offence is shown in the eighth column of the Second Schedule to be triable

Illustration

A is committed to the Sessions Court on a charge of culpable homicide. He may be convicted of voluntarily causing hurt an offence triable by a Magistrate

Notes.—For other provisions see e.g. ss. 191 to 198 443 444 449 452 467 477 480 485 and 558

1 Jurisdiction of High Court or Court of Session not restricted by provisions as to other Courts.—The provision as to the other Courts indicated in this section does not cut down or limit the jurisdiction of the High Courts or Courts of Session s. A. 663 The illustration is new and is intended to show that although an offence may appear in Sch. II as one triable only by a Magistrate if the case is before the Court of Session on commitment made for a more heinous offence the Sessions Court is competent to hold the trial for the minor offence alone But if the offence is punishable under some other law in which a Court is specially mentioned e.g. a Magistrate it cannot be tried by any other Court e.g. by a Court of Session s. 19 A. 463 See 1855 A. W. N. 235, 24 C. 429

2. When cases triable by Magistrates should be committed—See Notes 7—11 under s. 209

3. Jurisdiction of inferior tribunal over offences cognizable by it when aggravating circumstances also present.—See Note 15 to s. 260 Note 4 to s. 346 and Note 10 to s. 537 When an offence falls under two sections of the I. P. C. the one general and cognizable by an inferior tribunal the other specifying aggravated circumstances and cognizable by a superior tribunal only the jurisdiction of the inferior tribunal is not necessarily ousted Weir II, 20 If the facts of a case are sufficient to bring it within s. 397, I. P. C. the Magistrate ought to commit the case to a Court of Session and not himself try it under s. 392 I. P. C. while it is a matter for the discretion of the Magistrate whether he will himself try a case under s. 394 or commit it to the Court of Sessions Weir I, 448. But no Court can clutch jurisdiction by intentionally ignoring facts of aggravation which makes the offence really cognizable only by a higher tribunal Weir II, 21; 24 M 675, 12 M 34, 4 N L R. 18, 1910 M W. N 852 = 12 Cr. L J 20

4 Jurisdiction of inferior tribunal over persons jointly charged when one is triable by superior tribunal.—If two or more persons are jointly charged with an offence and the jurisdiction of the Magistrate is ousted in the case of one the Magistrate should commit both or all for trial before the Sessions Court Weir II, 20 and I, 448. See Note 7 to s 209

5 Refusal by Magistrate to proceed with a charge.—Where a Magistrate has in the exercise of his discretion refused to proceed with a criminal charge pending a civil action in respect of the matter out of which the charge arose a mandamus will not be granted to compel the hearing of the charge 1 M H C R. 66

6 Magistrate cannot decline jurisdiction.—It is not competent to a subordinate Magistrate to direct a complainant who brings a charge of petty theft or assault ordinarily within the cognizance of heads of villages to seek redress from the head of the village (VII M. H C R Appx XXXI), where the exercise of Ecclesiastical jurisdiction is plainly ultra vires or otherwise unsanctioned by the ordinances of a religious society or where such ordinances controvert the general law and in either case consequences result which the criminal law is intended to restrain the Criminal Courts are not at liberty to decline jurisdiction 8 M 140

Note.—See Note m s. 436 infra

29. (1) Subject to the other provisions of this Code any offence under any other law shall when any Court is mentioned in this behalf in such law be tried by such Court

(2) When no Court is so mentioned it may be tried by the High Court or subject as aforesaid by any Court constituted under this Code by which such offence is shown in the eighth column of the Second Schedule to be triable

Notes.—1 We have omitted the proviso to this clause which existed in the old Act and specified in the Second Schedule the respective Courts by which offences under other laws are triable. — See Con Rep

2 When any Court is mentioned, shall be tried by such Court and not by any other.—It is a general rule that where a statute makes unlawful that which was lawful before and inseparably connects with the prohibition or offence a special remedy that remedy must be pursued and no other. Thus where a prisoner was convicted at the Criminal Sessions of the Madras High Court for supplying liquor without a license (an act punishable by Mrd Act I of 1866) it was held the High Court had no jurisdiction to try inasmuch as the Act which created the offence declares it to be punishable by a Magistrate 5 M H C R. 277. Again the jurisdiction to punish an offender for nuisance etc. under s. 16 Bombay Act V of 1867 is confined to the Police-patels duly empowered and does not extend to their official superiors (Tulshir Magistrates) Ratanlal 198.

(a) District Magistrate. So also a Presidency Magistrate has no jurisdiction to try prisoners for offences under s. 52 of the Prisons Act IX of 1894 as he is not a District Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class mentioned therein 32 M 303. (b) Magistrate specially empowered. An offence under a special law cognizable by a Magistrate invested with special powers cannot be transferred to an ordinary Magistrate 1885 A W N 299. Thus a Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence under s. 9 of the Opium Act I of 1878 has no powers to commit the accused to the Court of Session 19 A 465 So too under s. 29 of the Police Act V of 1861

1 W R 5, (1) which if Railway are not less than two see s. 5

(2) of the Melut Tokens Act I of 1889 under which certain offences are to be taken cognizance of by District or Sub-Divisional Magistrate and by no other Magistrates except with the previous sanction of the District

* The words other provisions of this Code have been substituted for provisions in s. 447 Act XII of 1923

† The words subject as aforesaid have been inserted by Act XII of 1923 or Sub-divisional Magistrate, (e) by first class Magistrate e.g. see s 52 of the Prisons Act IX of 1894 32 M 303; (f) by second-class Magistrates e.g. see s. 83 of the Indian Registration Act III of 1877, 7 M 347 followed in Weir II, 25; also offences under the Indian Stamp Act II of 1899 the Indian Salt Act XII of 1882 the European Vagrancy Act IX of 1874

3. It was held (Weir II, 23) that a third-class Magistrate has no power to try an offence under s 20 of the Indian Treasure Trove Act VI of 1878. This is no longer law having regard to the addition now made to Sch II under the heading offences against other laws. A third-class Magistrate has jurisdiction to try an offence under s. 68 of Bom. Act VI of 1873 Ratanlal 763

4 Jurisdiction where no Court is mentioned.—A Magistrate has jurisdiction to try a landlord for an act specified in s. 58 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act viz failure to prepare and retain counterfoils of rent receipts in the same way as he would try a summons-case the Act not having specified any particular Magistrate to try such an offence 9 C. W. N 816 = 2 Cr. L. J 532. Reading the first paragraph of this section with s 21 of Act XVI of 1861 (Stage Carriages), all Magistrates have jurisdiction to try offences against ss. 7 and 9 of the said Act Ratanlal 384.

5 As to the effect of s. 8 of Act X of 1872 with which cl (2) of this section correspond. to a certain extent on the question of jurisdiction see 3 M 161

Trial of European British subject by second and third-class Magistrates.

* "29-A. No Magistrate of the second or third class shall inquire into or try any offence which is punishable otherwise than with fine not exceeding fifty rupees which where the accused is an European British subject who claims to be tried as such

1 "29-B. Any offence other than one punishable with death or transportation for life, committed by any person who at the date when he appears or is brought before the Court is under the age of fifteen years may be tried by a District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate or by any Magistrate specially empowered by the Local Government to exercise the powers conferred by section 8, sub-section (1) of the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897, or, in any area in which the said Act has been wholly or in part repealed by any other law providing for the custody trial or punishment of youthful offenders by any Magistrate empowered by or under such law to exercise all or any of the powers conferred thereby.

30 In the territories respectively administered by the Lieutenant Governors of the Punjab and Burma and the Chief Commissioners of Oudh and the Central Provinces Coorg and Assam in Sindh and in those parts of the other Provinces in which there are Deputy Commissioners or Assistant Commissioners the Local Government may notwithstanding anything contained in section 29 invest the District Magistrate or any Magistrate of the first class with power to try as a Magistrate all offences not punishable with death Offences not punishable with death.

Notes.—1 Investment on Magistrates of powers under this section by the Local Governments.—This section should be read with s. 34. * This section is so amended as to make it applicable to all non-regulation Provinces. Further the Local Governments are now authorized to invest first-class Magistrates with powers under the section.—Sel. Com. Rep.

Note.—See Note on s. 436 infra

29. (1) Subject to the other provisions of this Code any offence under any other law shall when any Court is mentioned in this behalf in such law be tried by such Court

(2) When no Court is so mentioned it may be tried by the High Court or subject as aforesaid by any Court constituted under this Code by which such offence is shown in the eighth column of the Second Schedule to be triable

Notes—1 We have omitted the proviso to this clause which existed in the old Act and specified in the Second Schedule the respective Courts by which offences under other laws are triable. —See Com Rep

2 When any Court is mentioned, shall be tried by such Court and not by any other—It is a general rule that where a statute makes unlawful that which was lawful before and inseparably connects with the prohibition or offence a special remedy that remedy must be pursued and no other. Again the jurisdiction to punish an offender for nuisance etc. under s. 16 Bombay Act VIII of 1867 is confined to the Police-patels, duly empowered and does not extend to their official superiors (Taluk Magistrates) Ratanlal 198. (a) District Magistrate So also a Presidency Magistrate has no jurisdiction to try prisoners for offences under s. 52 of the Prisons Act IX of 1894 as he is not a District Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class mentioned therein 32 M 303. In Punjab see ss 5 6 and 7 of Regulation IV of 1877 (Frontier Crimes).

In Bombay, the Deputy Commissioners of Thar, Parkar and the Upper Sindh Frontier Districts have been given this power—Bombay Gazette 1881, Pt. I p 600

In Burma all District Magistrates have this power—Burma Gazette, 1892 Pt. I, p. 49

In Central Provinces (excluding Berar) all District Magistrates are invested with special powers under this section—C P Cr Cir 1908 Edn No 4

2 Magistrates specially empowered cannot try offences punishable with death.—A District Magistrate empowered under s 90 to try all offences not punishable with death is not legally competent to try the offence of culpable homicide not amounting to murder punishable under the first part of s. 304 I P C, an offence not punishable with death. What the law contemplates and intends is that when there is credible evidence both of murder and of qualified murder, the accused should be committed for trial before a Court which is competent to do what a District Magistrate is not, viz. try both offences once for all and pronounce a judgment which shall be an effectual bar to a second trial on the same facts, 1 P. R. 1893 (F.B.). A Magistrate exercising the powers under this section cannot try an offence punishable with death and find the accused guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder, on the ground that the case falls within one or other of the exceptions to s. 300 I P C 3 P. R. 1891. Where it appears from some of the evidence that the accused might have been charged with the offence of murder the Magistrate should not take upon himself to reduce the charge to such minor offence that he might try it. By adopting such a course he incurs a grave responsibility. In such a case, therefore, he should commit the accused to the Court of Sessions. Where however, a Deputy Commissioner specially empowered under this section, tried a case under s. 304, I P C., there being some evidence which might have supported a charge under s. 302 held that having regard to s. 209 infra it was not possible to say that Court had acted without jurisdiction 10 C. 85 = 13 C. L. R. 575

3. What cases District Magistrates should not try—As a general rule cases on the border line of jurisdiction and cases of great difficulty ought to be committed to the Sessions. The offence of attempting to wage war against the Queen should not be tried as a dacoity case by a District Magistrate 1 Bar. 8 R. 158.

4. Procedure to be adopted by District Magistrate—A District Magistrate empowered under this section, in trying a case which but for his special powers he would be bound to commit to the Court of Sessions, should adopt the procedure laid down in Chapter XXI (Warrant Cases), infra.

5. What sentence may be awarded by District Magistrate—See s 34, infra. Such a Magistrate is competent to pass a sentence of transportation for seven years instead of awarding a sentence of imprisonment 9 W. R. 6 (F.B.). In passing a sentence under s. 471 I P C he can pass a sentence of one year and nine months in default of payment of fine only 33 P. R. 1895.

6. Magistrate must purport to act under the section—A first-class Magistrate who was simply described in the heading of his judgment as invested with the special powers under this section but not purporting to act under it cannot exercise these powers in passing sentence 17 P. W. R. 1908.

7. Subordinate Magistrates not allowed to make over Sessions cases to be tried by Deputy Commissioners specially empowered—A Magistrate of the first class who is holding an inquiry in a case of dacoity has jurisdiction either to commit the accused to the Court of Sessions or to discharge him. He has no authority to make over the case to a District Magistrate who is a Deputy Commissioner specially empowered under this section to try such cases. But when it was found that the accused had not been prejudiced at the trial the High Court maintained the conviction 7 C. W. N. 457.

8. Magistrate trying under this section not competent to try an approver—When a Deputy Commissioner tries a case exclusively triable by the Court of Sessions under powers conferred upon him by this section he does so as a Magistrate and if he tenders conditional pardon to one of the accused he is precluded from trying the case himself 10 G. W. N. 847 = 4 Cr. L. J. 44.

9 Appeals—See s. 408 (b). It has been held that District Magistrate in s. 408 infra include a District Magistrate empowered under this section 9 G. 513—516 In a case transferred to a District Magistrate under s. 349 infra the District Magistrate must be regarded as a Magistrate not empowered with the powers under this section and if he sentences the accused as if he were empowered under this section such sentence is ultra vires and appeals would lie even if the sentence exceeds four years rigorous imprisonment not to the High Court but to the Court of Session 4 L. R. B. 53 = 6 Cr. L. J. 289 Where a Magistrate duly empowered under this section convicted two persons and submitted the case to the Sessions Judge for the confirmation of the sentence against one only and the other appealed to the Sessions Court held that both the appeal and the submission lay to the High Court under s. 408 infra 12 P. R. 1900 See also 36 P. R. 1880, 23 P. R. 1881, 161 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 236

10 Revision—Magistrate inferior to Sessions Court—A Sessions Judge is competent to make an order for further inquiry under s. 437 infra when an accused has been discharged by a District Magistrate notwithstanding that such Magistrate was exercising his enhanced powers under this section 15 P. R. 1904

B—Sentences which may be passed by Courts of various classes

Sentences which High Courts and Sessions Judges may pass.

31. (1) A High Court may pass any sentence authorized by law

(2) A Sessions Judge or Additional Sessions Judge may pass any sentence authorized by law but any sentence of death passed by any such Judge shall be subject to confirmation by the High Court

(3) An Assistant Sessions Judge may pass any sentence authorized by law except a sentence of death or of transportation for a term exceeding seven years or of imprisonment for a term exceeding seven years

Notes.—1 Any sentence authorized by law—See s. 53 I P C A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to pass a sentence otherwise unlawful and unauthorized merely because the accused asks for it 3 B. L. R. Ap. Cr. 50 See s. 59 I P C as to power of commutation of imprisonment into transportation but transportation can be awarded only in lieu of substantive terms of imprisonment 5 M. 28

2 European British subject—Upon an European British subject a Court of Session can pass a sentence of one year's imprisonment only S. 449

3. We have dispensed with the necessity for confirmation of sentences passed by Assistant Sessions Judges where such sentences exceed four years. For the most part such confirmation is simply a preliminary to an appeal and interposes a useless formality which delays the hearing of the appeal on the merits.—See Com. Rep.

4. Confirmation.—See Chapter XXV II ss. 374—380

5 Powers of an Assistant Sessions Judge.—These are the same as those of a Magistrate invested with special powers under s. 30 there being however some difference in the mode of trial The Magistrate tries cases under Chapter XXI as in warrant-cases while the Assistant Sessions Judge tries them with the aid of assessors or by jury

6 Appeals from Assistant and Additional Sessions Judges and from Courts of Session.—See ss. 408 and 410 and also 9 G. 513 = 12 G. L. R. 500 As to powers of Reference and Revisions by Additional Sessions Judges see s. 438 (2), superseding 9 B. 164.

| | { | Fine not exceeding one thousand rupees Whipping |
| (b) Courts of Magistrates of the second class | { | Imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, including such solitary confinement as is authorized by law, |
| | { | Fine not exceeding two hundred rupees |
| | { | * * * |
| (c) Courts of Magistrates of the third class | { | Imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month |
| | { | Fine not exceeding fifty rupees |

(2) The Court of any Magistrate may pass any lawful sentence combining any of the sentences which it is authorized by law to pass

Amendment of Section—The words Whipping (if specially empowered) in sub-sec. (1)(b) and sub-sec. (8) No Court of any Magistrate of the second class shall pass a sentence of whipping unless it is specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government have been repealed by the Whipping Act IV of 1909

Notes—1 Imprisonment—see either simple or rigorous General Clauses Act X of 1897, s. 3 (26).

Solitary confinement.—See ss 73 and 74 I P C. This punishment is done away with in England

Whipping—See the Whipping Act IV of 1909 printed in the Appendix and ss 390—396 as to the mode of execution of the punishment of whipping As to powers of Magistrates in Upper Burma to pass sentences of whipping see Reg V of 1892 Schedule IV under which a Magistrate of any class may pass a sentence of whipping

Fine.—See ss 386—388 and Note 7 infra

2 Solitary confinement in cases tried summarily—It is not illegal to impose solitary confinement as part of the sentence in a case tried summarily under Chapter XXII 6 A 83, s. 262 limits the term of imprisonment only but does not interfere with the Court's powers under this section or s 73 I P C

3 Separate sentences of solitary confinement for each offence—Separate sentences of solitary confinement in respect of each of several offences which exceed three months in all but do not exceed for each offence the maximum provided in s. 73 I P C. for one offence are not illegal but as a matter of practice a sentence of more than three months solitary confinement should not be passed on a person convicted at one trial of more than one offence 7 P R. 1897; but in a later case it was held that such a sentence should not be passed 37 P. R. 1905 See also 1897 P J L B 596 and 1 U B R 247

4 Solitary confinement only awardable for offence under I P C—A person convicted under s. 35 of the Excise Act XXII of 1881 17 P R. 1899; or s. 19 of Act XXVII of 1871 (Criminal Tribes Act) or s. 48 of Post Offices Act (1866) 24 P. R. 1879 is not liable to solitary confinement as the offence is not under the Penal Code 17 P R. 1899, ibid. foot note Solitary confinement cannot be awarded when imprisonment is not part of the substantive sentences 9 P R. 1932, nor as a part of the imprisonment in lieu of fine 53 P R. 1937, but see 14 P R. 1899 Solitary confinement cannot be awarded as part of an order of imprisonment awarded under ss 118 and 123 in default of furnishing security 36 A 495

5 Solitary confinement not regulated by Magistrate's choice—A Magistrate has no power to direct that the sentence of solitary confinement should be executed in the first week of every month. Such confinement is regulated by the Penal Code 5 C P Cr 17 See s 74 I P C

6 Solitary confinement suitable for old offenders.—For old offenders convicted of offences against property the sentence of solitary confinement is a salutary punishment but it is not suitable for persons convicted of culpable homicide not amounting to murder 5 C. P. Cr. 50

7. Fine-Limit to Magisterial power to—See s. 63–70 I I C. and s. 25 of the General Clauses Act which makes the provisions of this Code in relation to the issue and execution of warrants for the levy of fines applicable to all fines under any Act etc. unless there is an express provision to the contrary therein. The power of a Magistrate to fine is in all cases limited to Rs. 1000. It is only the Court of Session and the High Court that can inflict fines to an unlimited extent, 7 W. R. 37, but see Note 10 infra.

8. Fine, relative to means of accused—No sentence of fine should be passed by a Criminal Court on an accused person without regard to the means of the accused to pay the fine 1 Bar. & R. 493.

9 Infliction of excessive fine for increasing the term of imprisonment.—Where a fine is not suited to the nature of the offence and is quite beyond the means of the offender to pay it, it should never be inflicted merely in order that a further term of imprisonment in default should be suffered. If the substantive sentence awardable by a Magistrate is insufficient for the offence the case should be sent for trial to a Court which can inflict an adequate sentence 20 R. 3695

10 Provisions of s. 35 of Companies Act, not affected by s. 32—The omission to duly stamp a share certificate is an offence under s. 35 Indian Companies Act VI of 1882 now (Act VII of 1913) and a Magistrate has power to impose fine according to special law in respect of each share certificate as the omission in each case is a separate offence. The provisions of that section are not affected by this section though the amount of fine in the aggregate exceeds Rs. 1000 20 C. 575; 35 A. 173

11. Payment of daily fine—An order for the payment of a daily fine is illegal inasmuch as it is an adjudication so far as the future is concerned in respect of an offence which has not been committed when the order is passed, 27 C. 555. See also 25 A. 309; 1 B. L. R. O Cr. 41, 15 W. R. 44, 25 W. R. 6, 22 B. 766 and 15 C. W. N. CXI. But where the statute (s. 580 of the Calcutta Municipal Act III of 1899 B.C.) makes default on every subsequent day an offence for which a fine can be imposed no fresh order is necessary to authorize the imposition of a daily fine, 7 C. W. N. 833. For a similar provision see s. 70 of the Indian Companies Act VI of 1882 now (Act VII of 1913).

12. Use of discretion in awarding sentence of fine—The attention of the Courts is directed to the very great importance of exercising great discretion in regulating the sentences of fine passed by them so as to accord with the circumstances of the persons on whom the sentences are passed. Fines are sometimes imposed which are manifestly impossible of realization while there is reason to fear that many fines imposed in petty cases though realised are paid only with difficulty. It would appear that in dealing with numerous petty cases some Magistrates fall into a way of fixing the fines at particular amounts as a matter of course without much thought as to how they will be felt by the particular individual on whom they are imposed.

It is a first principle in inflicting this mode of punishment that it is necessary to have as much regard to the pecuniary circumstances of the offender as to the character and magnitude of the offence. Fines should never, in any case be imposed which are not likely to be realised at all and they should never be imposed in petty cases so severe as not to be easily realisable.—C. P. Cr. Part I No 1

13. Simple imprisonment in default of payment of fine—The general rules of this and of the following section are applicable to simple imprisonment ordered as a process for enforcing the payment of a fine. The principle of s. 67 I P C., is unaffected by Chapter XXII of the Code the provisions of s. 262 governing only substantive terms of imprisonment 6 A. 51

14 Payment of compensation out of fine.—See s. 345 and 346.

15 Refunding of fine when conviction reversed—On reversal of conviction any fine must, as a matter of course be refunded even though the appellate judgment be silent on the point Pet. No 45 of 1904

16. Infliction of whipping.—Punjab—In connection with this subject the Judges of the Punjab Chief Court have invited the attention of the Criminal Courts to the following points:—(1) that persons in respectable position of life should not ordinarily be whipped, 9 P. W. R. 1907 = 5 Cr. L. J. 217; (2) that the punishment be inflicted only in cases of false evidence, extortion and forgery under very exceptional circumstances, (3) that whipping, as an additional punishment, should only be ordered when a further deterrent appears to be really called for in the interests of justice, (4) that special care and judgment should be exercised in times of agricultural scarcity and distress—Punjab Cr. L. J. 280

The following extract from the Resolution of the Government of India deserves to be carefully read especially by young officers who are invested with first class Magistrate's powers:—

The Governor General in Council observes that the extent to which the punishment of whipping is inflicted in the several Provinces is a matter which should, even during ordinary times when the circumstances of the country are normal, be carefully watched by Local Governments and Administrations, in order that any tendency towards an indiscriminate or ill judged resort to this form of punishment may be promptly checked. This is especially necessary during times of scarcity, when, from causes more or less beyond their own control the poorer classes of population are driven to the commission of petty crimes. The policy of largely resorting, during times of agricultural distress, to whipping as a punishment for petty thefts and other offences of a similar nature, may, no doubt be defended by the argument that it would be impossible at such times to provide accommodation for all offenders in the jails. But if due and timely provision is made for the employment of the industrious poor, there need be no excessive resort to punitive measures of this kind, and the Governor-General in Council trusts that, if such times should unfortunately recur, the matter will be watched with special care by the Local Governments and Administrations concerned, and that it may be found possible to distinguish between those members of the criminal classes who take advantage of seasons of public trouble to prey upon their neighbours, and the honest labouring poor, who are driven by sheer necessity to grain pilfering or similar offences. For the former the punishment should be sharp and effective, and whipping may often be most appropriate. The latter should be considerably dealt with, and put in the way of relief after such punishment of fine or moderate imprisonment as may seem to be appropriate in each case.—Proceedings of the Government of India, Home Department (Judicial), 11th January 1892

Central Provinces—Whipping, being a punishment which to certain classes of the community, carries great disgrace with it, shall not be inflicted when there are special circumstances which render it undesirable or make it in reality a greater punishment than the law intends. More especially should this be borne in mind in cases where it is proposed to inflict whipping as the sole punishment and where consequently either no appeal lies in law or there is often no practical appeal. No man who, up to the time of his conviction, has occupied a position of some respectability should be subjected to this punishment, which is meant rather for persons of the lowest classes who commit such petty thefts etc., as are properly visited with whipping. Neither adults nor juveniles may be punished with whipping for an offence under a Special Act unless that Act contains a special provision to that end.—C. P. Cr. Cr., Part III, No 3

17. Where Reformatory does not exist, whipping is suitable—In the absence of any special reformatory or of adequate arrangements in District jails for the treatment of juvenile prisoners the punishment of whipping is peculiarly suitable for such offenders—Punjab Cr. No 7 of 1893

18. Second-class Magistrate's powers as to whipping—Where the law empowers a particular Magistrate to do a particular act, or make a certain order it should always appear upon the proceedings that the Magistrate making the order, or doing the act is a Magistrate who had jurisdiction to do it, 22 W. R. 30. Persons exercising powers of a second-class Magistrate under the old Code are not competent to pass sentence of whipping unless they are specially empowered under this Act, though under the Code of 1872 such power was inherent in them, 7 B. 303. In Madras all second-class Magistrates were authorized to pass the sentence of whipping Port St. George Gazette Notification No 4, dated 1st January 1883. Now the powers of a second-class Magistrate to inflict whipping have been taken away by the amendment of this section

19. Any lawful sentence, combining any of the sentences—e.g., imprisonment and fine, or imprisonment and whipping or imprisonment, whipping and fine. A Magistrate of the second class having convicted an accused person under s 406 I P C sentenced him to three months' simple imprisonment. On appeal the Appellate Court whilst upholding the conviction altered the sentence to a fine of Rs 400 with an alternative term of rigorous imprisonment. Held that the sentence passed by the Appellate Court was ultra vires of that Court 43 A. 594

20. Provisions of s. 32 are not affected by s. 75, I. P. C.—S. 75 I. P. C., does not authorize a Magistrate to pass a sentence in excess of this section. Therefore where an accused previously convicted was again convicted by a second-class Magistrate, of an offence under s. 379, I. P. C., and sentenced to six months rigorous imprisonment held, that he cannot also be convicted under s. 75, I. P. C., and sentenced separately Ratanlal, p. 633; L. B. R. (1893—1900) 78

Enhanced punishment, within the view of s. 75, I. P. C., is a sentence of more than three years imprisonment or transportation, for offences ordinarily punishable under Chapter XII or XIII, I. P. C., with imprisonment of either description for a term of three years or upwards, after previous conviction of an offence similarly punishable. It is obvious that no Magistrate under the Magisterial powers conferred by this section can pass a sentence enhanced under s. 75, I. P. C. But Magistrates who pass a severe sentence within their Magisterial powers under this section because of a previous conviction frequently cite in citing s. 75, I. P. C., as authority for passing a sentence within their powers under this section, 6 Bom. L. R. 543.

21. Previous conviction in a Foreign State.—Where the accused was previously convicted in a Feudatory State, under a law identical in terms with the Indian Penal Code, such previous conviction might be taken into account by a Magistrate in British India when awarding punishment under the Penal Code. But the sentence passed must not exceed the ordinary limits, imposed by the particular section of the Penal Code under which the accused is convicted and by s. 32 or s. 34 of this Code as the case may be. In such a case, it would be illegal to apply s. 75, I. P. C., or s. 3 or s. 4 of the Whipping Act VI of 1864 (now repealed) or s. 565 of this Code, upon the strength of foreign convictions 1 N. L. R. 137. See 7 C. P. L. R. 24; 4 F. R. 1881.

Power of Magistrates to sentence to imprisonment in default of fine.

33. (1) The Court of any Magistrate may award such term of imprisonment in default of payment of fine as is authorized by law in case of such default

Provided that—

(a) the term is not in excess of the Magistrate's powers under this Code,

(b) in any case decided by a Magistrate where imprisonment has been awarded as part of the substantive sentence, the period of imprisonment awarded in default of payment of the fine shall not exceed one-fourth of the period of imprisonment which such Magistrate is competent to inflict as punishment for the offence

Provided as to certain cases

otherwise than as imprisonment in default of payment of the fine

(2) The imprisonment awarded under this section may be in addition to a substantive sentence of imprisonment for the maximum term awardable by the Magistrate under s. 32

Notes—1. Award of imprisonment in default of fine.—Where the sentence is imprisonment and fine this section should be read with ss. 64 and 65, I. P. C., and when the sentence is one of fine only, with ss. 66 and 67 I. P. C. See also 1 A. 461 (F.B.) Subject to s. 65 I. P. C. a Magistrate when in passing a sentence of fine only may award in default imprisonment up to the limit of his powers and when he passes a sentence of imprisonment and fine the period of imprisonment in default cannot exceed one-fourth of the period the Magistrate has power to impose substantively, i.e., a first-class Magistrate cannot award more than six months a second-class Magistrate more than one month and a half and a third-class Magistrate more than a week.

2 No power to refund fine after accused underwent sentence of imprisonment.—A prisoner was sentenced to imprisonment and fine and in default of payment of the fine to a further term of imprisonment. He paid a part of the fine but that fact not having been communicated to the jailor he underwent the entire term of imprisonment, held that the Court had no power to order the fine to be refunded, 4 Bom. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 37 See ss. 63 and 69 I. P. C. as to termination of imprisonment, when whole or part of the fine is paid.

3. Time for paying fine cannot be limited.—A sentence of fine cannot fix a time within which the fine shall be paid, Cul. H. C. Cir., 59 and 326 of 1861

4 Rules for discharge of prisoners on payment of fine.—The following rules as to the discharge of prisoners confined in default of payment of fine, on payment of such fine are in force in the N-W Provinces —

(a) In all cases in which any offender is sentenced to imprisonment in default of payment of fine, he may pay or cause to be paid to the jailor of the jail in which he shall be so imprisoned the sum mentioned in the Warrant of Commitment, or any portion thereof, and the jailor shall receive the same and thereupon discharge such person or make a deduction from the term of imprisonment proportioned to the amount paid as the case may be.

(b) 'The jailor shall certify to the Court from which the warrant is issued all payments of fines and shall remit to the Court all sums received in payment of fines, and on full execution of the sentence he shall return the warrant to the Court as directed by law.'—N W P Gazette 1878 p 570

5. Who should communicate payment of fine.—The duty of giving intimation to the jailor of any payment of such fine made to Magistrates is in Bengal, on the Magistrates (Beng Govt. Cir 1060 T, 1864), and in Madras on the Chief Ministerial Officer of the Court (Mad Pro, dated 12th March, 1867).

6. Sentence of imprisonment in excess of Magistrate's power.—This section does not authorize a Magistrate to pass a sentence of imprisonment in default or payment of fines in excess of the term prescribed by s 65 I P C 10 M. 165 (F.B.) and 10 M. 166 foot-note overruling 1 M. 327. It only regulates the proceedings of the Magistrates whose powers are limited, 1 A. 461 (F.B). Thus, there are two limitations as to the term of such imprisonment awardable viz, one imposed by s 65 I P C and the other by cl (1) (b) of this section and by s. 32 supra. See also 35 P. R. 1885.

7 Power of District Magistrate specially empowered to pass sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine.—Where a District Magistrate specially empowered under s 30 convicts the accused under s 471, I P C, he can pass a sentence of one year and nine months, i.e., one-fourth of seven years' sentence in default of payment of fine 35 P. R. 1885

8 Scope of sub-sec. 2.—Subsec. 2 of this section does not apply to cases where the substantive sentence is one of fine only, 1 Bur. S. R. 486.

9. Imprisonment need not be proportional to fine.—Sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine need not, in all cases, be proportioned to the amount of fine imposed 1 Bur. S. R. 483.

10 Limit imposed on Court passing sentence of imprisonment in a summary trial does not apply to default of payment of fine.—The limit of three months mentioned in sub-sec. (2) of s 262, infra does not apply where simple imprisonment is awarded as a process for enforcement of fine, 6 A. 61. In such cases the principle of this and the preceding sections and of s 67, I P C, remain unaffected by Chapter XXII. See Notes to s 262

11. Imprisonment in default of fine not awardable under s 113, Railways Act.—Where excess charge and fare are recoverable under s 113 of Indian Railways Act IX of 1890, a Magistrate is not authorized to award imprisonment in default of payment of fine, 1 Bom. L. R. 166 following 18 B 440 and 20 M 335. See, however, s 25 of the General Clauses Act X of 1897, as to the fines imposed under Special or Local Laws

12 Alternative sentence of imprisonment does effect power of Magistrate to impose full period of substantive imprisonment.—Where a Presidency Magistrate convicted the accused under ss. 58 and 74 of the Bengal Excise Act VII of 1878 (B C) and sentenced him under s 58 to a fine of Rs 200, in default to three months' imprisonment and under s. 74 an additional imprisonment for six months which was the maximum term under that section, held the sentence in default of payment of fine was not bad, the imposition of the additional sentence under s 74 not affecting the Magistrate's power regarding the original sentence under s. 58, 6 C. 575 = 8 C. L. R. 250.

13. Transportation and fine.—Transportation cannot be substituted for imprisonment in default of payment of fine 17 P. R. 1880, 5 M. 29. When a fine is imposed in addition to transportation and the whole or part of the fine is afterwards levied it is the duty of the Sessions Judge to notify the fact to the authorities at Port Blair—M H C Cir, No 2022 12th November, 1870

34. The Court of a Magistrate specially empowered under s 30 may pass any sentence authorized by law except a sentence of death or of transportation for a term exceeding seven years or imprisonment for a term exceeding seven years

Note—See Note 1 to s 30 Confirmation of a sentence exceeding four years is not now required. See Note 1 to s 31 Such sentences are appealable under ss 409 and 409

When special powers under this section are exercised by a District Magistrate in any case such case should not be tried summarily under Chapter XXII

Sentences which Courts and Magistrates may pass upon European British subjects

 34-A. Notwithstanding anything contained in sections 31 32 and 34—

(a) no Court of Session shall pass on any European British subject any sentence other than a sentence of death penal servitude or imprisonment with or without fine or of fine and

(b) no District Magistrate or other Magistrate of the first class shall pass on any European British subject any sentence other than imprisonment which may extend to two years or fine which may extend to one thousand rupees or both

35. (1) When a person is convicted at one trial of two or more offences the Court may subject to the provisions of s 71 of the Indian Penal Code† sentence him for such offences to the several punishments prescribed therefor which such Court is competent to inflict such punishments when consisting of imprisonment or transportation to commence the one after the expiration of the other in such order as the Court may direct unless the Court directs that such punishments shall run concurrently

(2) In the case of consecutive sentences it shall not be necessary for the Court by reason only of the aggregate punishment for the several offences being in excess of the punishment which it is competent to inflict on conviction of a single offence to send the offender for trial before a higher Court

Provided as follows —

Maximum term of punishment. (a) in no case shall such person be sentenced to imprisonment for a longer period than fourteen years

(b) if the case is tried by a Magistrate (other than a Magistrate) acting under s 34 the aggregate punishment shall not exceed twice the amount of punishment which he is in the exercise of his ordinary jurisdiction competent to inflict

(3) for the purpose of appeal the aggregate of consecutive sentences passed under this section in case of convictions for several offences at one trial shall be deemed to be a single sentence

(The explanation and illustration to this section have been repealed by Act XVII of 1923)

Notes.—1 History of the section.—With some verbal alterations this section corresponds with s 35 of Act X of 1892. The power to pass concurrent sentences as also the explanation and illustration are new. This section also corresponds with s 46 of Act XXV of 1861 and s 314 of Act V of 1872. S 109 of the High Court's Criminal Proceed re Act X of 1872 and s 13 of the Presidency Magistrates' Act IV of 1877 contained similar provisions

At one trial—The corresponding language in the 1861 Code was at one time. The change of time into trial was made in the 1872 Code.

* This section was inserted by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, XVII of 1923 s 7

† The word "distinct" has been omitted by Act VI III of 1923

‡ Subject to the provisions of s 71 of the Indian Penal Code have been substituted by Act VI III of 1923

'Distinct offences'—The Code of 1861 contained the words 'offences punishable under' the same or different sections of the Indian Penal Code' and the Code of 1872 the words 'punishable under the same or different sections of any law for the time being'

'May sentence'—The words in the 1861 Code were 'It shall be lawful for the Court to sentence

'In such order as the Court may direct—These words were first used in the Code of 1882

1-A. Effect of the amendments by Act XXVIII of 1923.—By Act XXVIII of 1923, the following amendments were made —

(1) the word 'distinct' has been omitted,

(2) "subject to the provisions of s. 71 of the Indian Penal Code" are substituted,

(3) the explanation and illustration to the old section are repealed, the effect of these amendments is to restore the previous view of the law laid down in the case of Queen Empress v. Bhana Punja, 17 Bom. 260, that separate sentences are quite legal. Cf 49 B. 916.

2. Conviction may be either under the Penal Code or under any special or local law.—The Code of 1861 restricted the operation of the corresponding section to "offences punishable under the same or different sections of the Indian Penal Code," while the language of the 1872 Code was "punishable under the same or different sections of any law for the time being" See, however, s. 26 of the General Clauses Act X of 1897

3. Whipping in case of sentences passed at one trial.—When a person is convicted at one time of two or more offences it is illegal to sentence him to whipping for one of those offences in addition to imprisonment or fine for the other or others. But it is not illegal to sentence him to one whipping in lieu of all other punishments, 9 W. R. 41 (F.B.), 4 Bom. L. R. 929; Ratanlal 564 and 953; 1 W. R. 24 and 14 W. R. 7. In 5 M. H. Q. R. Appendix XVIII, it has, however, been held that a Court is empowered to sentence a prisoner in the one case to imprisonment and in the other to whipping. See Note 5 to s. 3 of the Whipping Act, 1908, Appendix III.

1.—SCOPE OF THE SECTION.

Notes.—4. Section lays down rule for punishment.—Ss 233—239 contain only rules of criminal pleading in regard to joinder of charges and they do not deal with the sentences to be passed on conviction. The rules for assessing punishment are laid down in this section and in ss 71 and 72 of the Indian Penal Code, 12 M. 36; 10 B. 493; 7 A. 29—33; 9 N. L. R. 28 = 14 Cr. L. J. 133. These sections provide as follows —

Limit of punishment of offence made up of several offences

S 71 Where anything which is an offence is made up of parts, any of which parts is itself an offence, the offender shall not be punished with the punishment of more than one of such offences, unless it be so expressly provided

Where anything is an offence falling within two or more separate definitions of any law in force for the time being by which offences are defined or punished, or where several acts of which one or more than one would by itself or themselves constitute an offence when combined, a different offence

the offender shall not be punished with a more severe punishment than the Court which tries him could award for anyone of such offences

Punishment of person guilty of one of several offences the judgment relating to which is doubtful of which

S 72. In all cases in which judgment is given that a person is guilty of one of several offences specified in the judgment, but that it is doubtful of which of these offences he is guilty, the offender shall be punished for the offence for which the lowest punishment is provided if the same punishment is not provided for all.

5. Section applies only to convictions of offences.—It has no application to imprisonments imposed under s. 123 of the Code, 4 Bom. L. R. 876; 5 Bom. L. R. 28.

6. Section applies only to convictions at one trial.—This section does not embrace the case of separate trials held on the same or subsequent days for separate offences committed by the same accused person, but covers only conviction of the same accused, for two or more offences at one trial, Weir II, 30 and 31; 4 Bom. L. R. 876; 146 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 217. This section does not control sentences passed at different trials, 7 W. R. 1 and 14 P. R. 1866; 1 Bom. E. R. 217; 3 A. 305; 1881 A. W. N. 23; 11 A. L. J. 253 = 14 Cr. L. J. 240. See Note 32 under Heading VI at page 64 19 A. L. J. 310; 47 A. 59

7. Previous conviction not a distinct offence.—A person convicted under s. 411, I P C., read with s. 75, I P C., is not convicted of distinct offences within the meaning of this section, 11 A. 393; see also Ratanlal 49.

8. Section does not authorise splitting offences for taking cognizance of cases.—A Magistrate is not entitled to split up an offence for the purpose of giving himself jurisdiction over the part, which he would not have had over the whole, and thus deprive the prisoner of an appeal 4 C. 15. In 27 C. 933 it was held to be highly improper on the part of the Magistrate that, instead of trying accused persons for offences which the acts attributed to them constitute, he should have tried them for a lesser offence, so that the trial might be conducted under the summary procedure laid down in Chapter XXII

9. Section merely permissive.—The use of the words "may sentence" make it clear that this section is merely permissive and a Criminal Court is not bound to pass separate sentences in respect of each of the offences of which an accused person may be found guilty at one trial, 4 Bar. & R. 271. As to the principles which should guide a Court in passing single or separate sentences, see Heading III

II.—IMPOSING OF SEPARATE OR AGGREGATE SENTENCES ON CONVICTION.

Notes.—10 Generally separate sentence should be imposed on conviction of each offence.—It is generally the proper course, where an accused person is convicted at one trial of two or more distinct offences not being parts of the same transaction, a separate sentence should always be passed for each offence regard being had to provisions of this section, Ratanlal 597 (F.B.), 2 B. H. C. R. Cr. 391; 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. 8.

11. Punishment not to be aggregate.—This section does not empower a District Magistrate or any other Magistrate to pass an aggregate sentence instead of separate sentences upon an accused person convicted at one trial of two or more distinct offences. The first clause of the section clearly contemplates separate sentences where it was held that a Criminal Court is not bound to pass separate sentences at such trial and there is nothing illegal if separate sentences are not passed

12. Separate sentence unnecessary when it is nugatory.—This direction, namely, to pass separate sentence for each offence, does not apply of course to cases in which such a sentence is passed in respect of one of the offences as would render another sentence nugatory, as a sentence of death or of transportation for life. See Prov Cr No 1

13. Sentences for offences forming part of one continuous transaction.—Where there is a simultaneous conviction of two or more offences being part of the same transaction, the question whether a separate sentence should be passed for each offence will depend on circumstances, See Prov Cr No 1 If a prisoner be convicted of two or more offences forming part of one continuous transaction he can only be sentenced for the principal offence—M H C Pro dated 17th October, 1862 and 30th March, 1863, and it is not necessary to record a finding on the minor counts. M H C Pro dated 28th June, 1868 Where a person, though charged under different sections of the Penal Code was convicted of what was substantially but a single offence, it was not lawful to pass a sentence of imprisonment, as for separate offences, exceeding in the aggregate the punishment which it was competent for the Court to inflict on conviction of a single offence, 2 B. H. C. R. 126. If a prisoner be convicted of two or more offences forming parts of one continuous transaction, he can only be sentenced for the principal offence and it is not necessary to record a finding on the minor counts e.g., a man cannot be convicted both for culpable homicide not amounting to murder and for being member of an unlawful assembly because the offence is single and entire, and the fact that he was present as a member of an unlawful assembly is really only part of the evidence of the major offence, 7 W. R. 13; 3 Bom. L. R. 832. See also cases under Heading III

14. In cases falling under s. 71, I. P. C., practice differs.—The Calcutta High Court holds that in awarding punishment under s. 71, I. P. C., in case of convictions of several separable offences falling within the purview of the section, it is illegal to impose a sentence for each offence, 15 C. 442; 51 C. 70. The Punjab Chief Court held in 4 P. R. 1901 (F.B.) that separate sentences cannot be awarded where the first clause of s. 71, I. P. C., applies. The Bombay High Court in 23 B. 706 (F.B.) held that a Court in awarding punishment under

But see Note 1 A above. It has been held by the Bombay High Court in 49 B. 216 that the effect of the amendment in 1923 of s. 35 of the Code is to restore the previous view of the law as held in 17 B. 260 that separate sentences for offences punishable under ss. 148 and 328, I P C., are legal subject to the provisions of s. 71, I P C. In this case 23 B. 706 (F.B.) was considered. See also 4 C. L. J. 90; 3 B. L. R. 224 = 11 Cr. L. J. 414. The Allahabad High Court, however, has held that the law does not prohibit the Court from passing a sentence in respect of each offence established, but it declares that the offender must not receive for such offence collectively a punishment more severe than might have been awarded for any of them if for the offence formed by their combination, 2 A. 101; 10 A. 58; 10 A. 146. See also 12 M. 36; 9 N. L. R. 26 = 14 Cr. L. J. 135 and 1 L. B. R. 33 followed in 6 L. B. R. 160 = 14 Cr. L. J. 167. Omission to determine whether the sentences of imprisonment and transportation are to run concurrently or consecutively makes the sentence defective in form. 23 C. L. J. 595.

III.—DISTINCT OFFENCES AND OFFENCES NOT DISTINCT.

Notes.—15. Distinct offences.—When a single transaction or connected series of events gives rise to several offences of a different character or to several offences of the same character affecting different persons each such offence is separately indictable and punishable. See s. 71, I P C., and s. 235, infra, illustrations (a), (f) and (g).

(a) Kidnapping and selling for purposes of prostitution, ss. 363 and 372, I P C. 7 W. R. 68, 4 M. H. G. R. Appx. XXVII. (b) Resistance to a public servant taking property and assaulting a public servant, ss. 333 and 183, I P C., 14 W. R. 19. (c) Where several seals of different descriptions are found with the accused who possessed them with intent to commit forgery there is a complete and distinct offence under s. 473, I P C., for each seal, 13 W. R. 16. (d) Criminal intimidation to three persons at one time, 9 W. R. 30. (e) False charge and giving false evidence, ss. 211 and 193, I P C., 10 B. 254. (f) Theft and receiving gift to recover stolen property, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 203 (F.B.). (g) Rescuing from custody of one officer and using criminal force to another officer, 13 W. R. 75. (h) Riot and grievous hurt by accused ss. 48, 323 and 326 I P C., when accused is guilty of writing by his own hands and has also caused grievous hurt, 12 G. 495; 16 C. 725; 19 C. 105; 40 C. 511; 17 B. 260 (F.B.), 7 A. 414 (F.B.). 7 A. 29 and see 7 A. 757; 12 G. W. N. CXLVII. (i) Personating a public servant and extortion, ss. 170 and 384, I P C., 10 A. 58. (j) Concealing stolen property in the field of an enemy to implicate him ss. 193 and 414, I P C., 1 A. 379. (k) Theft in house and breaking a closed receptacle, ss. 380 and 461, I P C., 1896 A. W. N. 194. (l) Issue of share warrants not duly stamped. The issue of each of nine share warrants in favour of bearer not duly stamped is a separate offence under the Companies Act 20 C. 676.

16. Repetition of several offences constitutes one offence only of exactly the same character.—In the following cases though the offences are of the same character they are not distinct offences —

(a) Theft of property belonging to several persons—Where accused stole property at night belonging to two different persons from the same room, he cannot be sentenced separately as for two offences of theft 11 W. R. 39; Ratanlal 927; nor where a person steals at one time from different parts of a house, U. B. R. 1904 = 1 Cr. L. J. 537; 1 Bur. 8, R. 163 and 475. Nor when a guard in charge of a train stole at one time articles from separate bags of two different persons in a truck. 58 P. R. 1905.

(b) Possession of stolen property belonging to several persons—Where stolen property belonging to two different persons is found in the possession of the accused at the same time he cannot be sentenced separately for receiving each property there being nothing to show that two distinct offences had been committed 14 P. R. 1885.

(c) Dacoity in respect of property of several persons—Where a gang of dacoits in pursuance of a common object attacked at the same time two different houses in the same village, 1893 S. J. L. B. 444.

(d) False statements in one deposition—The making of any number of false statements in the course of the same deposition is only one offence, 6 M. H. G. Appx. XXVII followed in 36 C. 808.

17. Same facts constituting offences falling within two or more separate definitions.—Where the same facts constitute different offences, each such offence should be separately charged, though only one offence has been committed, see s. 71 (2) I P C.

(a) Adultery and enticing for illicit intercourse—Ss. 497 and 498 I P C., 2 W. R. 35.

(b) Stealing a buffalo and killing it—Ss. 379 and 429, I P C. 15 G. P. L. R. 159.

(c) Abduct of abduction and wrongful confinement—Ss. 109 498 and 343 I P C., 1864 W. R. Sup.

(d) Abandonment of child and culpable homicide—Ss. 317 and 304 I P C. 2 A. 349.

(e) False information and public servant framing incorrect record—Ss 177 and 218, I P C, Weir II, 35.

(f) Receiving stolen property and assisting in concealment thereof—Ss 411 and 414, I P C, 4 M. H. G. R. Appx. XIII; Weir I, 469.

(g) Abetment of theft and receiving stolen property—Ss 109, 380 and 411, I P C, 3 A. 181—185.

(h) Attempt and abetment—A person cannot be separately punished for attempting and for abetting the same offences, 8 Bom. L. R. 835 = 4 Cr. L. J. 430.

(i) Forgery and fraudulent destruction of document—Ss 411 and 477, I P C. Where the act of the accused which constituted forgery and was the basis of his conviction under s 467, I P C, was the same as the act which amounted to fraudulent destruction or defacement and was the basis of his conviction under s 477 he cannot be separately sentenced under ss 471 and 477, I P C 4 P. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 183.

(j) Abduction with intent to ransom and putting a person in fear of death in order to commit extortion—Ss. 365 and 383, I P C, 6 L. B. R. 160 = 6 Bur. L. T. 77 = 14 Cr. L. J. 167 following 1 L. B. R. 33.

(k) Assaulting public servants—Ss. 152 and 332, I P C, 19 C. 105.

(l) Offence under Penal Code and special law—Where an act is an offence under the Penal Code and also under a special law the accused cannot be punished twice, 5 N. W. P. H. G. R. 49. In 1903 A. W. N. 26, where the accused was charged under ss 420 and 511, I P C and s 29 of the Telegraph Act XIII of 1885 for sending a false telegram in furtherance of an attempt to cheat the High Court on appeal passed sentences of three years under each to run concurrently. See also s 26 of the General Clauses Act, 1897.

21. Facts constituting several distinct offences constituting when combined a different offence.—Sometimes an act which is in itself an offence becomes either a different offence or an aggravated form of the same offence when combined with other facts either in themselves innocent or criminal. See s. 71, cl (3), I P C and s. 235 (3), infra and ill. (m) thereto. In such cases it is proper to frame charges and convict the accused for the several distinct offences and as well for the combined offence, but as to whether a sentence should follow each of such convictions, there is a difference of opinion between the Allahabad High Court on the one hand and the Bombay and Calcutta High Courts on the other. (See Note 17, supra.) So far as this section is concerned, the explanation and illustration make it clear that such offences are not distinct offences for the purposes of this section.

(a) House-breaking with intent to commit theft and theft—Ss 457 and 380, I P C. A Full Bench of the Bombay High Court held in 23 B. 706 that though it is proper to charge a person and convict him for each of such offences, the Court in awarding punishment should have regard to s 71, I P C, and illustration to this section, pass one sentence for either of the offences in question and not a separate one for each offence. But if two sentences were passed and the aggregate of them did not exceed the punishment provided by law for any one of such offences or the jurisdiction of the Court, that would be a mere irregularity, 9 B. H. G. R. 172 and 1 B. 216 were not followed. SUBRAMANIAM IYER, J. of the Madras High Court is also of opinion that two separate sentences in a case like this are illegal under this Code, Weir II, 34. The decisions in 10 B. 493 and Ratanlal 228 and 12 M. 36 must be taken to have been overruled. See also 1 Bom. L. R. 69; 12 C. W. N. CLXXXVII. The Calcutta High Court has always held the view that separate punishment is illegal, 2 W. R. 63; 5 W. R. 49; 6 W. R. 49 and 92; 8 W. R. 31 (see Note 17 above).

(b) Abducting a child with intent to taking property and theft—Ss 369 and 380, I P C. A prisoner tried, convicted and punished under s 369, I P C, for abducting a child with the dishonest intent of taking moveable property cannot also be punished for the theft of a part of the moveable property which he intended dishonestly to take through means of the abduction 7 M. H. G. R. 375. This case though overruled in 12 M. 36 may now, in view of the illustration, be treated as good law.

(c) Rioting and being member of unlawful assembly—Ss. 149 and 143, I P C. There cannot be a conviction both of rioting and being a member of an unlawful assembly, 1 W. R. 7.

(d) Rioting and hurt caused by other members—Where the accused is convicted of rioting and of hurt and the conviction for hurt depends upon the application of s 149, I P C, there is a difference of opinion among the various High Courts. A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court has ruled that separate sentences are not legal where it is found that such persons did not individually commit any act which amounted to voluntarily causing hurt but were guilty of that offence by s 149 I P C, 16 C. 442 (F.B.) overruling 11 C. 349 and approving 6 A. 121. This Full Bench decision was followed in 3 C. W. N. 751; 4 C. W. N. 243; 14 C. W. N. LXIII; 40 C. 511. It was discussed and distinguished in 8 C. W. N. 519; see also 27 C. 568; 9 W. R. 33; 10 W. R. 63; 13 W. R. 42; 6 C. 718; 14 C. 395; 16 C. 725.

The Bombay High Court decided in 17 B. 260 that it was not illegal to pass two sentences, one for riot and one for hurt depending upon the application of s. 149. But this case is practically rendered obsolete by the present explanation. See 23 B. 706 and 3 S. L. R. 224 = 11 Cr. L. J. 414.

The Allahabad High Court has held in 6 A. 121 that separate sentences for the offence of rioting as well as for the offence of causing grievous hurt by virtue of s. 149 was illegal. In 7 A. 757 (F.B.) and 10 A. 58, it was held that such sentences were legal. These decisions were passed before the present Code.

A Full Bench of the Punjab Chief Court held in 4 P. R. 1901 that separate sentences for the offences of rioting and grievous hurt cannot be legally imposed upon a member of an unlawful assembly where the offence or rioting was not complete until the grievous hurt was actually inflicted.

The Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court following the cases in Oudh S. C. 125; 7 A. 757; 17 B. 260, held that separate sentences may be passed under s. 147, I P C., and any other section which becomes applicable to the accused with reference to terms of s. 149, I P C. The case in 16 C. 442 was distinguished on the ground that in that case none of the members of the unlawful assembly was proved to have committed any act, which amounted to an offence under s. 324, I P C., 17 O. C. 184 = 15 Cr. L. J. 625. Separate sentences under s. 147 and ss. 325, 129, I P C., are illegal under s. 71, even when they are made to run concurrently, 51 C. 79.

(e) Rioting and criminal trespass—Ss. 147 and 447, I P C.—Where the accused was found with several others to have criminally trespassed on another's land and caused hurt in prosecution of the common object, held he could not be convicted and sentenced under s. 447, I P C., in addition to a conviction and sentence under s. 147, I P C., the common object of the riot, and the intention in criminal trespass being substantially the same, but he might have been separately charged and convicted of mischiefs, 8 C. W. N. 305.

(f) Rioting and using criminal force—Ss. 147 and 353, I P C.—Where the force which was used and formed one of the component elements of the offence of rioting was the criminal force used to the public servants in the execution of their duty, to pass separate sentences under s. 147 and under s. 353, I P C., is in fact to punish an offender twice for the same offence. Similarly, to punish an offender for actually committing an assault and again for committing the same offence constructively, is illegal, 3 C. W. N. 174.

(g) Possession of utensils and manufacture of liquor—S. 43 of the Bom. Abkari Act of 1878—Where accused was convicted of the offence of (1) manufacturing liquor and (2) being in possession of utensils for manufacture of liquor under cl. (f) and sentenced for both offences separately, held that under the explanation to this section the offences were not distinct ones and that the second offence was necessarily included in the first, 1 Bom. L. R. 344; 4 Bom. L. R. 720.

IV.—CONCURRENT SENTENCES.

Notes.—22 Power to pass concurrent sentences is new.—This power has been for the first time conferred by the Code of 1898 and it overrules 25 C. 557; 10 A. 58, 20 A. 1; 10 B. 254; Ratanlal 383 and 878.

23. Only sentences passed at one and same trial can be made to run concurrently.—The section does not authorize any Court to direct that two or more sentences shall run concurrently except sentences passed at one and the same trial. If trials are different, s. 397 infra is explicit and a sentence of imprisonment must commence at the expiry of the previous sentence. The Court has no option. 4 L. B. R. 147 = 7 Cr. L. J. 443; 6 Bar. L. T. 67 = 14 Cr. L. J. 338, 2 S. L. R. 23; 20 P. L. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 3 and 11 A. L. J. 263 = 14 Cr. L. J. 240; 16 O. C. 370 = 15 Cr. L. J. 300. But when a prisoner was tried on the same day separately for two offences for which he could have been tried at one trial, the trial being for all practical purposes one, an order passing concurrent sentences under this section is not illegal, 13 Bom. L. R. 200 = 12 Cr. L. J. 241, 19 A. L. J. 310.

24. Sentences of imprisonment in default of payment of fine cannot be made to run concurrently.—An order directing that terms of imprisonment awarded in default of payment of fines imposed for separate offences, to run concurrently is not justified by this section, 5 S. L. R. 263 = 13 Cr. L. J. 538; 27 Bom. C. R. 1351.

25. Sentence of imprisonment may run concurrently with sentence of transportation for life.—21 P. R. 1913 = 50 P. L. R. 2914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 68.

26. Concurrent sentences cannot be aggregated for purposes of appeal.—See Note 36.

Y.—CONSECUTIVE SENTENCES AND HOW THEY SHOULD BE EXECUTED.

Notes.—27. Direction as to mode of execution must appear in the body of sentence.—The direction that a sentence of imprisonment in one case is to run from the date of the expiration of the sentence in a previous case, should appear in the body of the sentence and should also be inserted in the warrant (Mad H C Pro, 23rd December, 1879).

28. Must be executed one after the other.—Where a convict is imprisoned under two warrants, which order consecutive imprisonment, the first warrant should be completely executed both in regard to the substantive sentence of imprisonment and imprisonment in default of payment of fine before any effect is given to the second warrant, Ratanlal 19.

29. Mode of execution when alternative sentences passed—Imprisonment in default of payment of fine.—Such sentences may be passed where the fine is the only sentence or where the fine is imposed in addition to a substantive sentence of imprisonment. The first case presents no difficulty. See s 388, infra. In the second case the substantive sentence of imprisonment begins to run at once, the imprisonment in default of payment of fine is contingent upon the fine not being paid or recovered and is postponed until the expiration of the substantive sentence of imprisonment by the sentence. If a person, who is undergoing the substantive sentence of imprisonment and is liable to further imprisonment for not paying a fine imposed, be sentenced again to substantive imprisonment the second sentence begins when first expires and imprisonment to be undergone in default of the payment of the fine is not excused but is postponed by operation of law. See s 398 (2).

30. Sentences passed at different trials.—S 397 is explicit and gives the Court no option, a sentence of imprisonment must commence at the expiry of the previous sentence. 4 L. B. R. 147 = 7 Cr. L. J. 445; 2 R. L. R. 23. It is competent to a Magistrate in British India to pass a sentence which should take effect after the expiration of a sentence in Mysore, 20 M. 444. An order directing that the sentences in two different cases do run concurrently is illegal. 24 C. L. J. 54. Where there are two or more separate convictions for two or more distinct offences in the same case this section contemplates that a separate sentence should be passed for each offence, 46 P. R. 1917 (Cr).

VI.—AGGREGATION OF SENTENCES.

Notes.—31. Sentences must be imposed separately.—The amount of the aggregate punishment awardable under the section is limited by proviso (a) but this does not import that any aggregate sentence within these limits may be imposed by a single sentence instead of by a separate sentence. 14 P. R. 1886.

32. Limit of maximum term of punishment applies only to sentences passed at one trial.—(a) Limit of 14 years—Sentences of imprisonment may be accumulated beyond the term of 14 years. The limit of 14 has reference only to sentences passed simultaneously at one trial or passed on charges tried simultaneously. 7 W. R. 1. (b) Limit of twice the amount of punishment proviso—Where a person accused of several offences of the same kind (see s. 234 (2) infra), is tried for each of such offences separately by a Magistrate the aggregate punishment which such Magistrate can inflict on him in respect of such offences is not limited to the amount which he is by his ordinary jurisdiction competent to inflict, but such Magistrate can inflict on each offence the punishment which he is by his ordinary jurisdiction competent to inflict. 1 B. R. 27. A person accused of theft on the 1st August and of house-breaking by night in order to steal on the 2nd, both offences involving a stealing from the same person was charged and tried by a Magistrate at the same time for such offences and sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for two years on each offence. Held that the pendency of charges was regular under s 234 and the punishment was prescribed by this section as each trial was separate from charge to sentence though judgments and punishments inflicted on one and the same day. 3 A. 305 (F.B). (c) The fact that the sentences are pronounced and terminate on same day is immaterial as regards the ordinary power of a Magistrate. Accused was tried by a District Magistrate in the exercise of his special powers under charges (1) of dacoity, s. 395 I P C., in respect of S, (2) of dacoity in respect of P, s. 369, I P C., in regard to one J. The first two charges were tried together at a single distinct trial. Judgment in each trial was passed and recorded on the same day. The case concluded thus: 'under s 35, Cr P C., I sentence the accused to 14 years imprisonment'—order of the Magistrate to the accused has been found guilty of kidnapping under s. 369, I P. C., but I can pass no further sentence of imprisonment upon him." The judgment in the trial for kidnapping after setting out the conviction under s. 369 concluded thus—"As I have already sentenced the accused to 14 years' imprisonment under s. 35, Cr. P. C., I can pass no further sentence." Held, that the District Magistrate erred in supposing that because he had passed a sentence of 14 years' imprisonment in the dacoity trial, he had exhausted his power of sentencing and could pass no sentence on the conviction for kidnapping. It is true that his punishing powers were exhausted when he sentenced the accused to 14 years' imprisonment for the two offences of dacoity, but this section has no operation or effect on his powers to sentence the accused for the distinct offence of kidnapping, of which he had been convicted at a separate trial. The circumstance that the separate trials were contemporaneous and terminated on the same day, was wholly immaterial as regards the Magistrate's powers of sentencing, 14 P. R. 1885.

33 Sentence of imprisonment cannot be aggregated for purpose of substituting transportation.—It is only for purposes of appeal that consecutive sentences are allowed to be treated as one sentence. Transportation can only be substituted for imprisonment under s. 59, I P. C., when the offender is sentenced to at least seven years' imprisonment in one case, 3 W. R. 44. It cannot be made up by adding two or more sentences together and then commuting aggregate period to transportation under s. 59, I P. C., 2 W. R. 1; nor can a general sentence of transportation be given for two or more offences when only one of the punishments awarded is seven years' imprisonment, 5 W. R. 44.

34. Meaning of "for the purpose of appeal"—These words in cl. (3) mean only "for the purpose of being appealed from" 45 P. R. 1887.

35. Only substantive sentences can be aggregated.—A sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine must not be included for purposes of calculation 22 P. R. 1892; nor one in default of finding security for keeping the peace. See s. 415

36. Concurrent sentences cannot be aggregated for purposes of appeal.—By the amendment of clause 3 in the present section by the introduction of the words "of consecutive" the conflict of decisions on the point whether the aggregate of two or more concurrent sentences is to be deemed or one sentence for purposes of appeal is set at rest. Therefore when an accused has been sentenced to concurrent terms of imprisonment not one of which is individually appealable, he has no right of appeal against them collectively, 40 C. 631; see also 25 P. R. 1901; U. B. R. (1897 to 1901) 13; 35 A. 184; 11 Bom. L. R. 544 — 10 Cr. L. J. 250; 12 B. H. C. R. 147; 25 C. W. N. 613.

VII.—EFFECT OF AMENDMENT OF SENTENCE BY SUPERIOR COURT.

Notes.—37. When terms of imprisonment concurrent.—When sentences are concurrent the annulment of one of them does not affect the others in any way. They all start from the same date.

38 When terms of imprisonment consecutive.—When sentences are to take effect consecutively and one of them is annulled, the sentence which is next to come into force immediately takes effect; as the sentence cannot have retrospective effect and as the sentence which precedes it holds good until annulled it follows that when a prior sentence is annulled, the next in order of sequence immediately takes effect. See, however, next note

39. When the sentence set aside on appeal, has been partly executed.—Where there are two sentences of imprisonment to be carried out on the same prisoner, one of which is to be carried out on the expiration of first sentence should, under such circumstances, be deducted from the second sentence, and it is open to the Appellate Court on reversing the first finding and sentence, to direct that the sentence which remains undisturbed shall be computed from the date of conviction. Such a direction should ordinarily be given and communicated by the Appellate Court to the Court which passed the sentence with a view to a fresh warrant being issued to the jail authorities in supersession of the original warrant (Puny Cir. No. 4 of 1891). But in Bombay, where a Sessions Judge directed that the term of imprisonment to which he sentenced an accused person should commence on the expiration of a period of sentence passed by a Magistrate which was subsequently reversed on appeal it was held that the sentence by the Sessions Judge must be deemed to have no jurisdiction therein as a Magistrate of the first class and therefore the conviction of such accused persons had been properly quashed on the ground that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction 3 A 283 (F B) E a Magistrate exercising jurisdiction in M district was transferred from that district on the arrival of K Held BANERJI J that the effect of such order so expressed was that B ceased to have jurisdiction as a Magistrate within the district of M from the time when K commenced work as a Magistrate in that district. Held by AIKMAN, J that the effect of said order was that B ceased to have jurisdiction on the arrival of K but whether such arrival was his arrival within the limits of the district or at headquarters was not clear from the order 19 A 114. See also 15 P R 1884, 3 A L J 825 — 4 Cr L J 140, and 4 Cr L J 239 (A) and Note 3 to s 12. But where an application for sanction is properly before a Magistrate of the first class in charge of a sub-division of a district, his jurisdiction to pass orders on such application is not taken away by the fact of his being transferred to another sub-division of the same district 42 A 649

4. Magistrate going on leave does not lose powers.—This section can keep alive the magisterial powers once conferred on an officer in a different district even when he is interrupted by repeated absence on furlough and privilege leave. But the case is different if he absents without leave or overstays leave and thereby vacates his appointment according to rules of service 2 Bom L R 536

5 Under the same Local Government.—These words were first added to the 188- Code in order to meet 2 C 117, so that it might be clear that powers conferred by one Local Government do not accompany an officer when he is transferred to a province under another Local Government. See also 15 P R 1884, p 20

41. (1) The Local Government may withdraw* all or any of the

(2) Any powers conferred by the District Magistrate may be withdrawn by the District Magistrate

PART III. GENERAL PROVISIONS

CHAPTER IV

OF AID AND INFORMATION TO THE MAGISTRATES THE POLICE AND PERSONS MAKING ARRESTS

42. Every person is bound to assist a Magistrate or Police-officer
Public when to assist Magistrates and reasonably demanding his aid whether within or without the Presidency
Police. towns —

(a) in the taking or preventing the escape of any other person whom such Magistrate or Police-officer is authorized to arrest,

(b) in the prevention or suppression of a breach of the peace, or in the prevention of any injury attempted to be committed to any railway, canal telegraph or public property

Notes.—1 See also ss 77 and 128 as to the assistance which a private person is bound to render to a public servant. See ss 54—57 and 151 as to circumstances under which a Police-officer may lawfully arrest.

2 Punishment for omission to assist.—Intentional omission to assist a public servant is punishable under s. 187 I P C Under the N Y Cr Pro. a person refusing to aid public officer is guilty of s. 104

Notes.—1. Effect of conferring higher power during trial.—Clause (2) was introduced for the first time into the 1882 Code to meet § C. 476. A Magistrate of the second class began the trial of a case in that capacity, but before passing sentence he was invested with first-class powers. Held, that he could pass sentence in the latter capacity, 7 A. 414 (F.B.) PETHERAM, C.J. and BROADHURST, J., dissenting.)

2. Tahsildar Magistrates in Madras.—In taluks where there are no Stationary Sub-Magistrates, all second-class powers are conferred on Tahsildars, but in Taluks where there are Stationary Sub-Magistrates all second-class powers except those under ss 190 and 206, infra, are conferred on them—Fort St George Gazette, 1893, Part I, p 579

3. 'Generally' and 'Specially' distinguished.—S 39 declares that the Local Government may empower classes of officials generally by the official titles, or persons specially by name or in virtue of their office. When, therefore, a class of officials is invested with powers to try certain offences, it would appear that they are 'generally' empowered. The word 'generally' is in contrast to the word 'specially' which is used in speaking of individuals. The word 'specially' does not refer to the extra or special powers conferred by the Government whether to an individual or to a class.

Under s 3 of the Opium Act 1 of 1878 a Magistrate is defined as a Presidency Magistrate or (when specially empowered by the Madras Government to try cases under this Act) a second-class Magistrate. By a notification of the Local Government, all Magistrates of the second class were empowered to try cases under the Opium Act. It was held that the notification was ultra vires of the powers given by the Act, as its effect is to enlarge the definition of Magistrate as given therein and that the word 'specially' in s 3 of that Act must be construed to refer to individuals, 17 M. L. T. 191 = (1915) M. W. N. 269 = 16 Cr. L. J. 268.

40. Whenever any person holding an office in the service of Government who has been invested with any powers under this Code throughout any local area is * appointed to an equal or higher office of the same nature, within a like local area under the same Local Government, he shall, unless the Local Government otherwise directs, or has otherwise directed,† exercise the same powers in the local area in which he is so appointed †

Notes.—1. Officer retains powers on transfer or reversion.—This section relates only to transfers from one district or area to another, and a Mamlatdar invested by name with any higher magisterial powers in a district retains them, though on reversion to his appointment as Awalkarkun he ceases to be a Mamlatdar, his revenue title being matter of description only, Ratanlal 322. When an officer was last invested with the powers of a Magistrate of a certain class, those powers must be taken to continue so long as he is a Magistrate, though he reverts to a less responsible post, unless they are withdrawn by a fresh notification, Weir II, 36. A Sub-Registrar, invested with magisterial powers under Act XXIV of 1859 (Town Nuisances Act), is competent to exercise such power on his transfer to another place, unless the Local Government direct him not to exercise them, 15 M. 182

2. Transfer to an equal or higher office of the same nature.—Where a Head Assistant Magistrate during the pendency of a criminal case of which the trial was almost finished, was appointed to the office of Deputy Magistrate in another part of the same district and the case was transferred by an order of the District Magistrate to the file of the Deputy Magistrate, it was held the Deputy Magistrate could proceed with the trial from the point at which he had arrived as Head Assistant Magistrate, 22 M. 47. But if a Magistrate temporarily holding the office of a District Magistrate is transferred to another district, but not as District Magistrate he will not carry with him the powers of a District Magistrate since he has not been transferred to an equal or higher office of the same nature, 3 A. 563 (F.B.)

3. On transfer to different district, Magistrate loses local jurisdiction and cannot continue trial.—A Magistrate of the first class was appointed to officiate as District Magistrate in a certain district. While so acting he was appointed to officiate as District Magistrate in another district 'on being relieved.' When 'relieved' he completed the criminal case which he had heard while officiating as District Magistrate and passed judgment and sentence upon the prisoners. Held, that the jurisdiction of the Magistrate ceased as soon as he was 'relieved,' and from that moment he no longer stood appointed to the first district and could exercise

* Substituted for transferred by Act XXVIII of 1923

† Omitted by Act XXVIII of 1923

The word forthwith was introduced by the 1892 Code. See s. 151 I P C for special obligation of a similar nature imposed on owners and occupiers of land.

2 Nature of the offences mentioned—The following are the several offences mentioned above in respect to which information has to be given—

S 121—Waging or attempting to wage war against the Queen or abetting the same 121 A—Conspiring to commit certain offences against the State. 122—Collecting arms etc. with the intention of waging war against the Queen. 123—Concealing with intent to facilitate a design to wage war. 124—Assaulting Governor-General, etc., with intent to compel or restrain the exercise of any lawful power. 124 A—Sedition. 125—Waging war against any Asiatic Power in alliance or at peace with the Queen or abetting the waging of such war. 126—Committing depredation on the territories of any power in alliance or at peace with the Queen. 130—Aiding escape of, or harbouring State or war prisoners or offering any resistance to the recapture of such prisoner. 143—Being member of an unlawful assembly. 144—Joining an unlawful assembly armed with any deadly weapon. 145—Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing that it had been commanded to disperse. 147—Rioting. 148—Rioting armed with a deadly weapon. 302—Murder. 303—Murder by a life convict. 304—Culpable homicide not amounting to murder. 382—Theft after preparation made for causing death or hurt in order to the committing of theft. 392—Robbery. 393—Attempt to commit robbery. 394—Voluntarily causing hurt in committing robbery. 395—Dacoity. 396—Murder in dacoity. 397—Robbery or dacoity with attempt to cause death or grievous hurt. 398—Attempt to commit robbery or dacoity when armed with deadly weapons. 399—Making preparation to commit dacoity. 402—Assembling for the purpose of committing dacoity. 435—Mischief by fire or explosive substance with intent to cause damage to the amount of Rs 100 or upwards. 436—Mischief by fire or explosive substance with intent to destroy a house. 449—House-trespass in order to the commission of an offence punishable with death. 450—House-trespass for the commission of an offence punishable with transportation for life. 456—Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night. 457—Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night in order to the commission of an offence punishable with imprisonment. 458—Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night after preparation made for causing hurt etc. 459—Grievous hurt caused while committing lurking house-trespass or house-breaking. 460—Death or grievous hurt caused by one of several persons jointly concerned in house-breaking by night etc.

3. Punishment.—As to punishments for breach of obligation imposed by this section see ss 118 176 and 202 of the I P C and for furnishing false information s 177 I P C. For the necessity of obtaining sanction see s. 195 (a) infra.

4. Omission to give information must be intentional—When there are several Lambardars and one of them to the knowledge of others directs the village Chowkidar to make a report of burglary at the thana it cannot be said that any of them had intentionally failed to give information prescribed by law or that there was no reasonable excuse for not giving it if the Chowkidar had disobeyed the order S P R 1889.

5. No further duty after giving information—When once information of the fact of a crime has reached the Police the object of this section has been fulfilled and no further duty imposed by it remains Ratanlal 674.

45. (1) Every village headman village accountant village-watchman village Police-officer owner or occupier of land and the agent of any such owner or occupier* in charge of the management of that land and every officer employed in the collection of revenue or rent of land on the part of Government or the Court of Wards shall forthwith communicate to the nearest Magistrate or to the officer in charge of the nearest Police station whichever is the nearer any information which he may possess† respecting—

(a) the permanent or temporary residence of any notorious receiver or vendor of stolen property in any village of which he is headman, accountant watchman or Police-officer, or in which he owns or occupies land or is agent or collects revenue or rent

* Added by Act XVIII of 1923

† Subst. substituted by Act XVIII of 1923

3. "Assist."—The assistance that can be demanded under this section is personal assistance of the individual of whom it is demanded and not the supply of a contingent of men to assist, Weir II, 37. In construing the word "assistance" in s 187, I P C, it was held that the word must have some direct personal relation to the execution of the duty by the public officer. The word implies that the party who assists is doing something which in the ordinary circumstances, the party assisted can do for himself, 26 M. 419 (F.B.) The word reasonably was first introduced by the 1882 Code.

4. Not bound to assist if not legally bound.—Where a Magistrate directed a landholder to find a clue in a case of theft within 15 days and to assist the Police, it was held that the order was unauthorized and unreasonable and the conviction under ss 187 and 188, I P C., for neglecting such direction, could not be upheld as the landholder is not required to perform the duties for which the Police are appointed and paid, 3 A. 201. Refusal to assist a Police constable to bury a person is not an offence 6 G. P. L. R. 45; 42 A. 314 = 18 A. L. J. 169.

5. Illegal to escape from custody of private person lawfully arresting.—A Police-officer who is charged with the duty of arresting a person is authorized to employ a Chowkidar in assisting him in arresting the person or in preventing his escape and if the person escapes from the Chowkidar's custody, he would be guilty of an offence under s 225, I P C 6 G. W. N. 337.

6. Protection to persons acting in aid of officers of justice.—The protection which the law affords to Ministers of Justice extends also to every person coming to their aid and lending his assistance or attending for that purpose. See Russell on Crimes, p 726. The Sissinghurst Case, 1 Hale 461 and R v Porter, 12 Cox 444. See also s 99 I P C.

7. Duty of private person under English Law.—In case of a riot, if a constable sees a breach of the peace committed, he may call for any one present for his assistance if there is a reasonable necessity therefor. If the person called upon without any physical impossibility or lawful excuse refuse to do so, he is liable to be indicted, and it is no defence to plead that in consequence of the number of rioters the single aid of the person called upon would have been of no use.—R v Brown Case No 314, Russell, pp 431 and 727. It is not necessary that the arrest, to effect which a Police-officer demands assistance under this section should in itself be lawful, Reg v Sherlock, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 20.

Aid to person, other than Police-officer executing warrant.

43. When a warrant is directed to a person other than a Police-officer any other person may aid in the execution of such warrant, if the person to whom the warrant is directed be near at hand and acting in the execution of the warrant.

Notes.—1. To a person other than a Police-officer.—See ss 77 and 78. Having regard to explanation 2 to s 99, I P C., persons acting under this section must, if required, state the authority under which they act or produce the same if in writing.

2. May aid.—The assistance to be rendered under this section is not obligatory as under s. 42, supra, but is merely optional and the section indemnifies any person who so aids.

44. (1) Every person, whether within or without the Presidency towns aware of the commission of, or of the intention of any other person to commit, any offence punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code, viz, 121, 121 A, 122, 123, 124, 124 A, 125, 126, 130, 143, 144, 145, 147, 148, 302, 303, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 456, 457, 458, 459 and 460, shall, in the absence of reasonable excuse, the burden of proving which shall lie upon the person so aware, forthwith give information to the nearest Magistrate or Police officer of such commission or intention.

Public to give information of certain offences

(2) For the purposes of this section the term "offence" includes any act committed at any place out of British India which would constitute an offence if committed in British India.

Notes.—1. Scope of this section.—The scope of the corresponding section of the 1872 Code was narrow inasmuch as it was confined to persons aware of the commission of any of the offences specified, while the present section goes further and imposes the obligation as well on persons aware of the intention to commit any of such offences.

following offences namely—(i) murder (ii) culpable homicide not amounting to murder (iii) dacoity (iv) robbery (v) offence against the Indian Arms Act VI of 1878 and (vi) any other offence respecting which the Deputy Commissioner by general or special order made with the previous sanction of the Commissioner directs him to communicate information in (d) the occurrence in his village of any sudden or unnatural death or of any death under suspicious circumstances. Explanation—In this section village has the meaning assigned to the word in the Upper Burma Village Regulation 1887.

Lower Burma.—As to the section in force in those parts of Lower Burma to which the Lower Burma Village Act III of 1889 is extended see ss. 5 and 6 of that Act and Burma Cesses and Rural Police Act II of 1880 s. 14.

Madras.—See Madras Reg. of 1816 ss. 8 and 9 Madras Reg. I of 1830 s. 3.

Central Provinces.—See s. 141 of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act XVI of 1881 and 7 N L R. 101 = 12 Cr. L. J. 441.

I—PERSONS ON WHOM THE DUTY UNDER THIS SECTION IS IMPOSED.

Notes.—2 Village headman in Madras means Village Munsiff or Village Magistrate 32 M 258 (F B).

3. Zaildar not a Village-headman.—A Zaildar not being a village-headman is not one of the persons to whom the provisions of cl. (c) of this section are applicable 25 P. R. 1894 and 30 P. R. 1894, p. 34. See Rules 24 and 28 under ss. 5 and 39-A of the Punjab Laws Act 1872. But rule 170 of the Rules made by the Financial Commissioner under s. 28 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act 1887 imposes on a Zaildar the duty of reporting heinous crimes to the Police and Magistrate. It is proposed to confer power on Sub-divisional Magistrates to appoint for the purpose of this section village headmen in villages where there are no headmen under any other law.

4. Village-Accountant.—It was held in 1 M 266 that a Village Accountant and a Village Munsiff a peon did not come under the class of persons bound under the corresponding section of the 1872 Code but the Village-Accountant is now expressly included in the section. See also Forest Act VII of 1876 s. 78 which requires him to give information of Forest offences.

5. Village watchman.—See for other enactments imposing duties upon him Forest Act VII of 1876 s. 78 the Criminal Tribes Act XXVII of 1871, ss. 21 and 22 N. P. Provinces Act XVI of 1873 s. 8 and in Oudh Act XVIII of 1876 s. 34.

6. Village Police officer.—For his other obligations of a similar nature see in Madras Act XII of 1882 s. 25 in Bengal Act V of 1861 ss. 31 and 47 and Act (B.C.) VI of 1870 in Bombay Bombay Acts VII and VIII of 1867 and Bombay Reg. XII of 1827 in N. P. Provinces Act XVI of 1873 and in Oudh Act XIII of 1876.

7. A Mekkaddam.—In the Central Provinces though no person has been appointed as the village headman under cl. (3) of this section the Mekkaddam appointed under Central Provinces I and Revenue Act XVIII of 1881 is defined in s. 4 (13) as the executive headman of the village under s. 141 of that Act and rules framed thereunder has to perform duties identical with those laid down by this section 7 N L R. 101 = 12 Cr. L. J. 441.

8. Owner or occupier of land.—No doubt the words at or near such village are not added after land but they must evidently be intended because the duty imposed of giving information etc. is intended to apply only when such occurrence takes place at or near the village of which the person bound to give information is the headman etc. Residence in a dwelling house belonging to another is not occupation of land within the meaning of this section 23 W. R. 60. It is absurd to hold that a person by the mere circumstance of being the owner or occupier of land anywhere would be bound to give information in respect of an occurrence in a remote part of the country from where the land is owned and held. The liability is on the owner when he occupies the land, and on the occupier where somebody other than the owner occupies it physically.

9. Obligation on owner of house.—The provisions of this section do not apply to the owner of a house 12 M 92. Owners or occupiers of houses in a village are not owners or occupiers of land within the meaning of this section and omission by them to report the sudden death of children in their houses by snake-bites or stings of scorpions is not punishable Weir I, 101, 11, 38. So also a father was held not bound to report the death by drowning of his child in an irrigation tank not being an owner or occupier of land M. H. C. Cr. Rev. Case No. 67 of 1905.

(b) the resort to any place within, or the passage through, such village of any person whom he knows, or reasonably suspects, to be a thug, robber, escaped convict or proclaimed offender

(c) the commission of, or intention to commit, in or near such village any non bailable offence or any offence punishable under ss 143, 144, 145, 147 or 148 of the Indian Penal Code

(d) the occurrence in or near such village of any sudden or unnatural death or of any death under suspicious circumstances, * or the discovery in or near such village of any corpse or part of a corpse, in circumstances which lead to a reasonable suspicion that such a death has occurred or the disappearance from such village of any person in circumstances which lead to a reasonable suspicion that a non bailable offence has been committed in respect of such person "

(e) the commission of or intention to commit, at any place out of British India near such village any act which, if committed in British India, would be an offence punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code namely, † 231, 232 A, 233 234, 235, 236, 237 238, 302, 304 382 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450 457, 458 459 460 [489 A, 489 B, 489 C and 489 D]

(f) any matter likely to affect the maintenance of order or the prevention of crime or the safety of person or property respecting which the District Magistrate, by general or special order made with the previous sanction of the Local Government, has directed him to communicate information

(2) In this section—

(i) "village" includes village-lands, and

(ii) the expression 'proclaimed offender' includes any person proclaimed as an offender by any Court or authority established or continued by the Governor General in Council in any part of India in respect of any act which, if committed in British India, would be punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code, namely, 302 304, 382, 392, 393, 394 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402 435, 436, 449, 450, 457, 458, 459 and 460

(3) Subject to rules in this behalf to be made by the Local Government the District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate † may from time to time, appoint one or more persons to be village headmen for the purposes of this section in any village for which there is no such headman appointed under any other law, with his or their consent to perform The duties of a village headman under this section whether a village headman has or has not been appointed for that village under any other law †

Appointment of village-headmen by District Magistrate in certain cases for purpose of this section

Note —1. Analogous provisions—See Criminal Tribes Act XXVII of 1871, ss 1 and 2 Forest Act VII of 1878 s 78 Upper Burma In Upper Burma the following has been substituted for s 45 by Upper Burma Village Regulation XIV of 1887, s 4 —

45 A A headman appointed under the Upper Burma Village Regulation XIV of 1887 shall forthwith communicate to the nearest Magistrate or to the officer in charge of the nearest Police station or military post whichever is the nearer, any information which he may obtain respecting—(a) the permanent or temporary residence of any notorious receiver or vendor of stolen property in his village, (b) the resort to any place within or the passage through his village of any person whom he knows, or reasonably suspects, to be a dacoit, robber, escaped convict or proclaimed offender (c) the commission of or attempt or intention to commit, within his village any of the following offences, namely—(i) murder, (ii) culpable homicide not amounting to murder, (iii) dacoity, (iv) robbery, (v) offence against the Indian Arms Act XI of 1878 and (vi) any other offence respecting which the Deputy Commissioner, by general or special order, made with the previous sanction of the Commissioner directs him to communicate information, in (d) the occurrence in his village of any sudden or unnatural death or of any death under suspicious circumstances. Explanation—In this section village has the meaning assigned to the word in the Upper Burma Village Regulation, 1897

Lower Burma.—As to the section in force in those parts of Lower Burma to which the Lower Burma Village Act III of 1889, is extended, see ss. 5 and 6 of that Act and Burma Cesses and Rural Police Act II of 1880, s. 14

Madras.—See Madras Reg. of 1816 ss. 8 and 9, Madras Reg. I of 1830, s. J

Central Provinces.—See s. 141 of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act XVIII of 1861 and 7 N. L. R. 101 = 12 Cr. L. J. 441.

I.—PERSONS ON WHOM THE DUTY UNDER THIS SECTION IS IMPOSED.

Notes.—2. Village-headman in Madras means Village Munsiff or Village Magistrate, 32 M. 256 (F.B.)

3. Zaildar not a Village-headman.—A Zaildar not being a village-headman is not one of the persons to whom the provisions of cl. (c) of this section are applicable, 25 P. R. 1894 and 30 P. R. 1894, p. 34. See Rules 24 and 28 under ss. 5 and 39-A of the Punjab Laws Act, 1872. But rule 170 of the Rules made by the Financial Commissioner under s. 28 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887, imposes on a Zaildar, the duty of reporting heinous crimes to the Police and Magistrate. It is proposed to confer power on Sub-divisional Magistrates to appoint for the purpose of this section village-headmen in villages where there are no headmen under any other law.

4. Village-Accountant.—It was held in 1 M. 256 that a Village Accountant and a Village Munsiff's peon did not come under the class of persons bound under the corresponding section of the 1872 Code, but the Village-Accountant is now expressly included in the section. See also Forest Act XII of 1878, s. 78, which requires him to give information of Forest offences

5. Village-watchman.—See for other enactments imposing duties upon him, Forest Act VII of 1878, s. 78, the Criminal Tribes Act XXVII of 1871, ss. 21 and 22, N W Provinces Act XVI of 1873, s. 8, and in Oudh, Act XVIII of 1876, s. 34

6. Village Police-officer.—For his other obligations of a similar nature see in Madras, Act VII of 1882, s. 25, in Bengal, Act V of 1861, ss. 31 and 47 and Act (BC) VI of 1870, in Bombay, Bombay Acts VII and VIII of 1867 and Bombay, Reg. XII of 1827, in N W Provinces, Act XVI of 1872 and in Oudh, Act XVIII of 1876.

7. A Mukkaddam.—In the Central Provinces though no person has been appointed as the village headman under cl. (3) of this section, the Mukkaddam appointed under Central Provinces Land Revenue Act XVIII of 1881 is defined in s. 4 (13) as the executive headman of the village under s. 141 of that Act and rules framed thereunder has to perform duties identical with those laid down by this section, 7 N. L. R. 101 = 12 Cr. L. J. 441.

8. Owner or occupier of land.—No doubt the words 'at or near such village' are not added after land but they must evidently be intended because the duty imposed of giving information, etc. is intended to apply only when such occurrence takes place at or near the village of which the person bound to give information is the headman, etc. Residence in a dwelling house belonging to another is not occupation of land within the meaning of this section, 23 W. R. 60. It is absurd to hold that a person by the mere circumstance of being the owner or occupier of land anywhere, would be bound to give information in respect of an occurrence in a remote part of the country from where the land is owned and held. The liability is on the owner when he occupies the land, and on the occupier, where somebody other than the owner occupies it physically

9. Obligation on owner of house.—The provisions of this section do not apply to the owner of a house, 12 M. 92. Owners or occupiers of houses in a village are not owners or occupiers of land within the meaning of this section and omission by them to report the sudden death of children in their houses by snake-bites or stings of scorpions, is not punishable, Weir I, 101; II, 38. So also, a father was held not bound to report the death by drowning of his child in an irrigation tank, not being an owner or occupier of land, M H C Cr. Rev. Case No 67 of 1905.

10 Agent of any such owner.—The word Agent must be restricted to an agent quoad any house or land, 23 W. R. 70. A khasarchi is not an "agent" within the meaning of this section, 4 C. 603, but a Dewan may be, when his master is absent. The provisions of this section do not apply to a Dewan who is acting only under the orders of his resident master. According to the recent amendment, the agent must be in charge of the management of the land.

11. Obligation when on Agent and when on Principal.—The language of the 1872 Code 'every owner or occupier of land or the agent of any such owner or occupier'—has been advisedly altered into 'every owner or occupier of land and the agent of any such owner or occupier' in order to meet, 4 C. 603. The liability of a resident agent arises only when the owner is absent and has no personal knowledge of the fact. Where the owner has such knowledge, the liability no doubt attaches to him, 23 W. R. 60. So also when it is brought to the notice of the principal that his gumastha is neglecting his duties, he must take steps to get them performed either by the gumastha or by himself, 7 N. L. R. 101 = 12 Cr. L. J. 441. As to the liability of landholders, etc., for the acts and omissions of their agents, see 28 C. 504 where it was held (ANFIER ALI, J., dissenting) that a land lord is liable under s 184, I P. C., for acts of commission, as well as omission of his agent or manager, even when such acts are criminal. See also 12 A. 550.

II.—NATURE OF THE OBLIGATION UNDER THIS SECTION.

Notes.—12. 'Forthwith.'—This word in the first clause of this section must be construed with reference to the object of the enactment. Ratanlal 784

13. No duty to report mere rumour.—Where the Zemindar of a village and his agent had merely heard of the disappearance of a man from the village and a rumour that he had been killed, held that the non communication of such information to the Police does not amount to failure to communicate information respecting the occurrence of murder as the rumour which the accused heard was not information within the meaning of this section 1900 A. W. N. 207. And where the only information the Village Munsiff had was that a certain jewel was missing, it was held that he had no information of the commission of any offence of theft which he was bound to communicate 5 M. L. T. 257 = 9 Cr. L. J. 224.

14. No duty to report the commission of bailable offences.—When the offence is bailable, the persons mentioned in the section incur no responsibility if they do not report its commission, even if they had been aware of it 31 P. R. 1887.

15. 'The resort to or the passage through.'—The bringing of a suspected robber under arrest to the village of the accused and releasing him there does not amount to the resorting to or the passage through the village of a suspected robber within the meaning of cl. (d) of the section, 31 P. R. 1887.

16. Presumption as to proclaimed offender.—This expression as used under sub-sec. (2) cl (2) includes persons over and above those to whom the words in their ordinary signification apply and might but for this explanation have escaped out of the category of 'proclaimed offenders,' 1901 A. W. N. 10. The mere fact of attachment of absconder's property under s 88 of this Code is not sufficient to raise the presumption that that person is a proclaimed offender. The onus to prove the fact of proclamation lies on the prosecution, 7 M. 438. See s 87 as to the manner of proclaiming an offender.

17. Obligation on owner of land on which dead body is found.—The finding of a dead body on any MACPHERSON, JJ [MITTER, J, dissenting, held that the (dead) body standing by itself does not necessarily lead to the inference that death took place in the village. It is equally consistent with death having taken place in another village and the dead body having been subsequently removed to the village where it is at last found] 11 C. 619. See 3 A. 279 and 8 W. R. 68 and Ratanlal 784. By reason of the recent amendment in sub clause (d) the obligation to report discovery of any corpse, etc., is now imposed on the owners and occupiers of land, etc. In M. H. C. Cril., Ap. 648 of 1905, the Madras High Court held that the owner of land on which a corpse is seen need not be the owner or occupier of land on which the occurrence took place.

18 Where information has been conveyed, it is not reasonable to prosecute others for not giving information. The provisions of this section should not be put in force against any person where the Police have actually obtained such information from other sources, 4 C. 623, nor should they be used for the purpose of vexation, but for the purpose of ensuring that information be not intentionally withheld by those whose position renders them liable to give it, 7 M. 436. When several parties are bound to give information, and one of them gives it, it is not reasonable to prosecute the other or others for not giving information 20 C. 316. See also 17 M. L. T. 283 = 16 Cr. L. J. 219.

19. Police-patels in Bombay.—Act VIII of 1967, s. 10—13 imposes upon these ‘village officers’ duties heavier than those prescribed under this section 19 B. 612.

III.—CONSEQUENCES OF THE FAILURE TO DISCHARGE THE OBLIGATION.

Notes.—20. Punishment for omission to give information, etc.—Intentional omission to give notice or information to a public servant by a person legally bound to give such notice or information is punishable with simple imprisonment for one month, or fine of Rs. 500, or both. If the notice, etc., respects the commission of an offence, etc., the punishment extends to six months’ simple imprisonment, or fine of Rs. 1,000 or both (s. 176, I P C.). See also 20 P. R. 1885 and s. 217, I P C. Sanction is necessary, see s. 195 (a), infra.

21. Elements to be proved to secure conviction—To support a conviction for failure to discharge the duty under this section, it must first be proved that the accused bears the character which raises the obligation under this section, 1 M. 266; further, it must appear in most cases that a specified offence was in fact committed by some one, that the accused knew of its having been committed and that he wilfully omitted to give the information 22 W. R. 42. Where from the fact of the Police-patel ordering the kulkarni to write a report regarding a suspicious death his good faith was apparent and it did not seem that he had an intention to omit the report, it was held illegal to convict him Ratanlal 793. It is for the Crown to prove that the accused was in the village on a particular day, and not for him to prove in alibi in order to absolve himself 20 C. 316. There appears to be no law under which a person, not being a public servant, can be punished for burning the body of a person who has died under suspicious circumstances and so preventing an investigation being made under s. 174, infra, which alone would disclose in most cases whether an offence has been committed or not so that a conviction might be had under s. 201, I P C. Although under certain specified circumstances covered by this section, the concealment of a suspicious death might be punishable under s. 176 I P C., yet, where the accused who were mere servants helped their master in the removal or concealment of the body of a man not proved to be murdered. Held that they did not come within the category of persons who were bound to communicate an occurrence of this sort nor could they be convicted for an offence under s. 201, I P C., 17 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 623.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Notes.—22. In Bengal the following rules are in force in the Districts of the Palna, Dacca and Orissa Divisions (excluding Khurda Sub division in the District of Puri) from the 1st January, 1895—Calcutta Gazette, 26th December, 1894—

(1) In all villages in which Bengal Act VI of 1870 has been introduced the Magistrate of the district may appoint the principal members of the Chowkidari panchayat, or the collecting member, where there is one to be village-headman.

(2) In villages where Bengal Act VI of 1870 has not been introduced the Magistrate of the District may appoint the principal resident land-owner or rent receiver or his representative or the principal resident cultivator to be village-headman.

(3) In the case of a principal or collecting member of a Chowkidari panchayat, a clause shall be added to the appointment order under s. 3 of the Chowkidari Act to the effect that he has also been appointed to be village-headman under s. 45 of the Criminal Procedure Code. When a person other than a member of a Chowkidari panchayat is appointed, he shall receive a special sanad from the Magistrate.

(4) The Magistrate shall keep a register of all persons who have been appointed village-headmen, showing their names and fathers' names and the village for which they are responsible, and shall take measures to effect mutations in this register from time to time when one headman dies and is succeeded by another.

23. No revision of order of District Magistrate dismissing village-headman.—Order of District Magistrate under the rules framed by Government under sub-sec. (3) dismissing a headman, is an executive matter and not subject to revision by High Court 29 A. 563.

24 False complaint to Village Magistrate is an offence.—In 31 M. 253 dissenting from 31 M. 508, it was held (SANKARAN NAIR, J., dissenting) that a false complaint to a Village Magistrate or other person mentioned in this section is an offence, when the information is one which under this section the Village Magistrate or such person is bound to report to the higher constituted authorities, will amount to an offence under s. 211, I P C. It would be otherwise if the offence complained of is one in regard to which the information need not be passed to the higher authorities. See also 27 M. L. J. 37 = 1914 M. W. N. 804 = 15 Cr. L. J. 431; 16 Cr. L. J. 243 (M).

CHAPTER V.

OF ARREST, ESCAPE AND RETAKING.

Note—Powers of Police in Calcutta, Bombay and Madras.—In the absence of any specific provision to the contrary nothing in this Code applies to the Police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay, s. 1 supra. Having regard to the fact that ss. 34–56 in this chapter and col. 3 of Sch. II are made especially applicable to the Police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay, it may well be doubted whether the other sections of the chapter, which are for the most part directory apply to the Police there. The powers of the Police as regards Arrest and Procedure are regulated in the town of Calcutta by this chapter, the 3rd col. of Sch. II and the Calcutta Police Act IV of 1866 (B.C.) as amended in Madras by Act III of 1888 and by the provisions of this Code and in Bombay by Act XIII of 1838 Bombay Act I of 1872 III of 1879, IV of 1882, XVI of 1895 and IV of 1902 and the provisions of this Code specially extended to it. Practically, therefore the powers of the Police in the Presidency towns are throughout the same. See 31 C. 557.

A.—Arrest generally.

46. (1) In making an arrest, the Police-officer or other person making the same shall actually touch or confine the body of the person to be arrested, unless there be a submission to the custody by word or action

(2) If such person forcibly resists the endeavour to arrest him, or attempts to evade the arrest such Police-officer or other person may use all means necessary to effect the arrest

Resisting endeavour to arrest.

(3) Nothing in this section gives a right to cause the death of a person who is not accused of an offence punishable with death, or with transportation for life

Notes.—1 Amendment of section in Punjab.—In the places where the Punjab Frontier Crimes Regulation III of 1901 is in force s. 46 is to be read as if the following were added to it namely—“But this section gives a right to cause the death of a person against whom those portions of the Punjab Frontier Crimes Regulation 1897, which are not of general application, may be enforced—(a) if he is committing or attempting to commit an offence, or resisting or evading arrest, in such circumstances as to afford reasonable ground for believing that he intends to use arms to effect his purpose or (b) if a hue-and-cry has been raised against him for his having been concerned in any such offence as is specified in the last foregoing paragraph of this section or of his committing or attempting to commit an offence or resisting or evading, arrests in such circumstances as are referred to in clause (a) of this paragraph.” See s. 78 (n), Reg. III of 1901

Under the corresponding section (s. 37) of the Punjab Frontier Crimes Regulation IV of 1887, it was held that the limits of s. 46 of this Code, as to the classes of persons to whom death may be caused in effecting an arrest do not prevail but that the regulation makes no alteration in the general principle of the law, that in making such an arrest no more force is to be used than is necessary, and that death may not be caused unless the arrest cannot be effected without causing it, 29 P. R. 1894, p. 104.

2 Who may arrest.—(1) A Police-officer may arrest without a warrant under ss. 54 and 151, under a warrant under ss. 77 and 79, under the written order of an officer in charge of a Police-station, ss. 56 and 157, under the orders of a Magistrate, ss. 64 and 65 and in non-cognizable offences under s. 57 (2) A superior Police-officer, see s. 550 (3) An officer in charge of a Police-station—ss. 53 and 157 (4) A Magistrate under ss. 64,

65, 66 and 67 (5) A military officer under ss. 130 and 131. (6) A private person without warrant, s. 59, under warrant, ss. 77 and 78; under orders of a Police-officer, s. 42; under orders of a Magistrate, ss. 42, 64, 65, see s. 43 for aiding persons other than Police-officers and ss. 66 and 67 for re-arrest.

3. Who may authorize arrest.—(1) A Police-officer, ss. 42 and 79 (2) Officer in charge of a Police-station, ss. 55 and 56. (3) Magistrate (a) verbally, ss. 42, 64 and 65, (b) by warrant, ss. 90, 92, 107, 114, 188, 204, 208, 497 (4) High Court, s. 427

4. Procedure subsequent to arrest.—For bail, see ss. 57, 60, 63, 76, 169, 170, 496 and 497, for search of person, see ss. 51, 52, 54, for delivery to proper authority, ss. 59, 60, 61, 63, 167, 186, 187, 445, where arrest without warrant and ss. 76, 78, 81, 85, 86, 167, 186, 187, 445, where arrest is under warrant, for reporting arrest, s. 42 and for subsequent investigation, see Chap. XIV

5. Arrest how made.—An arrest is made by an actual restraint of the person of the defendant or by his submission to the custody of the officers. S. 171, N. Y. Cr. P. C.

6. Law allows no informal detention.—Arrest is the taking of a person into custody that he may be held to answer for a crime s. 167, N. Y. Cr. P. C. Arrest is the restraint of a man's person, obliging him to be obedient to law. But it should be observed that the law authorizes no informal detention or restraint of any description by the Police. All detention or restraint by a Police-officer in the course of an investigation is either legal arrest or wrongful restraint and confinement,—Reg. and Ord., N. W. P., p. 358. Keeping a person in a condition of restraint without previously arresting him is not only illegal, but it is a gross and unwarrantable breach of the powers entrusted to Police-officers, 1885 A. W. N. 59. See Note 10 to s. 54

7. Person arresting on a warrant must have it in his possession.—When warrant of arrest has been issued to apprehend a person for an offence less than felony, the Police-officer who executes it must have the warrant in his possession at the time of the arrest, otherwise the person arrested could not be convicted upon an information charging him with assaulting the Police-officer in execution of his duties—Codd v. Code, L. R. 1 Ex. D. 332 = 34 L. T. 453. It is necessary that the person executing a warrant of arrest should have the warrant in his possession at the time of arrest, 5 A. 318. See s. 80

8. Person arresting on warrant must notify substance.—See s. 80 and Notes thereunder

9. Punishment for resistance to arrest.—Resistance or obstruction to the lawful arrest of a person is punishable under ss. 224, 225 and 225-B of the Indian Penal Code. See also ss. 186, 187, 212, 218, I P C

10. Officer acting illegally not protected.—The protection afforded to Police-officers and to those acting under their authority by s. 99, I P C, does not extend to an officer whose acts are wholly illegal, 13 B. 189. Where a constable executing a bailable warrant did not give the slightest intimation to the person arrested of the fact that bail had been allowed, the arrest is illegal and the accused persons are justified by the provisions of s. 99 I P C, in committing a common assault upon the constable, 16 C. W. N. 849 = 13 Cr. L. J. 590. See 24 W. R. 51 which rules that arrest without malice is not criminal

11. What violence justifiable.—A Chowkidar may wound a fugitive house-breaker if that amount of violence be necessary to secure his person. The question is "whether the means employed to stop the fugitive were such as an ordinary prudent man who had no intention of doing any serious injury would make use of," 2 W. R. 9.

12. Punishment for undue violence.—For penalty for unwarrantable violence by a Police-officer to a person in his custody, see Police Act, 1861 s. 29 Appendix XIV As to village Police-officers in Bengal, see Chowkidari Act 1 of 1892

13. Use of handcuffs.—United Provinces of Allahabad and Agra—As a rule all persons accused of non bailable offences may be handcuffed when arrested and when in transit from one place to another, handcuffs should, however, only be imposed when from the heinous nature of the crime or the character or behaviour of the accused, a fair presumption arises that such restraint is necessary to prevent escape or violence. Dangerous and desperate prisoners should be properly ironed while in transit and should be carefully watched. Irons should not be removed, unless prisoners are confined in a secure place from which escape would be impossible—Reg. & Ord., N. W. P., p. 215

Madras—The use of handcuffs ordinarily and unnecessarily by inferior officers of Police should be discouraged. Under trial prisoners are in no case to be handcuffed without the express order of the Magistrate in charge of the jail in which the prisoner may be confined.—Mad. Pol. Man., p. 96

Central Provinces—Handcuffs shall always be used in the following cases—(1) In the case of any person accused of (a) offences relating to coin, ss. 231–244, (b) murder and culpable homicide, ss. 302–304, (c) attempt to commit murder and culpable homicide, ss. 307 and 308, (d) of being a thug s. 311, (e) robbery, s. 392, (f) dacoity, s. 395, I P C., (g) of any minor offence against property if he has been previously convicted of any offence against property or has been ordered to find security for good behaviour (2) In the case of any person who has been arrested under s. 55 cl. (c), Cr P C., as being an habitual robber, house-breaker etc., if such person has been previously convicted of any offence against property (3) No person shall be handcuffed who by reason of age, sex or infirmity, can easily and securely be kept in custody without handcuffs.—C. P. Pol. Man. p. 190

14. Arrest in foreign territory.—No arrest can take place in foreign territory without a warrant and the warrant must go through the regular channel. The proper course to pursue when such person has taken refuge in foreign territory is to report it to the Magistrate of the district in order that the necessary warrant may issue and the usual step may be to procure extradition.—Mad. Pol. Man. p. 93

15. Arrest of fugitive criminals from Feudatory States.—The Police shall not arrest any fugitive from a Feudatory State without an order from the District Magistrate, provided that in case of extraditable offences, if the accused is pursued by the Police of such State and his arrest claimed he shall be arrested if the suspicion attaching to him be reasonable but the person so arrested, together with any property recovered from him shall not be removed to the Feudatory State until receipt of District Magistrate's orders.—C. P. Pol. Man. p. 188 The officers or agents of Feudatory Chiefs have no authority to make arrest of criminals or to search for or seize property in British territory but they may pursue such criminals accused of extraditable offences, and seek the aid of the British Police in securing their arrest or recovering property in their possession or disposed of by them

16. Intimation of arrest of soldiers to their commandants.—In the event of arrests of soldiers British or Native charged with the commission of offences, as early intimation as possible of the fact must be given to the officer commanding the regiment to which the men arrested may belong, so as to enable him to adopt in time any measures he may think necessary for their defence.—Bom. Pol. Man. p. 90

17. Arrest of persons in Portuguese territory.—See Act IV of 1880 (Portuguese Treaty Act) cl. (f) of the Schedule.

18. Arrest in British territory by foreign Police is illegal.—See 29 A 377.

47. If any person acting under a warrant of arrest, or any Police-officer having authority to arrest, has reason to believe that the person to be arrested has entered into, or is within any place, the person residing in, or being in charge of such place shall, on demand of such person acting as aforesaid or such Police-officer allow him free ingress thereto, and afford all reasonable

Search of place entered by person sought to be arrested facilities for a search therein

Notes.—1 Scope of section.—This section is not intended to restrict the powers of the Police to enter the place to be searched on the contrary, it is a provision compelling house-holders to afford the Police facilities in carrying out their duties and s. 48 provides that if difficulties are placed in the way of a Police-officer, he may use force to obtain ingress, 41 C. 350.

2. Persons acting under a warrant.—Need not necessarily be Police-officers see ss. 77 and 78, infra

3. Police-officers having authority to arrest.—As to when a Police-officer may arrest without a warrant see ss. 54 and 58, infra

4. Section applies to arrest under s. 66.—The provisions of this section and of ss. 48 and 49 infra apply also to arrests under s. 68 infra See s. 67, infra

5. Notice of authority and purpose necessary.—Where the right to obtain ingress, etc. exists, it may not be exercised unless there has been a notice of the business on which the officers are come a demand to enter and a refusal to admit Lawnock v. Brown 2 B and Ad 592, Burdett v. Abbot 14 East 157. No precise words are needed and it is enough to give notice that entry is sought under proper authority See Russell on Crimes p. 145

48. If ingress to such place cannot be obtained under s. 47, it shall be lawful in any case for a person acting under a warrant and in any case in which a warrant may issue, but cannot be obtained without affording the person to be arrested an opportunity of escape, for a Police-officer to enter such place and search therein, and in order to effect an entrance into such place, to break open any outer or inner door or window of any house or place, whether that of the person to be arrested or of any other person if after notification of his authority and purpose and demand of admittance duly made he cannot otherwise obtain admittance.

Provided that if any such place is in apartment in the actual occupancy of a woman (not being the person to be arrested) who according to custom, does not appear in public such person or Police-officer shall, before entering such apartment, give notice to such woman that she is at liberty to withdraw, and shall afford her every reasonable facility for withdrawing and may then break open the apartment and enter it.

Notes.—1 The procedure here laid down applies also to Search Warrants. See s. 102 infra. A Salt Revenue Officer making search under Salt Act XII of 1882 and wishing to search a senana will be guided by this proviso—vide s. 18 Act XII of 1882.

2 Police-officer acting bona fide not liable for trespass.—If a Police-officer in order to arrest suspected persons enters into a building his action would be prima facie justifiable. 36 G 433

3. The Proviso.—The powers as to breaking open senana are now more extensive than those contained in s. 181 of the Code of 1872. A Police-officer who knowingly disobeys the proviso to this section may be liable under s. 166 I. P. C.

49. Any Police-officer or other person authorized to make an arrest may break open any outer or inner door or window of any house or place in order to liberate himself or any other person who having lawfully entered for the purpose of making an arrest is detained therein.

Notes.—1 Cf. s. 176 of N. Y. Cr. P. Code which is similar to this section.

2 English Law.—If the officer having lawfully entered the house through an open outer door is locked inside by the inmates he may break out or be rescued by his associates breaking in.—1 Bishop Cr. Pro. s. 202 2 Hawk P. C. Chap. 14 s. 1 1 Hill P. C. 439

No unnecessary restraint. 50. The person arrested shall not be subjected to more restraint than is necessary to prevent his escape.

Notes.—1 The defendant is not to be subjected to any more restraint than is necessary for his arrest and detention.—S. 172 N. Y. Cr. P. C.

2 Punishment for unnecessary restraint.—Abuse of the power given by this section is punishable under s. 220 of the I. P. C. A Police-officer offering unwarrantable personal violence to any person in his custody is liable to punishment under s. 29 of Act V. of 1861. See 19 W. R. 36 and ss. 62 and 63 infra.

3 Ill treating prisoners highly objectionable.—Apart from this criminal liability the maltreatment of defenceless prisoners is a dishonourable act which cannot in any way be extenuated and will ordinarily be punished with dismissal whatever the rank, or antecedents of the culprit. Police-officers of all ranks must exert themselves to prevent the good name of the Force being sullied by the faintest show of harshness or violence in the treatment of persons in custody.—C. P. Pol. Man., p. 190. Police-officers will be severely punished if prisoners in their custody are subjected to needless indignity or harsh treatment. As a rule persons of good social position, who are accustomed to use cars and carriages may be allowed that accommodation provided that it does not endanger safe custody.—Mad. P. Man. p. 96.

4. Detaining without reasons.—See s. 61 and Notes thereunder.

51. Whenever a person is arrested by a Police-officer under a warrant which does not provide for the taking of bail, or under a warrant which provides for the taking of bail, but the person arrested cannot furnish bail, and whenever a person is arrested without warrant, or by a private person under a warrant, and cannot legally be admitted to bail, or is unable to furnish bail, the officer making the arrest or, when the arrest is made by private person, the Police officer to whom he makes over the person arrested, may search such person and place in safe custody all articles other than necessary wearing apparel, found upon him

Notes.—1. Private person cannot search.—A private person may arrest under s 57, but he cannot make any search under this section.

2. Arrested persons must be searched.—All persons arrested by the Police and not admitted to bail shall, as soon after arrest as possible, be thoroughly searched, in the case of females such search shall, if possible, be conducted by a woman, and shall in all cases be conducted with due regard to decency Reg & Ord Pny, p 303

Directly a prisoner is arrested on charge of any offence included in Sch. II of Act X of 1882 (now Act V of 1898), or of vagrancy, he must be thoroughly searched, and whenever possible, in the presence of two witnesses not connected with the Police. Whenever such witnesses cannot be procured, the fact must be explicitly stated. Female searchers only may be employed in searching women. All property found, not actual clothing must be carefully marked and labelled so that its identity is a matter of certainty. The greatest care must be taken when a prisoner is arrested to guard against his getting rid of any weapon or article or property, which may furnish evidence of his guilt. Constables receiving prisoners will be careful to ascertain that they have been thoroughly searched according to the above rules by the Police party from whom they receive the prisoners.—Reg & Ord N W P, p 274

3. Seizure when not justifiable.—Generally speaking it is not right that a man's money should be taken away from him, unless it is connected in some way with the property stolen. If it is connected with the robbery, it is quite proper it should be taken. But unless it is, it is not a fair thing to take his money which he might use for his defence, R v O'Donnell, 7 C. and P. 138. See also R v Burgess 7 C. and P. 485. With regard to seizure of property suspected to be stolen it is to be observed that no such seizure must ever be made, except when there are strong and definite grounds for believing that the property must have been dishonestly come by, e.g., when jewels of large value are found with a person of mean condition and having no ostensible means of livelihood. It is not justifiable to seize valuables which are not identified as stolen property, merely because the Police-officer who comes upon them in the course of his searches has an unfavourable opinion of the character of the possessor. To raise a presumption of guilt the possession of property believed to be stolen, should be exclusive as well as recent.—C P Pol Man, p 115

4. Safe custody of property seized.—As to custody of offensive weapons, see s 53. Also 19 W R. 7. Police-officers should bear in mind the propriety of returning to prisoners the property taken from them which appears to have nothing to do with the charge against them Reg v Griffiths 8 J P. 66

5. Procedure of Police on seizure of property.—See s 523

6. Appeals against orders directing restoration of property.—An order under this section directing the restoration of the property to the person on whom it was found does not come within s 517, infra and is therefore not appealable 30 C. 690. See also 15 C. 834; 1 B 630 and 22 B. 844. See Chap XVIII, infra

Mode of searching women. 52. Whenever it is necessary to cause a woman to be searched, the search shall be made by another woman, with strict regard to decency,

Note.—With strict regard to decency.—The language of the corresponding section of the 1872 Code was with regard to the 'habits and customs of the country'

53. The officer or other person making any arrest under this Code may take from the person arrested any offensive weapons which he has about his person, and shall deliver all weapons so taken to the Court or officer before which or whom the officer or person making the arrest is required by this Code to produce the person arrested

Power to seize offensive weapons.

B—Arrest without Warrant

54. (1) Any Police-officer may without an order from a Magistrate arrest without a warrant —

first—any person who has been concerned in any cognizable offence or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made or credible information has been received or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been so concerned secondly—any person having in his possession without lawful excuse, the burden of proving which excuse shall lie on such person any implement of house-breaking thirdly—any person who has been proclaimed an offender either under this Code or by order of the Local Government

fourthly—any person in whose possession anything is found which may reasonably be suspected to be stolen property and who may reasonably be suspected of having committed an offence with reference to such thing

fifthly—any person who obstructs a Police-officer while in the execution of his duty or who has escaped or attempts to escape from lawful custody sixthly—any person reasonably suspected of being a deserter from His Majesty's Army or Navy or of belonging to His Majesty's Indian Marine Service and being illegally absent from that service

seventhly—any person who has been concerned in or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made or credible information has been received or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been concerned in any act committed at any place out of British India which if committed in British India would have been punishable as an offence and for which he is under any law relating to extradition or under the Fugitive Offenders Act 1881 [44 and 45 Vict c 69] or otherwise, liable to be apprehended or detained in custody in British India

eighthly—any released convict committing a breach of any rule made under section 560 sub section (3) and ninthly—any person for whose arrest a requisition has been received from another Police-officer provided that the requisition specifies the person to be arrested and the offence or other cause for which the arrest is to be made and it appears therefrom that the person might lawfully be arrested without a warrant by the officer who issued the requisition

(2) This section applies also to the Police in the town of Calcutta ‡

Notes—1 When a constable may arrest without warrant under English Common Law.—At Common Law a constable may arrest a person whom he finds committing felony or upon reasonable suspicion that a felony has been committed by the person arrested although no felony has in fact been committed and whether the reasonable ground of suspicion are matters within the constable's knowledge or are derived from facts stated to him by others Beckwith v Philby 6 B and C. 635, Davis v Russell 5 Blag 354, Hogg v Lord, 21 L. J. Ex 443, Wright v Loader 14 C. B (N.S.) 535. A constable is not as a general rule entitled to arrest for misdemeanour after it has been committed whether the offence be fraud breach of the peace etc. nor to arrest on suspicion of misdemeanour. He may arrest any person who in his presence commits a misdemeanour or a breach of the peace Tinley v Simpson 1 Cr M and R 787, if the arrest is effected at the time when or immediately after the offence is committed Fox v Gaunt 3 B and Ald 798, or while there is danger of its renewal but not after the breach or danger of its renewal has ceased R v Bullock, 11 M & W 101.

1 East P C. 305. See Russell's Crimes p 724

* S. 106 of the 1871 Code authorized masters and mates to arrest deserters from ships. This is now provided by the Merchant Shipping Act 1894.

† This sub clause was added by the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, (XXIII of 1923) s. 10.

‡ The letter (C) and the words "and Bombay" were repealed by s. 1(1) of the Cr. P. C. of Bombay Amendment Act IV of 1902.

2. Under the New York Cr. P. C.—“A peace-officer may arrest, without a warrant, a person—(1) for a crime committed or attempt in his presence, (2) when the person arrested has committed felony, although not in his presence, (3) when a felony has in fact been committed, and he has reasonable cause for believing the person to be arrested to have committed it.” S 177, N Y Cr P C

GENERAL.

3. Any Police-officer.—See s 551 as to powers of superior Police-officers and s 58 for pursuit of offenders to other jurisdiction Village Chowkidars are not Police-officers within the meaning of this section, 3 A. 60; 27 C. 366; 85 C 361; 41 C. 17, nor within the meaning of ss 25 and 26 of the Evidence Act, 2 C. W. N. 71; but under Reg XX of 1817 and Act I of 1892, he is a Police-officer, 2 C. W. N. 637. As a public servant he is not bound to arrest outside the limits of his circle, any person who is not a proclaimed offender. When a warrant has been issued for the arrest of certain persons on a charge of a cognizable offence, any Police-officer will be justified in making the arrest and any person obstructing such officer will be guilty of offences under ss 225 and 332, 1 P C 40 M. 1028.

4. Police in Presidency-towns. See Introductory Note to Ch V, at p 76

5. Power not limited to his Circle.—The power to arrest conferred by this section on a Police-officer may be exercised at a place beyond the limits of his station, 8 S. L. R. 1 = 16 Cr. L. J. 15.

6. Arrest in British territory by Police of Native State and subsequent custody by British Village Chowkidar illegal.—The Police of an adjoining Native State arrested in British territory one P S suspected of having committed an offence in the Native State and made him over to a British Village Chowkidar from whose custody he escaped. Held, that neither the original arrest nor the subsequent custody by the Chowkidar was lawful and, therefore, that the Chowkidar could not properly be convicted under s 223 1 P C, 29 A. 377 where 3 A. 60; 27 C. 366 and 23 A. 626 are referred to

7. Arrest outside British India by British Police illegal.—See 24 L. A. 137 and ss 68, 82 and 188, infra, 1 Lahore 506

8. May arrest.—The powers under this section being discretionary, should not be exercised in petty cases, especially after a complaint has been made. In such a case, it can be exercised only when there is sufficient reason for the arrest, e.g. likelihood of the accused person absconding or the risk of committing some further offence as at large 1 B. H. C. Bk Cr. 1, Ratanlal 795. See Notes under cl 1 at p 65

9. Without an order from a Magistrate.—See s 65 and Notes 2 and 3 to s. 46 Ordinarily, the mere order of a Magistrate, whether verbal or in writing, will not in the slightest degree authorize a Police-officer in arresting in any case in which under Sch II, infra he is not allowed to arrest without a warrant. All Police-officers may, in cognizable offences, arrest on a telegram under cl (1) of this section Reg & Ord, N W P, s 10 p 273

10. Restraint cannot be exercised lawfully so long as person is not arrested.—In cases where a suspected person is not arrested forthwith either because the Police-officer is not as yet satisfied that the provisions of s 54, Cr. P C apply to the individual in question or because, being satisfied that they do apply to him, the Police-officer for sufficient reason postpones immediate arrest, care must be taken that the suspected person remains at liberty and is a free agent. If the circumstances of the case so require it is the duty of the Police to watch his movements openly or secretly, and to keep themselves acquainted with his actions so as to be able to arrest him at any given movement, but no restraint of any kind may lawfully be exercised over him so long as he is not placed under arrest. C P Pol Man, p 169 See Note 6 to s 56

11. Police-officers cannot send private persons to make arrest.—A Police-officer may without a warrant arrest a person who is suspected to have committed an offence under sub-sec (1) but the Code does not empower him to send persons, not Police-officers (see s 56, infra) to make an arrest which he himself can lawfully make. So, where private persons sent by a Police-officer to make an arrest were resisted by the accused, it was held that they had no authority to arrest the accused and any resistance offered to them constituted no offence, 5 L. B. R. 21. But where a Police-officer without arresting a person himself, directs some of the neighbours to take charge of him, the person arrested is in law in his custody and he is responsible in the same way as if he had himself made the arrest 7 W. R. 3.

12. Power to arrest implies power to detain.—“Authority given to arrest by this section implies authority to detain, Ratanlal 220; but it is illegal to keep a man in condition of restraint without arresting him. 1895 A. W. N. 59.

13. When question of guilty knowledge on the part of the officer arresting arises.—It seems where the arrest is legal there can be no guilty knowledge, 'superadded to an illegal act' such as it is necessary to establish against the accused to justify a conviction under s 220 of the Indian Penal Code. It is only where there has been an excess by a Police-officer of his legal powers of arrest that it becomes necessary for a Court to consider whether he has acted corruptly or maliciously, and with the knowledge that he was acting 'contrary to law,' 10 B. 508. In 24 W. R. 51, where there was no malice, no intention of doing any act of the nature spoken of in s. 339 or s. 340 I P C., and no voluntary obstruction or restraint though there was probably excessive and mistaken exercise of powers not civilly excusable in a Police-officer the arrest was held not to amount to the criminal offence of wrongful restraint. See also 12 B 377. Proof of an unlawful confinement will not of itself warrant the legal inference of malice—knowledge that such confinement is contrary to law is a question of fact and not of law and must be proved to satisfy the requirements of s. 220, I P C 9 B H C R. 348.

14. When arresting, it is advisable that notice of the authority and business of the officer be given.—It is always desirable that the prisoner must have notice of the authority and business of the officer making an arrest unless the circumstances of the case render notice unnecessary, e.g. where an attempt is made to arrest a man while committing an offence or on fresh pursuit, R v. Howarth 1 Mood. 207. It is only when the person whose liberty is interfered with has actual knowledge or express or implied notice of the officer's status and business that he was not in right of private defence. See Russell on Crimes, p 734. See also s 79, I P C, and Note 6 to s. 56.

When arresting a person without warrant, the officer must inform him of the authority of the officer, and the cause of the arrest, except when the person arrested is in the actual commission of the crime, or is pursued immediately after escape. S 18, N Y Cr P C.

15. Illegality of arrest does not take away the jurisdiction of the Magistrate trying.—If the Magistrate before whom an accused has been charged has jurisdiction to try the offence, his jurisdiction to enquire or try cannot be affected by any illegality in connection with his arrest. It will not avail the accused to say that he was brought there illegally, 35 B. 235, where Q v. Nelson, Cockburn's Rep. 2nd Edn., p 118, in re Pursoth, 5 T. L. R. 344; in re Susanmah Scot, 9 Ban. G. 446; Q v. Lopez, 7 Cox C. C. 431 and 6 B 222 are cited and followed, and Muhammad Yusufuddin, 24 I. A. 137 is distinguished. See also 26 M. 125 and 31 C. 537.

15-A. Authorizes arrest without in order from a Magistrate and without a warrant only in certain circumstances. In re Charn Chandra Mazumdar, 44 C. 76. See 21 A. L. J. 791.

A Magistrate's order under s. 202 of the Code directing the Police to inquire into a cognizable case does not debar the Police from exercising their powers of arrest and investigation in regard to the same matter as formed the subject of the complaint. 2 Pat. 379.

CLAUSE 1.

17. What is reasonable complaint or suspicion.—A general definition of what constitutes reasonableness in a complaint or suspicion and credibility of information cannot be given. But both must depend upon the existence of tangible legal evidence within the cognizance of the Police-officer and he must judge whether the evidence is sufficient to establish the reasonableness and credibility of the charge, information or suspicion. Again, the moment when an arrest should be made, is not and obviously cannot be prescribed. The arrest may be made at any time when the Police officer has reasonable grounds for believing that a person is a person as is Ord. N.W. the circumstances of each particular case but it must be at least founded on some definite fact tending to throw suspicion on the person arrested and not on mere surmise or information. Still less have the Police any power to arrest the persons, as they appear sometimes to do merely on the chance of something being hereafter proved against them."—PER MARSH, J., in 7 W. R. 3. Where the accused who were armed with guns and were called on by a Police Sergeant (who believed from the report of a burglar that they were decoits) to surrender, resisted and fired several shots wounding and killing several persons who were assisting in their arrest, it was held the Sergeant was justified in arresting the accused under s. 45 (b) and the present clause and that the accused had no right of private defence under s. 99, I, P. C., against the Sergeant arresting them, 21 P. R. 1900. As to what is reasonable suspicion see also 12 B 377 and Peckwith v. Philby, 6 B and C. 535.

18. Arrest excusable when complaint is reasonable.—In ordinary cases, when the offence charged is not of a serious description and there is no likelihood of the accused trying to escape arrest need not be made until the inquiry has at all events proceeded so far as to satisfy the Police-officer that the charge can be properly substantiated before a Magistrate. But in grave cases such as decoity, murder and the like, where there may be subsequently difficulty in discovering the whereabouts of the suspected person or danger of his absconding the investigating officer should exercise his powers of arrest as soon as it appears that the complaint or suspicion is a reasonable one. If it turns out that the person arrested is not the guilty party, he can at once be released on bail or upon his own bond, the circumstances being set forth in the Case Diary.

19. Ground of arrest is a mixed question of law and fact.—What is a reasonable and probable ground for suspicion is a mixed proposition of law and fact. Whether the circumstances alleged to show it probable or not probable, are true and existed is a matter of fact. Whether, supposing them true, they amount to a probable cause, is a question of law.—Johnson v. Sutton 1 Term Rep. 543.

20. When Police should refrain from arresting respectable persons.—A Police-officer to whom a complaint of a cognizable offence is made ought, if there be circumstances in the case which lead him to suspect the information, to refrain from arresting persons of respectable position, and leave the complainant to go to a Magistrate and convince him that the information justifies the serious step of issue of warrant of arrest, Ratanlal 795.

21. May arrest when once warrant has issued.—Where warrant for a cognizable offence has been issued, any Police-officer who knows of its issue may arrest though he has not the warrant Creagh v. Gamble, 24 L. R. Jr. 498. Russell on Crimes, p. 737. In such a case he is really exercising his power to arrest on suspicion or upon credible information, 35 A. 6.

22. May arrest on telegram.—All Police-officers may in cognizable offences arrest on a telegram under the authority conferred by this clause Reg. & Ord. N.W.P. s. 10 p. 273.

23. Proclaimed offender.—See s. 87 infra.

24. By order of the Local Government.—These words were substituted in the 1892 Code for the expression 'in a District or Police Gazette or Notification' used in the 1872 Code.

25. Stolen property.—For definition, see s. 410 I. P. C. The finding of any such thing must be reported forthwith to a Magistrate empowered to pass order regarding its disposal. See ss. 523–525.

26. When property suspected to be stolen may be seized.—It is not necessary that a formal complaint should have been made in order to authorize a Police-officer to apprehend any person found with stolen property. But the possession must be both recent and exclusive 8 W. R. 23. This clause refers only to property reasonably suspected to have been stolen and not anything which a Police-officer may choose to imagine has been stolen. 10 W. R. 20. With regard to the seizure of property suspected to be stolen, it is to be observed that no such seizure must ever be made, except when there are strong and definite grounds for believing that the property must have been dishonestly come by, e.g., when jewels of large value are found with a person of mean condition and having no ostensible means of livelihood. It is not justifiable to seize valuables which are not identified as stolen property merely because the Police-officer who comes upon them in the course of a search has an unfavourable opinion of the character of the possessor. To raise presumption of guilt the possession of property believed to be stolen should be exclusive as well as recent, C P Pol. Man p 103 (Mad Pol. Man, p 115), Police-officers who act thus render themselves liable in a suit for damages—Mad Pol. Man, p 115.

27. Arrest should precede search.—It appears to be thought that a Policeman can stop a traveller or any other person and search him and seize any property the person may be in possession of, which the Police-officer does not think he ought to possess, or regarding which he cannot give an explanation which satisfies the Police-officer. In this way a traveller may be deprived of his property, and may not be able to make his journey in order to complain and to recover it. This procedure is clearly wrong. Before anyone is searched or deprived of his property on the ground that it is stolen property, he should be arrested under this section. If the arrest be prima facie justified by the discovery on his person of what appears to be stolen property, the suspected person should be taken before a Magistrate. A Police-officer should in no case retain property, while allowing the man in whose possession he found it to go free—C P Pol. Man, p 103.

28. Police-officer acting in good faith is protected by s. 79, I. P. C.—Where a Police-officer on duty at his post sees an honest man not previously known to him, at an unusual time, viz., at about sunrise, carrying a bundle which the Police-officer mistakenly suspects to be stolen property, he may put questions to him, not for the purpose of causing annoyance or from idle curiosity, but in order to clear up his suspicions. The circumstance that he does so is an indication of good faith, within the meaning of s. 52, I. P. C. If the answers to his questions do not remove the Police-officer's suspicions, though they might have satisfied an officer of higher position or greater intelligence he is none the less acting in good faith if after such inquiry as was possible to an officer in his position, in the circumstances in which he was placed, he retains an honest belief that such a state of fact existed as would justify placing his hand on the bundle whether with the intention of further inspecting it or arresting the accused for being in possession of it. His act is not under the circumstances an offence. He is protected by s. 79 of the I. P. C. 12 B 377; 18 A. 246; 7 Bom. L. R. 463.

29. Obstruction.—The word obstruction is not defined in the Penal Code. See, however, ss 186 224 and 225, I. P. C. where it is rendered penal. If a Police-officer is under a bona fide belief that he is justified in detaining property which he believes to be stolen property, he may arrest the person who obstructs him in the endeavour to detain that property, 12 B 377.

30. Escape from lawful custody.—This section authorizes arrest upon a reasonable suspicion of committing an offence and the custody under it is none the less legal because it is not followed by conviction or trial on the merits, 1896 A. W. N 151. See also 23 C. 253 and 21 C. 337; 3 L. B. R. 221—4 Cr. L. J. 381.

CLAUSE 6.

31. Procedure to be followed on arresting deserters.—In dealing with European deserters, the Police shall act according to the following provision of s 134 of the Army Act 1881 [4 and 45 Vict c 58] and Europeans apprehended on suspicion of being deserters from the British Army shall not be made over to the military authorities without having first been duly committed as such by a Magistrate—

S 134 With respect to deserters the following provisions shall have effect—

(1) Upon reasonable suspicion that person is a deserter it shall be lawful for any constable or if no constable can be immediately met with, then for any officer or soldier or other person, to apprehend such suspected person and forthwith to bring him before a Court of summary jurisdiction.

(2) Where a person is brought before a Court of summary jurisdiction charged with being a deserter under this Act such Court may deal with the case in like manner as if such person were brought before the Court charged with an indictable offence, or in Scotland an offence.

(3) The Court, if satisfied either by evidence on oath, or by the confession of such person that he is a deserter shall forthwith as it may seem to the Court most expedient with regard to his safe custody, cause him either to be delivered into military custody in such manner as the Court may deem most expedient, or until he can be so delivered to be committed to some prison Police-station or other place legally provided for the confinement of persons in custody for such reasonable time as appears to the Court reasonably necessary for the purpose of delivering him into military custody.

(4) Where the person confessed himself to be a deserter, and the evidence of the truth or falsehood of such confession is not then forthcoming the Court shall remind such person for the purpose of obtaining information as to the truth or falsehood of the said confession and for that purpose the Court shall transmit if sitting in the United Kingdom to a Secretary of State, and if in India to the General or other officer commanding the forces in the military district or station where the Court sits and if in a colony to the General or other officer commanding the forces in that colony a return (in this Act referred to as a descriptive return) containing such particulars and being in such form as is specified in the fifth Schedule to this Act or as may be from time to time directed by a Secretary of State

(5) The Court may from time to time remind the said person for a period not exceeding eight days in each instance and not exceeding, in the whole such period as appears to the Court reasonably necessary for the purpose of obtaining the said information

(6) Where the Court causes person either to be delivered into a military custody or to be committed as a deserter the Court shall send if in the United Kingdom to a Secretary of State and in India or a colony to the General or other officer commanding as aforesaid a descriptive return in relation to such deserter for which the clerk of the Court shall be entitled to a fee of two shillings

(7) A Secretary of State shall direct payment of the said fee.—Reg & Ord N W P s 10 para 442 p 436 A reward of Rs 5 is paid for the apprehension of a deserter from the Native Army.—C P Pol Man p 54

See also s. 549 infra As to Marine Service see s. 19 of Act XIV of 1887 (the Indian Marine Act). The Indian Articles of War (Act V of 1869) provide that a deserter when arrested should be brought before the nearest Magistrate or the nearest Military Commanding Officer, when no Magistrate is accessible, to be dealt with according to law

32 Reward for arresting deserters.—A reward of Rs 30 will be paid to any Police-officer who shall apprehend a European soldier deserter the sum authorized will be paid by the Pay Department without requiring anything further than bills submitted and vouched under the following rules —

If the Corps from which the man is supposed to have deserted be quartered at the place of capture or in the immediate vicinity of it he is to be sent by the Civil authority concerned (see s. 10 para. 442) direct to the regiment.

If found to be a deserter from such Corps the Commanding Officer will forward the following certificate immediately to the superior officer or the captor, who will submit it with a bill to the Pay Department and be responsible for issue of the reward to the person entitled to receive it —

CERTIFICATE.

33. Arrest without warrant for offence committed out of British India.—A British subject committing outside British India criminal breach of trust or any one of the offences mentioned in the schedule to the Extradition Act 1903 may now be arrested in British India by virtue of cl. (7) of s. 54 19 B 72 is now superseded this clause having been first introduced by Act III of 1894 s. 3 to meet the above Bombay Case 7 Bom L R 463.

In 52 Cal 319 the above cases were referred to and discussed and it was held that the words "Credible information and Reasonable suspicion" in s. 54 severally if the Code refer to the mind of the Police-officer and that mere telegrams from the Police of a Native State giving information about the embezzlement of money do not come within the purview of the above two phrases. Held further that the words in s. 54 severally "for which he is under any law relating to extradition" liable to be apprehended do not qualify the offence but indicate a present liability to apprehension as there must be an extradition warrant under s. 7 or requisition under s. 9 otherwise the arrest cannot be made under s. 54 severally 29 C. W N 93

34. Law relating to extradition, etc.—See Act XV of 1913 printed as Appendix II

35 Fugitive Offenders Act, 1831.—This is not an Indian Act but an enactment of the British Legislature, being 44 and 45 Vict c 69 the object of which is to facilitate the apprehension and return of fugitive offenders, from any one part to any other part of the British Dominions.

See Notes under s 565 for rules of various Local Governments regarding the notification of residence etc. by released convicts 37 No power to arrest or detain witnesses—With regard to persons whose evidence is required by a Police-officer making an inquiry no power exists to arrest or detain them for a single moment. An officer in charge of a Police-station may under s 160 infra summon witnesses and the person so summoned are bound to obey the order. But in no case can the Police-officer compel the witness by force to attend before him.

* 55. (1) Any officer in charge of a Police station may in like manner arrest or cause to be arrested—

(a) any person found taking precautions to conceal his presence within the limits of such station under circumstances which afford reason to believe that he is taking such precautions with a view to committing a cognizable offence or

(b) any person within the limits of such station who has no ostensible means of subsistence, or who cannot give a satisfactory account of himself or

(c) any person who is by repute an habitual robber house-breaker or thief or an habitual receiver of stolen property knowing it to be stolen or who by repute habitually commits extortion or in order to the committing of extortion habitually puts or attempts to put persons in fear of injury

(2) This section applies also to the Police in the town of Calcutta

GENERAL

Notes—1 Scope of the section—Persons arrested should be bailed—The powers with which officers in charge of Police stations have been armed under the Code for the purpose of restraining bad characters are exceptional powers. They provide strong remedies and should never be put in force without the greatest deliberation. Section 55 was intended for suppression of habitual bad characters whom an officer in charge of Police-station suddenly finds within his circle or about whom he has good cause to fear that they will commit serious harm before there is time to apply to the nearest Magistrate empowered to deal with the case under s 112. That at any rate would be a safe way of using the powers given by the section. When the Police Act under s 55 they are bound to give the person arrested the option of bail and the bail should not be excessive 14 A 43, but this section does not empower the Police to arrest a person on suspicion of unlawful gaming. The proper course to be adopted would be to proceed under s 112 infra 3 L B R 94 = 3 Cr L J 20. This section however is independent of Chapter VIII, although proceedings under Chapter VIII may follow such arrest as a natural sequence 35 A 407. The section cannot legally be made use of for the purpose of retaining under arrest a person whom a Court having acquitted him of the offence with which he was charged has ordered to be set at liberty 41 A 433 followed in 43 A 186

2 'Officer in charge of Police station'—This includes Police-officers of higher rank also. See s 550 infra

3 Escape from lawful custody—If a person arrested by Police on his supposed identity with the real offender escapes from custody such an escape when the detention is not for an offence is not punishable under s. 224 I P C. 21 C. 337

4 Punishment for escape from custody—Resistance or obstruction to lawful apprehension or escape or rescue of a person lawfully detained and not otherwise provided for is by the addition of s 283-B to the Indian Penal Code now made an offence punishable with imprisonment for six months or with fine or with both. This addition has the effect of superseding the decisions in 8 C. 331 and 7 A. 67. Therefore if a person arrested by a Police-officer under this section escapes from his custody, he is guilty of an offence punishable under s. 225 B. This addition was thus accounted for—

"It is proposed by the section to substitute for s. 225-A of the I P C., a section that will cover not only the case there provided for, but the case which s. 651 of the Code of Civil Procedure was intended to meet, and others such as those referred to in 8 C. 331 and 7 A. 67 for which no provision has hitherto been made"—
Statement of Objects and Reasons of Act X of 1886

5. Effect of illegal arrest.—The question whether the officer who effected the arrest was acting within or beyond his powers in making the arrest, ought not in any way effect the question whether the accused was or was not guilty of the offence with which he was charged, 26 M. 124; 31 C. 557. But it is open to the prisoner to take steps to obtain redress for the wrongful arrest, 31 C. 557.

6. Section applies to Calcutta Police.—Where a person was arrested under the provisions of cl. (b) of this section by an Inspector in charge of thana in Calcutta, and placed under s. 109 (b), infra before a Magistrate and was discharged on the ground that the arrest was illegal, as the Inspector was not an officer in charge of a Police-station and the thana not a Police station within the meaning of s. 4, cls (b) and (s), supra, held that the arrest was legal, as this section is made specially applicable to the Calcutta Police, while s. 4 is not so applicable having regard to s. 1(a), supra and that an Inspector in charge of a thana corresponded to an officer in charge of a Police-station, 31 C. 557. See Introductory Note to Chapter V at p. 76, supra.

CLAUSE (a)

7. To justify arrest there must be an intention to commit cognizable offence.—Under the 1872 Code any person found 'lurking' within the limits of the Police station might be arrested. It will now be necessary to justify the arrest, to show that the person arrested intended to commit a cognizable offence. I or definition of cognizable offence, see s. 4 cl. (f) supra.

8. Presence must be voluntary.—The person must be within the limits of the Police-station voluntarily 1883 A. W. N. 223. Cf. 1884 A. W. N. 85.

CLAUSE (b)

9. Who has no ostensible means of subsistence.—This would include a vagrant as defined in s. 3 of the European Vagrancy Act 1\ of 1874. For powers of arrest, see s. 4 ibid. I or similar provisions for arrest of military offenders, see the Indian Articles of War (Act V of 1869).

10. Security for good behaviour.—As to requiring security for good behaviour from persons comprised within clauses (a) and (b), see s. 109.

11. Re-arrest after proceedings under s. 110 have proved infructuous.—A person against whom proceedings under Chapter VIII were held to be illegal, cannot be re-arrested under the provisions of this section, except on fresh grounds of complaint, 1833 A. W. N. 223.

CLAUSE (c).

12. Expediency of arrest under s. 55.—No arrests under cl. (c) of this section shall be effected without the previous sanction of the District Magistrate, unless immediate arrest be necessary for the ends of justice. Arrest under this section is a more effective procedure than simply laying an information under ss. 109 and 110 as when the latter course is adopted, the Magistrate must issue a summons to the person against whom the information is laid and the result must usually be that the person in question will temporarily disappear, so that summons cannot be served—C P Pol. Man., p. 212.

13. Habitual Criminal.—The Code is silent as to the meaning of this term. Under the N. Y. Cr P Code, when a person is convicted of a felony, who has been, before that conviction, convicted in this state of any other crime, he may be adjudged by the Court in addition to other punishment inflicted upon him, to be an habitual criminal. A person convicted of a misdemeanour who has been already five times convicted in this state of a misdemeanour may be adjudged by Court in addition to, or instead of, other punishment, to be an habitual criminal—S. 510 N. Y. Cr P C.

14 Surveillance of bad characters by Railway Police.—The Railway Police shall be always on the watch for bad characters known to them and shall ascertain their destination if they are found travelling by rail. If necessary they shall get into the train for the better watching of suspected persons or shall communicate their suspicions to the station master and the guard of the train. The station master will if it seems advisable telegraph the presence of bad characters in the train to the station of destination—C P Pol Man p 83

15 Mode of becoming acquainted with criminal classes and habitual offenders.—To make Police-officers acquainted with the names and appearances of prisoners of the habitual or criminal classes and to give them an opportunity of identifying old offenders who have not been recognized as such any member of the Police Force so authorized in writing by the District Superintendent or in his absence by the Reserve Inspector, is at liberty to accompany the Superintendent of the Jail during the Sunday inspection of the prisoners and also to visit the jail during the evening meals on Tuesday and Friday. Undertrial prisoners should also be inspected. The District Superintendent should send a few of his officers especially the Court Inspector and his subordinates and the local station Police-officers to the jail weekly and should also take advantage of the presence of any Police-officers or men of out-stations who may have come into the Sadar station on public business to send them for the above purposes to the jail. Officers or men should not however be brought in specially from out stations to inspect prisoners—Reg Ord N W P p 287 C P Pol Man p 199

16 Persons living by unlawful gaming cannot be arrested.—The Police under the sanction of a Magistrate under this section arrested a person who was suspected of earning his livelihood by unlawful gaming. Held this section did not empower the Police to make this arrest and that the proper procedure would have been for the Magistrate to make an order under s 112 infra and to summon the accused to appear under s 114 attaching to this summons a copy of the proceedings under s 112 as required by s 115 infra 3 L B R. 84 = 3 Cr L J 20 See also 2 L B R 166

17 How to prepare and keep Badman's lists.—For the protection of the public it has been found necessary in every civilised State to constitute certain persons officers for the prevention and detection of crime and to render them efficient it has also been found necessary to confer on them powers of interfering with the liberties of their fellow-citizens which if exercised by private persons would render them liable to civil proceedings. It is necessary for the efficiency of the Police that they should possess information of the names of persons who are likely to commit offences and inasmuch as changes must of necessity constantly take place in the members who constitute the Police Force it is also necessary that the information above mentioned should be preserved. To effect this registers are ordinarily kept showing the names of persons who have committed or who on strong grounds are suspected of the commission of offences. Such a register accurately compiled and strictly reserved for the purpose for which it was designed—the private use of the Police may be of great advantage to the public in enabling the Police to perform their duties effectually. But if this register be a public register or if the persons having the custody of it allow its contents to be matter of public conversation we can imagine no greater engine of injustice and oppression. The matter recorded is not confined to facts which have been ascertained by fair and open investigation in Courts of justice. It does and necessarily must in a great measure consist of the results of ex parte investigations made in private by the Police. It is and necessarily must be in great part the fruit of rumour and suspicion and sometimes it may be of malice. Were it permitted that such a register should be kept as a register to which the public might have access or of which the entries were bruited about the characters of honest men might be blasted with out redress through the instrumentality of any who could gain the ear or excite the suspicions of the Police. Very shortly after the establishment of this Court the abuse of the register was on more than one occasion prominently brought to its notice. It had at that time (and we fear the evil has not even yet been cured) come to be regarded as a public register and Magistrates not unfrequently passed orders directing the entry of a person's name as a kind of punishment. The Court on the 9th August 1866 addressed the Government of these Provinces on the subject, and pointed out the probabilities and magnitude of the evils of which we have above made mention and the Government promptly passed an order that entries should only be made by the District Superintendent or the Magistrate in his capacity of Superintendent of Police and directed that the register should be considered a private register and should only be open to inspection by officers of Police. In the present case had the orders of Government been obeyed in spirit as well as in letter although the plain fact might have been unjustly recorded they would not have been greatly damaged but no sooner was the entry made than it became known that it had been made.—N W P High Co Ct BARBOO DUTTER LAL v HORSFORD quoted in Principles Cr P Code

* 56. (1) When any officer in charge of a Police-station or any Police-officer making an investigation under Chapter XIV requires any officer subordinate to him to arrest without a warrant (otherwise than in his presence) any person who may lawfully be arrested without a warrant he shall deliver to the officer required to make the arrest an order in writing specifying the person to be arrested and the offence or other cause for which the arrest is to be made. The officer so required shall before making the arrest notify to the person to be arrested the substance of the order and if so required by such person shall show him the order.

Procedure when Police-officer deputed subordinate to arrest without warrant

(2) This section applies also to the Police in the town of Calcutta.

Notes.—1 Officers subordinate.—It has been held having regard to s. 39 of Village Chowkidari Act (I. C.) VI of 1870 that a Chowkidar is an officer subordinate to a Police-officer in charge of a Police-station within the meaning of this section and therefore an arrest of a person without warrant by a Chowkidar on the authority of an order in writing delivered to him in conformity with cl. (1) of this section is legal and resistance to such an arrest is punishable under s. 225-B I. P. C. 10 C. W. N. 287 = 3 Cr. L. J. 201, but see 27 C. 566, but the Code confers no power on a Police-officer to send persons not Police-officers to make an arrest which he himself can lawfully make and therefore any resistance to such persons is no offence 5 L. B. R. 21.

2 Contents of the order in writing.—Writing the names of subordinates on the back of the copy of a warrant and signing of that endorsement by an officer in charge of a Police-station does not constitute the copy an order in writing within the meaning of this section 18 A. 246, p. 253, but writing "arrest the person within named and for the offence within named" and putting the names of the constables on the copy of the warrant and signing the endorsement himself would have made it an order in writing 18 A. 246. The order mentioned in this section is apparently personal and cannot like a warrant be endorsed over by one Police-officer to another for execution.

3. No order necessary where offence is cognizable.—See s. 54 supra under which any Police-officer may arrest on his own responsibility when offence is cognizable. Where a Head Constable verbally ordered a subordinate constable who was with him to arrest a person suspected of dacoity which the constable did in the presence of the superior it was held the arrest was legal as dacoity is an offence for which any Police-officer may arrest without warrant and the arrest was virtually made by the Head Constable 11 W. R. 20.

4. Assault on Police making arrest without sufficient authority.—If a Police-officer be not acting under an order in writing made under this section the person arrested will not be liable to punishment under s. 332 I. P. C. in respect of hurt inflicted by him on the arresting Police-officer as the latter could not be acting in the discharge of his duty within the meaning of that section but he would be liable under s. 323 if hurt is caused to the Police-officer executing the warrant as under s. 99 I. P. C. there is no right of private defence when the Police-officer is acting bona fide under colour of his office 18 A. 246, p. 252 see also 28 C. 411.

5 Jurisdiction of Police not excluded by Magistrate issuing warrant.—A Magistrate issuing a warrant for the arrest of a person does not exclude the jurisdiction of the officer in charge of a Police-station and prevent him issuing his written order under this section. It might be different if the Magistrate had decided that no warrant should issue against a certain person and that a summons should issue 18 A. 246 p. 249.

6 Under the present amendment of this section.—A Police-officer making arrest under this section is bound to notify to the person to be arrested the substance of the order if so required by such person. And therefore 27 C. 320 is no longer good law.

7 Other cause for which the arrest is to be made.—As to the other causes see ss. 53, 92 etc. also ss. 107 (3) and 114 which relate to security proceedings.

† 57. (1) When any person who in the presence of a Police-officer has committed or has been accused of committing a non-cognizable offence refuses on demand of such officer to give his name and residence or gives a name or residence which such officer has reason to believe to be false he may be arrested by such officer in order that his name or residence may be ascertained.

Refusal to give name and residence.

† See foot-note under s. 54 supra.

As to power of detention by Police in Upper Burma, see Reg. V of 1902 Schedules VII and VIII.

(2) When the true name and residence of such person have been ascertained he shall be released on his executing a bond with or without sureties to appear before a Magistrate if so required

Provided that if such person is not resident in British India the bond shall be secured by a surety or sureties resident in British India

(3) Should the true name and residence of such person not be ascertained within twenty-four hours from time of arrest or should he fail to execute the bond or, if so required to furnish sufficient sureties he shall forthwith be forwarded to the nearest Magistrate having jurisdiction

Notes—1 Scope of the section—This section has been so recast as to provide a procedure applicable to the case of residents of Native States who are accused of having committed a non-cognizable offence in British India. For powers of Police-officers when accused arrested by private person see s 59 infra

2 Analogous provisions—For provisions analogous to this section see s 137 of the Indian Railways Act IX of 1890 s 54 of the Nadras Forest Act V of 1882 s 516 of Bombay Act III of 1888 and s 43 of the Prisons Act IX of 1894

3. Powers of Police to arrest without warrant in non cognizable cases—This is the only case in which the Police can make an arrest without a warrant in non-cognizable cases. See s 163 as to the procedure to be adopted on receiving information in non-cognizable cases. The scope of such inquiry is limited as laid down in this section

4 Powers of the Police strictly limited by the express provisions of the section—A Police constable asked the complainant not to create any disturbances on a public road. Upon the complainant's declining to do so he demanded his name and address which were not given. The constable thereupon abused him by calling him a soowar and arrested and dragged him to the Police Chowky and detained him there till his name and address were ascertained. On these facts the constable was convicted under ss 220 323 and 504 I P C. Held that the convictions under ss 220 and 323 could not stand having regard to the powers conferred on the constable by this section. 5 Bom L R 597

5 Persons arrested under Railways Act should be treated as in cognizable case—When an arrest is made under s 131 of Act IX of 1890 the Indian Railways Act of a person who there is reason to believe will abscond or whose name and address are unknown and he refuses to give them or when given are reasonably believed to be incorrect the case should be sent to the Magistrate in accordance with the provisions of s 170 Cr P C as a cognizable case within the definition of s 4 (f) of the Code although the offence alleged against the accused be not itself cognizable.—Bom H C Cr para. 10-A p 4

6 Power of arrest under the Prisons Act, 1894—Section 43 of Act IX of 1894 (Prisons) printed in the Appendix

58. A Police officer may, for the purpose of arresting without warrant any person whom he is authorized to arrest under this Chapter pursue such person into any place in British India

Notes—1 Scope of the section—Under the 1872 Code the power of pursuit and arrest was limited to cognizable cases but now it can be exercised in any case in which a Police-officer is empowered to arrest without a warrant.

As to arrest without a warrant see ss 54 and 55 supra and as to arrest in foreign country the Extradition Act XX of 1903 printed in the Appendix. For definition of British India see General Clauses Act V of 1899 s 7 (1).

2 Arrest in Foreign territory by British Police, illegal—See Note 36 under s 54

3 Instruction as to pursuit of offenders—All Police-officers in pursuit of offenders shall follow up such pursuit beyond the limits of their own circle until an equally responsible officer is at hand to take it up, inquiry and pursuit are not to stop at the boundary of a station.

It is necessary that the communication between the Police-officers of one and those of another province should be free and unfettered by official address, and hue and cry after a criminal shall not be broken by the fugitive getting beyond the boundary, nor the pursuit abandoned. Pursuit of an offender, more particularly if such be a grave criminal, should not cease, because the territory of the North Western Provinces and Oudh has been crossed it may be continued into any place in British India, except when the criminal may have gone into foreign territory. If the frontier be of another local Government of the empire the track should be followed up until pursuit can be taken up by the Police of the district, which should be obtained as soon as practicable. If this is not obtained before actual arrest, the prisoner should be taken to the nearest Police-station and delivered to the custody of the officer in charge, with full information of the crime for which arrested and of the district within which perpetrated.

All officers are responsible that requisition for aid to pursue, for search or apprehension of offenders are immediately complied with, and every exertion made for the successful performance of the duty required.

Except in the case of hot pursuit of fugitives who have committed serious offences in British territory (when under such circumstances, an arrest is made, the Police should communicate at once with the nearest authority in foreign territory) if a criminal escapes, the pursuit of the Police and crosses the frontier of an

§ Pursuit of offenders in foreign territory.—The Police may, if necessary, pursue into, arrest in, and remove from any Feudatory State of the Central Provinces a person who has committed an offence in Khalsa territory. In doing so, they must ask the aid of the Feudatory official and must be careful not to give any offence by the manner in which they perform the duty, in ordinary cases when the arrest is not emergent, it should be effected through Feudatory officials upon a requisition sent with that object by the officer in charge of the division in which investigation was held. The Police may, in hot pursuit, follow an offender into an independent Native State, if they arrest him there, they must take him at once to the nearest Police authority of such State. If not in hot pursuit, they should ordinarily apply to the nearest Police authorities of the State and request them to effect the arrest of the fugitive. In no case ought the Police to remove from the territory of an independent Native State an offender arrested there without such offender having been made over to them for the purpose by the local authorities or by the Police of the State. If rules of procedure regarding the surrender of fugitive offenders have been framed by the State, the Police must conform to them—C P Pol Man, p 170

59. (1) Any private person may arrest any person who in his view commits a non bailable and cognizable offence, or any proclaimed offender, and without unnecessary delay, shall make over any person so arrested to a Police-officer, or, in the absence of a Police-officer, take such person or cause him to be taken in custody to the nearest Police-station

(2) If there is reason to believe that such person comes under the provisions of s 54, a Police-officer shall re-arrest him

(3) If there is reason to believe that he has committed a non-cognizable offence, and he refuses on the demand of a Police-officer to give his name and residence, or gives a name or residence which such officer has reason to believe to be false, he shall be dealt with under the provisions of s 57. If there is no sufficient reason to believe that he has committed any offence, he shall be at once released

Notes.—1. Scope of the section.—The section is purely enabling and not in any sense obligatory. Further, it is the intention of the Legislature to prevent arrests by private persons on mere suspicion or information. Hence the limitation as to persons who could be arrested by the words in his view commits a non-bailable and cognizable offence or who has been proclaimed (under s 87, infra), see 11 M. 430. A private person has no power, on receiving information of theft, to arrest the thief while carrying away the stolen property as the offence was neither a continuing offence nor one committed in his presence, 33 C. 361. See, however, the proposed amendment.

See, however, 52 C. 615 in which it is now held that it is not essential that a private individual, in whose presence a non bailable and cognizable offence is committed, should himself physically arrest the offender. He may cause such offender to be arrested by another person. On this point, 35 C. 361 is dissented from. It is further held that in India the distinction between felonies and misdemeanours has never been accepted. The common Law of England relating to the right of arrest by a private person does not obtain in India. The Indian Law on this subject is embodied in s. 59 of the Code.

2. Private persons' powers of arrest under other enactments.—See, e.g., (1) s. 12 of the Indian Arms Act VI of 1878, (2) s. 195 of the Assam Labour and Emigration Act VI of 1901, (3) s. 87 of the Indian Merchant Shipping Act I of 1889 (under which a master or owner and certain others are empowered to arrest without warrant).

3. Arrest by a Railway servant.—If a Railway servant arrests a man under s. 132 of Act IX of 1890 and makes him over to the Police, the action of the Police will be governed by the provisions of this section—Reg. & Ord., N.W.P., s. 10, p. 349.

4. Rescue from the custody of a private person.—Who had arrested the thief in the act of stealing is an offence within the meaning of s. 225, I P C., 11 M. 441. See also 17 M. 103 and 5 M. 32.

5. Arrested person may be forwarded in custody of a servant.—The provisions of this section as to making over a person arrested to a Police-officer without unreasonable delay are complied with if the arrested person is forwarded in the custody of a servant of a private person, 11 M. 430; approved in 23 A. 268. See 6 C. W. N. 337. See the present amendment of sub-section (1) which is in consonance with the cases cited in this note.

6. Make over arrested person to a Police-officer.—A Village Chowkidar in Bengal cannot properly be regarded as a Police-officer within the terms of this section, therefore an offender arrested by a private person (in whose view the alleged offence was not committed) and made over to such Chowkidar cannot be regarded as being in lawful custody for the purpose of conviction under s. 224, I P C., 27 C. 366; 3 A. 60. When a private person after arresting an offender, made him over to a Chowkidar to be taken to the thana the custody of the latter is not legal as he is not a Police-officer, and no offence is committed if the offender escapes from such custody, 41 C. 17. See Bengal Act I of 1892, s. 13, cl. (4), and Notes to s. 163, infra. But in 29 A. 875, it was held that the requirements of this section are sufficiently complied with by the person arresting the thief in the act of committing theft, sending him to the Police-station in the custody of the Village Chowkidar, so that the rescue from the Chowkidar constituted an offence under s. 225, I P C. See also 11 M. 430; 17 M. 103; 17 C. W. N. 978.

7. How far private person making arrest protected.—For protection of persons acting in good faith under this section, see ss. 79 and 99, I P C. The protection given to Ministers of Justice extends also to private persons arresting or endeavouring to arrest felons, etc., under certain limitations. As these persons are discharging duties or exercising powers imposed and given by law, they are in a sense engaged in the public service and for the advancement of justice, though not especially appointed. If such a person is resisted and killed the slayer is guilty of murder if he had express notice of the purpose for which the deceased came, e.g., by commanding the peace or otherwise showing that his interposition was in the interests of peace and justice or with friendly intent, 1 East P. C. 304. Where express notice is not given, the purpose of private intervention may be misunderstood and violence offered may be extenuated, Russell on Crimes, p. 727, 5 Pat. L. J. 129.

8. Powers of private persons to arrest under the English Common Law.—At common law a private person may, on his own initiative, without warrant apprehend and detain, until they can be carried before a Magistrate, all persons found committing or attempting to commit a felony, R v. Hunt, 1 Mood 93; R v. Hourgh, 1 Mood. 207. He is also justified in using force to prevent the commission of felony, Handcock v. Baker, 2 B. and P. 260, and in arresting persons committing a breach of the public peace, or in giving them into the custody of a peace officer at the time of the breach or while there is danger of its renewal. In the case of private persons using their endeavours to bring felons to justice, these cautions ought to be observed, that a felony hath been actually committed, for if no felony hath been committed, no suspicion how wellsoever grounded, will bring the persons so interposing within the protection of the law. Russell on Crimes, p. 727.

Person arrested to be taken before Magistrate or officer in charge of Police station.

60. A Police-officer making an arrest without warrant shall without unnecessary delay and subject to the provisions herein contained as to bail take or send the person arrested before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, or before the officer in charge of a Police-station.

Notes.—1. Discharge of arrested persons.—A person arrested can only be discharged on his own bond, or on bail or under the special order of a Magistrate. See s. 63, infra.

2. Without unnecessary delay.—He cannot be detained for more than 24 hours (s. 61), except under the special orders of a Magistrate (s. 167). The belief that a Police-officer is entitled to detain every arrested person in custody at all events for 24 hours is quite unwarranted by the Code. S. 61 merely prescribes the maximum period of detention, where such detention is found to be absolutely necessary for purposes of investigation. "In no case is a Police officer justified by s. 61 in detaining a person for one single hour, except upon some reasonable ground justified by all the circumstances of the case. It is for the accused to show that he had reasonable grounds." W. R. 83.

3. Take or send the arrested person.—Where a Police officer, in whose sight a theft was committed, arrested the thief and being himself unable to take or send the accused to a Magistrate, sent a report on which the Magistrate issued a warrant it was held that under these circumstances the accused was legally brought before the Magistrate. 5 B H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 99.

4. Before the Magistrate, &c. into the very presence of the Magistrate, the object being that the person arrested should have the opportunity of applying forthwith for his discharge or release or of complaining of ill treatment by the Police and the like.

5. Procedure where person is arrested in district where he cannot be tried.—If the Police lawfully arrest a person without warrant in a district in which the investigation and trial cannot be made and heard and the offence is non-bailable or such person cannot give bail, they shall be guided in the disposal of such person by the provisions of the s. 60 of Cr. P. Code—C. P. Pol. Man., p. 187. See 23 C. W. N. 850.

61. No Police-officer shall detain in custody a person arrested without warrant for a longer period than under all the circumstances of the case is reasonable, and such period shall not, in the absence of a special order of a Magistrate under s. 167, exceed 24 hours, exclusive of the time necessary for the journey from the place of arrest to the Magistrate's Court.

Person arrested not to be detained more than 24 hours.

Notes.—1. Analogous provisions.—As to power of detention by officers in charge of Police-station in Upper Burma, see Reg. V of 1892 Sch. VII and in British Baluchistan, see 7 (1) of the Criminal Justice Regulation VIII of 1896. See s. 12 of the Bombay Village Police Act VIII of 1867 for similar provision allowing the accused to be forwarded to the District Police station within 24 hours from his arrest. This period is exclusive of the 24 hours allowed by this section. Ratanlal 22.

2. Section applies only to persons arrested without warrant.—This section applies only to persons arrested without warrant, while s. 81, infra provides for the case of persons arrested under warrant. The language of the corresponding s. 124 of the 1872 Code was wider and provided that no accused person in custody should be detained longer than 24 hours. See also 11 M. 93.

3. What amounts to Police "custody."—Police custody includes custody on the authority of the Police, every person who is kept in attendance to answer a charge in such a way that he is practically deprived of his freedom is to be considered as in custody. A Police-officer who, without himself arresting a person, directs some of the neighbours to take charge of him is responsible in the same way as if he had himself made the arrest. Requiring a person's attendance by letter and deputing a constable to accompany him with orders to prevent him from speaking to anyone amounts to an arrest.—Beng. Pol. Code p. 330. See also 2 M. H. C. R. 398 and 7 W. R. 3. Whenever an accused person is sent for and made to attend at a station house or his attendance is enforced while a local inquiry is proceeding he is to be considered as having been arrested.—Mad. Pol. Man., p. 92, 4 Bom. L. R. 79.

4. "Nazar Kaid" amounts to Police "custody."—Surveillance is one thing and detention in any kind of custody another. It is a mere evasion of the law to place a suspected person in what is ordinarily known as "Nazar Kaid" and to say that he is not under arrest. The system is still more objectionable when applied to a witness. When a person is placed under "Nazar Kaid" or Police supervision and restraint, he should be considered to be in the custody of the Police and the provisions of s. 60 Cr. P. C., should be held applicable to him.—Bom. Pol. Man., p. 96.

5. Custody for 24 hours must be continuous.—Section 61 does not mean that a person may be detained for 24 hours, not necessarily continuously, but that the total period of detention should not exceed 24 hours. It is not merely to be added up irrespective of circumstances. If a person is detained for two days and a half he is not said to be in continuous legal custody at any one time for 24 hours, 1 W. R. 5.

6. After 24 hours' confinement may become wrongful.—In no case is a Police-officer justified in detaining a person for one single hour, except upon some reasonable ground justified by all the circumstances of the case. The time during which a party is kept in wrongful confinement is immaterial except with reference to the extent of punishment, the longer the period the more severe the punishment, 6 W. R. 83. Even if a person be rightly arrested it does not rest with the Police-officer to keep the prisoner in custody where and as long as he pleases. Under no circumstances can he be detained without the special order of a Magistrate for more than 24 hours. Unless the special order has been obtained, the prisoner must either be discharged or sent on to the Magistrate, and any longer detention is absolutely unlawful, and though the Code is not so expressed upon this point as upon the time of confinement, still it is perfectly clear that it was intended that where a Police-officer arrested any person the prisoner should not be kept in confinement in any place which the subordinate officer might select, but that he should, if possible, be sent immediately to the Police-station and be placed in the custody of the officer in charge at the station who is the person entrusted by the Act with the conduct of the inquiry, 7 W. R. 3. It would be absolutely improper for a Police-officer to take the accused to a private house and there detain him in private custody. The provisions of this section are imperative and where a Police-officer is charged with having detained prisoners for more than 24 hours, without the special orders of a Magistrate, it is not necessary to prove that he detained them with a guilty knowledge, 19 W. R. 36.

7. Special order of a Magistrate, &c. of the nearest Magistrate whether having jurisdiction to try the case or not. There is no warrant for sending the person arrested to the next superior officer of the Police, instead of to the Magistrate. The special order under s. 167, infra is altogether a different thing from an order of adjournment and remand under s. 344 or s. 247, infra.

8. Order for indefinite detention illegal.—The order of a Magistrate sanctioning the detention by the Police of an accused person for an indefinite period is illegal, 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 31. Only if there be reasonable ground, can the accused be detained up to the limit of 24 hours. At the expiration of 24 hours from the time of arrest the accused must either be discharged or be brought before a Magistrate who can then remand under s. 344, infra for a period not exceeding 15 days.

9. Magistracy should vigilantly guard against illegal detentions by Police.—It is the duty of Magistrates of all classes vigilantly to guard His Majesty's subjects against needless and illegal detentions. The placing of an accused person before a Magistrate within 24 hours is absolutely prescribed by law. The Police-officer who fails to comply with this rule is himself guilty of an offence of which serious notice should be taken. Special orders for the detention of accused persons under s. 167, Cr. P. C., must not be granted to the Police without good and sufficient cause shown as a general rule, accused persons should be brought before the Magistrate having jurisdiction who if further investigation seems necessary can adjourn his inquiry from time to time under s. 344—Bom. H. C. Cr. Cr., p. 2. A remand to Police custody ought to be granted only in cases of real necessity, and when there is good reason to believe that the accused can point out the property or do something that will assist in elucidating the case—Punjab Bk. Cr., p. 167. Magistrates should require applications by the Police to detain accused persons in their custody for more than 24 hours to be on specific grounds and to show good cause for the presence of the accused being necessary at the Police station.

10. Reasons for prolonged detention in Police custody to be recorded.—A Magistrate authorizing detention in the custody of the Police under s. 167 should record his reasons for so doing. He can make an order under that section only when the accused has been produced before him. 13 W. R. 27 = 5 B. L. R. 274.

11. Procedure when women arrested after childbirth.—Women accused of any offences, if arrested so soon after childbirth that they cannot at once be taken before the Magistrate without personal suffering and risk to health, should not ordinarily be removed until they are in a proper condition to travel. They should be allowed to remain under proper charge in the care of their relations, or be sent to the nearest dispensary and suffered to remain there until the officer in charge of the dispensary certifies that they are sufficiently recovered. In such cases sanction must be obtained by the Police from the nearest Magistrate for their detention at their homes, or at the dispensary beyond the period of 24 hours allowed by s. 61 of the Cr. P. C.—Bom. H. C. Cr. Cr. p. 3.

12. Use of handcuffs.—“In all heinous cases, where a single prisoner is sent in he should be handcuffed. When two or more prisoners are sent, they should be handcuffed to each other, two and two. In cases not of a heinous nature the prisoner should not be handcuffed unless violent, and then only by order of the officer in charge of the station not below the rank of Sub-Inspector.” Beng. Pol. Man., 1888, p. 398.

62. Officers in charge of Police stations shall report to the District Magistrate, or, if he so directs, to the Sub-divisional Magistrate, the cases of all persons arrested without warrant, within the limits of their respective stations, whether such persons have been admitted to bail or otherwise

apprehensions

Notes.—1. Scope and object of section.—Prompt action by Magistrates.—The object of ss 62 and 63 is that the Magistrate should promptly exercise authority, if necessary, with regard to all arrests by the Police, and they seem to have been framed with this view, that as no person can be released without the order of a Magistrate, except on bail or recognizance, the Magistrate should be responsible as well as the Police if a person illegally arrested remains unnecessarily in custody.—Punj. Civ. C., p 174. See Rules 11—14 issued by the Chief Court of the Punjab.—Punj. Civ. C., Vol II, pp 164 165. See also Ratanlal at pp. 254, 259 and 261 as to the scope and object of this section. This and the following sections, if properly worked, would be an effective safeguard against Police oppression

2. Failure to report is an offence.—Failure on the part of the Police-officer to send the report under this section may be punishable under s. 217, I P C.

3. 'Or otherwise.'—These words have apparently reference to the provisions of s. 59 (3).

63. No person who has been arrested by a Police-officer shall be discharged, except on his own bond, or on bail, or under the special order of a Magistrate

Discharge of person apprehended.

Note.—For bond, see Chapter XI and for bail, see Chapter XXIV

64. When any offence is committed in the presence of a Magistrate within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he may himself arrest or order any person to arrest the offender, and may thereupon, subject to the provisions herein contained as to bail, commit the offender to custody

Offence committed in Magistrate's presence

Note.—This section does not empower the Magistrate to try the offender himself.—This section is clearly not intended to trench upon the great principle embodied in s. 536, viz., that no Judge, etc., shall deal judicially with a case in which he is personally interested. Therefore, where a Magistrate, while travelling in a Railway carriage, requested the accused, who were fellow passengers to desist from smoking and on their contemptuously refusing to do so, arrested them and subsequently tried and convicted them under s. 35 of the Railways Act IX of 1879, it was held that in the circumstances of the case the Magistrate was legally and morally disqualified in exercising his judicial functions in relation to the offence imputed. Ratanlal 339.

65. Any Magistrate may at any time arrest or direct the arrest, in his presence within the local limits of his jurisdiction, of any person for whose arrest he is competent at the time and in the circumstances to issue a warrant

Arrest by, or in presence of, Magistrate

Note.—Scope of section.—The special provisions in s. 6 of the Bombay Gambling Act IV of 1887 must be read subject to the general provisions of this section and s. 105. As a first-class Magistrate has power under s. 6 of that Act to give authority under a special warrant to a Police-officer of the class designated in the section to make the arrest and the search, the Legislature must be presumed to have intended that the Magistrate of the first class, should have the authority to make the arrest and the search himself if necessary. 31 B 438 and see s. 105.

66. If a person in lawful custody escapes or is rescued, the person from whose custody he escaped or was rescued, may immediately pursue and arrest him in any place in British India

Power, on escape, to pursue and retake.

Note.—Section applies also to private persons making arrest.—This and the following sections correspond with s. 112 of the 1861, Code which had been omitted in the 1872 Code, but re-enacted in the 1882 Code. They apply to Police-officer as well as to private persons making arrests under the Code. For definition of British India, see General Clauses Act X of 1897, s. 3 (7). As to pursuit by Police-officers of an offender in other cases see ss. 54 and 58 and s. 42 for demanding the aid of private persons.

Provisions of ss 47, 48 and 49 to apply to arrests under s 66

67. The provisions of ss 47, 48 and 49 shall apply to arrests under s. 66, although the person making any such arrest is not acting under a warrant and is not a Police-officer having authority to arrest

CHAPTER VI.

OF PROCESSES TO COMPEL APPEARANCE

A.—Summons.

Form of summons

68. (1) Every summons issued by a Court under this Code shall be in writing, in duplicate signed and sealed by the presiding officer of such Court or by such other officer as the High Court may, from time to time, by rule, direct

Summons by whom served

(2) Such summons shall be served by a Police officer, or, subject to such rules as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf, by an officer of the Court issuing it or other public servant.

(3) This section applies also to the Police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

Notes.—1. Scope of section.—This is the only section which provides for the issue of a summons under the Code and a summons to an assessor must comply with the terms of this section, 1 G. W. N. CXVI. Under the 1872 Code, the scope of the corresponding section was limited to the service of summons on the accused only, but under this section, a summons may be (i) to the accused, (ii) to witness, (iii) to a person to show cause against some order, (iv) to a juror or assessor. As to form of summons to an accused person, see Sch. V, No 1, and see Form No XXXI as to witnesses, see also s. 205 and notes thereunder as to when a Magistrate may dispense with attendance of the accused.

2. Summons and warrant distinguished.—See Note 2, s 75

3. Some order must follow application for summons.—Where an application is made for process to compel the attendance of witnesses, it is the duty of the Court to grant or refuse it. It is improper to make an order merely directing the petition to be filed, 6 G. W. N. 848.

4. Writing.—As to definition of writing, see s. 3 (58) of the General Clauses Act X. of 1897

5. Circulars prescribing directions for issue of summonses.—Summonses issued under this section by Courts of Session, District Magistrates and first-class Magistrates may be signed and sealed by the Clerk of the Court, or, where there is no Clerk of the Court, by the Sheristadar, subject to the orders of the presiding officer of the Court.—Bom. H. C. Cr. Cr., p 10

In Madras, summonses issued to witnesses from the Magistrate's Court, may ordinarily be signed by the Chief Ministerial Officer of the Magistrate's establishment. "By order of the Court" should invariably be prefixed to the signature of the Ministerial officer in such a case.—Mad. H. C. Cr., No 1302, dated 29th April, 1891

A summons should contain the name of the father of the person summoned, his caste or tribe and his residence, so as to place his identity beyond all doubt. The Court from which the process is issued and the name of the district should also be set forth.—Punj. Cr., Vol II, p 151

6. Seal.—Official seals of Sessions Judges and Magistrates are prescribed by Bom. Act V of 1883, which repeals Bom. Act II of 1870, in Madras by Mad. Act VI of 1865, under which the seal of every Court of Session is a circular one, two inches in diameter, and bears thereon the Royal Arms with the inscription, "THE COURT OF SESSIONS OF THE—DIVISION," seals have also been prescribed for all other Criminal Courts. For disobedience of a summons not sealed, see Weir I, 99.

7. Formalities and contents of valid summons.—A summons should be clear and specific in its terms as to the title of the Court, the place at which, the day and the time of the day when the attendance of the person summoned is required. The person summoned is not to leave the Court without ascertaining the date to which it is

(i) Must be in writing.—See s. 2(3) of the General Clauses Act X of 1857, for definition of writing. See Weir I, 28 and 6 Mad. R. C. R. App. X.

(ii) Must be signed.—Every summons should be signed in full by the officer by whom it is issued with the name of his office or the capacity in which he acts. The practice of signing initials only or using a stamp is objectionable (Prac. Crim. J. II p. 151).

(iii) Must be sealed.—Where a summons was presented for signature by Magistrate Arjilli of 1860, s. 2 under which it was issued a court held that a summons so presented was valid. Weir I, 100, cf. 42 C. 703; 27 M. L. J. 23.

(iv) Must state the place at which the person summoned is to appear.—The place at which the person summoned is to appear must be clearly specified. Weir I, 100; 81. A person is not bound to obey a summons which directs him to appear at such place in camp as the Magistrate might be on the date fixed, (1877) Calm D. Cr. L. No. 29. A Magistrate cannot issue a summons requiring a person to appear before the Police, 34 C. 220.

(v) Must state the date and time when the person must appear.—See s. A. 7; Weir I, 100.

(vi) Must direct person summoned not to depart without leave.—Where the accused who was summoned to appear and answer a criminal charge attended the Magistrate's Court, but not finding the Magistrate present at the time mentioned in the summons departed after waiting two or three minutes it was held he was bound to wait a reasonable time and by not having done so had rendered himself liable under s. 174 I P. C., 10 B. 93; 14 W. R. 20; but see 20 M. 31; Weir I, 99, where it was held that in the absence of a direction that he should not leave without permission, the person departing is not guilty.

B. Result of omitting formalities.—When these formalities are not observed, conviction for disobedience to a summons under s. 174 I P. C., will not be sustained s. A. 7. Every summons should be signed in full by the officer by whom it is issued with the name of his office or the capacity in which he acts. The practice of signing initials only or using a stamp is objectionable (Prac. Crim. Vol. II p. 151), but having regard to the new illustration to s. 537, infra it will purely be an irregularity and will not affect the validity of the proceedings, 8 A. 252. See also 16 A. 89; 5 C. W. N. 417; 6 M. 396 and 11 C. 111 = L. R. 11 J. A. 156.

9. Summons to appear at a place outside British India is bad.—It is no offence to disobey a summons which directs a person to appear at a place outside British India, 16 M. 443.

10. Accused must not be prejudiced by defective summons.—Where a party summoned by a Municipality did not appear, it was held that the Municipality had no opportunity to have the witnesses for the prosecution examined. 24 W. R. 53.

11. Mamlatdar can try cases of contempt of his authority as Mamlatdar.—A Magistrate is not barred by law from trying an accused person under s. 174, I P. C., for disobedience of a summons issued by him in his capacity of Mamlatdar, 18 B. 380 (P. B.), but see 14 W. R. 20, and notes to s. 487.

12. Substitution of letter for summons in certain cases.—In the case of first and second-class Sirdars and other native gentlemen of high position, a letter signed by the Judge or Magistrate, and to the same effect as Form I or XXXI, Sch. V, may be substituted for the ordinary summons.—Bom. H. C. Cr. Cir., p. 10.

13. Process fees intended to cover all expenses.—The postage charges on all processes required to be transmitted by post, together with the registration fee if the cover is required to be registered should be paid by means of service postage stamps, without any additional charge being levied from the parties at whose instance the process is issued. The process fee is intended to cover all the expenses of serving the process.—C. P. Cr. Cir., No. 6.

14. Process fee in Presidency towns.—Section 57 of the Presidency Magistrate's Act IV of 1877 provides—

‘A fee of 8 annas must be paid for every summons or warrant issued by a Presidency Magistrate, except in the case of a summons to attend and give evidence or to produce documents in which case there must be paid a fee of 4 annas. Provided that such Magistrate may in any case remit any such fee if he is satisfied that the complainant is unable to pay the same and shall remit it when the complaint is made by a public servant in the execution of his duty.’

15 Service of Feudatory Court's processes—The Police will not execute or serve in British territory any warrant or summons issued by Feudatory Chiefs or their Courts. Should any such process be sent to them they must decline to serve them—C P Pol Man p 186

16 Service by Police officer—Under s. 11 of Act XXIV of 1859 every person appointed a Police officer receives on his enrolment a certificate under the seal of the Inspector-General by virtue of which he is vested with the powers functions and privileges of a Police-officer. Such certificate ceases to have effect whenever the person named in it is suspended or dismissed or otherwise removed from employment in the Police Force and should thereupon be immediately surrendered to his superior officer or other person empowered to receive it. No person who has not been duly appointed as aforesaid can be held to be a Police-officer within the meaning of s. 44 of that Act. The distinction between the general Police and the village Police has been fully recognised in that Act—See M H C Proceedings 28th June 1867

17 Madras rules for service of criminal processes—The following rules regarding the service of criminal processes are in force in the Presidency of Madras

1 (a) All criminal processes and those under Act XIII of 1859 issued by Magistrates shall ordinarily be served by the Police. the procedure regarding the service of summons and execution of warrants is laid down in the Code of Criminal Procedure ss 68 to 86

Note—The Police must also accept and serve summonses issued to witnesses from a Magistrate's Court when the summonses are signed by the Chief Ministerial Officer of the Magistrate's establishment instead of by the Magistrate himself

(b) All processes issued by Cantonment Magistrates including those issued in civil cases in conformity with Madras Act I of 1868 within Military Cantonments, will be served by the Police

(c) It is not the duty of the Police to deliver certificates issued by Magistrates for the refund of fines to parties nor should they be sent with parties who have been fined to their villages for the purpose of receiving the fine or bringing the parties back if the fine be not forthcoming. The law requires that the persons fined should produce the fine himself directly the sentence is passed

(d) It is not the duty of the Police to serve processes of the Salt and Abkari Department. Superintendents should instruct Inspectors to return such processes unless they are for Police constables themselves

2 Superintendents are requested to obtain service postage stamps from the District Magistrate and issue them to their Cusbah Station house officers for use. Summonses should be returned after service by post paid and not bearing

3 (a) A register of processes will be kept at all stations. Each sub-station will send a weekly extract to the Cusbah-station and the Cusbah Station house officer will forward the extracts received from out stations together with his own to the District Police Office through the Inspector of the Division

(b) Warrants though sent to other divisions for execution should be entered in the register of the station where they were first received. The words 'Registered No. at station' will then be written across the face of the process to obviate mistakes and double registration

(c) Remand warrants will be entered in the register of processes. they will afterwards be handed over to the keeper of the jail along with the prisoners to whom they refer. A Remand Warrant ought to be addressed to the keeper of the jail in which the prisoner is to be confined and should remain in his custody as long as the prisoner is so

(d) All unexecuted warrants and unserved summonses of one week must appear in red ink in the next and all following weeks returns till they are executed when they will disappear from the return—M H C Pol Man Vol I pp 46 and 47

(e) Summonses should as a rule be served personally on the persons summoned. special care must be taken to have summonses for jurors and assessors served personally. If the Police really take pains service can generally be effected in person as rural witnesses do not often wander much from their villages and usually return home in the evening. But where the persons summoned cannot by the exercise of due diligence be found the duplicates of summonses should be left for them with some adult male member of their families, and it is only when these two courses fail that the serving officer must adopt the last course namely affixing the duplicates to the doors of some conspicuous part of the houses in which persons summoned ordinarily reside

(f) There shall be no great proceedings in the office of an attorney in the return of originals to the Magistrate with necessary endorsement and in the execution of warrants (s. 21 of the Police Act XXIV of 1860).

All cases of delay are the owner's deal with. If the person wanted absconded, 10 or 15 days at the most being sufficient to execute a writ, a proclamation for him should be applied for under s. 87, Cr. P. C.

(g) The Police should avoid their own errors, even if the fact that the party appeared before the Magistrate or that his case has been disposed of. It is the interest of each party for his own protection to obtain an order from the Magistrate to cancel the warrant. The Police holding a warrant are always protected under s. 41 of the Police Act.

(h) When requesting Magistrate's aid under s. 87, Cr. P. C., the warrants should not be returned. They must be retained in the station until they are executed (warrants can be returned only through the District Superintendent or the Assistant Superintendent of Police, P. O. 162 (8)). An occurrence report must be submitted to the Magistrate explaining fully the attempts made to execute the said warrants and all particulars to prove to the Magistrate that the man is really absconding. On this the Magistrate can issue his proclamation.

(i) In charge-sheet cases, care should be taken that all the prosecution witnesses are present when the charges sheet is brought to the Magistrate, or that recognizances are properly entered into under s. 170, Cr. P. C.—Pils & Gazette, dated 11th September, 1897. For Fugals rules as to service of summons see Calcutta Gazette, 1892 Pt. I p. 947. For Assam rules see Assam Manual p. 187, for the Punjab rules see Punjab Circ., Vol. II pp. 151-154.

Summons how served

69. (1) The summons shall if practicable be served personally on the person summoned, by delivering or tendering to him one of the duplicates of the summons.

Signature of receipt for summons

(2) Every person on whom a summons is so served shall, if so required by the serving officer, sign a receipt therefor on the back of the other duplicate.

(3) Service of a summons on an incorporated company or other body corporate may be effected by serving it on the secretary, local manager, or other principal officer of the Corporation or by registered post letter addressed to the chief officer of the Corporation in British India. In such case the service shall be deemed to have been effected when the letter would arrive in ordinary course of post.

Notes.—1. Mode of serving summons.—Cf A. 10 of Ord. V of Civil Procedure Code V of 1908. It, however, the person refuses to take the summons, mere tendering amounts to sufficient service, 1888 A. W. N. 93. See also 23 M. L. J. 505 = 16 Cr. L. J. 477. The mere showing to a witness of a summons is not sufficient service. Either the original should be left with the witness, or should be exhibited to him and a copy of it delivered or tendered 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 20. If the person summoned refuses to take the copy, it would be sufficient to inform him of its nature and throw it down in his presence—Redpath v. Williams, 3 Bing. 443 = 11 Moore 333. See contra Aldred v. Hicks, 5 Taunton 188. It is not necessary to leave it in his actual corporal possession. But where the defendant was at an upper window of a house and the process server who was outside called out to him, telling him he had a writ against him and held up a copy for him to see and then threw it down in the presence of the defendant's wife. It was held this was not a sufficient service—Heath v. White, 2 D. and L. 48.

2. Mere refusal to sign a receipt for summons is not an offence under s. 173 or s. 180 I. P. C., 20 C. 338. See also 3 C. 621 and 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 34. Refusing to receive summons is no offence, 5 M. 199, 40 A. 577.

3. Service on public servant.—As to service on a servant of Government or of a Railway Company, see s. 72 and C. H. C. Rules and Orders p. 4.

4. Every summons under the Code must be served as provided by this section.—This is the only section which provides for the procedure for the service of any summons. Therefore any other mode, e.g. sending summons by post in a registered cover adopted for such service is illegal and not justifiable summons to attend as an assessor must be served as provided by this section 1 C. W. N. CXVI.

5. Procedure herein laid down does not apply to execution of warrants.—See s. 46, supra as to how to make an arrest. The procedure for executing warrants is different from the method of serving summons. The former may be done (ss 79 and 80) only by a Police-officer, while there is no such restriction in the case of service of summons. It might be effected by any authorized officer of Court, 27 C. 457.

6. Service on the pleader of a party is not sufficient in criminal cases, 6 C. W. N. 927; Cf 27 C. 985.

7. Has the process-server right to enter any house without permission?—"I do not think that the fact of a subpoena being entrusted to a process-server gives him a general right of entry into any house without obtaining the permission of the owner or person in charge. Such a general power to enter any house at any time is not given by any of the provisions of the Code (Civ) and would in my opinion be a serious violation of private rights. The mere fact that the owner asked the process-server to get out of his house would not be an offence" 28 M. L. J. 504

70. Where the person summoned cannot by the exercise of due diligence be found the summons may be served by leaving one of the duplicates for him with some adult male member of his family, or, in a Presidency town, with his servant residing with him, and the person with whom the summons is so left, shall, if so required by the serving officer, sign a receipt therefor on the back of the other duplicate

Service when person summoned cannot be found.

Notes—1. Affidavit as to service of summons when necessary.—When the Police serve a summons outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court from which it is issued, and in all cases in which it is probable that the Police-officer, who serves a summons will not be present at the hearing of the case if the duplicate of the summons has not been endorsed in manner provided by s. 69 or 70, Cr P C, the Police-officer who has served such summons shall make an affidavit, in the form annexed, before the nearest Magistrate, and such affidavit and the duplicate of such summons shall be returned into the Court out of which such summons issued —

FORM OF AFFIDAVIT

I A	son of B	hereby solemnly declare that I did on	the	day of serve	son of	of	, with the summons now shown to me and marked A by delivery (or tendering) a duplicate to him (or by leaving a duplicate for him with an adult male member of his family residing with him, or by affixing a duplicate to a conspicuous part of his house or homestead)
Taken the	day of	191	before me

—Reg & Ord, N W P s 10 p 293

2. Cannot be found by the exercise of due diligence.—Before the Court can proceed against the accused, it must be shown by affidavit from the person entrusted with the service of the summons, that he has made his endeavours to effect personal service on him and that he has evaded such service or that he cannot be found, 1392 A. W. N., p 170. It is not in every case where the accused is not found that resort can be had for substituted service but only where he cannot be found by the exercise of due diligence. Cf the cases 19 C. 201; 21 M 419, 325, 25 C. 101; 3 C. W. N. 307, 20 W R 23 (Civ.) as to what is good service under Rule 17 of Order V of the Civil Procedure Code V of 1903

3. Service on adult male member of the family residing with him —Very often great injustice might arise from effecting service in this way, especially where there are quarrels and serious misunderstandings in a Hindu family, and in consequence, its members are no longer living in commensality, but each branch occupies a separate portion of the family dwelling house

4. Outside the Presidency-towns, service cannot be effected on a servant.—See 1899 A. W. N. 13.

Procedure when service cannot be effected as before provided.

71. If service in the manner mentioned in ss 69 and 70 cannot, by the exercise of due diligence be effected, the serving officer shall affix one of the duplicates of the summons to some conspicuous part of the house or homestead in which the person summoned ordinarily resides, and thereupon the summons shall be deemed to have been duly served

Notes.—1. Under the 1872 Code the mode of service prescribed by this section was optional. Now it is declared that it shall be the ordinary procedure.

2. Rules for service on public or Railway servants.—The following rules are current in different provinces regarding summoning public or Railway servants to give evidence in Criminal Courts.

Madras.—In every case where the attendance of a public servant summoned as a witness was reasonable and his conduct in the case is not condemned the Courts are required to give such public servant a certificate to that effect, in order to establish his right to pay. The practice where it exists of stopping the wages of public servants for the time they may be absent from duty in attendance, as witnesses before Courts of Justice in obedience to legal process, is forbidden, and no departmental rules to the contrary can be recognized.—(G O 4th April 1875 No 823 Judicial), Madras Rules A 1 B.

Bengal.—(a) Whenever a summons to appear as a witness in a criminal case is issued against an officer of Police it shall be served upon such officer through the Superintendent of the District, or the Assistant in charge of the Sub-division to which such officer may belong.—Cal H C C O No 14 of 6th December 1868

(b) All summonses on Medical Subordinates at Sub-divisions must be served through the Magistrate or other executive head of the district in order to enable them in communication with the Civil Surgeon to make arrangements for the conduct of their medical duties during their absence.—Cal H C C O No 1 of 10th January 1868

(c) Whenever it may be necessary to summon an officer or soldier in military employ to attend a Civil or Criminal Court as a witness the process-server who is to serve the summons must be instructed to take it under cover to the officer in command of the regiment or detachment with which the witness may be serving and to apply for his assistance in serving it. With this assistance the process-server shall then proceed to serve the process and shall make his return direct to the Court. In such cases sufficient time should always be given to admit of arrangements being made for the relief of the witness summoned.—Cal H C C O No 24 of 24th June, 1878.

(d) When Jail or other Departmental officers of Government resident in the station are summoned as witnesses arrangements should be made to send for them only when actually wanted.—Cal H C C O No 8 of 22nd August, 1878—See Cal G A & C O p 4

United Provinces.—When a summons is to be served on a person in the active service of the Government the head of the office to whom the summons is ordinarily to be sent in duplicate shall be deemed to be—

(a) in the case of an officer or soldier in military employment the officer in command locally to the corps or department in which such person may be serving,

(b) in the case of a gazetted officer in the Department of Land Revenue and General Administration or in the Judicial department when his attendance is required by any Court beyond the limits of the district in which he is serving the Chief Secretary to Government,

(c) in the case of a gazetted officer in any other department, the head of that department.

When a person mentioned in clause (b) or (c) above, is required to attend at a Court beyond the limits of the districts or area in which he is serving, the Court issuing the summons, unless the case is one of extreme urgency, shall allow sufficient time for arrangements to be made for the performance of the duties of such person during his absence

When a summons is to be served upon any person in the active service of a Railway Company, 'the head of the office' to whom the summons is ordinarily to be sent in duplicate shall be the officer named in Appendix B to these rules, and the Court issuing the summons, unless the case is one of extreme urgency, shall allow sufficient time for arrangements to be made for the performance of the duties of such officer during his absence. Notice of the intended arrest of a Railway servant or of a person working on a Railway in the service of a contractor shall be given in a similar manner when circumstances permit, to the said company or contractor, —All R & O, pp 7-8

Punjab.—(1) When the person summoned is in the active service of Government, or of any Railway Company or Administration, the Court or Magistrate issuing the summons shall ordinarily send it in duplicate, to the head of the office in which the person summoned is employed, who will cause the summons to be served on the person named therein in accordance with the provisions of s 72 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. This rule applies to every summons issued under the Code (s 93) (2) When the summons has to be served on an incorporated company or other body corporate such as Municipal Committee, service may be effected by serving the summons on the Secretary, Local Manager or the Principal of the Corporation or by registered post to the Chief Officer of the Corporation in British India. In such case the service shall be deemed to have been effected when the letter would arrive in the ordinary course of post. (3) Whenever a summons to appear as a witness is issued to an officer of Police, it should be served upon such officer through the District Superintendent of Police or, in the case of an out post the Assistant District Superintendent in charge of the out post to which the individual summoned may belong. (4) It has been brought to notice that considerable inconvenience results from the indiscriminate summoning of the superior officers of the Railway to give evidence on points of Railway practice, custom orders etc. which could equally well be done by subordinate Railway officials at or near the place where the trial is being held. Subordinate Courts should, therefore, in the exercise of their discretion, abstain from requiring the attendance of the Manager or other high officials of the Railway, unless in special cases in which their evidence is absolutely necessary. (5) To assist the Court in summoning subordinate officials who would most probably be able to give the evidence required with the smallest inconvenience to the Railway, a list of the superior officers under whose immediate orders the Railway subordinates are, is given in Appendix No I to this volume, and all processes for the attendance of any subordinate official should ordinarily be served through his immediate superior unless where a strict adherence to this rule would cause delay or inconvenience. (6) When a Criminal Court issues a summons for the appearance of a soldier in military employ, it should send it for service to the officer commanding the regiment in which such soldier is serving. The provisions of s 82 of the Code of Criminal Procedure are wide enough to include persons in military employ, and whenever it is necessary to summon an officer or soldier or other persons in military employ, the summons should always be sent for service to the officer commanding the regiment in which such officer, soldier or other person is serving, unless there are special reasons which should be recorded for proceeding otherwise.—Punjab Cr Vol II pp 152 153

73. When a Court desires that a summons issued by it shall be served at any place outside the local limits of its jurisdiction, it shall ordinarily send such summons in duplicate to a Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person summoned resides or is to be there served

Notes—1. Service on witness resident in Bombay.—In the Bombay Presidency summons issued by Magistrates for service on witnesses living in Bombay, should be sent for service to the Chief Presidency Magistrate and not to the Commissioner of Police.—Rule 10, Bom Cr O, p 8

2. Witnesses resident in Native States.—The summons to a witness residing in a Native State must contain a full description of the person summoned so that he may be easily identified such as his age, caste, father's name, village and the town well known in its neighbourhood. It should also state the probable time during which he will be detained. In fixing the date for his attendance, reasonable time must be allowed for his being found and sent off. When practicable, his batla must accompany the summons. Summoning such witnesses for the preliminary inquiry should be avoided unless indispensable.—B H C Bk Cr p 10

B—Warrant of Arrest.*

Form of warrant of arrest. 75. (1) Every warrant of arrest issued by a Court under this Code shall be in writing, signed by the presiding officer, or, in the case of a Bench of Magistrates, by any member of such Bench, and shall bear the seal of the Court.

Continuance of warrant of arrest. (2) Every such warrant shall remain in force until it is cancelled by the Court which issued it, or until it is executed.

Notes.—L. Form of warrant.—As to the form of warrant of arrest, see Sch. V, No. 2. When any Act does not provide a form of warrant, the form to be used is the ordinary one prescribed by the Code of Criminal Procedure.—Per STARLING, J. in 38 B. 836. Every warrant should state, as shortly as possible, the special matter on which it proceeds. Every warrant is to be in the form given in the second schedule or to the like effect. A strict adherence to the form of warrants of arrest prescribed by the Code will tend to prevent their being granted irregularly and without inquiry as to whether the circumstances justify their issue.—Punj Cir., Vol II p 185

7. Warrant and summons to be distinguished.—A summons is always addressed to the person whose attendance is required, but a warrant is not an order served on any person, it is simply an order to the Police to arrest a person, 5 W. R. 71; C. L. J. 825; 2 see also 25 P. R. 1890 and Ratanlal 192. Great care should be exercised in having forms of warrants distinguished from forms of summons and in making the Police and the public acquainted with the difference. Different tinted paper and lithographed or printed forms should always be used. The people of the country will gradually become familiar with the appearance of each sort of process and know how to act. All vernacular warrants of commitment to jail should be drawn up in the Roman character, except in the case of Native Magistrates who are unable to read this character, and in no case should ordinary country ink be used in filling up the blanks in the printed form of warrant, or in warrants drawn up upon English paper.—Punj Cir., Vol II, p 155

3. In what cases warrants may be issued.—A warrant may be issued for the attendance of (1) an accused, (2) a person called upon to show cause against a Magistrate's order, or (3) a witness subject to provisions of s. 90; but not for the attendance of a juror or an assessor, see s. 90. Even in a warrant case, it is open to a Magistrate to issue a summons, see s. 204 and Notes thereunder. Great care should also be taken that a warrant, which always implies personal arrest and restraint, is never issued when a summons to attend would be sufficient for the ends of justice, and any attempt to coerce or restrain a party called upon to appear in obedience to a summons should be checked and punished. It must be understood that the Police will carry out to the letter the instructions issued in the writ handed over to them; but the Magistrate is responsible for the consequences of an informal or illegal process bearing his seal and signature.—Punj Cir., Vol II, p 156

4. Magistrate may issue warrants only on good and legal grounds.—There is no doubt that the law is just as jealous of personal liberty in India as it is in England and that liberty cannot lightly be taken away except under circumstances which are clearly prescribed by positive law. The Magistrate should arrest on the strength of personal knowledge, ie, knowledge derived from testimony legally given before him, that an offence has been committed. The report of the Police or any statement not on oath or short of an actual formal complaint is not sufficient to give the Magistrate jurisdiction to issue a warrant, 13 W. R. 27; 4 B. L. R. App. 1. A belief founded on private and anonymous information is not enough.

5. Caution in issuing warrants against purdah woman.—Unless and until a Magistrate has good reason to believe that there is strong likelihood of the charge being proved, an accused, if she be really a purdah woman of good position, should not be ordinarily compelled to appear in person in the first instance, 20 P. W. R. 1908 = 8 Cr. L. J. 454.

6. Essential requisites of a warrant.—A warrant must comply strictly with the terms of the Act under which it is issued, see 37 C. 122. A warrant therefore—

(i) Must be in writing—See s 3 (58) of the General Clauses Act X of 1887.

(ii) Must be signed—(a) The affixing of a signature with a stamp and not with a pen would be more than a mere irregularity, 6 M. 396. (b) The warrant must be signed in full. In 23 C. 896 it was laid down that a warrant merely initialled by a Magistrate is not legal. Contra see 8 A. 293. See also 15 A. 59; 11 C. 111 = 11 L. A. 186; 23 P. R. 1910; 3 Pat. L. J. 493.

(iii) Must be sealed—A seal is an essential addition to a warrant under ordinary circumstances. The omission of a seal will in the absence of a statutory provision to the contrary, render the warrant void In re Phipps, 11 W. R. 780 (Eng.); 9 Bom. H. C. R. 154; 18 B. 636 at p. 668; 41 C. 708. It is not now necessary as under s 159 of the 1872 Code, that the warrant should be sealed with the seal of the Magistrate, it should bear the seal of the Court.

(iv) Must clearly identify the person to be arrested—A warrant should contain a distinct and unequivocal intimation to the person that he is the individual meant to be apprehended and must surrender to the officers, and it must be noted that the form of warrant provided by the Code requires that his residence should be inserted. Where, therefore, a warrant authorized the committal of James Hastings, without giving any description as to what James Hastings was indicated thereby, held such a warrant was illegal as it would justify the Police to arrest any one of that name whoever he may be and wherever he may be found, the number of persons liable to be arrested under it being limited only by the number of persons bearing that name, 9 Bom. H. C. R. 154 following Hood's case (1 Moor. Cr. Ca. 281), where the Christian name only of the person to be arrested was omitted, but a full description was given of him still the Judges were unanimously of opinion that the warrant was bad. See also 18 B. 636 and Notes 7 and 10 below. In all warrants and processes of every description, whether under the Code of Criminal Procedure or any other law in force, the father's name, caste, tribe or nationality and residence of the person to be arrested, summoned, etc., should be entered, so as to place his identity beyond all doubt. The warrant should also set forth the Court from which it issues, and the name of the district. Punj Cir. Vol. II, p 155

(v) Must specify the offence charged—See form of warrant No II, in Schedule V. Where a warrant did not specify a punishable offence and where it had been issued upon a statement not sufficient to make out any offence held the warrant was bad 6 B. L. R. App. 129; 15 W. R. 4. A warrant issued by a Magistrate for the apprehension of a party to answer a charge, should state the specific offence with which the party is charged and that information thereof was duly made on oath before the Magistrate, Candle v. Seymour, 1 Q. B. 889 = 10 L. J. M. C. 130. Under the New York Code, s 152, it is sufficient if a criminal warrant indicated with reasonable certainty the offence sought to be charged, Pratt v. Bogardus, 49 Barb 87. It is not necessary to set out the circumstances of the offence, Atkinson v. Spencer, 9 Wend 62; nor the facts on which the charge is predicated, People v. McLeod, 1 Hill 371.

(vi) Warrant must name the persons who are to execute the warrant—See ss 77, 78 and 79 and Notes thereunder. The name and designation of the person or persons who is or are to execute the warrant must appear in the warrant, see form of warrant. Where the name is left blank, the 'warrant is illegal, 14 Cr. L. J. 142 (Panj). A civil warrant addressed not by name, but to the bailiff of the Court' is not illegal, 1915 W. N. R. 498 = 15 Cr. L. J. 576.

(vii) Must indicate the authority of the Magistrate—The warrant should also set forth the Court from which it issues. Warrants issued by Magistrates acting by special statutory authority and out of the course of the common law ought to show on the face of them by direct averment or reasonable intendment the authority of the Magistrate, Kaiser on Crimes p 798. The principle is that nothing is to be taken out of the jurisdiction of a superior Court by giving a warrant to the officer of the inferior law, but that what is especially appears to be so, and that nothing shall be intended to be within the jurisdiction of an inferior Court but that which is expressly so allowed. Howard v. Goss 11 Q. B. 452; 29 C. 379; 2 Pat. L. J. 417.

7. Warrant containing wrong description of person to be arrested cannot be executed.—A warrant which contains a wrong description of the person is not a valid warrant. Where a warrant was made out against "D. son of C." but in the course of trial or the examination of the accused it was found that his father's name was different, the warrant was held invalid. In such cases in order to have a conviction for an illegal disobedience of warrant the onus is on the person who claims that the accused is the person against whom the warrant was issued, and not for the accused to show that he is not the person. All ex tenore will be made against, and none in favour of the legality of a warrant issued by an inferior Court, 23 C. 379. A warrant was issued to arrest J. H. for stealing a mare. The constable arrested K. H. who was the party against whom information had been given and against whom the Magistrate intended to issue his warrant and who was supposed to be called J. H. while his name, however, was really K. H., J. H. being the name of his father. The person who made the charge before the Magistrate pointed out K. H. as the man who had stolen the mare and a person present said that his name was J. H., and there was clearly evidence to go to the jury that K. H. was the man intended to be taken up. Held that the law would not justify the constable's act, the warrant being against J. and not against K., although K. was the party intended to be taken, that a person cannot be lawfully taken under a warrant in which he is described by name that does not belong to him, unless he has called himself by the wrong name, Hayes v. Bush 1 M. and O. 775. A warrant reciting a complaint against John R. Miller for a felony and commanding the officer to arrest the said William Miller is no justification for the arrest of John R. Miller, though the person intended—Miller v. Foley 25 Barb. 630. A misnomer of a person in a process on which an arrest is made, subjects the actors to an action for false imprisonment—Scall v. Lily Wend 552.

8. General warrants are illegal.—General warrants are illegal and void Miney v. Beach 1 W. Bl. 555. The issuing of a general warrant which means a warrant to apprehend all persons committing a particular offence or class of offences is illegal, 9 B. H. C. R. 154. See also 23 A. 1, where it was held that a warrant issued under s. 3 of the Public Gambling Act 1867, for searching any house the Police-officer to whom the warrant was issued might think proper to search was illegal. No general warrants for arrest should ever be issued by a Court of Justice. Every warrant should state as shortly as possible the special matter on which it proceeds. A strict adherence to the form of warrants of arrest prescribed in the Code will tend to prevent their being granted irregularly and without inquiry as to whether the circumstances justify their issue. Purj Cir p 144.

9. Blank warrants are illegal.—A warrant issued with a blank in it and the blank afterwards filled up is illegal R. v. Stockley, 1 East P. C. 310. See also Houston v. Barrow 6 T. R. 122 = 3 R. R. 135; R. v. Wicks 8 T. R. 434. A warrant of commitment contained the names of the persons to be arrested in the margin but not in the body which was in blank, held no answer to an action for false imprisonment Hodgins v. Poe, 16 W. R. 224 (Eng.) See also 14 Cr. L. J. 142 (Punj.)

10. Conditional warrant for arrest is illegal.—In 18 B. 636 the appellant and five other foreigners were ordered by a warrant, under Act III of 1864 to remove themselves from British India. The warrant was in the following form —

Warrant—“In the exercise of the power conferred by s. 3 of Act III of 1864 the Right Hon. ble the Governor in Council is pleased hereby to direct that Alter Cauffman alias Alter Goolyk do forthwith remove himself from British India by sea to Odessa.

“And all officers to whom this order may be communicated are required to see that it is duly obeyed, and, in the event of its being infringed, to apprehend and detain the said Alter Cauffman alias Alter Goolyk in safe custody in the jail of Bombay, under s. 4 of the said Act, until he shall be lawfully discharged therefrom.” The warrant was signed by the Secretary to Government, and was directed to the Commissioner of Police and to the Superintendent of the Jail. Held, that the warrants were not valid warrants. For they were irregular in that they contained an order to the person named in them to do a certain thing with a further conditional order for his imprisonment in the event of his not doing it. Then in case of his refusal or neglect to comply with its terms, there ought to have been a further order by the Governor in Council authorizing his arrest and detention in jail” Per BAYLEY, J., at p 658. “The mischief of the form used is that on the face of it the determination as to whether the person to whom the order is addressed has obeyed it or not, is left to the officer in charge of the warrant whereas it is the authority which issues the order which ought to determine that point” Per STARLING J., at p 667. See also 4 Bom. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 37, 6 Mad. H. C. R. App. XXIV.

11. Mode of executing warrants.—See s 46 as to how an arrest is to be made. The person arresting must notify the substance thereof to the person to be arrested, see s 80. It is also advisable that the officer's status must be notified unless his function is sufficiently indicated by his uniform or other sign of authority. See Russell on Crimes, pp 734—736.

12. Procedure on execution warrant.—Person arrested must be brought before Court without delay, see ss 81 and 85. When a prisoner is brought before a Magistrate the Magistrate cannot lawfully commit to prison or remand him without sufficient grounds and in the complete absence of evidence, there can be no grounds, 5 B. L. R. 274 = 13 W. R. 27.

13. Procedure when warrant of arrest not executed.—Warrants of arrest should be made returnable on execution or alternatively after a given time, e.g. six months. In the latter case they should be accompanied on return by a Police report as to whether the accused has been heard of and is likely to come within reach. After re-issue for a certain number of times, the warrant thus returned should be put upon a dormant file in capital cases after seven years; in cases subject to transportation or imprisonment for not less than seven years after three years in less important cases after a year. In the event of information reaching the Magistrate that the accused has been in the district or where he could be arrested the warrant should be re-issued at the Magistrate's discretion.—Bom H C Cr Cir, p 11. No warrant of arrest in which arrest does not immediately follow shall be recorded as finally executed until six weeks have expired from the date of receipt of warrant at the Police-station, and if the accused is not arrested within that period, intimation shall be given to the Magistrate having jurisdiction that the offender is not forthcoming and suggesting the issue of a proclamation and attachment of property under ss 87 and 88, post—Reg & Ord, N-W P, p 288.

14. How long criminal warrant remains in force.—When the Legislature has not prescribed any period limiting the time during which a warrant is to be in force, the presumption is that it retains its validity until it is executed, Dickenson v Brown, Peak N. P. 307; Mayhew v Parker, 3 T. R. 110; 28 B 129. The force of a warrant of arrest continues until it is cancelled, in which case, it is at an end and cannot be re-issued, 1 C. W. N 650. A warrant, on which there is an endorsement for bail to be taken for the appearance of the accused on a certain date (s 76), does not lapse on the expiry of that date, after that date only the direction to take bail is not valid, the Court which issued it or until it is executed. An arrest issued against him with an endorsement is not illegal and the rescuing and escape of the accused from custody are punishable under ss 225 and 224 I P C, 18 C. W. N. 1091. See also Note 8 under s 76. Civil warrants however, cannot be executed after expiry of returnable date. Cf 37 C. 122.

15. Effect of issuing illegal warrants.—Proceedings taken in pursuance of an illegal warrant are void, and consequently resistance to an officer executing a wholly illegal warrant is no offence. The accused is, therefore justified in the use of such criminal force in making resistance as is necessary in the exercise of his right of private defence under s 99, I P C, 11 C. W. N. 836 = 6 C. L. J. 127; 24 C. 320; 4 C. W. N 85; but not if the warrant was only irregular, 8 A. 293.

16. Power to cancel warrant and issue summons.—Although a case may be one in which a warrant may be issued in the first instance it is not necessary for the Magistrate to do so and under this section he is at full liberty to cancel a warrant at any time and issue a summons, 20 P. W. R. 1908 and 1 B. L. R. 69 = 8 Cr. L. J. 187.

17. Power of superior Magistrate to direct Sub-Magistrate to re-issue warrant previously cancelled.—Where a Sub-divisional Magistrate issued warrants for the apprehension of some accused persons for trial and afterwards cancelled the warrants, held that a District Magistrate has no authority to direct the re-issue of warrants against the accused, as such an order is ultra vires, 1 C. W. N. 650.

18. Warrants against Railway servants how executed.—Warrants issued against Railway servants should be entrusted for execution to some Police-officer of superior grade, who shall, if he finds on proceeding to execute the warrant that the immediate arrest of the Railway servant would occasion risk or inconvenience, make all arrangements necessary to prevent escape and apply to the proper quarter to have the accused relieved, deferring arrest until he is relieved.—Punjab Cir, Vol II p 156, Bom H C Cr Cir p 4, Reg & Ord, N W P p 349.

19 When translation of warrant necessary.—Warrants of arrest issuing out of Magistrate's Court should be written "in the language in or of ordinary use in the district in which it is held"—that is to say (with certain exceptions) the language in which the proceedings of the several Courts are conducted. But where a warrant is sent for execution to the Magistrate of a district where a different language is in ordinary use the warrant should be accompanied by a translation, certified in the transmitting Magistrate to be correct in its other language or into English. The warrant should always, in such cases, be accompanied by a letter in English requesting its execution.—H. L. J. 187 see also 1 Com. H. C. Cr. Cir. p. 10

20 Courts should not issue judicial orders by telegram.—A Court should not issue a judicial order or communicate the purport of a warrant or process by telegram.—Mag. & Ord. A. H. P. p. 71 see 2 C. W. N. 452; 2 C. W. N. 310 and 19 M. 375, as to how far Magistrates should act by telegram.

76. (1) Any Court issuing a warrant for the arrest of any person may in its discretion direct that the person to whom the warrant is directed shall execute a bond with sufficient sureties for his attendance before the Court at a specified time and thereafter until otherwise directed by the Court, the officer to whom the warrant is directed shall take such security and shall release such person from custody.

(2) The endorsement shall state—
(a) the number of sureties
(b) the amount in which they and the person for whose arrest the warrant is issued are to be respectively bound and
(c) the time at which he is to attend before the Court

Recognition to be forwarded. (3) Whenever security is taken under this section the officer to whom the warrant is directed shall forward the bond to the Court

Notes.—1 Form of endorsement.—See Sch. A No 2. Prior to the 1882 Code, there would be no forfeiture of the bond where there was appearance on the specified day (though the case was not called or taken up that day) and no appearance thereafter. But the form of endorsement now contains the words "and to continue so to attend until otherwise directed etc."

2. Analogous provisions.—S 170 provides for the taking of security by a Police-officer from an accused person for his appearance before a Magistrate and s 91 for the taking of a bond by the presiding officer of a Court, for the appearance before himself of a person against whom he is empowered to issue a summons or warrant.

3. Deposit in cash in lieu of bond.—The Court or officer may allow a sum of money or Government promissory notes to be deposited in Court in lieu of executing a bond.—s 513

4. Bonds are exempt from stamp duty.—Bail bonds in criminal cases are exempt from Court fees (Act VII of 1870 s. 19 cl. 15), but not the bonds given by sureties. Ratanlal 126

5. Attendance before a Court only may be enforced.—The attendance must be before itself or some other Court or Magistrate. A Magistrate has no power to issue a warrant for the production of a witness at a investigation by a Police-officer. 24 C. 320

6 Section applies to witnesses.—The words "for his attendance before the Court" have been substituted for the words "to answer the complaint" which was the language of the 1872 Code thus expressly extending the benefits of this section as well to witnesses as to accused persons. Weir II, 39

7 Magistrate may issue bailable warrant even in non bailable case.—Where the circumstances leading to the complaint were suspicious and the accused was a man of position it was held that the Magistrate ought to have issued a bailable warrant and though the accused had not surrendered the Magistrate was directed by the High Court to release the accused on taking security when he appeared before him. (1911) 2 M. W. N. 452—12 C. R. L. J. 430

8 When warrant has spent itself, accused cannot be arrested on its authority.—When the prisoner has been arrested by touching or confining his body and produced before the Court the warrant is exhausted. 4 B. L. R. App. 1 A warrant cancelled cannot be re-issued. 1 C. W. N. 650 According to H. W. N. (Bk. 2 C. 13,

s. 9.) If a constable having arrested a man on a warrant, lets him go at large on a promise to return he cannot re-arrest on the same warrant but can lawfully hold him under the warrant if he voluntarily returns into custody. See Russell, p. 738. Where a person arrested by virtue of a criminal warrant, endorsed pursuant to a statute, is discharged from arrest by a Justice of the Peace of the country where he is arrested, on giving a recognizance, the warrant has spent itself, and the officer has no right to arrest the prisoner again without new process—Doyle v. Russell, 30 Barb. 300.

9. Constables executing warrants should seek assistance from village officers.—When a Magistrate issues a warrant for the arrest of any person to a Chief or Head Constable, this officer directs a constable to whom he endorses the warrant for execution to bring the prisoner before him.

but Constables executing warrants should, in the matter of taking securities, and releasing the accused person from custody, as far as possible consult and seek assistance and advice from the village officials—Bom. Pol. Man, p. 88

77. (1) A warrant of arrest shall ordinarily be directed to one or more Police-officers and, when issued by a Presidency Magistrate, shall always be so directed, but Warrants to whom directed any other Court issuing such a warrant may, if its immediate execution is necessary and no Police-officer is immediately available, direct it to any other person or persons, and such person or persons shall execute the same

Warrant to several persons (2) When a warrant is directed to more officers or persons than one, it may be executed by all, or by anyone or more, of them.

Notes.—1. Warrants by Presidency Magistrates should always be directed to Police-officers.—Where a search warrant was directed to a person other than a Police-officer, although the latter was immediately available, the Calcutta High Court severely condemned the practice as it was in direct violation of the law. The Court remarked "that every provision in ss 76-77 against the oppressive exercise of the right of search to property was here directly disregarded and when it is considered that houses may be broken open, female apartments entered, female apartments searched, and so on, under such warrants the evil results of such a total disregard of the safeguards placed by law upon the right of search can hardly be aggravated." 8 W. R. 74 at p. 78.

2. Generally warrants should not be directed to a private person.—A Magistrate cannot issue a warrant to an unofficial person, except when he is without the assistance of competent Police-officers, and unless the urgency is imminent, 13 W. R. 27 = 5 B. L. R. 274. Under the Bombay Abkari Act a warrant may be executed either by a Police-officer or an Abkari-officer duly empowered in that behalf or if the officer issuing the warrant deems fit, by any other person

3. Duty of Police-officers on receiving warrants.—Warrants should be directed to the senior officer of Police in attendance at a Court, by whom they should be registered in a book kept for the purpose. He should then endorse on such warrant the name of the officer who is charged with its execution (generally an officer in charge of a Police station) and should despatch it without delay. The officer receiving the warrant may again transfer it for execution to another Police-officer, but in every instance a regular endorsement must take place, so that the name of the officer executing the process may be apparent on the order itself—Bom. Pol. Man, 2nd Ed., p. 398

4. Effect of omission of the name of the Police-officer to execute the warrant.—Where warrant was issued but the name and designation of the Police-officer or other person who was to execute the warrant was inadvertently omitted and the space in the printed form intended for this purpose was left blank, held that it was a defective warrant and the persons resisting such a warrant could not be convicted under s 225-B, I P C, 14 Cr. L. J. 142 (Punj). See Note 1 to s. 79

5. Warrant directed to Police cannot by endorsement authorize private person to make arrest.—Where a warrant is issued directed to the Sheriff or any constable of the country, the justice cannot, by endorsement thereon, authorize a private person to make the arrest, the warrant itself must be directed to the person by whom arrest is made or it is no protection—Abbot v Booth 51 Barb. 546. See ss. 42 and 43, as to aid by private persons

8. Only person named may execute warrant.—In English law actual or constructive presence of the person named or designated is necessary, R v. Holey, 7 C. and P. 263. It is not necessary that the bailee should be actually in sight, but he must be so near as to be near at hand in facting in the arrest, Blatch v. Arthur 1 Comp. 62.

78. (1) A District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate may direct a warrant to any landholder, farmer or manager of land within his district or subdivision for the arrest of any escaped convict, proclaimed offender or person who has been accused of a non-bailable offence, and who has eluded pursuit.

(2) Such landholder, farmer or manager shall acknowledge in writing the receipt of the warrant, and shall execute it if the person for whose arrest it was issued, is in, or enters on, his land or farm, or the land under his charge.

(3) When the person against whom such warrant is issued is arrested, he shall be made over with the warrant to the nearest Police-officer, who shall cause him to be taken before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, unless security is taken under section 76.

Note.—Penalishment.—Under the latter part of s 187, I P C, wilful omission to assist a public servant when bound by law to give assistance is punishable with simple imprisonment for six months, or fine of Rs. 500 or both.

79. A warrant directed to any Police-officer may also be executed by any other Police-officer whose name is endorsed upon the warrant by the officer to whom it is directed or endorsed.

Notes.—1. Endorsement upon warrant without any name makes arrest thereunder illegal.—The endorsement referred to should be regularly made by name to a certain person in order to authorize him to make the arrest, and when there is no endorsement by a person having authority to do so, the arrest is not legal, so as to make any attempt at obstruction or escape an offence punishable within the terms of s 224 I P C, & C. W. N. 85. See Note 4 to s. 77.

2. Initialing endorsements is irregular.—In S C. W. N. 457 the Court while it pointed out that initials ought not to be used to authenticate an endorsement upon a warrant, held that a warrant was not invalid when the endorsement was made by initials only, such initials being shown to be those of the proper person to make the endorsement.

3. Only Police-officer named can endorse warrant.—When a warrant of arrest is directed to a Court Sub-Inspector for execution, a Court Head Constable cannot in his absence, by an order in writing signed by himself, endorse such warrant over to any process-serving peons for execution. If such peons are obstructed in its execution, conviction under s. 125-B, I P C will not stand, 27 C. 457.

4. Process-serving peons are not Police-officers to whom warrants can be endorsed over.—An arrest made by process-serving peons under a warrant properly endorsed in their name is illegal. While s 68 contemplates the service of summons by officers of the Court issuing it, the terms of this section are express, that no other person except a Police-officer, is competent to execute a warrant of arrest under an endorsement from another Police-officer, 27 C. 457.

5. Special warrant cannot be delegated.—A special warrant issued under s 6 of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act (IV of 1887) must specify the officer to whom the authority is given and the only person who can execute the warrant is the officer therein named, 3 B. L. R. 56 = 10 Cr. L. J. 3.

80. The Police-officer or other person executing a warrant of arrest shall notify the substance thereof to the person to be arrested, and, if so required, shall show him the warrant.

Notes.—1. Public servant not notifying acts illegally.—If a public servant executing a warrant of arrest does not notify as required by this section, he is not acting in the discharge of his public functions in a manner authorized by law, 10 C. 18; 13 B. 166; 23 C. 896, see also 26 C. 748. See also 14 A. L. J. 731.

2. What constitutes a valid notification.—In 28 C. 748, although the substance of the warrant was not notified, the warrant was shown to the person arrested in the hand of the Police-officer along with several other warrants. Their Lordships (PRINSEP and HILL, JJ), remarked "We are not satisfied that this in itself would be sufficient to make an arrest valid, without any notification of the substance of the warrant or an opportunity given to the person to be arrested by showing him the warrant, so that he might read it." See also 1914 M. W. N. 498 = 15 Cr. L. J. 576.

3. Arresting officer should have warrant with him.—A Police-officer should not proceed to arrest unless he has a warrant in his possession, otherwise resistance offered to him would not be punishable, 5 A. 318, 27 A. 258. The person sought to be arrested is entitled to see that the person arresting has authority, 10 C. 18; 13 B. 168; 23 C. 886, 26 C. 748. A Police-officer who, without a warrant arrests a person charged with a non cognizable offence would make himself liable under s 312, I P C., the detention being illegal unless the case is covered by s 79, I P C. See 24 W. R. 51; 6 W. R. 88; 19 W. R. 36 and Note 7 to s. 46.

4. Actual possession of warrant necessary to make arrest legal.—In Galliard v Laxton, 2 B. and E. 363, an arrest on a civil warrant was held illegal where the warrant at the time of the arrest was at the Police-station. This case was followed in Codd v Cade, 1 Ex. D. 352, where a warrant had been issued against Codd and placed in the hands of one constable, another constable not being in possession of the warrant arrested him, but Codd did not demand to see the warrant, resisted the arrest and greatly injured the officer and was convicted, but the Court of Appeal set aside his conviction. These cases were followed in America where s 173 of the N. Y. Cr. P. C. is almost similar to s 80. In People v Shanley, 40 Hun. 478, defendant was indicted and convicted of an assault in the second degree for having resisted one K, a Police-officer, who attempted to arrest him for a misdemeanour, not committed in the officer's presence. A warrant had been issued and was at the time in the office of the chief of Police but not in the actual possession of the Police-officer. The defendant knew that K was a Police-officer and had heard that the warrant had been issued. The Court charged that the warrant was in the constructive possession of the officer, and declined to charge that it was the duty of the officer to disclose to the defendant his authority and the process under which he arrested him. Held error, that the language of s 173, Cr. P. C., regulating arrests by officers under warrant, required the officer to have the warrant in his actual possession ready to be shown to the defendant it required. See also R v Chapman, 12 Cox. 4 and R v Carey 14 Cox. 214.

5. Warrant need not be parted with.—The warrant is the justification of the arrest by the officer and need not be parted with. See Russell on Crimes, p 736.

6. Where arrest is under an order in writing under s. 56, notification of authority not necessary though desirable.—This section applies only to the execution of a warrant of arrest and there is nothing extending its provisions to an arrest made by the Police on an order in writing, delivered under s. 50. Therefore the fact that the Police-officer making the arrest does not notify to the person arrested the authority and cause of arrest would not make the arrest and detention unlawful, although it may be desirable or even obligatory that if called upon the Police-officer should show the authority under which he is acting 27 C. 320. See Note 6 under s. 56.

7. Protection offered to Police-officers acting bona fide.—See s. 79, I P C., as to an officer entrusted with a warrant to arrest A arresting B in the belief that B was A. If resisted by B, he may use all means necessary to effect his arrest. See 24 W. R. 51, 6 W. R. 88, 19 W. R. 36.

81. The Police-officer or other person executing a warrant of arrest shall (subject to the provisions of section 76 as to security) without unnecessary delay bring the person arrested before the Court before which he is required by law to produce such person.

Notes.—1. Warrant of arrest is not a warrant of commitment.—When the prisoner has been arrested by touching, or confining his body (s. 46) and produced before the Court, the warrant is exhausted. If the accused is to be further detained, it must be under a fresh warrant or order, such as an order of remand under s. 344. The warrant for further detention would be one of commitment directed to a jailor or other person having authority to receive and keep the prisoner, 4 B. L. R. Appx. 1.

2. Unnecessary detention after arrest illegal.—Detention by a Police-officer for over 24 hours is punishable under s. 29 of Act V of 1861 as a wilful breach of the rule laid down by s 167, unless the detention is not continuous, 1 W. R. 8; 19 W. R. 36.

Where warrant may be issued in

82. A warrant of arrest may be executed at any place in British India

Notes. 1. British India.—See s. 103 and 104

2. Arrest outside British India illegal.—The grant of a warrant of arrest for a person on the line of a railway, as in the case of a person on the line of an Independent State, as to the Government of India upon land within the limits of the Hyderabad State Railway, does not deprive it of the right of his sovereign rights over such land. There is arrest under the warrant of a Magistrate in British India of a subject of the Nizam on the lines of the Hyderabad State Railway Administration is not justifiable. 25 C. 20 (P.C.)—241 A. 137. Where an accused was first arrested by a Constable of the Seydore State and then by a British Police Constable in the Residency at Seydore, it was held that the arrest was made outside British India. 7 Bur 83.

3. Warrant of arrest of witnesses outside British India illegal.—The issue of warrants for the arrest beyond the limits of British India of persons whose attendance is required to give evidence but who are at the time resident beyond the limits of British India is illegal and should not be resorted to as warrants for the arrest of a witness can under s. 82 only be executed at some place in British India.—Priv. Cir. Vol. II p. 230

4. If the person to be arrested is in a Native State.—See s. 188 and Notes thereunder and the Indian Extradition Act of 1903 printed as Appendix II. See also 25 C. 20 (P.C.)

5. When the person to be arrested is in a British possession.—When the arrest and return of a fugitive offender from any British possession to British India is desired the following procedure shall be observed—

Evidence should be taken that the person against whom the warrant is applied for has absconded then evidence that an offence has been committed by such person should be faithfully and minutely recorded under s. 512 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. If the Court upon such evidence issues a warrant the warrant should be in the form prescribed by s. 75 and directed as required by s. 77. Evidence should be taken showing clearly that the offence charged is one to which Part I of the Fugitive Offenders Act applies or at least a certificate from the Magistrate should be appended to the warrant clearly showing that the offence charged therein is one punishable with rigorous imprisonment for a term of twelve months or more (see s. 9 of Statute 41 and 45 sect. 69). All the evidence should be taken if possible in the presence of the Police-officer to whom the warrant is addressed and to whom it is desired that the fugitive offender should be delivered.

"A copy should be made of every deposition and every documentary exhibit and each copy should contain a declaration, signed by the Magistrate to such that it is a true copy of the deposition taken by him self or an exhibit produced to him, as the case may be. The whole of the copy of the record thus made should then be entrusted to the Police-officer to whom the warrant is addressed who will be in a position to authenticate every portion of it when produced by him in the possession in which the fugitive offender is.

"When the presence of the Police-officer who is to execute the warrant cannot be obtained at the proceedings referred to then each copy must before being entrusted to the Police-officer, be sealed with the seal of the Governor or Lieutenant-Governor of the Province in which the proceeding was held. Although when the documents can be authenticated by the oath of a witness in the possession from which it is desired to procure the delivery of the offender the seal of the Governor or Lieutenant Governor is not essential I think it expedient that the seal should be affixed whenever it can be conveniently done."

"If the Police-officer entrusted with the execution of the warrant is unable to identify the accused he should be accompanied by some person able to identify the accused to the possession from which the return of the accused is desired. —Reg. & Ord. N II P s 10 p 361

83. (1) When a warrant is to be executed outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the same, such Court may, instead of directing such warrant to the Police-officer forward the same by post or otherwise to any Magistrate or District Superintendent of Police or the Commissioner of Police in a Presidency town within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it is to be executed

for execution outside jurisdiction

* (2) The Magistrate or District Superintendent or Commissioner to whom such warrant is so forwarded shall endorse his name thereon and, if practicable, cause it to be executed in manner hereinbefore provided within the local limits of his jurisdiction.

Notes—1. Outside the local limits.—Outside the local limits, but within British India. As soon as the boundary of British India is crossed in pursuit, the warrant ceases to have force, and the officer can only shadow his man and request the local authorities to arrest and secure the fugitive with a view to his rendition upon application duly made.

2. Competency to endorse warrants.—Power to endorse a warrant is common to all Magistrates—Sch III, cl. 2

3. Arrest of person in jail.—As to the arrest of a person confined in jail, see s 3 of the Prisoner's Testimony Act, XV of 1869

4. Mode of executing warrants.—See ss 78–80 as to manner hereinbefore provided

5. Procedure for arrest of persons at Aden.—The Government of Bombay has laid down the following rules to be observed when application is made for the arrest at Aden of persons on their way to Europe—

When the alleged offence has been committed outside the Bombay Presidency, the Government of Bombay will direct the Political Resident at Aden to arrest the offender on his arrival there, provided that the application for arrest is made in the name of the Government of the Presidency or Province within whose jurisdiction the offence has been committed. If the application is made by an officer subordinate to another Government, the Bombay Government will consult their legal advisers as to the propriety of complying with the application.

When arrest is to be made of an accused who is supposed to have sailed for Europe, District officers will be guided by the following principles—

(1) If application is made for the arrest of a person supposed to have left Bombay by sea, no steps to effect an arrest should be taken unless it is clear that the case is bona fide a criminal one, and not a matter for which a civil action might be brought, and to which a criminal colouring has been given by the complainants for motives of their own

(2) If it is desired to arrest a person at Aden, application should, as a rule, be made to this Government (N W P) which will communicate with the Government of Bombay

(3) If for any reason it is not possible to apply to this Government, application should be made to the Commissioner of Police at Bombay, with explanation of the reasons necessitating a direct application.—Reg & Ord, N W P, s 10, p 361

6. Section applicable to warrants issued under Act XIII of 1859.—The provisions of this section apply to warrants issued under s 1 of the Workman's Breach of Contract Act XIII of 1859 and consequently such warrants may be executed outside the local jurisdiction of the Magistrates issuing them, 20 M. 235, ibid 451, followed in 20 A. 124. And a Magistrate to whom such a warrant is sent for execution has no discretion to decline its execution against a person residing in his jurisdiction, 33 P. R. 1898, p 27.

84. (1) When a warrant directed to a Police-officer is to be executed beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the same, he shall ordinarily take it for endorsement either to a Magistrate or to a Police-officer not below the rank of an officer in charge of a station, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the warrant is to be executed

Warrant directed to Police-officer for execution outside jurisdiction.

(2) Such Magistrate or Police-officer shall endorse his name thereon, and such endorsement shall be sufficient authority to the Police-officer to whom the warrant is directed to execute the same within such limits, and the local Police shall, if so required assist such officer in executing such warrant

* Sub-sec (2) of s 10 meet in and am Rs 86 and 155 so far as they apply to the Police in the Town of Bombay, have been repealed by the Police of Bombay Act (Bombay) Act IV of 1907 s 2 (1)

(3) Whenever there is reason to believe that the delay occasioned by obtaining the endorsement of the Magistrate or Police-officer within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the warrant is to be executed will prevent such execution the Police-officer to whom it is directed may execute the same without such endorsement in any place beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued it

* (4) This section applies also to the Police in the town of Calcutta

† 85. When a warrant of arrest is executed outside the district in which it was issued the person arrested shall unless the Court which issued the warrant is within twenty miles of the place of arrest or is nearer than the Magistrate or District Superintendent of Police or the Commissioner of Police in a Presidency town within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the arrest was Procedure on arrest of person against whom warrant issued made, or unless security is taken under section 76 be taken before such Magistrate or Commissioner or District Superintendent Procedure by Magistrate before whom person arrested is brought

86. (1) Such Magistrate or District Superintendent or Commissioner shall, if the person arrested appears to be the person intended by the Court which issued the warrant, direct his removal in custody to such Court

Provided that if the offence is bailable and such person is ready and willing to give bail to the satisfaction of such Magistrate District Superintendent or Commissioner or a direction has been endorsed under section 76 on the warrant and such person is ready and willing to give the security required by such direction, the Magistrate, District Superintendent or Commissioner shall take such bail or security, as the case may be, and forward the bond to the Court which issued the warrant.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent a Police-officer from taking security under section 76

Note.—Form of security bond, see Sch V No 3 In Bombay Assistant District Superintendents of Police have been empowered to act under this section and can therefore take bail. See Bombay Gazette 1875 p. 439 See s. 496 as to cases where persons arrested may be discharged on executing a bond without sureties

C—Proclamation and Attachment

87. (1) If any Court has reason to believe (whether after taking evidence or not) that

Proclamation for person absconding any person against whom a warrant has been issued by it, has absconded or is concealing himself so that such warrant cannot be executed such Court may publish a written proclamation requiring him to appear at a specified place and at a specified time not less than thirty days from the date of publishing such proclamation

(2) The proclamation shall be published as follows —

(a) it shall be publicly read in some conspicuous place of the town or village in which such person ordinarily resides,

(b) it shall be affixed to some conspicuous part of the house or homestead in which such person ordinarily resides or to some conspicuous place of such town or village and

(c) a copy thereof shall be affixed to some conspicuous part of the Court house

(3) A statement in writing by the Court issuing the proclamation to the effect that the proclamation was duly published on a specified day shall be conclusive evidence that the requirements of this section have been complied with and that the proclamation was published on such day

* The letter "a" and the words "and Bombay" were repealed by s. 2 (1) of the City of Bombay Police Act Bombay Act IV

† See foot-note under s. 83 sub-sec. (2)

I.—CIRCUMSTANCES UNDER WHICH A PROCLAMATION MAY BE ISSUED.

Notes.—1. All Magistrates competent to issue proclamation.—Power to issue proclamation in cases judicially before them is common to all Magistrates.—Sch III, cl 4

2. Proclamation may issue in summons-cases.—This section read with s 88 shows that even in summons-cases and as against witnesses a proclamation may be issued for the apprehension of a person against whom warrant has been issued but it is necessary to comply strictly with the provisions of the law relating to the issue of a warrant in a case where summons is the ordinary mode of enforcing attendance (s 90) to lay a foundation to proceed under this section, 5 N. L. R. 125 = 10 Cr. L. J. 306. Under s 172, Act X of 1872, proclamation was not issuable in summons cases against accused and against witnesses

3. Inquiry necessary before issuing a proclamation.—These processes of attachment and proclamation should not be issued whenever a warrant fails of its effects. The officer sent to serve the warrant should be examined as to the measures adopted by him to serve it, and if on his evidence, or in any other manner the Magistrate is satisfied that the accused is evading justice, then and then only can the processes of proclamation and attachment issue. The Magistrate must record the grounds which satisfied him that the accused was absconding or concealing himself to evade justice, 3 W. R. 63; 6 W. R. 73.

4. Fact of absconding must be judicially found.—In order to lay sufficient foundation for the issue of a proclamation and the accompanying order of attachment under s 88, a Magistrate must on some sufficient materials, find judicially that the person against whom the proclamation is to be issued has absconded or concealed himself for the purpose of avoiding the service of the warrant of arrest previously issued against him, 10 B. L. R. Appx. 14 = 19 W. R. 12.

5. Previous issue of warrant is a condition precedent to issue of proclamation.—The condition precedent to the issue of a proclamation is that a warrant must have been previously issued against the person whose attendance before the Court is required, and if the Court has no authority to issue warrant, the order for issue of proclamation and subsequent attachment of property is illegal, as one made without jurisdiction, 15 P. R. 1893. Where the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to issue the warrant which preceded the proclamation and subsequent attachment, the proceedings are illegal 14 Bom. L. R. 389 = 1 Bom. Cr. C. 185 = 13 Cr. L. J. 796; see also 4 M. 393

6. What would amount to absconding.—Absconding does not necessarily imply change of place, but may be effected by concealment. If a person, having concealed himself before process issues, continues to do so after it is issued, he absconds, 4 M. 393. To be deemed an absconder it is not necessary that a person should be proclaimed as such under this section, but it should also be noted that an absent person should not be assumed to be an absconder without due inquiry and notice, Weir II, 40.

7. Punishment for absconding.—Absconding to avoid service of process, issuing from a public servant is punishable under s 172, I P C., with simple imprisonment for one month, or fine of Rs 500, or both. Non attendance in obedience to proclamation issued by a public servant is punishable under s 174 I P C.

7-A. Statement in writing must be made.—Magistrate when acting under this section should invariably make an endorsement or statement in writing validating the proclamation, as required by subsection (3) 6 P. R. 1917 (Cr.)

7-B. Strict compliance with the provisions of this section is necessary to legalize issue of proclamation 6 P. R. 1917 (Cr.)

II.—MODE OF ISSUING A PROCLAMATION.

8. Form of proclamation.—As to the form of the proclamation requiring the attendance of an accused person or a witness see Sch. V, Nos 4 and 5, respectively

9. Not less than thirty days from the date of publishing.—In the 1872 Code the language was 'within a fixed period not less than thirty-days'. The present Code cleared up the doubt as to the commencement of the period for the appearance of the person absconding by adding the words "from the date of publishing such proclamation", i.e., from the date of the complete publication by doing all that is required by cl (2) of this section, 10 B. L. R. Appx. 14 = 19 W. R. 12

10. Effect of not giving thirty days' time.—A proclamation issued under this section against a person absconding person should give thirty days' time for his appearance from the date of the proclamation. Where this is not done the proceedings are liable to be set aside, 17 M. L. J. 433 = 6 Cr. L. J. 332; 19 M. 3.

11. Provisions as to publication must be strictly followed.—The provisions of cl. (2) as to the publishing of proclamations are imperative and failure to comply with them will vitiate the proclamation. All the three modes prescribed must be adopted 37 A 372.

12. Instructions regarding publication of proclamation.—Police-officers will be held responsible that the provisions of this section relative to the publication of the proclamation are strictly complied with. The Court-officer should submit a report that the copy for the Court-house was duly affixed in the presence of witnesses, and the Police in the Mofussil will submit report in the same manner that one copy was posted up at the Police-station, and that the copy for the absconder's village was duly read out in a conspicuous part of the village, and that it was afterwards posted up at the ordinary place of abode of absconder. The names of the principal residents should be always given as witnesses to the proclamation having been served properly. On receipt of the returns if everything is correct the Court-officer should move the Magistrate to record a proceeding stating that the proclamation was duly made and carefully declaring the date on which it was made, as the term of thirty days will run from the date so ascertained and declared. If the accused does not appear within the time specified in the proclamation the Magistrate should be solicited on its expiry, to record a formal proceeding declaring the property attached to be at the disposal of Government.—Eng. P. Code p. 280.

13. Shall be read in town or village.—Sec 19 M 3 and Note 19 to s. 83.

14. Absence of statement in writing validating proclamation—Effect of.—When there is no endorsement or statement in writing made by the Court validating the proclamation there is no proclamation according to law 22 A. 216

15. Magistrate ought to carefully preserve the proclamations and see that the legal formalities are complied with.—Magistrates ought to take particular care in cases where a Court is asked to confiscate private property to preserve proclamations and the records must be so clear as to satisfy the Court that all the legal formalities were duly observed. Where therefore in consequence of the Lower Courts neglect to observe the imperative provisions of the criminal law these materials were not forthcoming held that the order must be set aside and the property attached returned to the petitioner 14 Bom. L. R. 163 = 1 Bom. Cr. Ca. 104 = 13 Cr. L. J. 293.

III.—CONSEQUENCES OF NOT OBEYING PROCLAMATION.

16. Held to be in contempt.—An accused person against whom a proclamation has been issued must, until he has surrendered be regarded as in contempt and the Court will not entertain any application on his behalf. He should appear before the Magistrate and apply to him to be discharged on the ground that the warrant is informal or otherwise offer some explanatory way of purging his contempt and at the same time application might be made for the release of his property. It will then be the duty of the Magistrate to determine judicially whether the warrants are valid and when he has done so, the person against whom and whose property the warrants are respectively issued may if he be so advised apply for the revision of the proceedings, 2 N-W. P. H. C. R. 441, 5 W. R. 71

17. Punishment for failing to attend in obedience to proclamation.—A warrant which directs the Police-officer to apprehend an offender is addressed to the Police and not to the offender himself. It is neither summons, notice nor order to such offender therefore where a warrant is issued against a proclaimed offender and he appears within the time limited by it he cannot be proceeded against under s 172 I P C but if he fails to attend in obedience to the proclamation he should be proceeded under s 174 of the same Code 5 W. R. 71 See also 7 N-W. P. H. C. R. 30, 9 W. R. 70, 28 P. R. 1890

18. Cost of proclamation when to be paid by witness.—When a proclamation has been issued for an absent witness if the witness shall afterwards appear and the Court shall be of opinion that such witness had absconded or concealed himself for the purpose of avoiding the service of a warrant upon him such Court may order the witness to pay the cost of the proclamation—Wilkins 92.

19. Proclamation and attachment may be ordered simultaneously.—A Magistrate may both issue a proclamation against an absconding offender under this section and also make an order under s 88 for the attachment of his property simultaneously 29 C. 41

property of person
absconding.

88. (1) The Court issuing a proclamation under s 87 may at any time order the attachment of any property moveable or immovable, or both belonging to the proclaimed person.

(2) Such order shall authorize the attachment of any property belonging to such person within the district in which it is made, and it shall authorize the attachment of any property belonging to such person without such district when endorsed by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within whose district such property is situate

(3) If the property ordered to be attached is a debt or other moveable property, the attachment under this section shall be made—

(a) by seizure or

(b) by the appointment of a receiver, or

(c) by an order in writing prohibiting the delivery of such property to the proclaimed person or to any on his behalf or

(d) by all or any two of such methods, as the Court thinks fit

(4) If the property ordered to be attached is immoveable, the attachment under this section shall, in the case of land paying revenue to Government, be made through the Collector of the district in which the land is situate, and in all other cases—

(e) by taking possession, or

(f) by the appointment of a receiver or

(g) by an order in writing prohibiting the payment of rent or delivery of property to the proclaimed person or to anyone on his behalf, or

(h) by all or any two of such methods, as the Court thinks fit

(5) If the property ordered to be attached consists of live-stock, or is of a perishable nature, the Court may, if it thinks it expedient, order immediate sale thereof, and in such case the proceeds of the sale shall abide the order of the Court

(6) The powers, duties and liabilities of a receiver appointed under this section shall be the same as those of a receiver appointed under Chapter XXXVI of the Code of Civil Procedure

* (6-A) If any claim is preferred to or objection made to the attachment of any property attached under this section within six months from the date of such attachment by any person other than the proclaimed person on the ground that the claimant or objector has an interest in such property, and that such interest is not liable to attachment under this section, the claim or objection shall be inquired into and may be allowed or disallowed in whole or in part

Provided that any claim preferred or objection made within the period allowed by this sub-section may, in the event of the death of the claimant or objector be continued by his legal representative

* (6-B) Claims or objections under sub-section (6-A) may be preferred or made in the Court by which the order of attachment is issued or, if the claim or objection is in respect of property attached under an order endorsed by a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (2) in the Court of such Magistrate

* (6-C) Every such claim or objection shall be inquired into by the Court in which it is preferred or made

Provided that if it is preferred or made in the Court of a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate, such Magistrate may make it over for disposal to any Magistrate of the first or second class or to any Presidency Magistrate, as the case may be, subordinate to him

* (6-D) Any person whose claim or objection has been disallowed in whole or in part by an order under sub-section 6-A may within a period of one year from the date of such order, institute a suit to establish the right which he claims in respect of the property in dispute but subject to the result of such suit if any, the order shall be conclusive.

* (6-L) If the proclaimed person appears within the time specified in the proclamation the Court shall make an order releasing the property from the attachment.

(7) If the proclaimed person does not appear within the time specified in the proclamation the property under attachment shall be at the disposal of Government but it shall not be sold until the expiration of six months from the date of the attachment,† and until any claim† preferred or objection made under sub-section 6-A has been disposed of under that sub-section† unless it is subject to speedy and natural decay or the Court considers that the sale would be for the benefit of the owner in either of which cases the Court may cause it to be sold whenever it thinks fit.

Notes.—1. Chapter XXXI of the Civ. Pro. Code Act X of 1882 ss. 503-504 now corresponds to Ord. XL of the Civ. Pro. Code Act V of 1908.

2. Form of order of attachment.—As to forms of orders of attachment to compel the attendance of a witness or the appearance of an accused see Sch. V No. 6.

3. Section applies to witness.—The provisions of the section are applicable to an absconding witness against whom a warrant has been issued. The immovable property of such witness is now liable to attachment. It was not so under Act V of 1872, s. 353.

4. What Magistrates empowered.—All Provincial Magistrates have power to attach and sell property in cases judicially before them.—Sec. III cl. 5

5. Proceedings of Magistrate not empowered void.—If any Magistrate not being empowered by law attaches and sells property under this section his proceeding shall be void.—S. 530 cl. (a).

ATTACHMENT

6. When attachment may be ordered.—Having regard to the language "at any time" employed in the present Code attachment might even be simultaneous with proclamation under s. 87, 29 C. 417; 6 C. P. 38.

7. Attachment must immediately follow proclamation.—A proclamation was issued under this section requiring the attendance of the applicants on a certain date. They made no appearance and then an order was passed for the attachment of their property under s. 84. They appeared before the attachment. Held that as the attachment of property is intended to enforce the attendance required by proclamation it was illegal to wait till the period specified in the proclamation has expired and to order attachment because the proclamation has not been obeyed. 6 C. P. 38.

8. Opportunity to show cause before attachment.—An order of attachment made against an absconding-offender without permitting him to show cause against it and after he is apprehended and brought to trial before the passing of the order is bad. The fact that the petitioner's plea had been overruled in his trial for the substantive offence with which he was charged is no justification for not giving him opportunity to show cause against the order of attachment. 5 W. R. 8.

9. What property may be attached.—There seems to be a conflict of view in the Madras High Court as to whether or not the undivided interest of an absconding co-partner in the property of a joint Hindu family or the undivided property itself could be attached under this section. See Weir II, 43 and foot note also 9 C. 261 and 28 P. L. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 186. In 5 B. L. R. 322 it was held that the unascertained share of a partner in the assets of the partnership than in the hands of a Receiver appointed by the Court under a winding up order was not attachable such share not being property belonging to the defendants. But in 5 B. L. R. 386, it was held that the share of a judgment-debtor in partnership with another person who alone was in possession of the property at the time of attachment was liable to attachment but that the attachment must be by prohibitory order and not by seizure as under s. 271 of the old Civ. Pro. Code. See now s. 62 of the Code of 1908.

* Added by Act (XVIII) of 1923.

† Inserted by Act XVIII of 1923.

10. Irregularly in publication of proclamation will vitiate order of attachment.—An accused person for whose arrest warrant had been issued having absconded, a proclamation was issued and affixed to the Court house on the 6th November requiring him to appear on the 11th December, 1893, and his property was attached. The proclamation was not published at the village where the accused resided until the 15th of November. The accused surrendered on the 25th June, 1894, and applied for restoration of the property under s. 89 and an order was made by which the restoration of his property was refused. The accused preferred a petition to the High Court for the revision of that order. Held, that there was no legal proclamation under s. 87 of the Code, and that the order should be set aside, and the attachment declared void, 19 M. 3; 14 Bom. L. R. 163 = 1 Bom. Cr. Ca. 104 = 13 Cr. L. J. 293. This should now be read subject to the provisions of s. 537 (a) which provides that no order passed by a competent Court shall be reversed in revision on account of irregularity in proclamation or order, etc.

11. Effect of not preserving proclamation.—See Note 15 to s. 87

12. In spite of irregularity attachment to continue, so long as party is in contempt.—Where property was attached without observance of the due formalities prescribed by law, the High Court declined to quash the attachment, holding that the plea of informality could be considered on the surrender of the fugitive, but cautioned the Magistrate against a sale until the needful formalities were carried out, 17 W. R. 10.

13. During attachment, property cannot be attached by Civil Court.—In 9 C. 861, it was held that after the date of attachment under this section, no title could be conferred by an attachment and sale, subsequently made in execution of a money decree by a Civil Court. See 5 Bar. L. T. 113 = 6 L. B. R. 57 = 13 Cr. L. J. 562, where it was held that a mere seizure of property by the Police of an absconding accused with out taking proceedings under ss. 87 and 88 does not confer any right in Government so as to defeat the claims of attaching creditors by any subsequent proceeding under ss. 87 and 88.

FORFEITURE

14. Shall be at the disposal of Government.—A formal proceeding should be recorded declaring the property attached to be at the disposal of Government. But though at the disposal of Government, it should not at once be forfeited to Government. Forfeiture of property of an absconding offender who appears within two years from the attachment of his property, should not be carried into effect until after a regular inquiry into the cause or the offenders absence 6 W. R. 73, 3 W. R. 63. Although an order may be passed, through mistake or inadvertence declaring the property of the accused to be at the disposal of Government, yet when the accused does not attempt to show that he has not been evading justice, the Magistrate is competent to make the order—Ibid

In 31 M. L. J. 120 = 17 Cr. L. J. 296 (F.B.) the effect of attachment of the share of a member of a Hindu joint family was considered. The attachment does not effect a severance of the share. It only secures to the Government the enjoyment of the income during its continuance.

15. Condition precedent to forfeiture.—Before the passing of an order declaring the property of an accused person who cannot be found, to be at the disposal of Government, there must be a proclamation specifying a time within which such person is required to appear. But before a Magistrate can issue such a proclamation, he must be satisfied that such person has absconded or is concealing himself for the purpose of avoiding service of the warrant, 6 W. R. 73.

16. Forfeiture when to be declared.—Forfeiture of property of an absconding offender, who appears, within two years from the attachment of his property, should not be carried into effect until after a regular inquiry into the cause of the offender's absence, 3 W. R. 63. The declaration of forfeiture directed to be made in s. 184 Act XXV of 1861, was intended to be in furtherance of a matter of procedure, and not simply as a mode of punishment for contempt of process, therefore where the person affected by the proclamation has come in, or has been brought in it ought not to be made at all because, by that time its purpose has been effected though even possibly by other means than that of the process that was evaded. 10 B. L. R. Appx. 14 = 19 W. R. 12.

16-A. Where property attached under Civil Court decree before attachment and proclamation under this section, no right accrues to Government.—The Police seized certain opium belonging to an absconding accused under s. 25 of the Police Act in August 1911, but no proceedings were taken under s. 87 until December, 1911 and the property was held to be forfeited to Government under s. 88 in February, 1912.

Prior thereto, a creditor of the accused filed a suit and got the property attached before judgment in September, 1911, and in October, 1911, applied for proclamation and sale of the property, but the District Magistrate refused to hand over the property in obedience to the order of Civil Court. Held that the refusal of the District Magistrate to hand over the property was wrong. At the time of attachment and proclamation of sale in the Civil Court, no action had been taken under s. 87 or 88 and so no rights had accrued to Government under s. 88 and the subsequent establishment by Government of its rights should not be allowed to override the creditor's claims in October, 1911, 5 Bur. L. T. 513 = 6 L. B. R. 57 = 13 Cr. L. J. 545.

CLAIMS OF THIRD PARTIES.

Under the present amendment by the addition of sub-clauses 6-A to 6-E, provision is made to deal with claims of third parties analogous to order XXI, rr. 59 to 63 of the Code of Civil Procedure (1908) for the investigation of claims and objections. And so such proceedings requiring the Magistrates to investigate the claims of third parties would be now judicial proceedings within the meaning of section 4 (V).

17. Remedy of aggrieved party by civil suit.—Where the Magistrate errs the remedy of the aggrieved party is by civil suit against the purchasers, 7 W. R. 35; 37 A. 573; 20 M. 65; 4 L. B. R. 109; a civil suit is maintainable by the real owner to recover the property attached and for damages done to the property while it was at the disposal of the Government, 28 C. 840. See also 12 W. R. (Civ.) 329; 17 W. R. 10; 8 W. R. (Civ.) 207; 23 W. R. 30; 1904 A. W. N. 159.

SALE.

18. Sale cannot be set aside in revision.—Where a sale has taken place and the purchasers have acquired some sort of title, it is not open to the High Court in exercising its revisional power to pass an order affecting the title of persons who are strangers to the legal proceedings in which the order is made, whatever irregularities there may have been in the proceedings, 22 A. 216.

19. Bail lies to recover property from auction-purchaser.—Where the property of an alleged absconding offender is attached and sold by a Court purporting to act under this section and it turns out that the proclamation of sale is irregular and illegal, there is nothing to bar a civil suit by the owner of the property so sold to pursue the same in the hands of a purchaser, 1904 A. W. N. 159. Where a proclamation failed to state the time within which and the place at which the absconding party should present himself to save the sale of his property, it was held that there having been no violation on the part of the accused of any of the conditions imposed by the proclamation of sale, no order for sale could legally issue, and inasmuch as there is no provision in the Code for restitution under such circumstances, the Civil Court has jurisdiction to entertain the suit for setting aside the illegal sale and for recovery of possession of the property, 27 A. 572.

20. Effect of sale of ancestral property.—In 19 P. W. R. 1905, a Full Bench of the Punjab Chief Court held, that when ancestral property of a person subject to the Punjab Customary Law is attached and sold under this section, only his life-interest is disposed of but not the right of inheritance after his death of his lineal descendants or collaterals. JOHNSTON, J. contra, held, that upon such a sale the fee of the property is sold and nothing remains for the heir to inherit. The sale transfers the personal rights only of the absconder and after his death the reversioners succeed to the property and are entitled to recover it from the purchaser 52 P. R. 1915 (Civ.). The undivided interest of an absconding person in a joint Hindu family can be attached under s. 88. The share may be realised by a Receiver. But such attachment order does not effect severance of status, 31 M. L. J. 84; 120.

21. Sale of land subject to lease.—When the land sold was subject to a lease, it was held that the sale should be subject to the right of lessees to remain in possession until expiry of the lease, 9 P. R. 1908 = 25 P. W. R. 1908 = 8 Cr. L. J. 260.

22. Title of vendee at magisterial sale is superior.—Where the property of an absconder (not his right title and interest) is attached by a Magistrate under s. 88, and during the subsistence of such attachment is again attached in execution of a money decree by a Civil Court and sold, the vendee at the Court sale has no superior title to that conferred on another vendee at the sale ordered by the Magistrate, for, so long as the attachment by the Magistrate continued no title could be conferred by any attachment subsequently made, 9 C. 861.

23. Sale of land-paying revenue to Government.—The following rule is in force in Bengal as to the sale of revenue-paying land attached under this section —“The High Court have represented that Collectors of districts who hold sales of land-paying revenue to Government from time to time, could more conveniently and advantageously hold sales of such attached land as is above referred to situated within their jurisdiction than could Magistrates especially in cases where the Magistrate is in another district. The Board therefore direct that Collectors will in future, comply with the requisitions of Magistrates to hold sales in such cases, and it is further directed that, in these cases the procedure in respect of the advertisement, sale and delivery of possession in the case of sales in execution of decrees of Civil Courts under Act XIV of 1882 (the Code of Civil Procedure) may be strictly followed”—C O No 7 of 17th August, 1878, Cal. G R and C O, p 6

89. If, within two years from the date of the attachment, any person whose property is or has been at the disposal of Government, under sub-sec. (7) of section 88, appears voluntarily or is apprehended and brought before the Court by whose order the property was attached, or the Court to which such Court is subordinate, and proves to the satisfaction of such Court that he did not abscond or conceal himself for the purpose of avoiding execution of the warrant, and that he had not such notice of the proclamation as to enable him to attend within the time specified therein, such property, or, if the same has been sold, the net proceeds of the sale, or, if part only thereof has been sold, the net proceeds of the sale and the residue of the property, shall, after satisfying thereout all costs incurred in consequence of the attachment, be delivered to him

Notes.—1. What Magistrates empowered.—Power to restore attached property is common to all Provincial Magistrates—Sch III, cl 6

2 Scope of section.—This section prescribes a remedy where there is a good and legal publication but offers no facility for contesting the legality of the proclamation, 22 A. 216.

This section applies where the validity of attachment proceedings is challenged on the ground (1) that accused did not abscond or (2) that the proclamation was defective, 39 P. R. 1917 (Cr)

3. Application for restoration need not be made by the person absconding.—Though the application under this section need not be made by the accused, it is none the less essential that the absconding accused should appear and prove the facts required, viz, that he did not abscond or conceal himself for the purpose of avoiding the arrest, and that he had not notice of proclamation facts peculiarly within his knowledge, 15 Bom. L. R. 175 = 2 Bom. Cr. Cas. 36 = 14 Cr. L. J 237.

4. Time limit for restoration.—The adverbial phrase “within two years from the date of attachment” in s 89 qualifies not only the word “appears” but also the word “proves,” which is connected with the word “appears” by the conjunction ‘and,’ therefore it is not enough if the accused person appears voluntarily or is apprehended or brought before the Court within two years, 15 Bom. L. R. 175 = 2 Bom. Cr. Cas. 36 = 14 Cr. L. J. 237.

Application under this section, if made after two years from the date of attachment is not entertainable 6 P. R. 1917 (Cr), 26 Bom. G. R. 719

5 Evidence must be adduced in presence of person alleged to have absconded.—The words “appears voluntarily or is brought,” etc., imply that the evidence to prove that the accused was absconding as well as his evidence in exculpation shall be heard in his presence, and a judicial determination shall be come to upon the point.

It seems anomalous that a person should be convicted of a criminal offence under s. 174, I P C., without an opportunity of giving an answer to the charge, and the intention of the section will be carried out if the Magistrate levies Rs 1,000 (the extreme fine allowed by s. 172, I P C.) plus costs, and hand over the amount to Government subject to withdrawal if in the end the absconding witness should be found and on trial not fined or fined to a smaller amount. To dispose of the case finally in the witness's absence might in some instances prevent the infliction of imprisonment where it was most deserved.—West's Bombay Code, Vol. II, p 979 Taking a witness's answer supposes the man makes his appearance, 3 W. R. 43. Where a reluctant witness does not make his appearance, the Magistrate may sell any part of the attached property and recover the amount of fine imposed on him and the fine is not illegal by reasons of the witness's answers to the charge not having been recorded.—Ibid

- 6 Forfeiture of absconder's property.—See Note 14 to s. 88
- 7 Claims of third parties to attached property.—See Notes 17–21 under s. 84
8. When sale has created title in a third party, it will not be set aside in revision.—See 22 A. 216; 37 A. 572 under Note 22 to s. 88
- 9 What amounts to raising of attachment.—A Magistrate's direction to his subordinate to write to the Collector and authorize the taking of a certain attachment will amount to an order releasing the property from attachment 3 W. R. 8.
- 10 Appeal.—Orders under this section are appealable—rule s. 405
- 11 Revision.—High Court may revise orders under this section 10 W. 3; 22 A. 216; 104 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 C. L. J. 142.

D—Other Rules regarding Processes

90. A Court may, in any case in which it is empowered by this Code to issue a summons for the appearance of any person other than a juror or assessor, issue, after recording its reasons in writing a warrant for his arrest, or

(a) if either before the issue of such summons or after the issue of the same, but before the time fixed for his appearance the Court sees reason to believe that he has absconded or will not obey the summons, or

(b) if, at such time he fails to appear and the summons is proved to have been duly served in time to admit of his appearing in accordance therewith and no reasonable excuse is offered for such failure

Notes.—1 Form of warrant.—As to form of the warrant in the first instance to bring up a witness see Sch. V., No 7, post.

2. Warrant cannot be issued unless summons be issuable.—This section as to the issue of warrant is applicable only in cases where the Court is empowered to issue a summons. When the accused is discharged under s. 253 a District Magistrate has no authority to issue warrant for his arrest until the order of discharge is set aside and the case is taken to his own file 15 P. R. 1893.

3. Effect of not recording reasons in writings.—Where a Court issued a warrant for the arrest of a witness without recording its reasons in writing therefor held that the warrant of arrest was illegal and vitiated the subsequent proceedings including conviction for resistance to an invalid process. The adoption of a stereotyped printed form is not a sufficient compliance with the imperative language of the section 38 C. 789. See also 5 N. L. R. 123 noted below. See also 39 M. 1083 and 50 P. L. R. 1918, but see 16 All. L. J. 1149 (contra). Held by the Full Bench (CHATTERJEE J. dissenting) that where the Magistrate has materials before him to which he has applied his judicial discretion and which are sufficient to justify the issue of a warrant in the first instance and states the reasons on which the Magistrate relied it does not become invalid merely by his omission to record separately the reasons for its issue under s. 90 of the Code. The words 'after recording its reasons in writing' are not mandatory but directory (38 C. 789, overruled) 81 C. 1 = 27 C. W. N. 857

4. When warrant is to be issued in the first instance, cl. (a).—A Magistrate cannot issue a warrant of arrest against a witness unless he is first satisfied that the witness will disobey or has disobeyed the summons served on him 16 W. R. 20, or unless due service of summons be proved 7 W. R. 37, or unless the Magistrate has reason to believe that the witness will not attend to give evidence without being compelled to do so 4 B. L. R. Appx. 1 = 13 W. R. 1

5. Conditions for issue of warrant under cl. (b).—A warrant ought not to issue unless due service of summons is proved. A warrant of arrest cannot be issued in cases in which a summons should ordinarily issue unless the summons should be proved to have been duly served in good time and a Police-officer's report that he served the summons is not evidence of summons under cl. (b) of this section 3 L. B. R. 116. A Magistrate ought not after the issue of a service of summons order the issue of a warrant unless he first placed on record his reasons for considering that the accused has been duly served and that in spite of such service he had failed to appear without reasonable excuse 5 N. L. R. 123

6. Warrant should never issue when summons would be sufficient.—Great care should be taken that a warrant which implies personal arrest and restraint never goes forth when a summons to attend would be sufficient for the ends of justice and any attempt to coerce or restrain a party who has been summoned only should be checked and punished. It must be understood that the Police will carry out to the letter the instructions issued in the writ handed over to them, and with the Magistrate will rest the responsibility of the consequence of an informal or illegal process bearing his seal and signature—Puny Cr Chap XII p 144 See 3 L B R 116

7 Treatment of arrested witnesses—Witnesses brought up under arrest should be dealt with not as criminals but simply as persons arrested on civil process—Wilkins 107 It is competent to the Magistrate to admit such witnesses to bail Weir II, 39

8 "Absconded"—As to the meaning of the word see 4 M 393 and Note 6 under s 87 See for another definition Beng Pol Code p 392

91. When any person for whose appearance or arrest the officer presiding in any Court is empowered to issue a summons or warrant is present in such Court such officer may require such person to execute a bond with or without sureties for his appearance in such Court

Power to take bond for appearance

Note—In 1901 A W N 35 it was held that when a Magistrate suspected that a witness who was present in Court might in the future be kept out of the way by the accused neither s 91 nor s 496 justified his arresting her and placing her in the lock up

92. When any person who is bound by any bond taken under this Code to appear before a Court does not so appear, the officer presiding in such Court may issue a warrant directing that such person be arrested and produced before him

Arrest on breach of bond for appearance

Note—Proceedings may also be taken under s 514 to forfeit the bond. Although a person might be able to show that he was not guilty of an offence with which he had been charged yet during the pendency of the charge a Magistrate could certainly require the accused person to give a bond for attendance and the accused person whether guilty or not was bound to obey the terms thereof 17 A L J 508.

Provisions of this chapter generally applicable to summonses and warrants of arrest

93. The provisions contained in this chapter relating to a summons and warrant and their issue service and execution shall so far as may be apply to every summons and every warrant of arrest issued under this Code

Notes—1 Witnesses arrested may be admitted to bail—Having regard to the provisions of this section read with s 76 it has been held that a Magistrate may admit to bail a recalcitrant witness arrested under s 90 Weir II, 39

2 Shall apply to every summons—including summonses to jurors and assessors under s. 326

3 Every warrant, i.e. warrant of arrest search warrant warrant of commitment to custody warrant of execution warrant of release etc.

CHAPTER VII

OF PROCESSES TO COMPEL THE PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS AND OTHER MOVEABLE PROPERTY AND FOR THE DISCOVERY OF PERSONS WRONGFULLY CONFINED

A—Summons to Produce.

94. (1) Whenever any Court or in any place beyond the limits of the towns of Calcutta and Bombay any officer in charge of a Police-station considers that the production of any document or other thing is necessary or desirable for the purposes of any investigation inquiry trial or other proceedings under this Code by or before such Court or officer, such Court may issue a summons or such officer a written order to the person in whose possession or power such document or thing is believed to be requiring him to attend and produce it or to produce it at the time and place stated in the summons or order

Summons to produce documents or other things

(2) Any person required under this section merely to produce a document or other thing shall be deemed to have complied with the requisition if he causes such document or thing to be produced instead of attending personally to produce the same.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the Indian Evidence Act 1872 ss. 123 and 124 or to apply to a letter post-card, telegram or other document or any parcel or thing in the custody of the Postal or Telegraph authorities.

Notes.—1. Courts.—“In this Court, the terms ‘Court’ and ‘Magistrate’ are generally if not always used as convertible terms” 39 C. 933 (P.C.). See also the judgment of BARTT J. in 36 C. 433 at p. 467. It was held in 36 C. 433 and 122 B. 949 that there should be some proceeding pending before an order could issue under s. 94 or 96 (1) but the Privy Council in 39 C. 933 has laid down that Sch. V Form VIII contemplates the issue of a search warrant before any proceedings of any kind are initiated and in view of an inquiry about to be made, see Notes 4 and 5 to s. 94.

2. What “documents or things” may be directed to be produced—1. Definition of document. see s. 3 of the Evidence Act 1872, and s. 3(16) of the General Clauses Act 1873. A document or thing does not include “woman” 11 C. W. N. 836. The later decisions of the Calcutta High Court (see 38 C. 304, 12 C. W. N. 1016 = 8 Cr. L. J. 224) seem to lay down that this section does not deal with ‘documents or things’ forming the subject of a criminal offence e.g. ‘stolen articles and ‘documents or things’ in the possession of the accused but it is submitted looking to the general words of the section and the fact that there is no other provision in the Code for serving notices on the accused to produce documents in his possession or power that this section does deal with documents and things in the possession of the accused and with documents forming the subject of the criminal offence (see 5 Bom. L. R. 980; 37 M. 112; 15 C. 109; 10 C. 52 and see Note 3 below). ‘A Magistrate has the power of calling upon any person to produce any document or thing in that person’s possession or power which has any connection with the offence which happens to be under investigation or enquiry. Of course he cannot call for anything and everything from anybody and everybody. The thing called for must have some relation to or connection with the subject-matter of the investigation or enquiry or throw some light on the proceeding or supply some link in the chain of evidence. It may be that the thing called for may turn out to be wholly irrelevant to the enquiry but so long as it is considered to be necessary or desirable for the purpose of the enquiry the power is there.’ PER AMJER ALI J. at p. 64 in 19 C. 52. The words ‘document or thing’ are general and seem to cover any document the production and inpection of which are necessary or desirable or will serve the ends of justice 36 P. 1914.

3. Accused may be summoned to produce documents or things in his possession or power.—See Note 2 supra. Though in England no man could be compelled to produce evidence against himself and consequently no order can be made on him to produce documents or other things (see Halsbury Laws of England Vol. IX p. 387) it has been held that in India in view of the general words used in this section a Magistrate has always the power to issue a summons to the accused to obtain the production of a document or thing in his possession 15 C. 109 at pp. 122, 123 and 135-141, 37 M. 112, 36 P. R. 1914 (see also 19 C. 52 where such a power is presumed to exist). If the summons is not complied with a search-warrant may be issued under s. 96 15 C. 109, 36 P. R. 1914, 37 M. 112. In 12 C. W. N. 1016 = 8 C. L. J. 320 = 8 Cr. L. J. 224, however the Calcutta High Court held that the provisions of s. 94 cannot be taken to apply to the case of an accused person on his trial to whom a notice has been issued to produce an incriminating document having regard to the provisions of ss. 342-343 among others and this view has been approved of in 38 C. 304. In 41 C. 261, the Calcutta High Court considered and distinguished the cases in 12 C. W. N. 1016 38 C. 304 and 15 C. W. N. 1078 and held that those cases did not lay down any general proposition that the powers conferred by ss. 94 and 165 did not extend to accused persons. The particular objection to the search which the learned Judges had in their minds was not that the search was made in the house of an accused person but that it was made for stolen property generally whereas under s. 165 a search might be made only for a particular document or thing. It was further laid down that ss. 94 and 165 authorized the search of an accused’s house for specific stolen property relevant to the case.

4. Document or thing must be clearly specified.—The document or thing must be clearly specified (Cf. the form of warrant No. VIII in Sch. V). A general direction to produce all papers relating to the subject in dispute will not be enforced. See 16 C. W. N. 1078 = 13 Cr. L. J. 764 where the words were ‘stolen property relevant to the case’.

5 Magistrate must judicially consider whether production is necessary or desirable.—The question whether the production of a particular document or book is necessary or desirable for the purpose of any trial is one which must be decided by the Magistrate before he orders the production, and in determining that question he has to exercise his discretion judicially in the sense that he must satisfy himself, that the document or the book has bearing upon and is relevant to the case. When he has so satisfied himself his jurisdiction to order its production comes into play and that carries with it the jurisdiction to allow the prosecution the right of inspection. 5 Bom. L. R. 980. See also 15 C. 109.

6 Necessity for calling on parties to produce documents.—In criminal as in civil cases where documents are in possession of the adverse party, before secondary evidence of their contents can be given, the party offering it must prove that sufficient and timely notice to produce the documents has been given to the other party or his pleader in those cases in which notice is necessary. (See ss 65 and 66 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872) The notice must be specific, ie, indicate the document to be produced and should be given at such time as to afford the party a reasonable opportunity for producing the document at the trial. The reason why notice to produce is required, is not to give the opposite party notice that the document will be used so that he may be enabled to prepare evidence to explain or confirm it, but merely to exclude the argument that the party desirous of proving the document has not taken all reasonable means to procure the original. See also Russell on Crimes, Vol II, pp 2078–2078 If the accused wishes to give evidence as to the contents of a document in the possession of the prosecutor, he must serve the prosecutor with a summons to produce, and a notice to produce is not enough as he is not a party to the proceedings. Wills on Evidence, 2nd Ed., p 359. See also Archbold, pp 378 and 376

7. In criminal cases no interrogatories or discovery.—In criminal cases neither party can obtain evidence from the opposite side by means of interrogatories or discovery of documents. See Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. IX, p 387

8. Right to inspect documents or things produced.—See 15 C 109 and Note 23 to s 96

9. Every Court has power to have before it property which forms subject of charge.—Apart from any question of evidence every Court is entitled to have before it and to retain during the pendency of the proceedings any property which forms the subject of the charge pending before it or which has any connection with the offence which happens to be under investigation or inquiry. The accused was charged with criminal breach of trust with reference to a sum of Rs 1,77,131 12 which was paid to him in 17 currency notes of ten thousand rupees each and the remainder in small cash. He admitted the possession of 15 of them, but said that he had given 10 out of the 15 to a third person, his solicitor. The solicitor who claimed a lien on the 10 notes changed some of them into cash and small currency notes. The prosecution insisted on the production of these notes including the five notes and the proceeds of the other five currency notes in the possession of the third person (solicitor), but the Magistrate refused to make an order to that effect on the ground that he had no power to compel their production. Held, that the Magistrate was wrong and that he had power to compel the production of the notes and of the proceeds. 19 C 52. See also R v O'Donnell 1 C. and P. 138 R v Rooney, 7 C. and P. 315, 3 C. 379, 12 Bom. H. C. 217.

10 No power to take security for production when required.—It was held in 7 C. W. N. 522, that if a Magistrate does not choose to take action either under this section or under s 96, infra, to secure the production of property before the Court, no section of the Code enables him to demand security from the person in possession, for the production when required.

11. No power to allow inspection without production before Court or officer.—It is not open to the Magistrate to issue an order allowing the prosecution to inspect the entries in the books of the accused relating to the subject matter of the charge at the offices of the accused's attorneys. Such an order is not warranted by any section of the Code and is ultra vires, but he may cause their production under this section in Court for the purpose of using them as evidence to prove the guilt of the accused persons and in case of non-production issue a search warrant under s 96, 5 Bom. L. R. 978. A search might also be made under s 165.

12 Disposal of property produced.—The order under this section is quite irrespective of any which might afterwards be made by a Court under Chapter XLIII as to disposal of property. See also 19 C. 52

13. To the person in whose possession or power such document or thing is believed to be.—In the 1872 Code, the words were "in whose keeping". The language employed here, though of the widest possible character, ought to be fairly construed. The instrument need not be in the actual possession of the party, it is enough if it is in his power, which it would be if it were in the hands of a person in whom it would be wrongful not to give up possession to him. But he must have such a right to it as would entitle him not merely to inspect, but to retain it. Documents in Court by order are not regarded as in the possession of the party who had to file them in Court. Ainsell on Crimes p 207-4. In regard to official papers, they must be held to refer only to the head of the department having custody of the document, but not a subordinate official. The person in possession need not be a party to the proceeding. A third party quite unconnected with the case, may be summoned to produce the document. If the instrument be in the possession of a person in privity with the party, such as his attorney, banker, agent, servant, deputy or the like, such person need not be served with a subpoena duces tecum or even be called as a witness, but a notice given to the party himself will suffice. Thus, a notice to a shipowner to produce papers though the Captain has possession of them for his own protection, or a notice to a Sheriff to produce a warrant, which is shown to have been returned to the Under-sheriff, during the time the Sheriff remained in office, will justify the admission of secondary evidence (Taylor, p 434).

14. Order for production must be complied with even if owner claims a lien.—That the person in possession has a lien on the documents or things required to be produced is no sufficient reason for the non-production, 19 C. 52. See also 3 C. 379 and 12 Bom. H. C. R. 317.

15. Revision.—S. 435 gives the High Court ample powers to interfere in any case where a Magistrate has either refused to exercise a discretion vested in him by law, or has exercised that discretion in an improper manner. Therefore when a Magistrate erroneously refused to make any order for the production of certain currency notes or their proceeds in the possession of the accused and his legal adviser the High Court set aside the order and directed the Magistrate to proceed according to law, 19 C. 52.

16. Person producing document not a witness.—A person summoned to produce a document does not become a witness by the mere fact that he produces it, and cannot be cross-examined unless and until he is called as a witness—Act I of 1872 s. 139.

17. Particulars to be noted when public records called for.—A Magistrate requiring the production in evidence of documents recorded in a Court of Justice or in the custody of any public officer, should in his communication to such Court or officer state clearly whether he requires the entire record or any particular paper or papers, also at what time and place the papers if not previously sent by post must be produced, and whether any subordinate officer will be required to attend for the purpose of proving them. The communication should be signed and sealed in the same way as a summons. As a rule it is not desirable that a Magistrate should send for original papers in cases in which copies will serve the purpose and in which the person requiring the production of the papers is in a position to obtain certified copies (Bom H C Cir No 45, Gas, 1879, pp 471-475).

[123 No one shall be permitted to give any evidence derived from unpublished official records relating to any affairs of State, except with the permission of the officer at the head of the department concerned, who shall give or withhold such permission as he thinks fit. 124 No public officer shall be compelled to disclose communications made to him in official confidence, when he considers that the public interests would suffer by the disclosure.]

19. Failure to attend and produce—punishment.—Intentional omission to produce a document before a public servant by a person legally bound to produce it is punishable, under s. 175 I P C with simple imprisonment for one month or fine of Rs 500 or both etc. In 12 C. W. N 1016, the accused who was on his trial for offences under ss. 471 and 493, I P C, being directed to produce certain incriminating document did not produce the document and in consequence the prosecution against him failed, held that the accused could not be convicted under s. 175 I P C., for his omission to produce the document as this section did not apply to an accused. See, however, Note 3 above.

95. (1) If any document, parcel or thing in such custody is, in the opinion of any District Magistrate, Chief Presidency Magistrate, High Court or Court of Session wanted for the purpose of any investigation, inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, such Magistrate or Court may require the Postal or Telegraph authorities, as the case may be, to deliver such document, parcel or thing to such person as such Magistrate or Court directs Procedure as to letters and telegrams.

(2) If any such document, parcel or thing is, in the opinion of any other Magistrate, or of any Commissioner of Police or District Superintendent of Police, wanted for any such purpose, he may require the Postal or Telegraph Department, as the case may be, to cause search to be made for and to detain such document, parcel or thing pending the orders of any such District Magistrate, Chief Presidency Magistrate or Court

Notes —1. What Magistrates empowered.—Power to require search to be made for letters and telegrams is common to all Provincial Magistrates —Sch III, cl 7

2 Chief Presidency Magistrate — The only Magistrate in Presidency towns who can require the delivery of documents from Postal or Telegraph authorities is the Chief Presidency Magistrate

3. Rules in Bengal and Assam.— A summons from a Court of Civil or Criminal jurisdiction to produce any of the records of a Post Office, or a certified extract form or copy of any such records must be complied with. The receipt of such a summons and such particulars as are known to the Postmaster regarding the case should be at once reported to the Postmaster General in case he should see fit to raise any objection in Court under s. 123 or s. 124 of the Indian Evidence Act I of 1872 to the production of any of the records. When any journal or other record of a Post Office is produced in Court and admitted in evidence the officer producing it should ask the Court to direct that only such portions of the record as may be required by the Court shall be disclosed' —Rule 64, Cal G R and C O, p 6

B.—Search-warrants.*

Notes —1. Provisions for making searches —“ The scheme as regards searches under the Code is reasonably clear. The Court can issue a search warrant under s. 96 or in lieu of that the Magistrate may himself search under s. 105 s. 165 deals with searches by a Police-officer, and not by a Magistrate, ' 38 C. 433 at p. 448

2. Duty of Court before issuing search-warrant —The Court ought always to remember that it is a grave step to issue a search warrant directing that a man's house should be invaded and searched. It is necessary that power to issue search warrants should be given but it should not be exercised without full appreciation of the gravity of the step and after the Court has come to the conclusion that the step is really necessary in the ends of justice. When a Court is about to issue a search-warrant on the strength of information as distinguished from a complaint the Court should, if feasible, examine the informant on oath, and if evidence cannot be taken on oath the Court should act with a due appreciation of the fact that it is taking upon itself the responsibility of considering the weight of the information as information preparatory to issuing an order of a very serious nature. 5 A. L. J 517 = 12 Cr. L. J. 175. The issue of a search warrant is a judicial act and it ought only to be issued after a judicial inquiry and upon proper materials, 15 C. 109; 22 B. 949; 8 W. R. 74. See Note 1 under s. 94

96. (1) Where any Court has reason to believe that a person to whom a summons or order under section 94 or a requisition under section 95, sub-sec. (1), has been or might be addressed, will not or would not produce the document or thing as required by such summons or requisition, or where such document or thing is not known to the Court to be in the possession of any person, or where the Court considers that the purposes of any inquiry, trial or other proceedings under this Code will be served by a general search or inspection, it may issue a search warrant, and the person to whom such warrant is directed, may search or inspect in accordance therewith and the provisions hereinafter contained

(2) Nothing herein contained shall authorize any Magistrate other than a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate to grant a warrant to search for a document, parcel or other thing in the custody of the Postal or Telegraph authorities

Notes.—1 Magistrates empowered.—All Magistrates are empowered to issue search warrants. See Sch. III, cl 8

* These Regulations for p. 17 of 1890 a 72 (r) = 49 (r) of the 21st

Section 95 authorizes the Court to issue a warrant, while ss 98-100 confer the power only on the Magistrates specified therein. Under s 105, a Magistrate may himself direct search.

2. Proceedings of Magistrate not empowered void.—If any Magistrate not being empowered by law in that behalf issues a search-warrant for a letter, parcel or other thing in the Post Office or telegram in the Telegraph Department his proceedings are void, s 530 cl (1). If any such thing is wanted he must act as provided in cl (2) of s 95.

3. Form of search-warrant.—As to the form of warrant to search after information of a particular offence, see Sch V, Form No. 8.

4. Court—Who may issue search-warrant.—"For the sake of brevity, the Code uses the terms 'Court' and 'Magistrate' generally if not always in convertible terms," 39 C. 953 (P.C.) overruling the decision of the majority of the Court of Appeal in 35 C. 433 who held that a Magistrate is not competent to issue a search warrant unless he is sitting as a Court that is, acting judicially in some enquiry or proceeding initiated before him.

5. Search-warrants may be issued before any proceedings are initiated.—"For a Magistrate to issue a search warrant, it is necessary that he should be sitting as a Court, sc. some proceeding under the Code should have been initiated before him. The form of the warrant No. 8 in Sch V, contemplates the issue of a search-warrant before any proceedings of any kind are initiated and in view of "an enquiry to be made," 39 C. 953 (P.C.) which overrules the view of the majority in 35 C. 433, and see the dissenting judgment of BRETT, J., at pp 467-469, in 35 C. 433; see also 8 A. L. J. 517 = 12 Cr. L. J. 175.

6. Magistrate entitled to act on credible information.—It is lawful for a Magistrate to issue a search warrant when he considers the production of anything necessary for the purposes of any investigation or inquiry under the Code. It is not incumbent upon him to wait until the evidence for prosecution has been recorded in the presence of the accused. He is entitled to act upon information which he considers credible, provided it is based upon a complaint and the complainant is examined upon solemn affirmation according to law, 13 M. 18; 8 A. L. J. 517 = 12 Cr. L. J. 175, see Note 5 above.

7. The information must contain an allegation of an offence.—"Where a petition supported by an affidavit is presented to a Magistrate under s. 82 of the Indian Companies Act, which did not contain any allegation of any offence as defined in s. 4 (o), and the Magistrate without dealing with the petition under the Companies Act took cognizance of the case under s. 193 (c) and issued warrants for arrest and search without stating therein any specified offence, held that the order issuing the warrants and all proceedings taken there under were ultra vires and illegal Weir 1, 720; II, 46.

8. Complainant must be examined on oath before issue of search-warrant.—If a complaint is laid before a Magistrate, he is bound to examine the complainant under s. 200 before taking any other step and a search warrant issued on a complaint without examining the complainant would at least be irregular, 8 A. L. J. 517 = 12 Cr. L. J. 175, 8 M. L. T. 416 = (1910) M. W. N. 818 = 11 Cr. L. J. 535, see Notes 5 and 6 above.

9. Complaint necessary to issue search-warrant, telegram not a complaint.—"The only information on which a Magistrate can under this Code issue a search warrant is set out in s. 190 and an application for a search-warrant, based on a telegram to the Police authorities cannot be regarded as a complaint made with a view to a Magistrate taking action under the Code against the person whose house is to be searched. 22 B. 949, see however, Note 5.

10. Condition precedent to granting search-warrant for production of documents or things in possession of parties.—It is a condition precedent to the issue of a search-warrant under this section that the Court must have reason to believe that the person against whom the search warrant is issued is not likely to produce the document or the thing in his possession as required by a summons or order under s. 94 or a requisition under s. 95 (1) supra served upon him or that he is not likely to produce should such summons, order or requisition be served, 5 Bom. L. R. 1032; 15 C. 109 at p. 134. It is the duty of the Court in the first instance to consider if a summons to produce would not have the desired effect. See also 1917 M. W. N. 494 and 17 Cr. L. J. 60.

11. Search-warrant not to be granted solely for attaching property title to which is disputed.—This section authorizes and compels the production of property in respect of which a search warrant is issued. But when property not alleged to be stolen is in the hands of third parties, such production can only be demanded for the purposes of evidence and ought not to be granted for the sole purpose of attaching property the title to which is in dispute, Ratanlal 677. An attachment before judgment is unknown to criminal law. See 19 C. 52 where the question whether a Court is competent to issue a summons under s. 94 merely with a view to take proceedings under s. 517 after close of trial is discussed.

12. General search for fishing evidence not authorized.—"It rather seems to me that this section contemplates the production of some specified or distinct thing or object which may be deemed essential to the conduct of any inquiry and the conviction of the accused party, such, for instance, as the bloody knife, a vessel containing poison, a forged document a piece of stolen property, and so on but it can scarcely have been the intention of the Legislature to empower Police-officers or other underlings to make harassing domiciliary visits to inquire minutely into the private concerns of individuals, and to seize any part of their papers under the bare chance that something might therein be proved tending to the conviction of any accused parties"—Per SETON HARR, J., 8 W. R. 74, p. 75. In 16 C. W. N. 1078 = 13 Cr. L. J. 764, it is laid down that the law does not empower a Police-officer to search an accused person's house for anything, but specific articles which have been or can be made the subject of summons or warrant to produce. A general search for stolen property is not authorized and the law cannot be got over by using such an expression as 'stolen property relevant to the case,' as the law requires mention of specific things. The ruling in 39 C. 953 seems to imply that it is open to a Magistrate to direct a general search. The third paragraph of cl. (1) does not seem to be in any way qualified by s. 94. The ruling in 39 C. 953, is however distinguished in 47 C. 597, which holds that unless there are materials before a Magistrate connecting a person against whom the warrant is applied for with the offence, alleged, upon which he can come to an independent decision on the point he has no power to issue a search warrant. He cannot grant such warrant simply because a Police officer informs him that it is necessary and asks him to do so. per CHAUDHARI, J. A Magistrate has no power to issue a search warrant under paragraph 3 when there is no inquiry trial or other proceeding under the Code pending before him, but there is only some investigation into alleged offences being made by the Police.

13. Search not confined to documents intended to be used as evidence.—The section is somewhat obscurely worded, but it is apparent from cl. (3) that the Legislature did not intend to restrict it to documents forming the subject of a charge as distinguished from documents sought to be used as evidence in a criminal case, 5 Bom. L. R. 980; 35 P. R. 1914, see Notes 2 and 3 to s. 94.

14. Scope of search-warrant; documents or things in possession of accused.—In 15 C. 109, NORRIS, J., observes that the language of this section is extremely wide and does not follow the English Common law rule that no man should be compelled to produce evidence to criminate himself. This section authorizes the production, and under certain circumstances the compulsory production of documents not only in the premises of an accused person, but also in the premises of any other person in the world. The same view is held in 19 C. 82; 41 C. 251; but in 12 Cr. L. J. 98 (C), it was held that a search warrant under this section cannot be addressed to an accused person on his trial for production of a document in his possession or power. See Notes 2 and 5 under s. 94. To issue a search warrant for the purpose of seizure of all letters, books, bills and books of account was a gross perversion of law. 9 L. B. R. 45 = 17 Cr. L. J. 543.—Magistrate has no authority for issuing, on the application of the complainant a search warrant ordering the summary seizure of all the goods of a certain description in the possession of the accused. 17 Cr. L. J. 60.

15. No jurisdiction to take security for production.—Under the Code, the Magistrate acting as a judicial officer has no jurisdiction merely to take security for the safe custody and production whenever required, of the property before a Civil Court. 7 C. W. N. 522.

16. Search for persons wrongfully confined.—See ss. 100 and 101 as to the mode of conducting the same. When a warrant was issued purporting to be under this section, while it ought to have been under s. 100 the resistance to the execution of the warrant was held to be justified, as the warrant was illegal, 11 C. W. N. 836 = 8 C. L. J. 127 = 6 Cr. L. J. 33. But this case was dissented from in 16 C. W. N. 338 = 13 Cr. L. J. 186 on the ground that the error was one of form only, see also 39 C. 403.

17. Document cannot be seized except on search-warrant.—A Presidency Magistrate on being asked by telegram from the District Magistrate of Agra to take possession of certain account books of one D, living at Bombay, and send them to him, summoned D to produce them, and when they were produced seized and sent them to Agra purporting to do so under the provision of ss. 96 and 99 held, that as there was no search warrant, neither s. 96 nor s. 99 applied. Ratanlal 880.

18. Order on Police to take possession of documents without summons or search-warrant illegal.—On a complaint before a Magistrate that the accused had fraudulently tampered with account books of a partnership business, the Magistrate directed the Police 'to enquire and report and take possession of the Khatibooks' Held, that the order of the Magistrate was illegal, and that, if the production of the books was necessary, he should have issued either a summons to produce under s. 94 or a search-warrant under this section, 33 C. 65.

19. Rules regulating searches.—A search-warrant should except under special circumstances be executed between sunrise and sunset. If, for special reasons, a search-warrant be executed between sunset and sunrise, such reasons must be reported to the District Superintendent for the information of the Magistrate having jurisdiction—Eng. Pol. Man., 2nd ed., p. 402.

20. Disposal of things produced.—See s. 517, infra, and, as to disposal of things found beyond jurisdiction see s. 99.

21. Inspection is confined to inspection of locality or place.—Having regard to the language of s. 97 the word inspect must be confined to locality or place (e.g., for blood stains), but not to document or other thing, 15 C. 109.

22. Power to search includes power to take possession.—Having regard to the language of Form VIII, Sch. V which authorizes the search for and production of the thing required the power to take possession is inherent in all cases of the issue of a search-warrant. This holds good for searches conducted by the Police under ss. 165 and 166 as the latter section provides for forfeiting the thing found, see Ratanlal 867.

23. Right of parties to inspect documents or things produced.—A Magistrate has power to grant inspection of documents, but such inspection must be limited to books mentioned in search-warrants, 15 C. 109. See Notes 2 and 5 to s. 94 where this ruling is followed. When once the documents or things are brought before the Court under an order duly made the Magistrate would have the power to allow the prosecutor the inspection thereof. They stand when they are brought to Court, precisely in the same position as when the documents or things are found either upon the person of a prisoner at the time of his arrest, or at his house upon a search made by the Police and afterwards forwarded to the Court. It is reasonable that those who conduct the prosecution should have such inspection, for the production of documents is for the purpose of taking them in evidence and this could not be done unless the prosecution had an opportunity of inspecting them, 15 C. 109. In this case the inspection was, however, directed to be limited to the inspection of the books named in the search-warrant. See also 5 Bom. L. R. 980. But it is not open to the Magistrate to issue an order allowing the prosecution to inspect the entries in the books of the accused relating to the subject matter of the charge at the office of the accused's attorneys, 5 Bom. L. R. 978. See Note 11 to s. 94, supra.

24. Magistrate may conduct the search in person.—Under s. 105 infra, a Magistrate who is competent to issue a search-warrant is also competent himself to conduct the search, 1884 A. W. N. 213; 36 C. 433; 39 C. 953 (P.C.).

25. Resistance to illegal search.—Where a Police-officer deputed to make an investigation, but not empowered to enter a house in search of property, does make a search without a warrant, the illegality of such search cannot justify any resistance or obstruction under s. 99, I P. C., unless it is shown that the officer has acted otherwise than in good faith and without malice, 7 B. H. C. R. Cr. C. 50; 19 M. 349; 23 C. 896; 28 C. 411; 28 C. 399; 33 C. 304; 48 A. 246; 16 P. R. 1904 = 1 Cr. L. J. 1091; 14 Cr. L. J. 142 (Pan) 8 A. L. R. 1 = 16 Cr. L. J. 15. Where on the complaint of the husband that his wife was wrongfully confined by his father-in-law, a warrant was issued under this section and the Police-officer attempting to execute the warrant was obstructed and criminal force used by the accused, held that the accused were not guilty as the warrant was illegal 11 C. W. N. 836 = 6 C. L. J. 127 = 6 Cr. L. J. 38. But this case has been dissented from in 39 C. 403 and 16 C. W. N. 336 = 13 Cr. L. J. 186. See Note 15 to s. 103.

26. Searches under other Acts.—The provisions relating to searches under this Code shall, so far as they can be made applicable, apply (1) to a search under s. 8, cl (1) of Act XI of 1890 (Prevention of Cruelty to Animals), (2) to a search under Bombay Act II of 1890 (Salt), cl 2, (3) to searches by officers authorized by rules under s. 7 of the Indian Explosives Act IV of 1884, (4) to search under the Indian Arms Act XI of 1878, which in Bengal must be conducted in the presence of some officer specially appointed by name or in virtue of his office by the Local Government, and all Magistrates and Police-officers not below the rank of Inspector have been so appointed—Calcutta Gazette, 1878, Pt. I, p. 1850. In the Chittagong Division, the order has been extended to Police-officers, not below the grade of Sub-Inspector—Calcutta Gazette, 1889, Pt. I, p. 63. Under s. 25 of the Indian Arms Act, a Magistrate must before causing search to be made record in writing the grounds of his belief that a person has possession of arms, etc., for an unlawful purpose, and when he conducts a search without so recording, the search is illegal and the Magistrate is guilty of a trespass if he enters into any building, 36 C. 433 approved on this point by the Privy Council in 39 C. 955. Under this section a Magistrate has power to issue a search warrant for the production of copies of the infringing book, proof, etc., for the purpose of making an order under section 10 of the Indian Copyright Act (III of 1914), 47 C. 164.

27. Definition of search-warrant under N.Y. Cr. P. C., s. 791.—"A search warrant is an order in writing, in the name of the people, signed by a Magistrate, directed to a Police-officer, commanding him to search for personal property, and bring it before the Magistrate." It may be issued upon either of the following grounds—(1) When the property was stolen or embezzled, etc. * * (2) When it was used as the means of committing felony, etc. * * (3) When it is in the possession of any person, with the intent to use it as the means of committing a public offence, or in the possession of another, to whom he may have delivered it for the purpose of concealing it, or preventing its being discovered, in which case it may be taken on the warrant, from such person, or from a house or other place occupied by him, or under his control, or from the possession of the person to whom he may have so delivered it.

Notes.—(1) A search warrant issued upon information upon oath that certain goods have been stolen by A and were concealed in the house of B, commanding the constable to enter the said house in the day time and search for the goods stolen and bring them with B or the person in whose custody the goods should be found, before the justice is a valid process'—Bell v. Clapp, 10 Johns 263 (2) A person who maliciously and without probable cause procures a search warrant to be issued and executed is guilty of a misdemeanour—section 811 (3) A police-officer, who in executing a search warrant, wilfully exceeds his authority or exercises it with unnecessary severity is guilty of a misdemeanour—section 812

28 Delay in issue of search-warrant.—Where in a case of trespass and theft, the complainant, at the time of applying for process, prayed for the issue of a search-warrant, but the Magistrate after repeated application made an order for the issue of the warrant more than three weeks after, held that the procedure was so dilatory that it could only tend to defeat the object for which such a warrant is issued, 22 C. W. N 719

97. The Court may, if it thinks fit, specify in the warrant the particular place or part thereof to which only the search or inspection, shall extend, and the person charged with the execution of such warrant shall then search or inspect only the place or part so specified he may by his warrant authorize any Police-officer above the rank of a constable—

(a) counterfeit coin

(b) coin suspected to be counterfeit and

(c) instruments or materials for counterfeiting coin shall so far as they can be made applicable apply respectively, to—

2 Search warrant issued by Magistrate not duly empowered.—If any Magistrate not being empowered by law, erroneously issues a search-warrant in good faith under this section his proceedings shall not be set aside merely on the ground of his not being so empowered.—S 529 et seq.

3. Notification under s. 19 of the Sea Customs Act, e.g. see Port St. George Gazette Notification dated 5th April 1887 under which the bringing into British India by sea or by land of pieces of metal resembling in shape and in size and stamped either on the obverse or on the reverse in imitation of rupees half rupees quarter rupees and eighth-rupees is prohibited as also pieces of pure or mixed metal which not being coin as defined in the I P C., are intended to be used as money But the bringing of such pieces into British India by a traveller in quantity not exceeding one hundred pieces and in good faith for his own use is not to be deemed prohibited by the above notification.

99. When in the execution of a search warrant at any place beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued the same any of the things for which search is made are found such things together with the list of the same prepared under the provisions hereinafter contained shall be immediately taken before the Court issuing the warrant unless such place is nearer

C—Discovery of persons Wrongfully confined

100. If any Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class or Sub-divisional Magistrate has reason to believe that any person is confined under such circumstances that the confinement amounts to an offence he may issue a search warrant and the person to whom such warrant is directed may search for the person so confined and such search shall be made in accordance therewith and the person if found shall be immediately taken before a Magistrate who shall make such order as in the circumstances of the case seems proper.

Notes.—1 Under such circumstances that the confinement amounts to an offence.—Where a husband is charged with wrongfully detaining his wife it was held that notice must be issued upon him as he had a right to appear and show cause 2 C W N 333 N, 39 P W R 1910 = 11 Cr L J 450

2 Arrest of ward by District Court.—For the purpose of arresting the ward the District Court may exercise the power conferred on a Magistrate of the first class by this section.—Section 2a (2), Act VIII of 1890 (The Guardian and Wards Act).

3. Habeas Corpus.—Sec s. 491 for the powers which the High Courts of Calcutta Madras and Bombay now have to issue directions in the nature of habeas corpus see also s. 52a as to the powers of a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate to compel the restoration of abducted females 16 C 487

4. Scope of this section not as wide as that of the writ of 'habeas corpus.'—The accused were charged under s. 363 I P C. with kidnapping a minor boy. The Magistrate discharged them and refused to pass any order under this section. On a reference it was held that the Magistrate was not bound to issue search warrant and pass an order under this section in the absence of any reason to believe that the minor was wrongfully confined. The jurisdiction under this section is not as wide as that conferred by s. 491 Ratanlal 839, 24 C W N 104

5 Warrant wrongly issued under s. 96 instead of under this section was held illegal see 11 C W N 836 = 8 C. L J 127 = 8 Cr L J 39 and Note 2a to s. 96

6 Presumption as to legality of warrant.—Where upon an application under s. 522 a warrant was issued under s. 100 to compel the immediate appearance of a woman but was drawn up on a form printed for use under s. 96 and the accused snatched away and destroyed it held that it must be presumed that the warrant contained the substance of what is set out in s. 100 and that the portions which had to be altered were altered and that the issue of the search warrant was not illegal or without jurisdiction 16 C. W N 336 = 13 Cr L J 185, 45 C. 903

D—General Provisions relating to Searches

101. The provisions of ss 43 75 77 79 82 83 and 84 shall so far as may be apply to all search warrants issued under s. 96 § 98 s. 99-A* or s. 100

2 Search warrant under Gambling Act may be endorsed over.—A search warrant under the Gambling Act III of 1867 is governed by this Code and may therefore be endorsed over by a Police-officer to whom it is directed to another duly empowered 30 A 60

3. Application to searches under other Acts.—Searches made under the provisions of the Opium Act I of 1878 must be made in accordance with this Code see ss 14 15 16 of that Act but not the searches made under the Excise Act, 4 L. B. R. 121. Sections 102 and 103 apply to the searches made under s. 6 of the Burma Gambling Act (I of 1899). See also 8 L. B. R. 213 = 16 Cr. L. J. 238 for application of these provisions to searches under the Bombay Gambling Act, 1897.

102. (1) Whenever any place liable to search or inspection under this Chapter is closed, any person residing in, or being in charge of, such place shall on demand of the officer or other person executing the warrant, and on production of the warrant, allow him free ingress thereto, and afford all reasonable facilities for a search therein

(2) If ingress into such place cannot be so obtained, the officer or other person executing the warrant may proceed in manner provided by s. 48

(3) Where any person in or about such place is reasonably suspected of concealing about his person any article for which search should be made, such person may be searched. If such person is a woman the directions of s. 52 shall be observed

Note.—Powers of the Police in Calcutta or Bombay.—This section has not been made specially to apply to the Police in Calcutta or Bombay. But under ss. 96, 98 and 100 Presidency Magistrates have power to issue search warrants to the Police. In case of search warrants, therefore, there seems to be no doubt that the Police in Calcutta and Bombay are to be guided by the provisions of s. 48

Search to be made in presence of witnesses. 103. (1) Before making a search under this Chapter, the officer or other person about to make it shall call upon two or more respectable inhabitants of the locality in which the place to be searched is situate to attend* and witness the search and may issue an order in writing to them or any of them so to do*

(2) The search shall be made in their presence, and a list of all things seized in the course of such search and of the places in which they are respectively found shall be prepared by such officer or other person and signed by such witnesses, but no person witnessing a search under this section shall be required to attend the Court as a witness of the search unless specially summoned by it

(3) The occupant of the place searched, or some person in his behalf, shall in every instance, be permitted to attend during the search, and a copy of the list prepared under this section, signed by the said witnesses, shall be delivered to such occupant or person at his request

(4) When any person is searched under section 102, sub-sec. (3), a list of all things taken possession of shall be prepared and a copy thereof shall be delivered to such person at his request

“(5) Any person who without reasonable cause refuses or neglects to attend and witness a search under this section when called upon to do so by an order in writing delivered or tendered to him shall be deemed to have committed an offence under section 187 of the Indian Penal Code”

Note.—The provisions of section 103 Cr. Pro. Code 1898, do not apply to a search conducted after the issue of a warrant under s. 5 of the Gambling Act (III of 1867) 3 Lah. 353.

Notes.—1. Selection of search-witnesses by whom to be made.—This section does not justify the view that the persons called upon to witness search are to be selected by any person other than the officer conducting the search 21 M. 83.

2. Who are proper witnesses.—The provision is aimed against possible chicanery and unfair dealing on the part of the officers entrusted with the search warrants and was made to ensure confidence that anything incriminating which may be found in premises searched shall be really found and shall not be what is called planted. The section clearly contemplates the presence of two respectable witnesses of the locality unconnected in any way with the Government and its officers. So the calling in of headmen of wards who are appointed by the Commissioner of Police and have certain Police duties to do or of the Village Munsiff at Katnam, is not sufficient compliance with the provisions of this section, and the premises so searched could not be deemed to have been duly entered and searched, so as to give room for the presumption that the place was a common gambling house. 3 L. B. R. 229 = 4 Cr. L. J. 250; 1 ut in 7 Bur. L. T. 143 = 15 Cr. L. J. 441, it was held by a majority of the Full Bench that ward headmen in towns other than Rangoon should be considered competent witnesses of searches under this section. The intention of the Legislature is that only those should be chosen as witnesses who can be reasonably relied on to secure the desired result and in whose trustworthiness and ability towards the carrying out of the particular duty required of them confidence can be felt, 4 L. B. R. 213 = 14 Bur. L. R. 81 = 7 Cr. L. J. 479; 4 Bur. L. T. 91 = 12 Cr. L. J. 251; but see 11 Cr. L. J. 746 (Bur.) and U. B. R. (1908) 2nd Quarter, p. 1. It is objectionable to be constantly calling the same person to witness the search and to do so is likely to prejudice the mind of a trying Magistrate against the prosecution, 4 L. B. R. 121. In view of the provisions of s. 6 (d) of the Bombay Gambling Act 1V of 1897 and s. 1 (2) of this Code, searches made under this section need not be conducted in the presence of Wishirs, 8 B. L. R. 213 = 16 Cr. L. J. 238.

* The words “and witnesses” in “do” was added by Act XI III of 1923

3. Inhabitants of the locality fail to call them.—The word 'locality' does not mean the same quarter of the town as the place searched, 4 Bur. L. T. 222 = 12 Cr. L. J. 479. The stress is on the word 'respectable' and not on the word 'locality', 11 Cr. L. J. 746 (Bur.). Failure to call inhabitants of the locality as witnesses does not make a search illegal, 21 M. 63; 23 M. L. J. 443 = (1912) M. W. N. 1111 = 13 Cr. L. J. 763. See also 19 M. 349 and 10 Bur. L. R. 253 = 1 Cr. L. J. 993.

4. Right of occupant to be present at search.—The spirit of subsec. (3) of this section is that the 'occupant' of the place searched shall be present, which means that he is to be given the option of being present and not that he is to be allowed to be present only if he demands it. But the right of presence given by this section applies only to the 'occupant' of the place searched or some person in his behalf and the words 'occupant of the place' are not intended to cover every person who may happen to be in the place at the time, but they refer back to the person mentioned in s. 102, ie a person residing in or being in charge of the place. Where, therefore, after the discovery of a gun and search of their persons, the accused, who were the occupants of the place, were sent out of the room and the search was continued, held there was a violation of the rule enunciated in this section, which was one not merely of technicality, but of substance, in that it was enacted to guarantee the reality of the search and that it was an irregularity which made it incumbent on the Court to scrutinise the evidence carefully, 41 C. 350.

5. Bengal rules as to sending for witnesses.—The sending for shop-keepers selected arbitrarily by the Police and making them witnesses to the search of houses of accused persons, is a fruitful source of oppression and extortion. It is difficult to prescribe rules for the selection of witnesses to the search of houses for stolen property, but the District Superintendents can easily ascertain by questioning the witnesses sent in whether they have been unfairly selected. One respectable house-holder should not be summoned a second time till his neighbours have had their turns, unless good reasons be given for their exemption. Respectable shop-keepers are just as liable to be summoned as other respectable inhabitants of the place.—Beng. Pol. Man, 2nd Ed., p. 403.

6. Cart is not a 'place.'—An Abkari-officer suspecting the possession by the accused of liquor with out license searched the cart in which the accused was travelling and found a bottle of liquor therein. On appeal by Government it was held, that a cart is not a 'place' as is contemplated by this section, and, therefore, the provisions therein contained cannot be applied to the search of a cart, Bom. H. C. Cr. Rul., 18th June, 1885.

7. Refusal to sign search-list not punishable under s. 187, I P. C.—When a person called upon by an Abkari Inspector to attend a search under this section refused to sign the search-list and was thereupon charged under s. 187, I P. C., with intentionally omitting to assist a public servant in the execution of this duty, held the conviction was bad because the assistance which a person is bound, by the earlier part of s. 187, I P. C., to render is ejusdem generis with the various forms of assistance referred to in the later part of the section and that it must have some direct personal relation to the execution of the duty by the public officer. The signing of the list, required by this section is an independent duty which is imposed on the witness, whereas the word assistance as used in s. 187, I P. C., implies that the party who assists is doing something, which in ordinary circumstances the party assisted could do for himself, 26 M. 419 (F.B.).

8. Duty of prosecution to call witnesses present at search.—The prosecution are in duty bound to call the persons who were present at the search unless they are of opinion that those persons would misrepresent facts and mis-state what had happened. The fact that some of these persons have formed an opinion unfavourable to the prosecution story is no reason for not calling them as the witnesses are called upon to state what they saw and not what they thought 9 C. W. N 433 It is wrong for a Judge in charging the jury to say that a Head Constable committed a breach of the Police Regulation in conducting a search with a loose shirt on without examining him on the matter and taking evidence as to whether or not his body was examined before he began the search 21 M 83.

9 Value of search list—A search list prepared under this section is proper evidence as to matters which it should contain z: the properties found and the place where they were found Weir II 515 (but see 33 M 413) and should be duly proved and exhibited Unless the list is signed by witnesses mentioned in the section the search would not be legal 4 L B R 134 = 7 Cr L J 411

10 Additions to or omissions from search list do not invalidate the search—After a search list has been signed duly in accordance with sub-sec. (2) it is not proper to make additions thereto subsequently but such additions to an already completed list do not constitute a breach of this section so as to invalidate the whole search nor is the omission of unimportant articles a circumstance invalidating the search 7 Bar L T 163 = 15 Cr L J 523

11 Evidence other than the search list may be adduced to prove particulars of search—When a search has been conducted under s 103 evidence can be given regarding the things seized in the course of the search and regarding places in which they were respectively found other than the list which the law in the section directs to be drawn up containing these particulars 34 M 349 (F B) Weir II, 518 overruled see also Weir II, 776, 7 M L T 362 = 11 Cr L J 136, 33 M 413 The provisions of s 91 of the Indian Evidence Act could not have been intended by the Legislature to apply to mere observations of physical facts which under the ordinary law have to be proved by testimony in Court 7 B H C R 43 at p 63

12 As to other searches by the Police—See ss 165 and 166 as to mode of making a search see 27 C. 692

13 Liability for contravening the provisions of this section—Police-officers might be prosecuted under s. 166 I P C or under the Police Act 55 L R 31 = 12 Cr L J 439 But if the officer without calling upon two witnesses searches a house no obstruction or resistance will be justified so as to bar a conviction under s 353 I P C 19 M 349

14 Resistance to illegal search—Where a search was conducted without a warrant only one search witness was brought and a constable scaled the outer wall and effected a burglarious entry into the house and the persons conducting the search were assaulted held that the constables conducting the search were not acting in the discharge of their duties as public servants and that the accused who caused hurt to the constables could not be convicted under s 332 I P C 37 A 353, 18 A 246, followed See Note 25 at p 141 42 A 67

B—Miscellaneous

Power to impound document etc produced

104. Any Court may if it thinks fit impound any document or thing produced before it under this Code

Notes—1 Impounding of documents when illegal—When a Magistrate had no authority to summon a person in whose charge the document e.g. account books or other thing was this section did not apply so as to justify the sending of the books out of his jurisdiction Ratanlal 890

2 Impounding by a Magistrate not seized of the case illegal—Under this section a District Magistrate could not impound any document which has been produced in a pending case before a Subordinate Magistrate 1 A L J 607

3 Procedure on impounding—A note upon the document or thing impounded or attached to it should be made and signed by the presiding officer and it should not be allowed to pass out of the custody of the Court except by its written order All H C Bk Clr, p 6

Magistrate may direct search in his presence.

105. Any Magistrate may direct a search to be made in his presence of any place for the search of which he is competent to issue a search warrant

Notes.—See ss. 96—103 as to competency of Magistrates to issue search warrants By s. 529 the issue of a search-warrant by an unauthorized Magistrate is not on that ground alone invalid.

1. Competency of Magistrate to direct searches.—Having regard to the ordinary powers of a Magistrate as specified in the third Sch. V (A) and so far as any Magistrate has in the circumstances stated in the preceding ss. 84 and 85 power or authority as such Magistrate to direct a search 39 C. 933 (P.C.) overruling 36 C. 433.

2. Magistrate directing search acts judicially.—A Magistrate directing a general search in view of an enquiry under this Code acts in the discharge of his judicial functions and may appeal for protection to Act No. XVIII of 1850 (An Act for the protection of judicial officers) 39 C. 933 (P.C.) overruling the opinion of the majority in 36 C. 433.

3. This section empowers a Magistrate to himself conduct a search under the Bombay Gambling Act (IV of 1857).—As the Bombay Intervention of Gambling Act has provided for the manner or place of investigating or inquiring into any offence under it its provisions must prevail and the Criminal Procedure Code must give way. Accordingly no provision of the Code as to the authority empowered to issue a warrant for arrest or search or the persons to whom and the conditions under which such warrant may be issued can apply for the purposes of s. 7 of the Gambling Act. The authority the persons and the conditions must be respectively those specifically mentioned in s. 6 of the Act and no other. But the special provision in s. 6 of the Bombay Act would still be subject to the general provisions of ss. 65 and 105 of the Code. When the Legislature empowers an officer to delegate an authority to do a certain act to another person it necessarily implies that the original authority to do such act is fully and completely in the officer himself but that it is necessary for the exigencies of business that it should be done in the majority of cases by persons acting under authority derived from him 31 B 493.

PART IV. PREVENTION OF OFFENCES

CHAPTER VIII *

OF SECURITY FOR KEEPING THE PEACE AND FOR GOOD BEHAVIOUR

A—Security for Keeping the Peace on Conviction

106. (1) Whenever any person accused of any offence punishable under Chapter VIII of the Indian Penal Code other than an offence punishable under section 143 section 149 section 153-A or section 154 thereof or of assault or other offence involving a breach of the peace or of abetting the same † *
Security for keeping the peace on conviction.

or any person accused of committing criminal intimidation is convicted of such offence before a High Court a Court of Session or the Court of a Presidency Magistrate a District Magistrate a Sub-divisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class and such Court is of opinion that it is necessary to require such person to execute a bond for keeping the peace such Court may at the time of passing sentence on such person order him to execute a bond for a sum proportionate to his means with or without sureties for keeping the peace during such period not exceeding three years as it thinks fit to fix

(2) If the conviction is set aside on appeal or otherwise the bond so executed shall become void

(3) An order under this section may also be made by an Appellate Court including a Court hearing appeals under section 407 or by the High Court when exercising its powers of revision

Notes.—1 For form of bond see Sch. V No 10 for punishment for failure to furnish security see

† The words "any offence punishable under Chapter VIII of the Indian Penal Code other than an offence punishable under section 143 section 149 section 153-A or section 154 thereof or of assault or other offence involving a breach of the peace or of abetting the same" have been omitted by Act XVIII of 1923

2 The words "or of assembling armed men or taking other unlawful measures with the evident intention of committing the same" have been omitted by Act XVIII of 1923

3 The words "including a Court" in section 407 were added by Act XVIII of 1923

is of opinion that a bond ought to be executed. Under s 513 a deposit in money or Government Promissory notes might be made in lieu of executing the bond. For general notes on this Chapter, see p 161, etc.

1-A.—The amendment of s 106 has made an order under s 106 impossible when the only section under which the accused are convicted is a section of the Penal Code read with section 149. The amendment as it stands must be read to indicate that there must be some substantive offence charged to be read with section 149 inasmuch as no offence is punishable under s 149 alone. 3 P. A. T. 870.

2. Order for giving security is in discretion of Magistrate.—The taking of security to keep the peace is a matter within the discretion of Magistrate, provided he has materials upon which to proceed, 23 W. R. 55; but (1) an order ought not to be made when a sentence of imprisonment or transportation for a long term (seven years) is passed, 5 L. B. R. 34 = 10 Cr. L. J. 69. (2) Disputes regarding land or water—Where there are such bona fide disputes, proceedings should be taken under Chapter XII, s 145, and not under this section, 3 C. W. N. 297 and 463. (3) Where the result of taking security from one party would be to prevent the exercise of lawful rights—Where on the complainant trying to take possession of land in the occupation of the accused, the accused used more force than was necessary to prevent the complainant's party from doing so, held, that, although the accused were rightly convicted of the offence of rioting under s 147, I P C., they should not be bound down under s 106 to keep the peace, as that would have the effect of preventing the accused from resisting any further attempt by the complainant to take possession of the land, 11 C. W. N. 840 = 6 Cr. L. J. 40. An order under s 106 should not be passed when it would practically prevent the party from exercising his legal rights, 11 C. W. N. 1128; or the other may also be bound down under s 107, 11 C. W. N. 176. See Note 14 at p 148.

I.—CONDITIONS PRECEDENT FOR REQUIRING SECURITY UNDER THIS SECTION.

3. Security demandable only on conviction.—The section refers only to parties convicted of assault, rioting, etc., and cannot be applied to cases where there is only a possible apprehension of a future breach of the peace, 24 W. R. 10. No order requiring personal recognizance to keep the peace can be passed under this section unless the accused has been convicted of rioting or any other offence, 21 W. R. 37, 23 W. R. 79. Security cannot be demanded when there is no conviction but the only fact found is that the accused threatened to beat the complainant, 25 C. 628; or that the accused provoked another to commit an assault, Weir II, 48.

4. Security cannot be demanded on acquittal.—Security cannot be demanded from an accused person when he is discharged or acquitted of the offences mentioned in this section. Mad H C. Pro 19th May, 1874, 3 C. L. R. 72, see also 11 C. W. N. 413 and 23 C. 628.

5. Only the person accused and convicted can be required to give security.—(1) Witness cannot be directed to give security.—A witness for defence in case of rioting was ordered to give security to keep the peace on the conclusion of the trial as the presiding Magistrate had no doubt left on his mind from the evidence given by the witness that he was one of the rioters in the case. held that this procedure was illegal so far as the witness was concerned, 5 M. 339. (2) Complainant cannot be directed to give security.—Where a Magistrate convicted the accused under s 323 I P C., and called upon both the complainant as well as the accused to furnish security under this section held the Court had no jurisdiction to call on the complainant to furnish security under this section, but if it desired to bind him over must proceed under other sections of this Chapter, after recording separate proceedings, 3 P. R. 1902.

6. Order for security must be made at the time of passing sentence in presence of accused.—An order for recognizance or for security under this section must be passed at the time of deciding the original case. If no such order is then made, subsequent proceedings must be taken under s 107 and the parties summoned to show cause, 15 W. R. 56; also 3 P. R. 1893. Although it is competent for a Magistrate upon conviction and sentence for assault, to order the accused to furnish security under this section, yet, having committed to do so at the time of passing sentence, he cannot afterwards upon receiving some further credible information (other than that which he derived from previous trial) that the parties are likely to commit a breach of the peace pass an order under this section, 3 N.-W. P. H. C. R. 96, 23 P. R. 1901; 15 W. R. 56. The order under this section, must, therefore, be made in the presence of the accused. An order directing a recognizance bond to be taken and made in the absence of the accused and upon the suggestion of his adversary was set aside 3 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 1.

7. Breach of the peace must be reasonably probable.—To justify an order under this section, there must be a reasonable probability of a breach of the peace being committed and not merely a bare possibility, 20 W. R. 57.

Where there is no conviction, but strong grounds for apprehension of a future breach of the peace, the Magistrate must act under s. 107 or apply to the officer having authority to proceed under that section—Pro M S C., 18th January, 1862.

II.—NATURE OF OFFENCES FOR CONVICTION OF WHICH SECURITY MAY BE REQUIRED.

8 The offence for which the person is convicted, is the essential element.—Under this section it is the offence for which the person is convicted and not the facts as put in evidence at the trial which determines whether or no security can be demanded. Wele II, 43.

9 What are 'offences involving a breach of the peace'?—We have no definition of the term 'breach of the peace' but it would embrace most of the offences against public tranquility dealt with in Chapter VIII I P C. It has been held in 4 Bom. L. R. 78, that a public peace can be broken by angry words as well as by deeds. Acts which do not amount to a breach of the peace in private may amount to such in a public place. In 33 A. 771, however, it was held dissenting from the Calcutta and Madras rulings that the word 'breach of the peace' connotes inclusion not only of a necessary, but also of a probable future, circumstance antecedent condition or consequence. In this case the evidence showed that the accused were prepared to accompany the removal of the hind-mark by a breach of the peace and were prevented from doing so by the other side running away, and therefore the offence came within terms of this section, though the breach of the peace was not an ingredient of the offence proved. Also in 42 A. 345, it is held that upon a conviction for criminal trespass where the intention of the trespass is to commit a breach of the peace an order under this section can be lawfully passed (18 A. L. J. 300). In 43 B. 554, it is held that the expression 'other offences involving breach of the peace' in the section includes offences which were offences because a breach of the peace had occurred or because a breach of the peace was likely to occur. In 22 Bom. L. R. 168, SHAH J. expressed the view that he was inclined to hold the above expression to refer to offences of which a breach of the peace is an essential ingredient. The cases in 25 M. 469, 29 M. 190, 30 C. 93; 35 C. 315, seem to hold that the expression 'other offence involving a breach of the peace' means an offence of which a breach of the peace is a necessary ingredient and that there must be a finding that a breach of the peace has occurred, but in 44 M. L. J. 435, in a case in which the accused was convicted of an offence under s. 323 I P C. and ordered to give security under this section without an express finding that the accused caused a breach of the peace Mr JUSTICE SPENCER, held that the offence of which the accused had been convicted implied the use of violence and a breach of the peace and that the order for security was proper. In 2 Lah. 279 it is held that the said expression means an offence in which a breach of the peace is an ingredient and not merely an offence provoking or likely to lead to a breach of the peace. From the note in the Select Committee's report it appears that with certain exceptions convictions for offences under Chapter VIII I P C. should justify magisterial action under section 106. The present amendment in clause (1) seems to favour the view that the expression 'offence involving a breach of the peace' means an offence into which breach of the peace necessarily enters as an ingredient or element.

And so in 23 A. L. J. 1033 it was held that in the absence of a finding that an assault which took place, involved breach of the peace or public tranquility a Magistrate cannot merely on the ground that the parties were on bad terms bind the accused down and therefore an order under s. 106 can only be passed when in a case of causing simple hurt or assault breach of the peace is involved (44 M. L. J. 435 distinguished). See also 46 A. 105 held that a canvasser who had assaulted an elector because he refused to vote as he was wanted to vote was rightly bound over to keep the peace under s. 106 of the Code after conviction under s. 323 I P C. (43 C. 871 distinguished) 46 A. 103 44 M. L. J. 435 (Ramswamy Thevan) was approved in 47 M. 846 and it was held that s. 146 implies that offences against public tranquility and the offence of assault involved a breach of the peace and proof of mere commission of one of these offences is enough to make the provisions of the section applicable.

10 Does Criminal trespass involve a breach of the peace?—Where a person was convicted of criminal trespass and the Magistrate added to the sentence an order that the prisoner should give recognizance to keep the peace. Held that there was nothing illegal in the Magistrate's order the conduct of the accused clearly pointing to an intention to commit a breach of the peace 23 W. R. 37, 7 W. R. 16; 7 C. W. N. 25. The accused was convicted under s. 448 I P C. his intention in committing the trespass being to have illicit intercourse with the complainant's wife. It was held that the conviction not being for any of the offences mentioned in this section the order for taking security was bad in law. In distinguishing this case from 7 W. R. 16 and 20 W. R. 37, the Court observed. In both these cases this Court found that the intention of the accused in committing the trespass was to commit a breach of the peace the trespass as the facts of the cases showed, having been committed openly by a number of men. Those cases therefore will come within the provisions of the law, authorizing security being taken for keeping the peace. In the present case, the intention of the accused as found by the Courts below, was only to have illicit intercourse with the complainant's wife," 23 C. 623. In 4 M. L. T. 469 also, it was held that an order cannot be made under this section against a person convicted under s. 448, I P. C., even though it is found that committing the offence the accused did acts amounting to a breach of the peace. In 4 L. B. R. 277, it was held that security cannot be demanded from an accused convicted of house trespass with intent to commit theft, see also 7 C. W. N. 23; 1883 A. W. N. 302; 42 A. 345.

11. Assembling armed men.—This does not include the offence of being an armed member of an unlawful assembly, not joining such an assembly, 3 P. R. 1890; 126 P. L. R. 1910 = Cr. L. J. 630. In 5 C. W. N. 250, complainant's party erected huts on newly formed char lands. Accused's party came in large numbers armed with deadly weapons. Someone of the accused gave order to beat the other party and break down their huts, thereupon complainant's party took to flight and their huts were broken down. On conviction, an order under this section was made against the accused and in revision it was argued on their behalf that there might be cases of unlawful assembly in which no breach of the peace occurred, because the assembly did not go so far. Held that in a case like the present where armed men had assembled with the intention of committing breach of the peace and an order to beat persons in possession had actually been given, the provisions of this section applied.

12. Security cannot be ordered in convictions for theft.—A Presidency Magistrate directed an accused person, convicted and sentenced to be imprisoned for an attempt to commit theft, to be brought before the Court on the expiry of the sentence, to furnish security for good behaviour. Held, that the order was illegal, as theft is not one of the offences contemplated by this section, Ratanlal 622: see ibid. 48. Where an accused person is convicted of theft under s. 379, I P. C., a Magistrate cannot on the evidence that there was an intention of committing a breach of the peace direct him to execute a bond under this section, 1 C. W. N. 186; 29 C. 393. A person convicted under s. 392, I P. C., cannot be bound over under this section, 18 M. L. T. 121 = 16 Cr. L. J. 611.

13. Conviction for theft, mischief and unlawful assembly.—Where the accused were convicted under ss. 379, 426 and 143, I P. C., and were called upon to give security under this section, held that the order requiring the accused to give security was bad, as none of the offences necessarily involved a breach of the peace. Query, whether in a case in which a person is not accused of an offence involving a breach of the peace, etc., but in which there is nevertheless an express finding that a breach of the peace has been committed, the accused could be called upon to give security to keep the peace. 26 M. 469, also 29 M. 191. It has been held that in such cases the findings must be clear and explicit and that a mere conviction under ss. 143 and 376 is not in itself sufficient to sustain an order under this section, 8 C. W. N. 817 and summary at p. COX; 27 C. 953; 35 C. 315; 7 C. L. J. 172; 7 Cr. L. J. 200, 26 C. 876; 29 C. 393. Where a party entitled to joint possession but being out of possession went with 30 or 40 servants armed with lathis to take possession of the property and got possession without having had to use any force and was convicted under s. 143 I P. C., an order under s. 108 was held to be justified, 11 C. W. N. 176; 8 C. W. N. 250.

14. Criminal Intimidation.—In the 1882 Code the word 'intimidation' was qualified in consequence of 2 A. 351 by the phrase "by threatening injury to person or property" But these words have now been omitted, so as to enlarge the operation of the section. If the finding be that the accused was guilty of criminal intimidation the section expressly requires that the conviction must also be for that offence in order to sustain an order under the section, 8 C. W. N. 517.

15. Security cannot be ordered on conviction of merely causing disturbance to religious worship, s. 296, I P. C.—Where the accused were convicted of the offences under ss. 296 and 298 of the Penal Code and were required to give security to keep the peace. Held, that the act of the accused in instigating others to beat tom-toms in front of a Hindu temple and thereby causing disturbance to people engaged in religious worship did not come under any of the offences enumerated in this section. Mere provoking another to commit an assault is a different thing from committing an assault oneself, Weir II, 47.

III.—COMPETENCY OF MAGISTRATES TO DIRECT SECURITY.

16. Bench of Magistrates with first-class powers competent to pass orders of security.—Under s. 15, if anyone of a Bench of Magistrates has first-class powers, the Bench is competent to make an order under this section 21 W. R. 12; 2 C. L. R. 348 at p. 349.

17. Order for taking security to be passed only by convicting Magistrate.—Before an order under s. 108 can properly be made, the conviction must be by a Magistrate of the class mentioned in it, and not by any other and the order must be passed by the Magistrate who convicts and passes sentence. Therefore, where a third-class Magistrate convicted the accused and then referred the case to the District Magistrate, and the latter bound down the accused to keep the peace under this section his order was held to be illegal, 21 C. 522 and see Note 22. See also 23 P. R. 1901 where it was held that a confirmation by the Appellate Court of at least a part of the sentence is a condition precedent to an order under cl. (3).

18. Proceedings of Magistrate not empowered void—If any Magistrate, not being empowered by law, demands security to keep the peace, his proceedings shall be void, see s. 530, cl. (c), and also where a Magistrate not empowered tries and convicts the accused and then refers the proceedings to a qualified Magistrate for passing orders under this section, an order by the other Magistrate to keep the peace is illegal, 21 C. 522.

19. Magistrate not competent must refer whole case to competent Magistrate.—If a non-qualified Magistrate is of opinion that an order must be made under this section he should refer the whole case to the proper authorities for passing sentence under s. 349, 33 C. 1093. Whether an Appellate Court can pass orders under this section in appeals from conviction by Magistrate not qualified, see Note 25.

20. Competency of Sub-divisional Magistrate with second-class powers to award imprisonment for more than six months in default of security.—A Sub-divisional Magistrate invested with the powers of a Magistrate of the second class, can pass an order under this section binding over a person to keep the peace for a period exceeding six months. The fact that the order carries with it an alternative sentence of imprisonment in case the security is not filed which will be beyond his ordinary powers under s. 32 cannot have the effect of limiting the powers conferred on the Court of the Sub-divisional Magistrate under this section. So long as the order requiring the applicant to furnish security was passed by a Court which had authority to do so under this section, and the period for which security was required did not exceed the limits he was authorized by law to impose, the liability of the applicant to be detained in prison unless he furnished the security, is something independent of the powers of the Magistrate in the matter of passing substantive sentences of imprisonment, 37 A. 230.

IV.—POWER OF APPELLATE COURT TO DIRECT SECURITY.

21. Competency of Appellate Court to require security.—Clause (3) follows the Full Bench decision in the case of 6 A. 212 and supersedes the case of 16 C. 779, Ratanlal 906; 1 M. L. J. 232, 17 A. 67. The essentials for justifying the Appellate Court to require security are, firstly that the accused must have been tried and convicted by a Court of the description mentioned in the first paragraph of the section (but see Note below), secondly the conviction must be for the offences referred to in the section 29 M. 190, and thirdly there must be an express finding that such an offence has been committed 29 C. 393, and see Note 7.

22. Competency of Appellate Court to require security when conviction is by second or third-class Magistrates.—The present amendment of clause 3 expressly empowers Appellate Court hearing appeals, under s. 407 to pass orders under s. 106 requiring security under clause 3. Therefore 21 C. 628 and 35 C. 435, holding to the contrary are no longer good law. The present amendment follows the Allahabad and Bombay rulings. See 33 A. 48; 33 B. 33, 37 M. 153 (F.B.) 43 A. 372 = 19 A. L. J. 133.

23. Order by Appellate Court under this section does not amount to enhancement of sentence.—The exercise by Appellate Courts of the power given by cl. (3) requiring the appellant to find security to keep the peace after the expiration of the sentence, would not amount to an enhancement of the sentence in the proper sense of the term 21 P. R. 1905 = 34 P. L. R. 1905 = 2 Cr. L. J. 190.

24. Appellate Court can cancel security order.—By virtue of s. 423 cl. (d) the Appellate Court has power to set aside an order for security under this section even while upholding the conviction, 30 C. 101. But to enable it to do so, the substantive sentence must be appealable without taking into account the order under this section, see s. 415.

V.—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

25. Section applies to European British Subjects.—The words 'any person accused' are wide enough to include this class of people also. Cf. 36 C. 163.

26. Conviction may be in summary trial.—The conviction may be in a summary trial, 1836 A. W. N. 181, provided the Magistrate has jurisdiction, 3 N. W. P. H. C. R. 96. But a Magistrate should not, instead of trying the accused for an offence constituted by all the facts proved, content himself merely by charging and trying him for an offence that can be tried summarily, 27 C. 983.

27. Proceedings should be taken under this section, when juvenile offender sentenced to whipping.—Where a juvenile offender is sentenced to whipping for causing hurt with a dangerous weapon, the Magistrate should not pass an order under s 31 of the Reformatory Schools Act directing delivery of the youthful offender to his parents on their giving a bond but should proceed under this section 3 L B R 30

28 Order for security abates with annulment of conviction—Where conviction is annulled on appeal the order directing the appellant to find security abates ipso facto and it is not competent to the Appellate Court to order the security to be continued 1895 A W N 141, 30 C.101, 7 N W. P H C. R. 375, 22 P R. 1901

B—SECURITY FOR KEEPING THE PEACE IN OTHER CASES AND SECURITY FOR GOOD BEHAVIOUR

[For general notes on this Chapter see supra]

107. (1) Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class is informed that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity or to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity the Magistrate* if in his opinion there is sufficient ground for proceeding* may in manner hereinafter provided require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond with or without sureties for keeping the peace for such period not exceeding one year as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix

(2) Proceedings shall not be taken under this section unless either the person informed against or the place where the breach of the peace or disturbance is apprehended is within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction and no proceedings shall be taken before any Magistrate other than a Chief Presidency or District Magistrate unless both the person informed against and the place where the breach of the peace or disturbance is apprehended are within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction

(3) When any Magistrate not empowered to proceed under sub-section (1) has reason to believe that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity or to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity and that such breach of the peace or disturbance cannot be prevented otherwise than by detaining such person in custody such Magistrate may after recording his reasons issue a warrant for his arrest (if he is not already in custody or before the Court) and may send him before a Magistrate empowered to deal with the case together with a copy of his reasons

(4) A Magistrate before whom a person is sent under sub-section (3)† may in his discretion detain such person in custody ‡ pending further action by himself under this Chapter *

Notes.—1 Analogous provisions—New York—Under s 84 of the New York Criminal Procedure Code an information laid on oath before any Magistrate that a person has threatened to commit a crime against the person or property of another and supported by the evidence of witnesses is sufficient to enable the Magistrate to issue a warrant for the arrest of the person complained of. The warrant must however contain the substance of the information. Section 85—When the information is laid before a Magistrate he must examine on oath the complainant and any witnesses he may produce and must reduce their examination to writing and cause them to be subscribed

English Law—If a person has just cause to fear that another will do him some bodily harm as by killing or beating him or his wife or his child he may demand the surety of the peace against such person and it is the duty of a Justice of the Peace to bind over such person if the applicant proves on oath that he is actually under such fear and his just cause to be so—Hilbursys Laws of England Vol IX p 414

2 Procedure—The Magistrate should on receipt of credible information issue an order under s 11, calling upon the person informed against to show cause, and serve the order on the person under s 115 then hold an inquiry as to the truth of the information under s 117 and either direct the person to give security under s. 118, or discharge him under s. 119. See s. 112 as to contents of the preliminary order, s. 121 as to contents of bond and s. 123 for procedure on default of giving security. If the Magistrate requires a person to execute a bond extending over a year he must follow the provisions laid down by cl (2) of s. 123. See supra. The mere fact that the accused says that he is willing to give security to keep the peace is not the kind of proof required as a condition precedent to the taking of security. 27 P. R. 1917 (Cr)

3. Difference between ss. 106 and 107.—Under s. 106, the order can be passed on conviction of any of certain specified offences, while under s. 107 formal proceedings must be taken as in trials in summons-cases to prove that it is necessary for keeping the peace that the person summoned shall execute a bond. In the former case, the Magistrate has adjudicated on the evidence in the presence of the person to be bound over, and facts are established to require security, because he has convicted the accused of a breach of the peace or an intention to commit a breach of the peace, etc., whereas under the present section, the Magistrate proceeds on information, the value of which must be tested in the presence of the person concerned, who shall also have an opportunity of showing that it is not reliable. 3 G. L. R. 72, see also 1 G. L. R. 43 and 21 W. R. 6. A Magistrate possessing knowledge of certain facts from sources outside the record, should not base his judgment upon those facts, for passing an order under this section. 14 A. L. J. 769; 21 Cr. L. J. 511.

1.—CIRCUMSTANCES UNDER WHICH PROCEEDINGS MAY BE TAKEN UNDER THIS SECTION.

4. Breach of the peace must be imminent.—It must appear to the Magistrate that a likelihood of a breach of the peace is imminent, the object of the bond being to prevent an imminent breach of the peace between parties who have quarrelled and to secure peace until the lapse of a reasonable time, allowing them to cool down, and not to protect a town from any possible misconduct at some future time on the part of notoriously turbulent and dangerous bad characters who may have kept the town in ferment in past years. 7 N.-W. P. H. C. R. 233. There must be something more than a bare possibility, there must be a reasonable likelihood of a breach of the peace, 20 W. R. 57. An hasty speech likely to break the peace does not justify an order under this section against the speaker, particularly when all fear of a breach of the peace passes away before the order is passed. 31 P. W. R. 1907 = 7 Cr. L. J. 232; 9 M. L. T. 271 = (1911) 2 M. W. N. 235 = 12 Cr. L. J. 104.

5. Security cannot be asked in anticipation of breach of the peace.—A person applied to the Police for assistance to protect him whilst disarming the crops of certain ryots for arrears of rents. On this fact being reported to the Magistrate he required the applicant to furnish security to keep the peace, as he thought that any riot which may result from the resistance of the cultivators would be attributable to the applicant. Held that the order was illegal, and as the Magistrate had not found that the applicant himself was likely to commit a breach of the peace, he ought not to have held the applicant reasonable by anticipation. 3 G. L. R. 280. The mere fact that the Magistrate apprehended breach of the peace because certain persons opened a cattle market on their own land not far from the place where one already existed is not sufficient to issue an order under this section, 16 A. L. J. 279. See also 23 A. L. J. 300.

6. Security when occasion for breach of the peace has passed away.—The facts which might be taken to establish the probability of certain persons disturbing the public tranquillity at a particular annually recurring festival, would afford no ground after such festival had passed without the public tranquillity having been disturbed, binding over such persons to keep the peace with a view to possibility of their creating a disturbance at the next recurrence of the festival, 26 A. 190. But this case cannot be regarded as laying down a rule that security should not be taken in a case of this kind after the occasion has passed on which ill feeling between parties first came to a head. Where, therefore, the evidence showed that the affair between the Hindus and Muhammadans, in itself rendered it probable that breaches of peace will take place and it was in fact likely that there would be a breach of the peace in the near future. Held that the District Magistrate was justified in taking security from the applicants, 8 A. L. J. 1080 = 12 Cr. L. J. 493. See also 7 G. L. R. 332, 6 Bom. L. R. 663, 22 M. L. J. 251 = 13 Cr. L. J. 443. A finding that the object of the persons bound over was to disturb the public tranquillity by wounding the religious feelings of the Muhammadans at a certain locality without committing a breach of the peace, is a good ground for an order under s. 107, 14 A. L. J. 430 = 17 Cr. L. J. 301.

7. Likelihood of violence to particular person.—Where the evidence shows that there is an apprehension of the accused using violence towards a particular person or particular persons, he ought to be bound over under this section to keep the peace, but he ought not to be proceeded against under s. 110 on the fanciful reasoning that a riot or a single murder directed against a single person is hazardous to the community, 27 A. 92.

8. Mere enmity between factions insufficient to sustain order under this section.—An order under this section could only be passed if there was evidence that the persons sought to be bound over were about to commit a breach of the peace and not otherwise. An order under this section merely on the ground that there was enmity between the parties is bad, 1 A. L. J. 418. There is no sufficient reason for taking security from either party merely, because bad feeling exists between two sets of a population, 126 P. L. R. 1911 = 43 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 186.

9. In disputes among joint owners, proceedings against both.—When one of two contending parties, entitled to joint possession, has been bound over on conviction under s 106, it was held, that as this latter order would have the practical effect of preventing that party from taking possession of the property—the subject of the dispute—it would be desirable that the other party also should be bound down in a proceeding under this section, 11 C. W. N. 176 = 5 Cr. L. J. 19. See Note 4, s 123

10. Proceedings need not be deferred because civil proceedings pending.—Where on the sale of a Pulni Dur-pulnadur under the defaulting Puladur wrongfully insisted on collecting rents from the tenants, held he was rightly bound over under this section when it was found that his act was likely to cause a breach of the peace. The fact that he had instituted a civil suit to set aside the sale made no difference, because his acts were unlawful under the Pulni Regulations, until the sale had actually been set aside, 9 C. W. N. 792. When two parties had both applied to the Land Registration Court for registration of their names as proprietors of an estate and pending these proceedings, proceedings were instituted under this section against one of the contending parties and it was contended on their behalf that there being a bona fide dispute between the parties as to title and possession, the proceedings under the section taken against one party alone to the exclusion of the other would prejudice the former in the Land Registration proceedings held that such a consideration was foreign to the inquiry under s 107, the only question being whether such party being out of possession was seeking to obtain possession by unlawful means which were likely to cause a breach of the peace, 11 C. W. N. 121 = 4 Cr. L. J. 456.

10-A. Under this section when once the prosecution has made out a reasonable case for dealing with two or more accused in the same enquiry, any evidence which would be relevant if the accused person or persons were being tried of being habitual offenders, would be admissible, 17 A. L. J. 147.

II—DOING A WRONGFUL ACT.

11. There must be a definite wrongful act.—The word “wrongful” was first inserted in the 1882 Code in consequence of the ruling in 10 B. L. R. 441 = 19 W. R. 47. The law now expressly declares that the act which may probably occasion a breach of the peace must be some definite wrongful act, 64 P. R. 1887; 6 Bom. L. R. 882; 7 C. W. N. 32; 33 A. 775, 7 A. L. J. 1161 = 11 Cr. L. J. 719. It was never intended that a person should be prevented by a Magistrate from exercising his rights. Where the exercise of the civil rights of one party is likely to induce another party to commit a breach of the peace, it is the latter alone who should be called upon to enter into recognizance. See also 32 A. 571, where a Magistrate had bound over certain Muhammadans believing that they would disobey an order prohibiting them killing cows in a private place the order was set aside, 30 A. 181 followed. But an act innocent in itself may become wrongful if done with the deliberate intention of wounding the religious feelings of neighbours of another religion, 33 A. 775; 21 Cr. L. J. 453; 16 A. L. J. 279; but it is held under section 107 there may be cases in which a Magistrate of the first class upon mere information that a person is likely to disturb the public tranquility without any information being given of that person's intent to do any wrongful act, may issue a notice in writing to such person giving the substance of the information received without specifying any definite acts which that person intends to commit” 16 A. L. J. 587.

12. The wrongful act must be likely to occasion a breach of the peace.—This section clearly contemplates that the Magistrate should have some tangible evidence that some definite act is contemplated, which act, if committed, is likely to cause a breach of the peace. Therefore the fact (a) that the accused had attempted to get up false cases and that he would probably continue to do so, 64 P. R. 1887; or (b) that he sings ballads in the street (because singing in the street is not in itself a wrongful act, nor would a possible obstruction in the streets by crowds collecting, constitute a wrongful act by the singer likely to lead to a breach of the peace), 13 P. R. 1839; or (c) that he is on bad terms with others, 7 C. P. Cr. 8; or (d) that being rightfully entitled to land, but wrongfully kept out of possession, he has granted leases of it and the lessee proceeds to take possession peaceably and not accompanied by force or violence, 25 C. 793; or (e) that he has made a hasty speech likely to break the peace, particularly when all fear of a breach of the peace passes away before the order is passed, 31 P. W. R. 1907 = 7 Cr. L. J. 232; or (f) that the accused used their influence for the purpose of stopping the services of the village barber, washerman and others from being rendered to the complainant, 7 C. W. N. 32; or (x) that the accused joined in the service held in a mosque, not appropriated in any particular sect, and in the bona fide performance of his devotions, said Ameen in a loud tone, 15 P. R. 1902 (F.B.); 17 P. R. 1837; or (h) that the accused boycotted the servants of a Zemindar, the feelings between whom and his tenants were strained, 14 Cr. L. J. 233 (A.); or (i) that the accused used mere idle threats and bombast, 9 M. L. T. 271 = (1911) 2 M. W. N. 235 = 12 Cr. L. J. 104; or (j) that the accused is a quarrelsome, headstrong and contumacious person, 21 P. R. 1833; or (k) that the accused constituted themselves a Committee in order to persuade the authorities to allow them to carry on a procession along a certain route, and to enforce as against any other person who might contest the same, their right to do so, 37 A. 33 does not in itself legally afford grounds for binding him over to keep the peace, nor does the fact that those others have been punished for offence against him and bound over to keep the peace afford such ground, 7 C. P. Cr. 9, see also 3 C. W. N. 443. It is not open to a Magistrate to draw up proceedings against persons under this section merely on the basis of general or vague statements, 32 Cr. L. J. 743.

13. Past wrongful acts do not justify proceedings.—It cannot be presumed from the fact that the person has done a wrongful act in the past that he is likely to do the same again, 6 Bom. L. R. 663. A complaint was made to a first-class Magistrate against certain persons that they were constantly creating disturbance in the bazaars. He thereupon called on them to show cause why they should not be bound over to keep the peace, and on their failing to do so required them to enter into a bond of Rs. 50 each, etc., held, cancelling the order, that the act of which information is given and in respect of which security is required must be an act which is shown to be in contemplation at the time of the information given and not merely one a repetition of which may be expected or apprehended from past misconduct of the kind without anything further, Weir II, 49.

14. Party acting within right ought not to be called upon to give security.—Where there is likelihood of a breach of the peace resulting from a wrongful act of the aggressive party, in cases of disputes regarding land, the proper course for the Magistrate to follow is to institute proceedings under s. 145, and not to require the party who acts properly and within his rights to give security to keep the peace, 3 C. W. N. 463. One of several co-owners of land without the consent of the other co-owners, proceeded to take measurement of the lands for the purpose of ascertaining how much land had been divulvated and what rent the tenants were liable to pay. This action was objected to by the other co-owners, the result being a likelihood of a breach of the peace. Held that under ss. 90 and 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the unauthorized act of the one co-owner who was surveying being illegal, the order binding over under this section the objecting co-owner was bad, inasmuch as they were justified in their resistance to the survey, 9 C. W. N. 618 = 2 Cr. L. J. 338; 34 C. 935. When a party has the right to take a procession along a particular road, he cannot be properly bound down because someone else proposes to interfere with that right. The proper course in such a case is to bind down the other party, 12 C. W. N. 703 = 7 Cr. L. J. 504; 22 M. L. J. 231 = 11 M. L. T. 32 = (1912) M. W. N. 47 = 13 Cr. L. J. 143, 15 Cr. L. J. 651 (M). Where a Zemindar sends people to a Mokhassa village, to induce the tenants to break their engagements with the Mokhassadar and thus to oust the latter from possession, the Mokhassadar is entitled to object to their trespass and to protest against such improper proceedings. Such protest on the part of the Mokhassadar or his agent will not justify a Magistrate in binding him over under this section, 14 M. L. J. 491.

III.—BREACH OF THE PEACE LIKELY TO ARISE FROM DISPUTES RELATING TO IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

15. Jurisdiction under this Chapter not ousted by Chapter XII.—The jurisdiction vesting in a Magistrate under Chapter XII does not necessarily oust the jurisdiction which he possesses under this Chapter. Weir II, 60; 39 C. 150 (F.B.), 36 M. 315. Where a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace is with reference to immoveable property, held, that this fact would not preclude the Magistrate from proceeding under this section and that in cases like these the Magistrate is not bound to act only under ss. 144 and 145, but has a discretion to proceed either under those sections or under this section, 32 C. 966. See also 7 C. W. N. 748; 26 M. 471 (where 25 C. 559 was doubled and distinguished), 8 N. L. R. 94, 7 C. W. N. 142; 25 A. 537; 9 A. L. J. 693 = 13 Cr. L. J. 566; 9 C. W. N. 551 = 2 Cr. L. J. 272; 28 A. 406; 34 A. 449; 39 C. 150 (F.B.), 39 C. 469; 38 A. 143; 16 Cr. L. J. 211 (M). But it is obviously undesirable to combine proceedings under s. 107 with proceedings under s. 145 and to act against both opposing parties in the same proceedings, 8 B. L. R. 907 = 16 Cr. L. J. 235.

;; In 28 Bom. L. R. 438 it was held that in a dispute regarding land if it appears that one of the parties is likely to break the King's peace before the decision of the Civil Court, the Magistrate can pass an order under s. 107 of the Code.

16. Care should be taken that proceedings under s. 107 are not used to enable one of two contending parties to get possession of immoveable property.—Proceedings under this section are only intended for the security of the public peace and not for the purpose of enabling one of the two contending parties to help themselves in recovering possession of immovable property after having their adversaries' hands tied down by an order under this section. If it is thought necessary that an order should be made relating to the possession of immovable property which is the subject matter of dispute between contending parties the proper course is to institute proceedings under s 145 and then the parties would have notice of the case they have to meet and each party could put forward evidence to prove his possession of the land in dispute 25 C. W. N 463, 20 Cr. L. J. 194.

17 Effect of possession in a proceeding under s 107—In a case of apprehended breach of the peace persons entitled to the possession of the subject matter of dispute ought not to be called upon to furnish security inasmuch as they cannot be considered as aggressors and wrong-doers in defending rights which had been found in their favour. Their willingness to submit to arbitration does not deprive them of any advantage that they might have derived from the result of a criminal prosecution and of the fact that possession had been found with them 3 C. W. N 299.

18 Section 145 imperative while this section discretionary—It has to be noted that while this section leaves it to the Magistrate to demand security or not in the exercise of his discretion s 145 renders it obligatory upon him to institute proceedings if he is satisfied as to the existence of the dispute 35 C. W. N 297, there being a dispute as to land the Magistrate issued a notice under this section. One of the parties moved the High Court contending that proceedings should have been taken under s 145 and not under this section held that it was not competent for the High Court to direct the Magistrate to proceed under s 145. The Court at the same time expressed an opinion that in disputes concerning land provisions of s. 145 are more suitable but with this expression of opinion left it to the Magistrate to consider whether it was necessary to institute such proceedings. See also 3 C. W. N 463, 6 C. W. N 883 and 7 C. W. N 29 and 746.

19 When dispute as to land is not bona fide action may be taken under this section—When certain persons wrongfully and without any bona fide claim to possession sought to eject another by force from the possession of certain land and a breach of the peace was imminent it was held that a Magistrate might legally take action against the aggressors under this section and that it was not necessary on the finding that the claim was not bona fide to take proceedings under s. 145 28 A 406. In a proceeding instituted under this section the Magistrate found that one M was the aggressor and was trying his best to disturb the peaceful possession of S on certain lands in dispute. Upon this finding an order was made for taking security from M held the finding was not such as would justify the order though the Magistrate was competent to act under this section if he thought proper 7 C. W. N 746. Where in a case of a dispute as to land a Magistrate without instituting proceedings under s 145 found that the parties were not in possession and on that ground issued an order under s. 144 restraining them from the exercise of certain rights claimed by them in regard to the land in dispute and also proceeded to bind down the petitioners to keep the peace under this section it was held that the order under this section was improper under the circumstances 7 C. W. N 142. When there is no dispute as to land this is the proper section 35 A 143. See also 25 A 537, 22 Cr. L. J. 86, 22 Cr. L. J. 574.

20 When dispute as to land is bona fide—When there is a bona fide dispute as to the right to the possession of land between two rival parties giving rise to a likelihood of a breach of the peace, it is unfair to bind down only the party who happens to be in possession under this section to keep the peace. The proper order in such a case would be to bind down both the parties under this section or institute a proceeding under s. 145 infra 12 C. W. N 606 = 7 Cr. L. J. 403, 11 C. W. N 178 but s 145 ought to be preferred see 35 C. 117; 16 C. W. N 384 = 13 Cr. L. J. 142.

21 When right determined by Civil Courts proceedings should be under this section—Where rights of contending parties are determined by Civil Courts Magistrate should proceed under this section and not under Chapter XII 6 C. 835, Ratnasai 462.

22 Joint and exclusive possession of land—When parties are quarrelling over land one of whom claiming to be in exclusive possession and the other in joint possession and there is every likelihood of a breach of the peace taking place the proper procedure for a Magistrate is to proceed under s 145 and not under this section 1 C. L. J. 632 = 2 Cr. L. J. 658; 5 C. L. J. 447 = 5 Cr. L. J. 344.

IV—JURISDICTION OF MAGISTRATES IN RESPECT OF PROCEEDINGS UNDER THIS SECTION

23. Magistrate cannot call on a person residing in another district to furnish security—The terms of this section do not authorize a Magistrate to bind over a person not residing within the limits of his district. Were it otherwise a Magistrate in one district may take recognizance from a person in any other part of British India in which this Code is in force and vice versa. Moreover, a person summoned into one district from another might be subjected to unnecessary expense and inconvenience in obtaining sureties from the district in which he resides to say nothing of the cost of witnesses he might wish to bring thence to show that the information given to the Magistrate was incorrect or untrue, and that he was not liable to be called upon for recognizances 6 A. 26 (F.B.), 40 C. L. R. 430; 11 C. 737; 12 C. 133; 23 B. 32 and 14 A. 49

24 Temporary residence sufficient to give jurisdiction.—If during the temporary residence of accused he commits any act likely to cause a breach of the peace, a Magistrate has jurisdiction, although the accused permanently or habitually resides in another district, 24 C. 344; 22 Cr. L. J. 109.

25. Power to proceed against persons outside jurisdiction specially conferred on Chief Presidency Magistrates and District Magistrates.—‘As this section stood proceedings could not be taken against a person outside the jurisdiction, although he might be instigating a breach of the peace within the jurisdiction, but as such extended power requires careful exercise, we have provided that the power to taking action in such cases shall only be exercised by Chief Presidency Magistrates or District Magistrates. —Sel. Com. Rep., see 20 A. L. J. 523.

26. How far District Magistrate can delegate his special powers to a Subordinate Magistrate.—Proceedings against a person residing in another jurisdiction must take place and be brought to a conclusion before the District Magistrate himself. Even on the direction of the District Magistrate a Subordinate Magistrate has no jurisdiction to draw up a proceeding under s 107, against a person residing in another jurisdiction, 13 C. W. N. 580 = 9 Cr. R. L. J. 143; but after institution of proceedings against a non resident, the District Magistrate may transfer proceedings to Subordinate Magistrate, 31 C. 350, if he is competent to conduct the proceeding, 37 A. 20; 41 M. 246.

27. Procedure where defendant lives outside jurisdiction.—The proper course for a Magistrate to pursue, when he believes that certain persons who are resident beyond the limits of his district are likely to commit a breach of the peace within his district, is to cause information of the fact to be given to the Magistrate within whose district such persons reside, and to produce evidence in support of such view, in order that proceedings may be taken against them by a Court which has jurisdiction 11 C. 737; 12 C. 133.

28. On transfer, Magistrate has jurisdiction to amend proceedings.—A Sub-divisional Magistrate instituted proceedings under this section, and on objection being taken to his jurisdiction the District Magistrate transferred the case to a Magistrate outside the sub-division and holding his Court at the Head quarters of the district. On the case being taken up, certain objections regarding the incompleteness of the preliminary order instituting proceedings were taken. The Magistrate thereupon amended the proceedings and drew up fresh proceedings, but still relying on the same information. Objection was then taken to the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to draw up fresh proceedings. Held that he had jurisdiction, 29 C. 339.

29. European British subjects—jurisdiction of Magistrates limited by Chapter XXXIII which see 30 Person not immediately concerned cannot be bound over for acts of servants or partisans.—If the Magistrate does not find that the person called upon to furnish security is himself likely to cause a breach of the peace he cannot order him to furnish security 3 C. L. R. 280, 10 B. L. R. 441 = 19 W. R. 47; 1881 A. W. N. 132, 17 W. R. 54, 4 P. R. 1912. A non resident Amildar cannot be bound over, because his local agents are committing acts likely to cause a breach of the peace, unless, it can be shown that he is instigating them to commit such acts, 10 C. L. R. 430. See also 11 C. 737; 39 C. 150 (F.B.) Persons who do not go to the place where a breach of the peace is apprehended can be bound under this section. 1 Pat. L. J. 381.

30-A. A District Magistrate has no jurisdiction to order security for good behaviour being given, while affirming a conviction for riot, 16 A. L. J. 280

Nor has he jurisdiction to order that a particular individual should be a surety Ibid

30-B How far the principle of antefoils acquit is applicable.—A Magistrate is not entitled to institute proceedings under this section upon facts and information which have already been the subject of inquiry under this section or in connection with charges under the Penal Code brought against persons who have been discharged in those proceedings, 41 M. 246

Y.—POWER OF MAGISTRATES NOT EMPOWERED UNDER SUB-SECTION 1.

31. Has reason to believe.—The power to proceed under sub-sect. 3 ought to be used with the greatest caution. The discretion of the Magistrate is very much limited by the language “has reason to believe” and not “is informed” as in sub-sect. 1. The question is not whether there was belief, but whether there was reason to believe and not merely to suspect, 6 B. 402.

Cf—A person is said to have 'reason to believe' a thing if he has sufficient cause to believe that thing but not otherwise, s 26, I P C

32 The words 'or a Court of Session or the High Court' have been omitted before 'has reason to believe,' apparently as being unnecessary, the Select Committee remarking "We can find no reason for conferring powers under sub sec 3 of this clause (formerly s 108) which relate to inferior Courts on Courts of Session and High Courts So we have limited the sub-section to Magistrates not empowered to act under sub-sec. (1)'

VI—SCOPE OF SUB-SECTIONS (3) AND (4).

33. Power of District Magistrate to detain in custody.—Where an accused is not sent before a District Magistrate by another Magistrate acting under cl (3) so as to bring the case within cl (4), such District Magistrate's order detaining the accused in custody is illegal Even if s 36 can be construed as giving powers which are not specially referred to in Sch III having regard to the terms of cl (3), the power is not one which can vest in the Magistrate to whom the accused is sent, 31 M. 615 (F B.) See 32 C. 80.

34 Jurisdiction to remand person into custody—Right of person arrested to bail.—Only in the special circumstances referred to in cls (3) and (4) does the law empower a Magistrate to detain a person against whom proceedings have been instituted under this section in custody until the completion of the enquiry Where a Magistrate on the report of the District Superintendent of Police directed the re-arrest of persons (whom he had previously admitted to bail on their appearance) and remanded them to custody held that the re-arrest and remand were illegal as none of the special circumstances referred to in clauses (3) and (4) existed in the case and the Magistrate was therefore bound to release them on bail under s 496 the provisions of which were imperative, 32 C. 80. Quere whether under s 115 and proviso to s 114 the Magistrate has such power to re-arrest and remand persons whom on their appearance he had previously admitted to bail, 32 C. 80. In 36 M. 374, it was held, however that the clear words of cl (4) of this section which provides that a Magistrate before whom a person is sent may in his discretion detain such person in custody until the completion of the inquiry hereinafter prescribed cannot be qualified by s 496 That section does not give an absolute right to bail to any person who appears or is brought before a Court and is not charged with a non bailable offence, but must be read along with any other provision giving a special right of detention to the Court and cl (4) of this section gives such power

34-A. Where there is no final order by a Magistrate under this section the High Court will not interfere in revision (1918) M. W. N 37. High Court in 27 C. W. N. 23 interfered in revision in the preliminary stage in s 107 with proceedings on the ground that the materials on which the order was based was clearly insufficient.

34-B. Jurisdiction in appeal—A District Magistrate has no jurisdiction in affirming a conviction of not to order the accused to give security to be of good behaviour nor has he jurisdiction to order that a particular individual should be a surety, 16 A. L. J. 280.

34 C. A Magistrate cannot alter order as to security.—Where one month after passing an order requiring the accused to furnish security in a certain sum to keep the peace, the Magistrate directed the accused to furnish security in a larger sum held that the order was ultra vires, 20 Cr. L. J. 436.

34 D. To justify an order under section 107 there must be evidence on the record that the persons from whom security is demanded are likely to commit a breach of the peace Mere consent of the persons to be bound down is not sufficient The likelihood of a breach of the peace must be established by independent testimony on oath, 21 Cr. L. J. 176 But see the judgment of WALSH J, in 21 A. L. J. 881 modifying his judgment in 21 Cr. L. J. 176 = 54 I. C. 784 and holding that a Court is perfectly entitled to act on a solemn and free consent amounting to a plea of guilty given before it by the accused, 46 A. 109.

108. Whenever a Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate or a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf has information that there is within the limits of his jurisdiction any person who within or without such limits, either orally or * in any other manner intentionally disseminates or attempts to disseminate, or in any wise abets the dissemination of—

Security for good

seditious matter

(a) any seditious matter, that is to say, any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 124 A of the Indian Penal Code, or

(b) any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 153-A of the Indian Penal Code, or

(c) any matter concerning a Judge which amounts to criminal intimidation or defamation under the Indian Penal Code

Such Magistrate * if in his opinion there is sufficient ground for proceeding * may (in manner hereinafter provided) require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond with or without sureties for his good behaviour for such period not exceeding one year as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix

No proceeding shall be taken under this section against the editor proprietor, printer or publisher of any publication registered under and † edited printed and published in conformity with the rules laid down in the Press and Registration of Books Act 1867 ‡ with reference to any matter contained in such publication & except by the order or under the authority of the Governor General in Council or the Local Government or some officer empowered by the Governor General in Council in this behalf

1 Seditious speech to be judged from substance, not words—Meaning of Swaraj—The test is whether the person proceeded against has been disseminating seditious matter and whether there is a fear of a repetition of the offence. In each case it is a question of fact which must be determined with reference to the antecedents of the person and other surrounding circumstances 11 Bom L R 743 = 10 Cr L J 379 Where the petitioner preached the promotion of Swaraj held there was nothing to bring the petitioner within the meaning of s. 124-A I P C. as "Swaraj" meant no more than home rule under the present Government and hence the petitioner could not be bound over under cl (a) of this section 35 C. 991 But see 32 W 3 as to the meaning of the word Swaraj. See also 19 Bom L R 311, Emp v. Balgangadhar Tilak

2 What amounts to promoting enmity between classes s. 153 A, I P C.—To sustain an order under this section it is not sufficient that the language used was highly offensive to one community but it must be shown that he intended to provoke feelings of hatred or enmity between two communities. It is not necessary, however, that he should have succeeded in exciting such feelings if a deliberate intention to do so can be inferred 4 Bur L T 84 = 12 Cr L J 243

3. What kind of evidence of intention or otherwise is necessary—In 43 C. 591 = 20 C. W N 199 — 23 C. L J 105 the distinction between s 108 (b) and s 153 A I P C was pointed out and it was held that under s 108 (b) one has only to find that there are words used in the leaflet or matter complained of which are likely to promote feelings of enmity or hatred and once such words are present it is not further necessary to prove the intention as under s. 153-A I P C In 25 Bom L R, p 87, the applicants were proceeded against under this section as the author printer and publisher in respect of a pamphlet which offended against 124 A and 153-A I P C. There was no direct evidence to connect any of the applicants with the pamphlet in question. Held that the evidence in the case was insufficient to prove the first applicant to be the author The second applicant was the printer and disseminated the pamphlet yet he was not shown to have any knowledge of the matter published in it. The third applicant was liable to be dealt with under this section and as publisher he could be presumed to have the necessary knowledge of the contents of the pamphlet 47 B. 438.

Security for good behaviour from va grants and suspected persons.

109. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate District Magistrate Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class receives information—

(a) that any person is taking precautions to conceal his presence within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction and that there is reason to believe that such person is taking such precautions with a view to committing any offence or

* The words "if proceeded against" were inserted by Act XV of 1923

† The words "edited printed and published" were substituted for words "or printed or published" by Act XVIII of 1923

‡ See Act XXV of 1867 s 20 of which empowers Local Governments to make rules. As to rules in force in Madras see Fort St George Gazette 1891 Pt I p 137

§ The words "with reference" published were inserted by Act XVIII of 1923

(b) that there is within such limits a person who has no ostensible means of subsistence or who cannot give a satisfactory account of himself, such Magistrate may in manner hereinafter provided require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond with sureties for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding one year as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix

Notes—1 Section aimed at vagabondism—The power conferred by this section is for the summary disposal of cases of vagabondism where sturdy rogues are found to be lurking about 1 Ordh S C No 73

2 The provisions of ss 109 and 110 require to be carefully worked—It must appear from the proceedings whether the accusation which the accused has to meet is one under this section or under the next. The two sections must be carefully worked and care must be taken not to abuse them. Criminals released from jail must be given a fair chance of returning to honest ways, but when well known habitual offenders are found under distinctly suspicious circumstances lurking at night in suspicious places in possession of house-breaking instruments or implements for coming travelling on the railway for no ostensible purpose except crime or in possession of suspicious property which cannot be accounted for such men should be put up before the Magistrates and an order if possible obtained—Mad Pol Man p 89

3 Under what circumstances this section applicable—This section provides for taking security not from persons suspected of a particular offence but from persons lurking within the Magistrate's jurisdiction who have not ostensible means of subsistence or cannot give a satisfactory account of themselves Ratanlal 63. Magistrates are competent to put in force the provisions of this section whenever they have credible information that the accused had no ostensible means of livelihood or was unable to give a satisfactory account of himself 31 C. 557, 5 A L J 233, and will be within the limits of their jurisdiction in trying a case irrespective of the manner in which it comes before them 25 M 125. Clause (b) covers not only vagrants but also suspected person and persons of any class who cannot give a satisfactory account of themselves 13 Cr L J 239 (C). A person who gives a false name and delivers letter secretly, containing incitement to commit crime or demanding money for the means of committing crime comes within the provisions of cl (a) 15 Cr L J 255 (C).

It is now held that the fact that a person while going away from a village gives a false name in the first instance and then gives the correct name does not of itself amount to taking precautions to conceal his presence with a view to committing an offence 21 A L J 847.

4 Want of means of subsistence is not an offence—Inability to give a satisfactory account of oneself or want of ostensible means of subsistence does not amount to an offence see s 4 (a) 3 N L R. 51 = 5 Cr L J 434 or the fact that the person was concealing himself in order to avoid observation 39 C 456.

5 Mere want of means subsistence is not enough—Evidence of mere want of ostensible means of subsistence is not of itself a sufficient reason for making a final order under s 110. Otherwise jails would be quite full especially in times of famine and scarcity. A Magistrate however is bound by this section to consider whether the order is really necessary in order to secure good behaviour which is a matter for the Magistrate's own judicial discretion Ratanlal.
house and that father is a man c ostensible means of subsistence action against suspicious strangers lurking within their jurisdiction 39 C 456

6 Meaning of 'give a satisfactory account of himself'—A Municipal peon whose residence and occupation were well known was said to prowl about night and was a companion of scoundrels and was armed with and using a lath; was called upon to furnish security for his good behaviour. Held that words 'give a satisfactory account of himself' did not mean to satisfy the Magistrate that he spends his time or at least his leisure hours in a satisfactory manner and that the proceedings under this section could not be supported 8 A L J 1097 = 12 Cr L J 556. Where a person was found not in his own father's house but in another district in the house of a man who was suspected of being a dangerous political conspirator and to have collected a large amount of seditious literature. Held distinguishing 16 C W N 499, that order of the Magistrate requiring such person to give an account of himself was justified. Section 109 cl (b) applied not only to vagrants or vagabonds but to covered cases of suspected persons who cannot give a satisfactory account of themselves 13 Cr L J 239 (C) 53 C. 345 = 30 C. W N 380.

7 What are not sufficient grounds for demanding security—(i) Doing no work—The law requires that before a man is called upon to give security it should be proved that he has no ostensible means of subsistence. The mere fact that a man does not work coupled with admission of previous conviction for bad livelihood does not justify a Magistrate in directing him to furnish security for good behaviour, 8 C. W. N. 29.' (ii) Belonging to a wandering tribe—That a person belongs to a wandering tribe is not a sufficient reason for bringing his case under the purview of this section Weir II, 53. (iii) Nor that he was once before convicted of bad livelihood, 5 C. W. N. 25. (iv) Nor that he belonged to a gang which frequented melas and carried on games which might under certain circumstances be illegal, 6 A. L. J. 253. (v) Being a gambler or opium smoker—The mere fact that the accused is a gambler or opium smoker is not in the absence of previous bad conduct sufficient ground for requiring him to give security for good behaviour, 1 Bar. S. R. 246. (vi) Being a player of ring game—Where the accused in proceedings taken under this section admitted before the District Magistrate that he had no ostensible means of subsistence except through the play of what is known as ring game and was bound over under this section, held following 6 C. L. J. 708 that the chief element of ring game was one of skill and was not an offence under the Gaming Act and therefore, the petitioner could not be said to have no ostensible means of livelihood 40 C. 702 In 15 Cr. L. J. 276 (C.) a contrary view was adopted (vii) Previous connection with a conspiracy.—The fact that the accused had previously been connected with any criminal conspiracy or might still be in correspondence with any criminal outside the jurisdiction would not be relevant under s. 109, but might form the basis of a substantive proceeding under s. 110, 39 C. 56, clause 45 (a) refers to a continuous act and does not apply to a case where there is a momentary effort at concealment to avoid detection or arrest. 18 Cr. L. J. 825; 17 All. L. J. 432, 891. 18 All. L. J. 321.

8. Person proceeded against need not be resident within the Magistrate's local jurisdiction.—To give jurisdiction to a Magistrate under this section, it is not necessary that the accused person should have a residence within his jurisdiction, Weir II, 53. Where a person put before a Magistrate under sub-sec. (b) was discharged on the ground that he was not properly arrested and so not properly brought before the Court, held, following 28 M. 124 that the Magistrate was bound to decide whether the accused was or was not guilty of tagabondism, and it was immaterial for that purpose how he was brought there, 31 C. 557. See also 13 Cr. L. J. 239 (C.). But a Magistrate cannot call upon a person to give any account of his presence outside the jurisdiction of the Magistrate taking proceedings under this section, 39 C. 456.

9. Proceedings of Magistrates not empowered.—If any Magistrate not empowered in this behalf demands security for good behaviour, his proceedings are void, s. 530 (d).

110. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, or Sub-divisional Magis-trite or a Magistrate of the first class specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government receives information that any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction—

(a) is by habit a robber, house-breaker or thief or forger or

(b) is by habit a receiver of stolen property knowing the same to have been stolen, or

(c) habitually protects or harbours thieves or aids in the concealment or disposal of stolen property, or

*“(d) habitually commits, or attempts to commit, or abets the commission of the offence of kidnapping, abduction, extortion, cheating or mischief, or any offence punishable under Chapter XII of the Indian Penal Code, or under section 489-A, section 489-B, section 489-C or section 489-D of that Code,” or

(e) habitually commits, or attempts to commit, or abets the commission of offences involving a breach of the peace, or

(f) is so desperate and dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community,

Such Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding three years, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix

Notes.—1. For the nature of the preliminary order, see s. 112, for inquiry into the truth of the information, s. 117, for final order, ss. 118, 119, s. 120, as to when the period for good behaviour commences, s. 121 for contents of bond and s. 514 for procedure on forfeiture of bond. For form of bond, see Sch. V, No. 11 and s. 407 for appeal and infra, for notes generally

* This clause was substituted for the original clause by the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act (XVII) of 1917 s. 15

2. Magistrates specially empowered.—In the Town of Madras the Commissioner of Police is empowered to act under this section by virtue of Madras Act III of 1888, s 7 (See also the old Act, Madras Act VIII of 1867, s 4) In the Punjab, all first class Magistrates have been empowered to act under this section—Punjab Gazette, 3rd February, 1882, Pt I, p 32

3. Proceedings of Magistrate not empowered.—If any Magistrate, not being empowered by law in this behalf, demands security for good behaviour, his proceedings are void, s 530 (d). For the effect of a transfer by a Magistrate not empowered to transfer, see s 539 (f) The Magistrate must be competent both when he commences the investigation and at the date when he passes the final order, where, therefore, a Magistrate who, when he commenced the proceedings under s 110, was a Sub-divisional Magistrate ceased to be so when he made the order, the order was held to be invalid, 47 Cr. L. J. 141, 33 In. Ca. 317 (All)

4. It is not open to the trying Magistrate to put any arbitrary limit on the number of witnesses whom defence desires to adduce, 20 C. W. N 408

5. Proceedings under this section no bar to conviction under s 401, I. P. C.—An order under section 110 of the Code against an accused and detention in jail for failure to furnish security do not bar a subsequent trial and conviction under s 401, I P C Evidence of previous conviction of theft, and of being bound under section 110 is not admissible on a subsequent trial under s 401, I P C, to prove either the commission of such offence or bad character, 157 C. 155

6. No review under section 437 of proceedings under this section—Merely because the District Magistrate happens to take a different view of the evidence from that taken by the trial Magistrate it will not entitle him to review the order under section 437, 44 A. 691.

I.—PERSONS OVER WHOM JURISDICTION MAY BE EXERCISED.

7. Section aims at persons leading habitually dishonest lives committing crimes against property.—This section only relates to the calling upon of persons of habitually dishonest lives, etc, find security for good behaviour, as a protection to the public against a repetition of crimes by them in which the safety of property is menaced and not the security of persons alone is jeopardised Mere proof that an accused person has been previously guilty of acts of violence will not justify a Magistrate in ordering him to furnish security under this section, 2 A. 835 See also 6 W. R. 6; 12 C 620; 10 B. 174; Punjab Cir., Chap XLIV, p 167 This section ought not to be put in force when the information is as to the likelihood of a breach of the peace, 6 A. 132.

7-A. Repute and evidence of repute.—The repute necessary to be proved under s 110 of the Code need not necessarily be proved by the evidence of immediate neighbours, but that the evidence of witnesses living sufficiently near to be in a position to know the accused's real reputation was admissible Also held it was not necessary for the Magistrate to make a local enquiry and examine witnesses other than those sent up by the Police, 2 Rang 656.

8. Persons must be within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction.—I.e., any person residing within such limits is found to be a person answering to one of the descriptions given in clauses (a) to (f). The section does not apply to a person residing outside such limits, but who is by habit a robber, etc., within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate taking cognizance of the case, and therefore a Magistrate is not competent to issue a warrant under this section against persons residing in another jurisdiction, because the reputation a person may have must necessarily be reputation in the neighbourhood of his residence and not at some place far away from his home, 27 C. 993 at p. 995. Proceedings taken against a person outside are void, 3 C. L. J. 195 = 3 Cr. L. J. 246; 14 Bom. L. R. 889 = 1 Bom. Cr. Ca. 784 = 13 Cr. L. J. 796 and 12 P. R. 1801. But in 36 M. 94, 26 C. 993 was dissented from and it was held that the scope of the section was not restricted to persons residing within the Magistrate's jurisdiction but applied to all persons who were within the local limits at the time the Magistrate took action See also 14 A. L. J. 1074 In 10 C. W. N. 1022 it was also held that the words 'within the local limits of his jurisdiction' are not equivalent to 'residing within the limits' It is sufficient to give the Magistrate jurisdiction if the evil habits of the accused were practised and evil reputation acquired within the local limits of his jurisdiction See Notes 7 and 9 below

9. Permanent residence not necessary.—The expression "any person within the local limits" has been expressly adopted to exclude the necessity of proving anything approaching permanent residence, and to leave it in the power of the Magistracy to deal with what are perhaps the most dangerous habitual criminals, who wander from place to place and have no well known residence, where the Police or the Magistracy could be sure at any time of finding them, 9 Bom. L. R. 244 = 5 Cr. L. J. 247; 35 M. 96. See also 17 Cr. L. J. 319. The words were construed to mean any person who is within the local limits at the time when the Magistrate takes action under the section. It is not necessary that the suspect should be a resident within the local limits. But the suspect must be within the local limits when the Magistrate takes action, 14 Bom. L. R. 839 = 13 Cr. L. J. 796. In 9 Bur. L. T. 39 = 17 Cr. L. J. 88, it was held (not following 27 C. 993) that a Magistrate is competent to take proceedings against a person who resides within his jurisdiction though he happens to be outside when arrested. See also 17 Cr. L. J. 390 (A.) where 36 M. 96 was followed.

10. Occasional residence may be enough—Where a Zemindar has a residential house within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, and he occasionally, if not often goes there to transact his business, the Magistrate has jurisdiction over him for the purposes of this section provided the acts which call for proceedings under this section are committed by him while he so resides. Where, therefore the Zemindar had been actually abetting other people to commit offences involving a breach of the peace in order to compel their rayats to pay enhanced rents, held that such abetment brings him within cl (c) of this section, 31 C. 419; 38 C. 186; 23 C. W. N. 100; 20 A. L. J. 49.

11. What does not amount to residence—(1) Detention in Police custody would not constitute residence within the meaning of this section, even where such detention is legal, 23 B. 32; 43 P. R. 1895. (2) Persons undergoing imprisonment—The words of s. 110 "any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction," are obviously not intended to apply to persons undergoing imprisonment whether the jail happens to be within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction or not. A Magistrate has therefore no jurisdiction to commence the proceedings against a person who is undergoing imprisonment, 4 L. B. R. 143 = 7 Cr. L. J. 447. In 9 Bur. L. T. 39 = 17 Cr. L. J. 88 = 32 In. Ca. 630 (F.B.) the case in 4 L. B. R. 143 was overruled and it was held that the words 'any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction' in s. 110 apply to a person undergoing a sentence of imprisonment in a jail within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction. But see 46 C. 215 which holds that the words "any person within the local limits" in section 110 of the Code do not imply residence but extend to the case of a person who has left the territorial jurisdiction of the Magistrate and has been brought back within the same in Police custody and is in jail under the Defence of India Act on the date of the institution of the proceedings.

II.—CONDUCT COMING WITHIN THE PURVIEW OF THIS SECTION.

12. What amounts to habitually harbouring thieves, etc., cl (c)—The acts which amount to harbouring must be done with the intention of screening the offenders from punishment and with the object of preventing him from being apprehended. If a person from mere motives of humanity and without any intention of enabling the fugitive to escape from justice were to give food to a man who is starving or surgical assistance to one who was wounded, even with a full knowledge of his character, he commits no criminal act so as to bring himself within the purview of cl (c) of this section. This clause is designed to meet only the case of professional receivers of stolen property who assist the thief by protecting him from discovery and arrest and by helping him to dispose of the stolen property (1910) U. B. R. P. C. 4 = 11 Cr. L. J. 490; 22 A. L. J. 678.

13. When a person is said habitually to commit extortion, cl (d)—Persons can only be said to commit habitual extortion when they are in the habit of committing extortion as individual members of the community, and not when certain acts amounting to extortion are committed by them merely as burkundasis or agents of a Zemindar because the moment they are divested of their capacity, it would no longer be their interest to do such acts on behalf of the Zemindar and they certainly could not be likely to commit them in their individual capacity. Where, therefore, certain persons committed certain acts amounting to extortion, the proper way of dealing with a case of this kind is to prosecute the perpetrators of these extortions, or those under whose orders they acted, for specific acts of aggression and not to proceed against them under this section which is intended for prevention of crime and not for punishment of offences, 27 C. 781.

14. Offences involving a breach of the peace, cl (e)—This means offences in which a breach of the peace is an ingredient and not offences provoking or likely to lead to a breach of the peace. Therefore a person addicted to acts of immorality in attempting to seduce married women and behaving indecently and immodestly towards them, cannot be bound over under cl (e) of this section, 30 C. 366; 38 C. 186. See 25 C. 623, and Notes 11 and 12 to s. 106.

15. Habitual offender, cl. (d)—The fact of a person having been convicted on a former occasion will not justify his being treated as an habitual offender under this Chapter, unless it be shown that since his release he has indicated an intention of returning to a dishonest course of livelihood—Oudh S. C. No 70, 23 P. L. R. 1907; 29 P. R. 1910 = 196 P. L. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 637. Habit is to be proved by an aggregate of acts 6 M. H. C. R. 120; and to constitute a person an habitual offender, it is necessary that the subsequent offence charged should have been committed by the accused after the previous conviction, Ratanlal 143. The finding that an accused person, is by general repute, a habitual offender committing mischief and that he protects thieves is sufficient to warrant action under this section. It is not necessary for the purposes of the section that specific instances should be given, 9 Bom. L. R. 164 = 5 Cr. L. J. 178. See also 20 C. W. N. 725.

16. Person of desperate and dangerous character, cl. (f)—"A man of desperate and dangerous character" in cl. (f) means a man who has a reckless disregard of the safety of the persons or the property of his neighbours, and under that clause, evidence of general repute, is not admissible. Evidence of acts of extortion committed by a person unless those acts were accompanied by acts causing danger to the person and property of other persons, is not sufficient to bring his case within cl. (f) of this section, 11 C. W. N. 789 = 6 Cr. L. J. 1. See also 6 W. R. 6. That a person is a nuisance to his neighbours, declines to pay his debts and abuses people who sell goods to him and makes indecent overtures to school boys who pass by his shop does not bring him within the scope of cl. (f), 16 Cr. L. J. 582 (A).

17. Being a bad character or mere association with bad characters not within the terms of this section.—The finding that a person is a man of bad character does not bring him within this section, 8 M. L. T. 246 = 11 Cr. L. J. 633. The mere association with bad characters is not sufficient, unless the association is to commit theft or dacoity, to bring him under this section. The facts that a landlord has tenants of bad character, that he lends money or paddy when the latter are in difficulty, and because they are the tenants and that he settles disputes between two men one of whom is a thief and the other is not, do not subject him to a proceeding under this section, 6 C. L. J. 711. See also 23 P. L. R. 1907; 12 Cr. L. J. 542 (Oudh). See also 30 P. L. R. 1916; (Cr.) 19 A. L. J. 951.

18. Person bringing false claim does not come under this section.—Taking for granted the fact that the accused has been habitually committing extortion is that he was in the habit of bringing false claims by forged entries, it is not sufficient to demand security from him under this section, 25 P. R. 1884; nor the obtaining of decrees by means of forged documents, 21 P. R. 1914 = 16 Cr. L. J. 136.

19. Person earning livelihood by prostitution of wife.—The fact that the accused was a bad character and earned his living through prostituting one of his wives is not a good ground for demanding security from him, 5 P. R. 1892.

When a particular offence is charged it cannot be proved by the evidence of general repute, 15 A. L. J. 208. See also (1918) M. W. N. 751; 19 A. L. J. 39.

20. Habitual forger.—The fact that the accused is a habitual forger, does not bring his case within the purview of this section, 28 P. R. 1900.

21. Suspected dacoit.—The fact that the accused has been arrested on suspicion of the commission of a dacoity and was released, does not justify an order under this section, 1 Bur. 8, R. 422. Similarly, where a person was tried on a charge of dacoity and acquitted, he cannot be proceeded against under this section, either on matters deposed to and disbelieved at the trial or on the evidence of persons stating that they began to suspect him since the dacoity case, 11 C. W. N. 129 = 4 Cr. L. J. 484 see also 11 C. W. N. 413 = 5 Cr. L. J. 191; 11 A. L. J. 461 = 14 Cr. L. J. 407; 15 O. C. 263 = 13 Cr. L. J. 760; 15 Cr. L. J. 255 (C). 43 A. 186.

22. Proceedings against Zaildars, etc., in Punjab must be with District Magistrate's permission.—Proceedings under this section shall not be taken against a Zaildar, Ala Lumbardar Adm Lumbardar, or Inamidar without the special order of the District Magistrate. When such proceedings are instituted against a person of one of the abovementioned classes they shall be dealt with when practicable by the District Magistrate himself—Punjab Cr. No 11 of 1899.

22-A. Where a Magistrate makes an order in favour of one set of persons in a case under section 145 of this Code, any order made by him under this section against the other set, is illegal when there is nothing to justify making such an order in proceedings taken under a different section 15 A. L. J. 794; see also 144 P. L. R. 1917 (Cr.)

22-B. Proceedings against persons, not confederates—Proceedings against a man for Badmashi should be confined to him alone unless the case is that he has a confederate or partner to whom all the evidence is equally applicable 20 A L J 881

It is not permissible to take proceedings under s. 110 of the Code against several persons jointly unless they are confederates or partners and against whom all the evidence is equally applicable 45 A 109

23. 'Habitual criminal'—For the purpose of jail discipline these words shall mean a prisoner so classed—

(1) By the Court of Magistrate that heard the case—

(a) because he has been convicted of an offence punishable under Chapter VII or XVII of the I P C. with three years imprisonment or upwards and has been previously punished on conviction for an offence under either of these Chapters and similarly punishable, or

(b) because from the circumstances of the case the Sessions Judge or Magistrate believes the prisoner to depend on crime as a means of livelihood, or to have attained such an eminence in crime as to warrant his being classed with habitual or class B criminals.

(2) By the District Magistrate or any Magistrate empowered by him on this behalf, the classification being made in accordance with the principle suggested for guidance of the Courts in clauses 1 (a) and (b) of this definition

(3) Subject to the control of the District Magistrate by the officer in charge of the jail when the prisoner is—

(a) sentenced or believed to be liable to punishment under s. 73 I P C.,

(b) under sentence enhanced by reason of more than one previous conviction or

(c) known to have been repeatedly imprisoned for similar offences or

(d) a member of a criminal tribe

Government of India Resolution dated 14th December, 1886, Punjab Cr P 317, Oudh Cr Dig p 18

See Note 13 under s. 50 supra for the definition of habitual criminal under the New York Cr Pro Code, which is simpler than this

24. Sureties.—The mere fact that sureties are residents of different Police districts and who helped accused in this defence will not make them improper as sureties 16 All L J 263 Sureties should not be rejected on the ground that they do not show that they have sufficient control over the accused 43 C. 1024, 44 Bom 385, 25 C. W N 140

111. [Omitted by Act XII of 1923]

112.* When a Magistrate acting under section 107 section 108 section 109 or section

Order to be made 110 deems it necessary to require any person to show cause under such section he shall make an order in writing setting forth the substance of the information received the amount of the bond to be executed the term for which it is to be in force and the number, character and class of sureties (if any) required

Note—Merely informing an accused that he was suspected to be a habitual thief is not a sufficient notice as required by section 112. There must be something in the nature of an indictment of charge containing substantial particulars indicating the grounds upon which the Police have given information to the Magistrate. It is only after the Magistrate has made the order required by section 112 which is really a notice in writing that the actual hearing under section 110 can by law take place at all 18 A L J 673, 43 M 450

113.† If the person in respect of whom such order is made is present in Court, it shall be read over to him or, if he so desires, the substance thereof shall be explained to him

Note—Is present in Court.—As when a person is arrested under s. 55 under circumstances similar to those described in ss. 109 and 110 and brought before Court, see 2 B. L. R. Appx 28 Even if persons are illegally arrested the Magistrate may proceed to initiate proceedings under the power conferred by the section 12 Cr L J 533 (B)

* So 112 113 114 and 117 do not apply to an enquiry under s. 42 of the Punjab Frontier Crimes Regulation III of 1901

† So, 112 to 125 apply to all cases requiring security for good behaviour under Upper Burma Frontier Crossing and Disturbed District Regulation IX of 1907 and s. 3 (1) and under s. 6 of the Punjab Frontier Crossing Regulation III of 1903

114. If such person is not present in Court the Magistrate shall Summons or warrant in case of person not so present.

issue a summons requiring him to appear or, when such person is in custody a warrant directing the officer in whose custody he is to bring him before the Court

Provided that whenever it appears to such Magistrate upon the report of a Police-officer or upon other information (the substance of which report or information shall be recorded by the Magistrate) that there is reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace and that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by the immediate arrest of such person the Magistrate may at any time issue a warrant for his arrest

Notes.—1 Form.—As to the form of the summons on information of a probable breach of the peace see Sch V No 12

Under the 1872 Code the procedure was slightly different. The Magistrate issued a summons setting forth the particulars referred to in s 112 and if the person summoned did not attend a warrant might then be issued for his arrest provided that a warrant might as under the proviso to this section in certain circumstances be issued at once

2 Shall issue a summons.—After dismissing a charge of criminal trespass and mischief the Magistrate recorded an order in the presence of both parties calling on them to show cause on day fixed why they should enter into recognizances to keep the peace it was held it was not necessary also to issue a summons to them 2 B L R Appx 28

3. Duty of Magistrate before issuing warrant.—The grounds on which the Magistrate found his order for issuing a warrant must in all cases be recorded.—Punj Cr Chap XLIV, p 166 In ordering the arrest of a person under this section the Magistrate must act upon recorded information It is not enough for him to express a belief that such a course is necessary Not only must he have reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace but that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by the immediate arrest of such a person 8 A 132 at p 138, 14 A 45 See also observations of KNOX J in 38 A 282. Where the District Magistrate ordered the detention in custody of an accused person not sent before him under sub-sec. 3 of s 107 held that the order was made without jurisdiction. Even assuming that the proviso to this section applied in the case of a person before the Court, the order could not be supported under this section as the Magistrate has not followed the procedure prescribed 31 M 315 (F B)

4. Warrant must be accompanied by preliminary order—On a Police report that 18 persons should be bound over for good behaviour the Joint Magistrate instead of sifting the evidence against each and proceeding under s. 112 issued non bailable warrants wholesale under the proviso to this section and they were not accompanied as required by s 115 by copies of the order passed under s 112. Held that the proceedings of the Joint Magistrate were illegal Weir II, 83 See Note 2 under s 115

5 Proviso limited to cases under s 117.—The words reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace seem to limit the Magistrate's power under the proviso to cases under s. 107

6 Magistrate cannot issue warrant against person not within his jurisdiction.—A Magistrate can not legally issue a warrant under this section for the arrest of a person who has already left the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction To give the Magistrate jurisdiction the person proceeded against must be actually and physically present in the district in which the Magistrate exercises his jurisdiction 16 Bom L R 839 = 1 Bom Cr Ca 185 = 13 Cr L J 796

115. Every summons or warrant issued under section 114 shall be accompanied by copy

Copy of order under s. 112 to accompany summons or warrant of the order made under section 112 and such copy shall be delivered by the officer serving or executing such summons or warrant to the person served with or arrested under, the same

Notes.—1 Copy of the order must be served.—The serving officer in certifying service must also certify to delivery of the copy of the order See ss 70 and 71 as to service of summons

2. Omission to send copy of order.—The omission to send the copy of the order with summons does not invalidate the proceedings. It is an irregularity cured by s. 537, 11 Bom L R 740 = 10 Cr L J 375 But see Weir, II, 83; 17 M L J 438.

Power to dispense with personal attendance

116. The Magistrate may, if he sees sufficient cause dispense with the personal attendance of any person called upon to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond for keeping the peace and may permit him to appear by a Pleader

Notes.—1 Appearance by Pleader when permissible—Where the person against whom proceedings have been taken under s 107 is residing at a distance and there are no special circumstances making his personal attendance necessary the Magistrate would be wisely exercising his discretion if he allowed him to appear by a Pleader 12 G. 133.

2 Section applies only to bonds to keep the peace—It should be noted that this section applies only to a case under s 107 but not to cases under ss 108 109 and 110 Personal attendance cannot therefore under this section be dispensed with when the matter of complaint falls under s 108 or s 109 or s 110

117. (1) When an order under section 112 has been read or explained under section 113 to a person present in Court or when any person appears or is brought before a Magistrate in compliance with or in execution of a summons or warrant issued under section 114 the Magistrate shall proceed to enquire into the truth of the information upon which action has been taken and to take such further evidence as may appear necessary

of information

(2) Such inquiry shall be made as nearly as may be practicable where the order requires security for keeping the peace in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in summons-cases and where the order requires security for good behaviour, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in warrant cases except that no charge need be framed

*(3) Pending the completion of the inquiry under sub-section (1) the Magistrate if he considers that immediate measures are necessary for the prevention of a breach of the peace or disturbance of the public tranquility or the commission of any offence or for the public safety may for reasons to be recorded in writing direct the person in respect of whom the order under section 112 has been made to execute a bond with or without sureties for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour until the conclusion of the inquiry and may detain him in custody until such bond is executed or in default of execution until the inquiry is concluded

*(a) no person against whom proceedings are not being taken under section 108 section 109 or section 110 shall be directed to execute a bond for maintaining good behaviour and

*(b) the conditions of such bond whether as to the amount thereof or as to the provision of sureties or the number thereof or the pecuniary extent of their liability shall not be more onerous than those specified in the order under section 112

(4) For the purposes of this section the fact that a person is an habitual offender† or is so desperate and dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community may be proved by evidence of general repute or otherwise

(5) Where two or more persons have been associated together in the matter under inquiry they may be dealt with in the same or separate inquiries as the Magistrate shall think just

Notes.—1 Meaning of "or otherwise"—The word otherwise would ordinarily mean something ejusdem generis with general repute such as hearsay not amounting to general repute. But it seems difficult to interpret the word in the sense in which the law would ordinarily read it. It seems to be the intention of the legislature that the Magistrate should use a very large discretion as to the evidence which he may admit in proceedings under s 110 1904 A W N 104. The word otherwise might also refer to evidence of specific instances in a proceeding under section 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act 1879 the Court may properly apply as regards the nature of evidence adduced the provisions of section 117(4) 40 A 153, 17 A L J 147

* Added by Act XV III of 1923

† Words in the inverted commas were added by Act XV III of 1923

2 Scope of sub-sec (5)—Sub-sec. (5) refers to such cases as where several persons are charged with being concerned in a wrongful act that may occasion a breach of the peace (s 107) or in an act regarding the dissemination of seditious matter (s. 108) but not to proceedings under s 110 4 L B R 46 = 6 Cr L J 284 See however Note 39 at pp 171 172

118. If upon such inquiry it is proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour as the case may be that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond with or without sureties the Magistrate shall make an order accordingly

Order to give security

first that no person shall be ordered to give security of a nature different from or of an amount larger than or of a period longer than that specified in the order made under section 112

secondly that the amount of every bond shall be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case and shall not be excessive

thirdly that when the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made is a minor the bond shall be executed only by his sureties

119. If on an inquiry under section 117 it is not proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour as the case may be that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond the Magistrate shall make an entry on the record to that effect and if such person is in custody only for the purposes of the inquiry shall release him or if such person is not in custody shall discharge him

Discharge of person informed against

Note.—Discharge means 'permission to depart.'—The term discharge may have two meanings S 119 indicates that its meaning in that section is non technical. The discharge under this section is merely a permission to depart. The jurisdiction given by s 437 should not be applied to cases under this Cl after it any rate where before making an order under s 119 the Magistrate has called on the person into whose conduct the inquiry is made to establish his defence 33 M 85, 36 M 315. The word discharge is used in contradistinction to the word release 1899 A W N 203. But in 35 B 401 it was held that there was no valid ground for departing from the ordinary sense of the word. See Notes 131 and 132 supra

C—Proceedings in all cases subsequent to order to furnish security

120. (1) If any person in respect of whom an order requiring security is made under section 106 or section 118 is at the time such order is made sentenced to or undergoing a sentence of imprisonment the period for which such security is required shall commence on the expiration of such sentence

Commencement of period for which security is required.

(2) In other cases such period shall commence on the date of such order unless the Magistrate for sufficient reason fixes a later date.

Note.—Object of sub section (2)—It is not the object of sub-sec. (2) to enable a postponement of the operation of the second order for security to keep the peace passed while the first order is still subsisting. The object is to allow the Magistrate in this manner to give time to a person bound over to obtain security instead of at once proceeding to order imprisonment as if in default 4 C. W N 121. This is shown by s. 123 which provides that the security must be given on or before the date on which the period for such security commences. See 24 A L J 327

121. The bond to be executed by any such person shall bind him to keep the peace or to be of good behaviour as the case may be, and in the latter case the commission or attempt to commit, or the abetment of any offence punishable with imprisonment, wherever it may be committed, is a breach of the bond

 122. (1) A Magistrate may refuse to accept any surety offered, or may reject any surety previously accepted by him or his predecessor under this Chapter on the ground that such surety is an unfit person for the purposes of the bond

Provided that, before so refusing to accept or rejecting any such surety he shall either himself hold an inquiry on oath into the fitness of the surety or cause such inquiry to be held and a report to be made thereon by a Magistrate subordinate to him

(2) Such Magistrate shall before holding the inquiry give reasonable notice to the surety and to the person by whom the surety was offered and shall in making the inquiry record the substance of the evidence adduced before him

(3) If the Magistrate is satisfied, after considering the evidence so adduced either before him or before a Magistrate deputed under sub-section (1) and the report of such Magistrate (if any) that the surety is an unfit person for the purposes of the bond, he shall make an order refusing to accept or rejecting, as the case may be, such surety and recording his reasons for so doing

Provided that, before making an order rejecting any surety who has previously been accepted the Magistrate shall issue his summons or warrant, as he thinks fit, and cause the person for whom the surety is bound to appear or to be brought before him

123. (1) If any person ordered to give security under section 106 or section 118 does not give such security on or before the date on which the period for which such security is to be given commences, he shall except in the case hereinafter mentioned be committed to prison, or, if he is already in prison be detained in prison until such period expires or until within such period he gives the security to the Court or Magistrate who made the order requiring it

(2) When such person has been ordered by a Magistrate to give security for a period exceeding one year such Magistrate shall if such person does not give such security as aforesaid issue a warrant directing him to be detained in prison pending the orders of the Sessions Judge or, if such Presidency Magistrate pending the orders of the High Court, and the proceedings shall be laid as soon as conveniently may be before such Court

(3) Such Court, after examining such proceedings and requiring from the Magistrate any further information or evidence which it thinks necessary, may pass such order on the case as it thinks fit

Provided that the period (if any) for which any person is imprisoned for failure to give security shall not exceed three years

(3-A) If security has been required in the course of the same proceedings from two or more persons in respect of anyone of whom the proceedings are referred to the Sessions Judge or the High Court under sub-section (2) such reference shall also include the case of any other of such persons who has been ordered to give security, and the provisions of

* Substituted for the old section by Act XVIII of 1923.

† Sub-sections (3 A) and (3 B) were inserted by the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act (XVIII of 1994) s. 21

sub-sections (2) and (3) shall in that event apply to the case of such other person also except that the period (if any) for which he may be imprisoned shall not exceed the period for which he was ordered to give security

* (3-B) A Sessions Judge may in his discretion transfer any proceeding laid before him under sub-section (2) or sub-section (3A) to an Additional Sessions Judge or Assistant Sessions Judge, and upon such transfer, such Additional Sessions Judge or Assistant Sessions Judge may exercise the powers of a Sessions Judge under this section in respect of such proceedings

(4) If the security is tendered to the officer in charge of the jail, he shall forthwith refer the matter to the Court or Magistrate who made the order, and shall await the orders of such Court or Magistrate

Kind of imprison- (5) Imprisonment for failure to give security for keeping the peace ment shall be simple

(6) Imprisonment for failure to give security for good behaviour† "shall, where the proceedings have been taken under section 108 or section 109 be simple and where the proceedings have been taken under section 110' be rigorous or simple as the Court or Magistrate in each case directs

Notes.—1 For form of warrant of commitment on failure to find security to keep the peace and for good behaviour, and to discharge a person imprisoned on failure to give security, see Sch. V Nos 13 14 and 15 see s. 12b for discharge of sureties

2 As to punishment for escaping, etc., see ss 224 and 225 I P C.

I—DUTIES OF REFERRING MAGISTRATES

3 Reference to Sessions Court necessary only when security for over a year is required and default is made—The whole section has reference only to the case where default is made in furnishing the security required. If that security is given the section does not apply and no reference to the Court of Session is necessary 23 C. 621, 15 A L J 822 When a Magistrate makes an order requiring an accused to give security for over a year the Magistrate is not himself empowered to pass an order for imprisonment in default of the security being given. All he is empowered to do is to issue a warrant directing that the accused be detained in prison pending the orders of the Sessions Judge 4 L B R. 133 = 7 Cr L J 412, 6 P. R 1914 = 142 P L R 1914 = 18 Cr L J 337 When a Magistrate passes a sentence of imprisonment and makes an order under s. 106 to furnish security to keep the peace for over one year he should submit the proceedings under sub-sec. (2) for the order of the Session Judge as soon as possible after passing the sentence and the Sessions Judge has jurisdiction under sub-sec. (3) to deal with the case even before the expiration of the sentence of imprisonment 5 L B R. 34 (F B) Apparently the Magistrate could act under this section when the sureties tendered have all been rejected under s. 122

4 Magistrate cannot himself pass order of imprisonment and then refer to Sessions Court—The Magistrate cannot sentence the accused to imprisonment and then send his order for confirmation to the Sessions Judge, 1899 A W N 151

5 Recording of evidence by Presidency Magistrate when referring case to High Court.—A Presidency Magistrate is not absolved from duty of recording evidence in a case when he makes a reference to the High Court 13 C. W N 313 = 10 Cr L J 122, distinguishing 33 C 136

II—POWERS AND DUTIES OF SESSIONS JUDGES AND HIGH COURTS UNDER 123 (3) ON REFERENCE

6 Notice must be given to person directed to furnish security and he must be heard—Where a Sessions Judge without giving notice to the accused made an order directing certain persons to be rigorously imprisoned for three years in the event of their failing to furnish security and tried to support his procedure on the ground that the Court had made no provision for giving notice to the accused before disposing of references under this section and that it was his usual practice to take up references at the first convenient opportunity

* s. 3-B inserted by Act 3 (I) of 1925 and 3 (I) were inserted by the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act (XVIII) of 1925 s. 7 and that it was not usually practicable to intimate the date of the hearing to the person concerned, the High Court condemned such procedure as one which might result in the denial of justice and utterly unwarranted by law and set aside the order made by the Judge and directed re-hearing after notice, 23 A. 378. On a reference under this section, a Sessions Judge is bound to give notice to the defendant, 27 C. 656; and also to hear the pleader appointed by him who (though not accused of any offence) is ordered to give security for good behaviour under s. 118, 23 C. 493; 4 C. W. N. 797; 27 C. 662; 3 L. B. R. 43; 21 A. 107; 15 P. R. 1900; 16 B. 661; 5 L. B. R. 33 (F.B.), 33 B. 271.

7. Judge must deal with the merits and pass his own order.—The Judge is bound to go into the merits if so required, 25 B. 271; 12 C. W. N. 463. When a case is referred to a Sessions Court under this section, it becomes the duty of that Court to pass its own order on the proceedings of the Magistrate, stating the period for which the security is to be given and the prisoner is to be imprisoned in default, 6 C. P. Cr. 27. It is the duty of the Judge in a case of reference to consider the evidence and to pass an order after doing so and not as mere matter of course, 29 P. R. 1910 = 196 P. L. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 637. He should not pass an order confirming some other order which the Magistrate may have passed, since the Magistrate has no power to pass an order for detention of the accused on their failure to furnish the bonds required, 1899 A. W. N. 151. He is bound to find the special ground, on which the order is passed having special reference to s. 110. Mere finding in general terms that it is for the interests of the community at large that the defendant should be bound over to be of good behaviour is not sufficient, 27 C. 656. See also 4 L. B. R. 135 = 7 Cr. L. J. 412; 5 B. L. R. 87 = 12 Cr. L. J. 410. Where, however, a Magistrate after making an order requiring security for good behaviour for a period of three years, directed that in default of finding security, the accused should be rigorously imprisoned for three years and the Sessions Judge acting under this section confirmed the said order, it was held that although the order of the Magistrate was bad and so far as the direction of imprisonment for three years was concerned made without jurisdiction, yet it might under the circumstances be taken to be the order of the Sessions Judge who was the proper person to make such an order, 1903 A. W. N. 28.

8. Judge may remand for taking further evidence.—The law is now altered by the introduction of the words "from the Magistrate" after the words "requiring" 24 C. 155 is therefore superseded and the Sessions Judge is now competent to remand the case to the Magistrate for further evidence, though the Sessions Court is not prevented from itself taking such further evidence.

9. Judge must himself consider the fitness of the sureties.—As the Judge's order is necessarily an original order of the Sessions Court, the adequacy of the security should be decided by that Court as appears from sub-sec. (4). The Magistrate has no jurisdiction to inquire into the witness of the sureties, 5 B. L. R. 87 = 12 Cr. L. J. 410.

10. No power to refer case to Joint Sessions Judge.—Under the present amendment a Sessions Judge may transfer any proceedings laid before him under sub-section (2) or sub-section (3A) to an Additional Sessions Judge or to an Assistant Sessions Judge, though a direct reference by a Magistrate under this section to an Additional or Assistant Sessions Judge may not be legal.

11. Judge must show in his judgment that he has considered the case of each individual.—Though it may be open to doubt whether the provisions of ss. 367 and 424, apply to orders under s. 123 (3), the Judge in writing his order should show that he has considered the case of each individual prisoner as it is his duty to do. Even if the order need not contain all the details required by s. 367, still each prisoner has a right to have his case considered on its own merits and the order must show that this has not been lost sight of, 37 C. 91.

12. Term of imprisonment should generally be same as the period for which the security is demanded.—Although a Sessions Judge is competent to award any term of imprisonment not exceeding three years yet it is advisable that the term of imprisonment in default ordered under this section should always be the same as the period for which security is directed to be given, 28 A. 422; 4 L. B. R. 135 = 7 Cr. L. J. 412.

13. Magistrate dissatisfied with Sessions Judge's order should move High Court through Public Prosecutor.—If a Court of Session refuses to confirm the order of the District Magistrate under this section, he cannot refer the case to the High Court under s. 438. His proper course is to ask the Public Prosecutor to move the High Court for the revision of the same, 23 C. 249; 28 A. 91.

III—CLAUSE (4).

14. Procedure when security tendered to Superintendent of Jail.—The new cl. (4) deprives Superintendents of Jails of the power they formerly had of releasing persons if the security tendered was to their satisfaction. This power has now been taken away, being inconsistent with s. 122.

I—OBJECT OF CHAPTER

Notes—1 Object of proceedings is prevention of offences, not punishment.—The object of proceedings under s 107 is not to punish persons for what they might have done but to prevent them from committing a breach of the peace 9 C. W. N 898—1 C. L. J 616, 27 C. 781 A Magistrate when passing an order in terms of section 110 should not have any direct intention of inflicting punishment for the object of the section is the prevention not the punishment of crime and with that object it authorizes Magistrates to take from certain persons good and sufficient security for their good behaviour 1 C. L. R 268, 7 A 87 Nor should there be excessive exercise of power beyond what is absolutely necessary 6 A 214 at p 219, 28 M 671

(a) Provisions of the Chapter are not to be used for punishing past offences.—The object of this Chapter is the prevention and not the punishment of crime and it is solely for the purpose of securing future good behaviour that the provisions of section 110 can be used. Any attempt to use it for the purpose of punishing past offences is wrong and not sanctioned by law Where a person is actively being prosecuted on a substantive charge and has given bail which the Magistrate deems sufficient for his appearance when required the Magistrate cannot proceed against him simultaneously under this section 1 C. L. R 263 at p 271, 2 C. 110, 7 A 67 at p 72, 10 B 174, 7 C. L. R 352 It is wrong to use these sections so as to add to the punishment for past offences. The object of taking security from a person is solely to secure his good behaviour in future 10 B 174, 2 A 835, 13 C. W. N 313—9 Cr. L. J 439—10 Cr. L. J 122

(b) Chapter not confined to cases where actual offences have been committed.—The power contained in section 110 is a preventive power and not a punitive one therefore its exercise is not to be confined to cases in which positive evidence of the commission of crime is forthcoming against the person charged 3 M 238, 10 M L T 333—12 Cr. L. J 328 In such cases evidence of general repute though unsupported by evidence of particular instances of crime is admissible. (See also 27 C. 781, 43 P. R 1835; 31 C. 350; 8 Bom. L. R 164—5 Cr. L. J 178) 23 A. L. J 18)

2 Security for good behaviour may be required on failure of charge of substantive offence.—Eight persons were set up for trial on a charge of dacoity but the evidence against them being insufficient were discharged. An attempt was made to obtain evidence against them sufficient for a conviction under s 400 I P. C. but that evidence was not forthcoming. Thereupon as the Police information in the case gave the District Magistrate reason to believe that it was necessary to bind over some of these persons to be of good behaviour, he took proceedings against five out of the eight and after the usual procedure made an order binding them over held, that the order of the District Magistrate was good. The case in 11 C. W. N. 413 = 5 Cr. L. J. 191 does not lay down any general rule that proceedings under s. 110 should not be instituted with a view to bind down persons on an indefinite charge after prosecution against them on definite charges under the I. P. C., have failed, 32 A. 55. See also 6 A. L. J. 457. The Oudh Chief Court set aside an order under s. 110 against a person who, after acquittal of a charge of dacoity, was charged by the Police under s. 110 on practically the same evidence as was offered at the trial, 17 Cr. L. J. 184 = 33 In Ca. 24. But see 43 A. 2, 186.

It is impossible to accept the proposition that the evidence going to show that a substantive offence has been committed or which might form the basis of a charge of a substantive offence, is necessarily to be excluded in proceedings under s. 110 and cannot form the basis of an order under s. 112 and s. 118 of the Code, 47 A. 733; see 47 M. L. J. 699.

3. Section 110 ought not to be used to harass individuals to satisfy private vengeance.—A Magistrate cannot be too cautious in making sure that provisions intended for securing the peace of the community are not utilized for creating private vengeance under the aegis of a Crown prosecution, 33 C. 156. The law enabling security to be taken from a person who is proved to be by common report a habitual thief is no doubt a salutary law, but it is a hard law that can be used for oppressive purposes, unless the Magistrates who are called upon to apply it exercise their judicial discretion in a judicious manner, 5 P. R. 1892. It is to be feared that it is often resorted to as a means of ensuring the punishment of the person suspected, but not proved to have committed offences such as theft, etc. and it is notorious that accusations of bad livelihood are constantly made merely with the object of blackening an enemy's character and of satisfying feelings of spite and hatred. Under these circumstances it is incumbent on Magistrates to exercise the greatest caution and impartiality and to be careful not to be influenced by outside gossip and vague rumour 4 P. R. 1898; 38 C. 156.

4. Section 107 ought not to be used so as to prevent persons from lawfully exercising their rights.—The provisions of Part B of Chapter VIII are not to be arbitrarily used to prevent persons from legally exercising their rights or property, nor is a person in a high position to be subjected to the indignity of being called upon to find sureties to an excessive amount simply because of that position, 6 A. 26 (F.B.) See also 11 C. W. N. 840, 12 C. W. N. 703, 34 C. 935. S. 107 is not intended to prevent a private person from exercising his right of property, because another person would be likely to commit a breach of the peace if he did so 19 W. R. 47 = 10 B. L. R. 451, 15 P. R. 1902 = 104 P. L. R. 1902 (F.B.) 6 Bom. L. R. 882; 12 C. W. N. 703 = 7 Cr. L. J. 504, 15 Cr. L. J. 681 (M.). It is illegal and contrary to the provisions of s. 107 to take recognizances from one person in order to prevent another from committing a breach of the peace, 17 W. R. 54, 4 P. R. 1912 = 125 P. L. R. 1912 = 11 P. W. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 126. The preventive jurisdiction of a Magistrate under s. 107 must be exercised with caution. Where its exercise may lead to the infringement of an undoubted civil right where on obligation, which the law of the country imposes, becomes incapable of being enforced owing to the exercise of such a jurisdiction and where the breach of the peace apprehended by the Magistrate is a likely result of the enforcement of his legal right by a party in a legal way, and the illegal denial of the corresponding obligation of the other party, the Magistrate should not bind down the party who has the legal right in him. In a proceeding under s. 107, if there are doubts as to the existence of the respective rights and obligations of the parties the Magistrate should bind down both parties, so that his order may not be detrimental to either. Where however, no doubt exists the party in the wrong should be bound down. An attempt to ascertain legal rights of the parties should always be made by the Magistrate, before he binds down one or the other party under s. 107, 34 C. 935. See also the cases cited in Notes 15—22 to s. 107.

5. Chapter not intended whereon to give time to Police to work out a substantive case.—The petitioners were detained in the Ludhiana lock up, pending the completion of the Police inquiry into a number of charges of dacoity committed in the Delhi District, and in various districts of N. W. P. in which they were believed to be implicated. The attention of Government having been drawn to the delay which had taken place in bringing them to trial, orders were given that they should either be brought to trial or discharged within one month from that date. Thereupon the District Superintendent of Police represented to the District Magistrate that no trial for the substantive offences could be launched immediately, as the attendance of the absent witnesses could not be secured, and proposed that the accused should be brought to trial for bad livelihood under the Code so as to give time for the preparation of the case against them under the Penal Code. Orders were thereupon issued for the trial of the accused for bad livelihood which resulted in security being demanded from them failing which they were sentenced each to one year's rigorous imprisonment. In setting aside the order on revision the Chief Court observed "We are of opinion that the proceedings should never have been instituted in the L. District and were not authorized by Chapter VIII, but were an abuse of the provisions of that Chapter. The object of that Chapter is not the punishment of offences, but the prevention of crime, and it is clear that there was no risk of crime being committed in the L. District by persons who were brought in custody from different places with a view to an inquiry in that district into offences alleged to have been committed by them. While s. 110 applies to persons within the local limits of a Magistrate's jurisdiction who belong to any of the classes there described, it does not follow that it was contemplated that the Police should be at liberty to bring persons from distant places to a place within those limits for the purpose of inquiry as to offences committed elsewhere, and then to ask the Magistrate to exercise his jurisdiction under this section, on failure to prove the specific offences charged. Much less can it be supposed that for the purpose of preventing the prisoners from being returned as detained in the lock-up pending inquiry for a lengthened period, the Police could ask the Magistrate to institute proceedings under this section, on the same evidence which would afterwards be used to prove the specific offences charged, with a view to their being required to furnish security and imprisoned on their failure to do so. This appears to have been the sole object of the proceedings in the present case * * * The jurisdiction given by this section is in terms confined to persons within the limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction, and certainly cannot have been meant to extend to persons who were within those limits merely because they had been brought there in Police custody, especially as it is clear that there was no risk of those persons however criminal their character, committing the offences to prevent which security may be required, while they remain in Police custody"—PER BARKLEY, J., in 43 P. R. 1885. This section is not intended to afford the Police a means of keeping a suspected person under detention until they are able to work out a case against the accused. 10 A. L. J. 351—13 Cr. L. J. 827.

II—POINTS TO BE NOTED BY MAGISTRATES.

6. Provisions of the law must be strictly attended to.—'We think it very desirable that Magistrates should, in the performance of their duties, attend strictly to the provisions of the law. This is desirable on many grounds and if there were no other reason for desiring it on this ground alone, that it would save a number of references which take up a considerable portion of the time of this Court, and which are rendered possible merely because Magistrates do not pay that attention which they might reasonably be expected to pay to the express provisions of the law,' B. C. 728.—'The Judges have reason to believe that the provisions of this Chapter are not generally understood or observed, and the attention of Criminal Courts is accordingly invited to them. It should be noted that by the present Code the power of demanding security for good behaviour has been considerably curtailed, and that certain conditions which were not required by the previous Code (Act V of 1872) must now be complied with before process can issue, and before a final order can be passed, calling upon a person to furnish security of either sort.'—Punjab Cir., p. 165

7. Procedure laid down must be carefully followed.—It is generally in respect of cases coming under section 110 that the neglect of the provisions of the Code has come to notice. In the first stage of the proceedings in this class of cases, and before actual inquiry is made in the presence of the accused three points need attention—(1) the information (2) the order thereon, stating the substance of the information (s. 112). The order should set forth a definite period for which the security is required, 3 M. 238; (3) communicating the same to the accused (ss. 113 and 115). The information is the foundation of the whole proceeding, and the fact that the Magistrate is acting upon information should be recorded. No information should be acted upon, unless it comes from a trustworthy source, and is such that, if substantiated and not rebutted it will justify a finding that the person charged answers to one or more specific descriptions given in this section.—Punjab Cir., p. 165 Oldh Cr. Dig., p. 4

8. Magistrates must exercise their powers with discrimination and discretion after very full and searching inquiries.—As the powers of Magistrates under Chapter VIII are very great, so they require to be exercised with sound discrimination and discretion, and in cases under s. 110 after a very full and searching inquiry, 1889 A. W. N. 114. S. 110 arms the Magistrate with very powerful means for securing the interests of the community from injury at the hands of hardened offenders of the most dangerous classes. But its good effect will be lost if it is applied too freely and to persons whose cases are not within the spirit of its provision, 4 N. W. P. H. C. R. 117; 6 C. 16; 16 A. 43 at p. 46; 17 C. W. N. 233—16 C. L. J. 467—14 Cr. L. J. 5; 33 C. 156. The powers should therefore be exercised always with careful discretion by the Magistracy, though its exercise is not to be confined to cases in which positive evidence is forthcoming of the commission of crime by the persons against whom this section is sought to be enforced.

9. One whose term has just expired should not be called upon to enter into fresh recognizance.—R, who was bound over under this section for a term of three years and which term had expired on the 13th of June, 1905, was on the 20th of June, 1905, called upon to show cause why he should not execute fresh bonds to be of good behaviour. Held that the interval of a week was not long enough to give R any opportunity of showing that he was willing to adopt an honest livelihood and that evidence relating to events prior to 13th June, 1905, was inadmissible in support of a fresh order under section 110, 1905 A. W. N. 30 = 3 A. L. J. 29 = 3 Cr. L. J. 98. See also 1905 A. W. N. 34. There should be new proof of bad livelihood or that the person is not capable of following an honest calling 6 W. R. 18; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 355 = 12 Cr. L. J. 359. Such proceedings must be confined to facts and circumstances alleged against him after release from his last security 19 C. W. N. 223 = 16 Cr. L. J. 312; 28 A. 306. If on being set at liberty he should return to his former course of life and continue to be a person of such a character whom it is dangerous to the society to leave at large he may then be brought before a Magistrate and after evidence of his proceedings had been laid before that officer, a further order might be made requiring him to give fresh security.—C H Pro, 29th July, 1902. See 12 C. 520 and 17 Cr. L. J. 85 = 20 C. W. N. 725.

10. Sufficient locus penitentiae must be allowed.—“The mere fact of previous convictions of offences involving dishonesty is not sufficient to justify the putting in force the powers under section 110, unless there is additional evidence to show that the person complained against has done some act, or resumed avocations, that indicate on his part an intention to return to his former course of life, and to pursue a career of preying on the community. The greatest thief is entitled to a locus penitentiae, when he has served out his punishment, it is only when he outrages that grace which is extended to him, and thereby shows that he is unreformed that the machinery of the Act should be brought into operation, in order to obtain a substantial guarantee for society that he will not commit further depredations upon it;” 2 A. 835 at p. 837; 11 C. W. N. 233; 16 C. L. J. 467 = 14 Cr. L. J. 5. Where a person who was imprisoned for one year for failure to furnish security under this section, was required again after the expiry of 15 months from his release to furnish security under s. 110, held that the order was bad, the accused not having had sufficient locus penitentiae and that the bad reputation which he had before imprisonment had still followed him and permeated the evidence of many of the witnesses, 31 C. 783; 10 M. L. T. 333 = 12 Cr. L. J. 328; 1911 M. W. N. 356 = 12 Cr. L. J. 359, 28 A. 306, 9 B. L. R. Appx. 30 = 18 W. R. 44; 15 W. R. 18; 6 W. R. 13; 19 C. W. N. 223; 16 Cr. L. J. 312; and see 2 A. 835, 18 Cr. L. J. 710.

11. Points to be noted in fixing security.—(i) Object of security.—Proceedings under section 110 are intended to be precautionary and not punitive—and therefore security should not be required to a very large amount 31 C. 350. ‘The object of taking a bond is not to obtain money for the Crown, but to prevent crime, 36 C. 582. The object of the law as to security for good behaviour is not to fill the jails with bad characters, but to bring reasonable pressure to bear on such persons to respect the law, 6 P. R. 1914 = 142 P. L. R. 1914; 8 B. L. R. 173 = 16 Cr. L. J. 100.

(ii) Term of security should cease with necessity.—The order for security should not be for the extreme term of one year, except when it is absolutely necessary, e.g. where disturbance of the peace is expected in a mele or fair which is to last for not more than a fortnight taking security for one year is not only unnecessary, but excessive, 6 A. 214, also Puny Cir, Chap. XLV par. 12a. See also 16 Cr. L. J. 614 (M).

(iii) Magistrate demanding sureties in addition to heavy recognizance acts illegally.—The powers given by section 110 should be exercised with extreme discretion. Where a Magistrate required six of the prisoners before him to find two sureties in Rs. 500 each for their good behaviour and also to furnish their own recognizances three to the amount of Rs. 1000, two of Rs. 500 and one of Rs. 250 all to be deposited in cash, the High Court quashed the order directing the prisoners to deposit cash and to provide sureties as bad in law, and in lieu thereof directed six of them to enter into bonds for their good behaviour in the amount which they were directed to deposit in cash 6 C. 14 = 6 C. L. R. 128.

(iv) Such conditions only ought to be imposed as the accused has a fair chance of complying with.—The power given by section 110 is one that should be exercised discreetly, and in fixing the amount of security, the Magistrate should consider the station in life of the person concerned and should not go beyond a sum for which there is a fair probability of his being able to find security. The imprisonment, it must be remembered, is provided as a protection to society against the perpetration of crime by the individual, and not a punishment for a crime committed, and being made conditional on default of finding security, it is only reasonable and just that the individual should be afforded a fair chance of at least complying with the required conditions of security, 4 M. H. C. R. Appx. XLVI. A person from whom security for good behaviour is demanded should have a fair chance afforded him to comply with the required conditions of security. The imprisonment, in default of order on revision the Chief Court observed "We are of opinion that the proceedings should never have been instituted in the L. District and were not authorized by Chapter VIII, but were an abuse of the provisions of that Chapter. The object of that Chapter is not the punishment of offences, but the prevention of crime, and it is clear that there was no risk of crime being committed in the L. District by persons who were brought in custody from different places with a view to an inquiry in that district into offences alleged to have been committed by them. While s 110 applies to persons within the local limits of a Magistrate's jurisdiction who belong to any of the classes there described it does not follow that it was contemplated that the Police should be at liberty to bring persons from distant places to a place within those limits for the purpose of inquiry as to offences committed elsewhere, and then to ask the Magistrate to exercise his jurisdiction under this section, on failure to prove the specific offences charged. Much less can it be supposed that for the purpose of preventing the prisoners from being returned as detained in the lock-up pending inquiry for a lengthened period, the Police could ask the Magistrate to institute proceedings under this section, on the same evidence which would afterwards be used to prove the specific offences charged, with a view to their being required to furnish security and imprisoned on their failure to do so. This appears to have been the sole object of the proceedings in the present case * * * The jurisdiction given by this section is in terms confined to persons within the limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction, and certainly cannot have been meant to extend to persons who were within those limits merely because they had been brought there in Police custody, especially as it is clear that there was no risk of those persons however criminal their character, committing the offences to prevent which security may be required, while they remain in Police custody."—Per BARKLEY, J., in 43 P. R. 1885. This section is not intended to afford the Police a means of keeping a suspected person under detention until they are able to work out a case against the accused, 40 A. L. J. 351 = 13 Cr. L. J. 827.

II—POINTS TO BE NOTED BY MAGISTRATES.

6. Provisions of the law must be strictly attended to.—'We think it very desirable that Magistrates should in the performance of their duties attend strictly to the provisions of the law. This is desirable on many grounds and if there were no other reason for desiring it on this ground alone, that it would save a number of references which take up a considerable portion of the time of this Court, and which are rendered possible merely because Magistrates do not pay that attention which they might reasonably be expected to pay to the express provisions of the law,' 8 C. 725.—'The Judges have reason to believe that the provisions of this Chapter are not generally understood or observed, and the attention of Criminal Courts is accordingly invited to them. It should be noted that by the present Code the power of demanding security for good behaviour has been considerably curtailed, and that certain conditions which were not required by the previous Code (Act X of 1872) must now be complied with before process can issue, and before a final order can be passed calling upon a person to furnish security of either sort.'—Punj. Cir., p. 165.

7. Procedure laid down must be carefully followed.—It is generally in respect of cases coming under section 110 that the neglect of the provisions of the Code has come to notice. In the first stage of the proceedings in this class of cases, and before actual inquiry is made in the presence of the accused three points need attention—(1) the information (2) the order thereon, stating the substance of the information (s. 112). The order should set forth a definite period for which the security is required, 3 M. 233, (3) communicating the same to the accused (ss. 113 and 115). The information is the foundation of the whole proceeding, and the fact that the Magistrate is acting upon information should be recorded. No information should be acted upon, unless it comes from a trustworthy source, and is such that, if substantiated and not rebutted it will justify a finding that the person charged answers to one or more specific descriptions given in this section.—Punj. Cir., p. 165 Oidh Cr. Dig., p. 4.

8. Magistrates must exercise their powers with discrimination and discretion after very full and searching inquiries.—As the powers of Magistrates under Chapter VIII are very great, so they require to be exercised with sound discrimination and discretion, and in cases under s. 110 after a very full and searching inquiry 1889 A. W. N. 114. S. 110 arms the Magistrate with very powerful means for securing the interests of the community from injury at the hands of hardened offenders of the most dangerous classes. But its good effect will be lost if it is applied too freely and to persons whose cases are not within the spirit of its provision, 4 N. W. P. H. C. R. 117; 6 C. 16; 14 A. 45 at p. 46; 17 C. W. N. 238 = 16 C. L. J. 467 = 16 Cr. L. J. 5; 33 C. 156. The powers should therefore be exercised always with careful discretion by the Magistracy, though its exercise is not to be confined to cases in which positive evidence is forthcoming of the commission of crime by the persons against whom this section is sought to be enforced.

9. One whose term has just expired should not be called upon to enter into fresh recognizance.—R., who was bound over under this section for a term of three years and which term had expired on the 13th of June, 1905, was on the 20th of June, 1905, called upon to show cause why he should not execute fresh bonds to be of good behaviour. Held, that the interval of a week was not long enough to give R. any opportunity of showing that he was willing to adopt an honest livelihood and that evidence relating to events prior to 13th June, 1905, was inadmissible in support of a fresh order under section 110, 1905 A. W. N. 30 = 3 A. L. J. 29 = 3 Cr. L. J. 96. See also 1903 A. W. N. 35. There should be new proof of bad livelihood or that the person is not capable of following an honest calling. 6 W. R. 18; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 355 = 12 Cr. L. J. 359. Such proceedings must be confined to facts and circumstances alleged against him after release from his last security. 19 C. W. N. 223 = 16 Cr. L. J. 312; 28 A. 306. If on being set at liberty he should return to his former course of life and continue to be a person of such a character whom it is dangerous to the society to leave at large, he may then be brought before a Magistrate and after evidence of his proceedings had been laid before that officer, a further order might be made requiring him to give fresh security.—C. H. Pro., 29th July, 1862. See 12 C. 820 and 17 Cr. L. J. 85 = 20 C. W. N. 725.

10. Sufficient locus penitentiae must be allowed.—‘The mere fact of previous convictions of offences involving dishonesty is not sufficient to justify the putting in force the powers under section 110, unless there is additional evidence to show that the person complained against has done some act, or resumed avocations, that indicate on his part an intention to return to his former course of life, and to pursue a career of preying on the community. The greatest thief is entitled to a locus penitentiae, when he has served out his punishment, it is only when he outrages that grace which is extended to him and thereby shows that he is unreformed that the machinery of the Act should be brought into operation, in order to obtain a substantial guarantee for society that he will not commit further depredations upon it.’ 2 A. 835 at p. 837; 11 C. W. N. 233; 15 C. L. J. 467 = 14 Cr. L. J. 5. Where a person who was imprisoned for one year for failure to furnish security under this section, was required again after the expiry of 15 months from his release to furnish security under s. 110, held that the order was bad, the accused not having had sufficient locus penitentiae and that the bad reputation which he had before imprisonment had still followed him and permeated the evidence of many of the witnesses, 31 C. 783; 10 M. L. T. 333 = 12 Cr. L. J. 328; 1911 M. W. N. 356 = 12 Cr. L. J. 359, 28 A. 306; 9 B. L. R. Appx. 30 = 18 W. R. 44; 15 W. R. 18; 6 W. R. 18; 19 C. W. N. 223; 16 Cr. L. J. 312; and see 2 A. 835, 16 Cr. L. J. 710.

11. Points to be noted in fixing security.—(i) Object of security—Proceedings under section 110 are intended to be precautionary and not punitive—and therefore security should not be required to a very large amount, 31 C. 350. The object of taking a bond is not to obtain money for the Crown but to prevent crime, 36 C. 562. The object of the law as to security for good behaviour is not to fill the jails with bad characters, but to bring reasonable pressure to bear on such persons to respect the law. 6 P. R. 1914 = 142 P. L. R. 1914; 8 S. L. R. 173 = 18 Cr. L. J. 100.

(ii) Term of security should cease with necessity—The order for security should not be for the extreme term of one year, except when it is absolutely necessary, e.g. where disturbance of the peace is expected in a meela or fair which is to last for not more than a fortnight taking security for one year is not only unnecessary, but excessive, 6 A. 214, also Punjab Cr. Chap. XLV, part 12 a. See also 16 Cr. L. J. 614 (M).

(iii) Magistrate demanding sureties in addition to heavy recognizance acts illegally—The powers given by section 110 should be exercised with extreme discretion. Where a Magistrate required six of the prisoners before him to find two sureties in Rs. 500 each for their good behaviour and also to furnish their own recognizances, three to the amount of Rs. 1000 two of Rs. 500 and one of Rs. 250 all to be deposited in cash, the High Court quashed the order directing the prisoners to deposit cash and to provide sureties as bad in law, and in lieu thereof directed six of them to enter into bonds for their good behaviour in the amount which they were directed to deposit in cash. 6 C. 14 = 6 C. L. R. 128.

(iv) Such conditions only ought to be imposed as the accused has a fair chance of complying with.— is provided as a protection to society against the perpetration of crime by the individual and not a punishment for a crime committed, and being made conditional on default of finding security, it is only reasonable and just that the individual should be afforded a fair chance of at least complying with the required conditions of security, 4 M. H. C. R. Appx. XLVI. A person from whom security for good behaviour is demanded should have a fair chance afforded him to comply with the required conditions of security. The imprisonment, in default of finding security is provided as a protection to society against the perpetration of crime by the individual, and not as punishment for a crime committed 2 C. 384 = 1 G. L. R. 95. See also 16 B. 372; 22 W. R. 37; 23 A. 80; 19 W. R. 1; 1 P. R. 1893; 14 C. W. N. 709 = 11 Cr. L. J. 243; Puny Car, p 168, 24 P. R. 1900. Character and reputation are not the sole considerations for determining and fixing the amount of security. It should be fixed after considering the station in life of the accused, 5 S. L. R. 10 = 12 Cr. L. J. 110. In a case of apprehended breach of the peace, a Magistrate bound over the parties in sums of money aggregating on the whole to Rs 60 000 or upwards. The High Court quashed the order, holding that it was altogether unreasonable, 2 C. 110; 1 G. L. R. 43; 1900 A. W. N. 204; 19 W. R. 1; 6 C. 14 = 6 G. L. R. 128; 1 P. R. 1893; 28 P. R. 1901. The Magistrate must look to the means of the party himself, not to that of his master, 22 W. R. 74; 30 P. R. 1890; 24 and 17 P. R. 1900.

(v) Arbitrary conditions ought not to be imposed—Where, in the case of a man who had never been convicted of any offence, the Magistrate orders that security shall be given of a description which it must necessarily be difficult to find, and directs that in default of giving security, the imprisonment shall be rigorous, such an exercise of his discretion is wholly unreasonable and bad, especially when the Magistrate indicates no reason why, with a view to the prisoner's good behaviour, it is desirable that the imprisonment shall be of the more severe kind. The petitioner was charged with having received stolen goods, and bail was refused by the Magistrate but was ordered to be taken by the High Court. Bail was accordingly given by the petitioner and accepted by the Magistrate, but before the former could reach his house the Police made a report that he was of bad repute, etc., and proceedings were commenced against him by the Magistrate who, after taking the evidence of a large number of witnesses, made an order directing the petitioner (who was the son of a wealthy Zamindar) to find security in the sum of Rs. 20 000 and sentenced him, in default, to one year's imprisonment, of which 10 months were to be rigorous. The petitioner was subsequently acquitted by the Sessions Court of the charges on which he had been committed by the Magistrate, but the order to find security being confirmed by the District Magistrate, to whom it had been appealed, the High Court, on an application under its revisional powers held, that the proceedings under section 110 were wholly mistaken and bad and quashed the order for security, 1 G. L. R. 263. See 2 C. 110. It is highly improper to frame an order for security with the express intention of preventing the applicant from furnishing it, 8 Bur. L. T. 53 = 16 Cr. L. J. 583.

(vi) Grounds as to amount of security must be stated on requisition from the High Court—On a requisition from the High Court a Magistrate is bound to state the grounds upon which he fixed the amount of security, 2 C. 384 = 1 G. L. R. 95.

III.—INFORMATION ON WHICH PROCEEDINGS MAY BE INITIATED

12.—There must be sufficient information before taking action under this Chapter.—A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to act under this Chapter, until he has such information before him as will suffice for his making an order in writing setting forth its substance and the further particulars required by s 112 12 A. L. J. 336 = 15 Cr. L. J. 696. No person is to be called upon to show cause why an order should not be made against him until there is before the Magistrate some information which the Magistrate has reason to believe, 36 A. 262. It is the duty of the Magistrate to see that he has clear and definite information effecting such person so that it may afford notice to such person of what he is to come prepared to meet. 8 S. L. R. 207 = 16 Cr. L. J. 235. Even when immediate arrest of the suspect is considered expedient there must be before the Magistrate a report or information and the substance of the report or information must be recorded by the Magistrate. The Code gives the Magistrate no power to issue summons warrant or order of detention until he had first upon his table something recorded by him in writing showing the grounds upon which he is taking action. No possibility is given or intended to be given for persons to be detained by orders of a Magistrate until the Magistrate has first by a separate order in writing shown that he has considered the order which he is about to make and until he has reason to believe that such an order is required in the interests of the public, 36 A. 262.

13. Information must be based on tangible facts so that the party called upon, may have notice of the particular conduct charged against him.—Information of the kind mentioned in section 110 must be clear and definite directly affecting the person against whom process is issued, and should disclose tangible facts and details so that it may afford notice to such person of what he is to come prepared to meet 6 A. 26 (F.B.); 8 S. L. R. 207 = 16 Cr. L. J. 235. Information that the accused have committed "diverse acts of oppression" is too vague to enable proceedings under section 110 being taken 7 C. W. N. 32; 16 P. R. 1899 and 6 A. 216. To justify an order under section 107 there should be evidence of some specific conduct on the part of the accused from which a reasonable and immediate inference could be drawn that the accused was likely to commit breach of the peace. And it is only upon information of this character that a Magistrate should institute proceedings under s 107. The mere finding that the accused is a bad character, and it is not right in any way to leave such a person without a guarantee of good behaviour, is wholly insufficient to justify an order under that section, 21 F. R. 1888. To constitute a proper foundation for an order under section 107, it is necessary that the Magistrate should adjudicate upon legal evidence before him that the person against whom the order is made is likely to commit a breach of the peace, and the Magistrate should give notice to the party who is to be affected by the order, of the particular conduct on his part which is complained of. When such notice was given and the ground of complaint to which such notice had reference was found by the Magistrate to be unfounded it was held the Magistrate could not pass an order on an entirely different ground, on the assumption that it was likely that the party charged would commit a breach of the peace, 21 W. R. 6; see also 25 A. 375; 27 C. 656; 23 C. 493; 10 A. L. J. 353—13 Cr. L. J. 844; 12 A. L. J. 336.

14. Before issuing notice under s. 107, the Magistrate must be satisfied of a likelihood of a breach of the peace.—In the absence of any evidence rendering a breach of the peace probable, a Magistrate is not justified in calling upon parties to show cause why they should not enter into recognizances, and on their failure, to make an order under this section, 24 W. R. 23.

15. Information may be from any source.—Where on an application by the accused to be enlarged on bail the Magistrate made an order to the effect—“refused, as the accused is said to be a dangerous or violent man who might use his liberty for the purpose of intimidating witnesses”—held, rejecting a transfer-application on this ground, that there is no limit to the nature or source of information on which a Magistrate might initiate proceedings under this section and that the provisions of ss. 190(c) and 191 were probably not applicable to such proceedings, 27 A. 172. The information required by a Magistrate before issuing an order under section 110 may, to some extent, be of a hearsay and general description, but when the party to whom the order is directed appears in Court in obedience thereto, the inquiry must be conducted on the lines laid down in s. 117, 6 A. 132.

(i) Report of Sub-Magistrate—The power of taking action under s. 107 is a discretionary power and there is no irregularity in the procedure of a Magistrate calling for a report from a Subordinate Magistrate before acting in a manner hereinafter prescribed by s. 112, Weir II, 52. Such report of the Subordinate Magistrate is credible information to authorize a Magistrate to proceed under this section, 2 M. H. C. R. 240, see also 10 W. R. 41, but if unsupported by other evidence it cannot form a sufficient ground for final adjudication under s. 114 6 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 1, 5 B. H. C. R. Ca. 105.

(ii) Police report—Although Police reports in themselves may be sufficient information on which a Magistrate may issue a summons, they are in no sense evidence upon which he can determine under s. 117 whether it is necessary to take a bond to keep the peace or for good behaviour, 4 B. L. R. 46—12 W. 60 (F.B.), 10 W. R. 41. But a petition which was declared by the Police to be false and was unsupported by any complaint or solemn affirmation was held not to come within the words “any report or other information which appears credible and which the Magistrate believes” (which was the language of the corresponding section s. 491 of the 1872 Code) so as to warrant a Magistrate demanding security to keep the peace, 8 W. R. 85. When it appears that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace etc., it is the duty of the Police to lay information before the Magistrate having jurisdiction. In laying such information, the Police should set out carefully the evidence on which they rely or the circumstances leading to the information—C P. Pol. Man 1 p. 20.

(iii) Complaint—It has been held that a Magistrate acts without jurisdiction in making an order under section 107 when there is no complaint before him of a breach of the peace being likely to be committed by such person, and without taking any evidence in the matter, 17 W. R. 35. A statement by a complainant (believed by the Magistrate) that he expected the defendant at any time to make an attempt on his person or property is a sufficient information for the Magistrate to act upon, 7 W. R. 30. It is not necessary to call witnesses in support of an information laid before a Magistrate, previous to issuing a summons to show cause under that section, 11 W. R. 6. The complaint must, however be on oath, 8 W. R. 79. A complaint which is not supported by an oath is not sufficient information 8 W. R. 85, 6 Bom. H. C. R. 1.

(iv) Personal knowledge—When a Magistrate proceeded upon his extra judicial knowledge only, the order was set aside, 22 W. R. 79. A Magistrate it seems cannot act on his own personal knowledge and initiate proceedings as he is disqualified to inquire into the truth of the allegations and cannot make over the inquiry to another Magistrate as the policy of the law is that the Magistrate who initiates the proceedings ought to complete it.

(v) Statements not on oath—A statement by a private person not on oath is not credible information. 6 Bom. H. C. R. 1; 8 W. R. 85.

(24) Hearsay evidence—Conversations out of Court with persons, however respectable are not legal or proper material upon which a Magistrate should adopt proceedings, 6 A. 132, 138.

16. But it is desirable that there should be formal evidence.—The Magistrate may record evidence before making the preliminary order, Weir II, 51. The reference to further evidence in s. 117, indicates that some evidence may be taken before a preliminary order under s. 112 is framed. Moreover, both ss. 109 and 110 show that the Magistrate's action must be based on information received, and there is no reason why the Magistrate should confine himself to the information contained in the Police papers. He can, if he thinks fit, take information on oath in the presence of the accused before deciding whether he will take action under ss. 109 and 110. Magistrate would generally exercise a wise discretion by taking some evidence on oath, before framing the order (under s. 112, 1905 U. B. R. (Cr. P. C.) 29 = 2 Cr. L. J. 462, 463).

17. Magistrate not bound to reveal sources of information.—A Magistrate initiating proceedings under section 110 is not bound to inform the person concerned, the source of his information, nor the nature of such information because the information is no evidence against the accused. The information may, to some extent be of a hearsay and general description 6 A. 132; 27 A. 172. All that the Magistrate is bound to state is the substance of the information, 29 C. 392. It is not necessary to give a list of witnesses in support of the proceedings either in the report or in the order under s. 112, 33 C. 243.

IV—PRELIMINARY ORDER AND ITS CONTENTS.

[See s. 112 for contents of order, ss. 113 to 115 for service of order and issue of process.]

18. Magistrate must make preliminary order.—A Magistrate acting under Chapter VIII has no power to act until after he has recorded an order in writing under s. 112 36 A. 202. An order of a Magistrate under s. 118 cannot be supported when it appears that the procedure prescribed by sections 112 and 117 was not followed by him, Weir II, 55; Ratanlal 421; 11 C. 13, 9 M. 380; 21 W. R. 6; 28 M. 471. Omission to issue preliminary order renders all further proceedings void, 36 M. 282. In 10 O. C. 365 = 7 Cr. L. J. 84 and 1891 A. W. N. 40, the failure to record an order was treated as a mere irregularity.

(i) Order under s. 118 cannot be made summarily on evidence given at previous conviction.—P was convicted of dishonestly receiving stolen property. He confessed on his trial that he had twice previously been convicted of theft. He was sentenced to be imprisoned and on the expiration of the term of imprisonment, to furnish security for good behaviour. Held (with some hesitation) that there was evidence as to general character adduced before the Magistrate justifying him in dealing with P under s. 505, Act X of 1872, held also, that the order requiring security should not have formed part of the sentence for the offence of which P was convicted. A proceeding should have been drawn out representing that the Magistrate was satisfied from evidence adduced before him in the case, that P was by habit an offender within the terms of section 505, Act X of 1872, and therefore security would be required from him and an order should have been recorded to the effect that, on the expiry of the imprisonment, P should be brought up for the purpose of being bound over, 1 A. 666. Where an accused person was convicted of theft and sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment and was further ordered to enter into his own recognizance for Rs. 50 and find two sureties, each for a like sum for his good behaviour for one year after the expiration of sentence and in default to suffer rigorous imprisonment for one month held, that the latter part of the order was bad, 9 C. 215. See also 2 B. L. R. Appx. 28.

(ii) Security cannot be demanded on acquittal on same evidence.—When a person had been acquitted on a charge of dishonestly receiving stolen property, he should not be ordered to give security under section 110 on the evidence taken at that trial. An order should be made under s. 112 and a proceeding held under s. 117 Oadh 8, C. No. 70.

19. Order must set forth the substance of the information.—This should be stated with sufficient fullness for the accused person to have a clear understanding of the matter that he has to meet in his defence.—Punj. Civ. Chap. XIV, p. 166. The parties are entitled to something more than a mere assertion that the Magistrate has been informed that a breach of the peace is likely to occur, in order to enable them, if they are able to do so, to bring evidence to rebut the truth of such information, 6 A. 214; 11 C. 13. It should appear in the case of the Magistrate's preliminary order that he had received credible information that the persons ordered to enter into their recognizances were likely to commit a breach of the peace, or to do any act that might probably occasion a breach of the peace 6 W. R. 93; 2 R. 524.

(1) Each accused entitled to know the nature of information against him.—Every person to whom summons has been issued to show cause is entitled to proper information as to the materials upon which process has been granted against him and to a reasonable interval within which to prepare himself to meet such information by evidence or otherwise as he thinks fit. Moreover, his case should be considered by itself and on its own merits, and except in rare instances, it should not be mixed up with, and should never be prejudiced by that of other persons, 6 A. 214. See also 1 G. L. R. 130; 18 W. R. 2; 2 B. L. R. Appx. Cr. 7; Weir II, 55.

(ii) Charge must be communicated to accused—An order under s. 110 should not be made unless the charge which the accused has to meet is communicated to him. A person to whom notice is issued under s. 110 cannot be bound down for reasons stated in s. 110 (f) 8 Bar. L. T. 63 = 16 Cr. L. J. 553.

20. Order must contain particulars of security—In framing the order, the particulars of the security required should be stated, bearing in mind provisions of s. 118—Punj. Cr. Chap. XLIV, p. 166 20 W. R. 36. As the amount of the bond is to be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case and is not to be excessive, it should appear upon the record that the security demanded is not disproportionate to the ability of the accused person to furnish it, having regard to his status in life—Punj. Cr. Chap. XLIV, p. 168, 16 B. 372. The summons (Act X of 1872) should distinctly specify the amount and nature of the security and the time for which the same is to run, where these particulars were omitted, the High Court set aside the orders of the Magistrate, 20 W. R. 36. An order was made requiring the suspect to give a bond to be of good behaviour for Rs. 1,000 with four sureties, held, that particulars as to whether each and all are liable for Rs. 1,000 on occasion arising, or Rs. 1,000 between them should have been stated in the orders so as to prevent misunderstanding later, 6 P. R. 1914 = 142 P. L. R. 1914. See also 8 B. L. R. 173 = 16 Cr. L. J. 100.

21. Effect of omissions and irregularity in the order—See s. 537—(s) The omission to set out the substance of the information, in the summons though very important, and necessary to be carefully complied with, will not of itself be sufficient to set aside the order of Magistrate, unless the accused had been prejudiced thereby, 15 W. R. 43; 1881 A. W. N. 155; 6 A. 214; 8 C. 724 C. W. N. 331 = 13 Cr. L. J. 784, 20 W. R. 36. (ii) Omission to set out the amount of the recognizance and surety is an irregularity which does not vitiate further proceedings, 8 C. 724. See also 20 W. R. 36; 1881 A. W. N. 40.

Y—PROCEDURE IN INQUIRY UNDER S. 117.

22. Inquiry must be held and it must be a judicial inquiry—In the absence of any admission by the accused that he was a person likely to commit a breach of the peace within the meaning of s. 107, the Magistrate cannot on the strength of his own statement bind over a person without any inquiry as to the truth of the information upon which action has been taken under that section, 37 A. 30. The inquiry to be held by a Magistrate in cases under this section is a full judicial inquiry, evidence being taken in the presence of the party charged and opportunity given for the cross-examination of witnesses, 18 W. R. 2; 4 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXII; 13 W. R. 24. The power given by s. 107, for taking security is no doubt given for the suppression of crime, but when once the case has come into Court, s. 117 provides that the inquiry is to be conducted as a judicial one, and it then becomes a judicial proceeding pure and simple, 10 P. R. 1999. It is highly injudicious and calculated seriously to prejudice the accused in their defence, if the Magistrate should during the pendency of the proceedings against the accused and while some of his witnesses are still to be examined, to call upon the defence witnesses already examined to show cause why they should not be prosecuted under s. 193, 1 P. C., 16 Cr. L. J. 114 (C).

Where the Sessions Judge in an appeal under s. 110, treated the expressed readiness of the accused to furnish security as a plea of guilty and declined to decide the appeal on the merits held that the procedure was irregular and the Sessions Judge ought to have heard the appeal. In cases under ss. 107 and 110 it is the duty of the Magistrate to hold an inquiry and not to bind an accused merely because he agrees to furnish security, 24 A. L. J. 317.

23. Place of inquiry—In regard to the place of the trial Magistrates of districts should continue to arrange for cases being taken up by the Magistrates on tour during the cold weather season in the neighbourhood of the homes of persons accused provided that all preliminary measures required by the law are taken and that accused persons are summoned and brought up under warrant, in which may lawfully issue—Punj. Cr. Chap. XLIV, p. 163. District Court shall with the Magistrate of the district, that, so far as possible, in the vicinity of the ordinary when Magistrates are in camp and Ord., Chap. XLIV, para. 69 p. 392. The inquiry to be held in the 'so as to avoid witnesses being needlessly harassed and to enable the accused without difficulty to procure the attendance of persons willing to speak in his favour. If the order requiring security is necessary, the Magistrate should give the accused reasonable opportunity of procuring the attendance of his sureties, if any, 1 Bar. 8, R. 546.

25 Inquiry held outside the Magistrate's local jurisdiction void.—An inquiry under section 110 should not be conducted by a Magistrate at a place outside the local limits of his jurisdiction, where he has no power to conduct such proceedings, and if he does take such proceedings the order is void, 3 C. L. J. 195 = 3 Cr. L. J. 246

25 Reasonable time must be allowed to parties to show cause.—Where parties required to show cause why they should not furnish security to keep the peace on the 9th, were served with notices on the 5th and 7th idem, it was held, that the time allowed was too short for the purpose, and consequently the order for requiring security was set aside. Under ordinary circumstances a Magistrate is bound to assist both the parties in summoning their witnesses, 22 W. R. 70; 20 W. R. 18; 1 C. L. R. 130; 3 C. L. R. 72, 10 W. R. 1; 25 W. R. 30; 30 C. 508. Every person to whom summons has been issued to show cause is entitled to proper information as to the materials upon which process has been granted against him and to a reasonable interval within which to prepare himself to meet such information by evidence or otherwise as he thinks fit, 5 A 214. The accused must have sufficient time to bring his witnesses and have their evidence recorded. If the accused has not had this opportunity, the order against him must be set aside, 41 C. 806

28 When appearing to show cause, party must be ready with his evidence.—It is quite clear that the Code requires that all the steps necessary to bring witnesses before the Court should be taken in such time as to admit of the evidence being recorded on the day on which the party comes into Court, and in fact, that showing cause, is not the mere putting in a written, or making a verbal statement, but the supporting of that statement by such evidence as the party may be able to produce. He (the party) may bring with him his witnesses if he likes. If he has doubts as to his ability to produce them, he may apply for summons in such time as to enable him to bring his witnesses into Court on the day fixed, 23 W. R. 9. If he has been unable to bring the evidence with him on account of the shortness of the notice or other reasonable cause it is his duty when he appears to apply for summons to the witnesses he proposes to call, 9 Bom. L. R. 1385. If, however, the party against whom the order is made admits the truth of the information upon which it is based, it would seem to be unnecessary to proceed with the inquiry, 11 W. R. 50.

27. Persons proceeded against must be given a fair opportunity to enter into their defence.—Before a Magistrate can pass an order directing an accused to furnish bail and security for his good behaviour, it is necessary, that the accused should be given an opportunity of entering into his defence, and that he should be clearly informed of the accusation which he has to meet. 11 C. 13; 3 C. L. R. 72, 20 W. R. 18, 41 C. 806. An order for security cannot be passed ex parte 1 C. L. R. 48; 1 C. L. R. 130 illustrates how Magistrates in the Muzissil sometimes disregard the provisions of law which they are appointed to administer. In that case the proceedings of the Magistrate were once quashed by the High Court, and the petitioner was released but he was immediately re-arrested and placed on bail on the 18th May. On the 21st the Magistrate ordered, that the case should be heard on the following day, i.e., the 22nd and accordingly on that day accused was further examined. In his examination the accused said that he was at enmity with the Darogah on account of the demand he made upon him (Darogah) for some articles of food supplied that his witnesses will not come at his request, and that he had not applied for taluk (process), nor had he given a list of his witnesses. The Magistrate ordered on the same date (22nd May) that the petitioner do remain in hujut (lock up) till the 4th June. There was a note no record signed by the Magistrate to the effect that Koor Singh is remanded for such evidence as he can bring but there was nothing to show that the petitioner was made aware of the Magistrate's object or intention in making the order. On the day appointed a pleader appeared on the petitioner's behalf and tendered a list of 16 witnesses for the defence but the Magistrate observing that the case had stood long enough, refused to allow any further adjournment, and overruling certain objections advanced by the pleader, ordered the petitioner to give security. This order was based on the very same evidence that was taken in the previous case which was set aside by the High Court. The Magistrate instead of avoiding the errors pointed out by the High Court, repeated them with additional pleghty. The order of the Magistrate was, as a matter of course, set aside by the High Court. JACKSON, J. remarking. The proceedings unfortunately show not the slightest trace of a desire to afford the accused those advantages to which every person on his trial is entitled. Magistrates who act in the manner exemplified in this case ought to bear in mind that they not only violate their duty as judicial officers bound to do justice indifferently but even contravene their own object, as administrative officers by rendering the supposed offenders objects of sympathy, as well as by ensuring their escape at any rate for the moment.' See also 41 C. 808, where the order requiring security was set aside as the person proceeded against was not given time to bring his witnesses and to have their evidence recorded

28. Magistrate bound to procure the attendance of defence witnesses.—A Magistrate is bound by s. 257, to compel the attendance of any witness for the defence, unless he considers that the application is made for purposes of vexation or delay, and in case he refuses, the order must show in writing the ground of refusal as applied to each particular witness, 26 B. 418. But where the defence cited 1760 witnesses and the trying Magistrate put a time-limit and only 741 witnesses were examined during 237 sittings by which time, the time limit had expired, held, that the Magistrate was justified in putting a time-limit, 35 C. 243.

29. Persons proceeded against have a right to be defended by pleader.—Persons against whom proceedings under this Chapter are initiated are accused persons within the meaning of the Code and have a right to be defended by a pleader and notices as to the date of hearing should be given them, 25 A. 373; 23 C. 493; 18 B. 551; 33 P. R. 1905; 36 C. 163.

30. In cases for keeping the peace, the procedure for summons-cases must be adopted.—See s. 117 (2). In cases of persons being called upon to furnish security to keep the peace, the inquiry must be made in the same way as in a trial in a summons-case and the findings must be based on legal evidence. Evidence of general repute is not admissible in such cases, 25 A. 373. Procedure laid down by s. 242 must be followed.—A Magistrate proceeding under s. 117 must proceed as nearly as practicable in the same way as under s. 242 and state to the accused the particulars of the matter against them and ask them if they could show cause why they should not be required to execute bonds. It is misleading to ask the accused 'Are you willing to execute the bond required or do you wish for further inquiry' Such a question is not calculated to ascertain the truth of the information against the accused, 36 M. 139. A proceeding under s. 107 does not terminate in an acquittal or discharge in the ordinary sense of the words 36 M. 315. See also 37 A. 30. As to form of judgment, see 37 C. 91. See Note 165 below

31. In good behaviour cases, procedure for warrant-cases shall be adopted.—Ss 251—258 must be followed.—Under s. 117 (2), a case under s. 110 is to be conducted as if it were a warrant-case and the procedure to be observed is laid down in ss. 251—258. Therefore an accused person cannot be called to enter on his defence until the prosecution closes its case, 10 A. L. J. 383. (2) Accused entitled to recall prosecution witnesses for Cross examination.—Section 256, has been held not to apply to an inquiry under s. 117 35 C. 243; but this is erroneous, 25 M. L. J. Sha. No. 15; 4 Bur. L. T. 24 = 12 Cr. L. J. 89 and see also critical Note in 13 C. W. N. CLXXXVII; 12 C. W. N. CXCI. See Note 165 below, 52 C. 470 and 52 C. 632

32. Mode of recording evidence.—See ss 355 and 356, as to recording evidence in summons-cases and warrant-cases respectively. S. 362 does not apply to a Presidency Magistrate holding an inquiry under s. 110, 33 C. 1036, but this was distinguished in 13 C. W. N. 318 = 9 C. L. J. 439 = 10 Cr. L. J. 122, where it was held that a Presidency Magistrate was not absolved from the duty of recording evidence in a case where he makes a reference to the High Court under s. 123 (2) but the record of evidence in such a case need not be as great as in a similar case from a Mofussil Court. See note 165 below 52 C. 470 and 52 C. 632.

33. Magistrate ought not to examine any and every witness the Police or anyone else may from time to time produce.—In a proceeding under section 117 it is erroneous on the part of the Magistrate to admit rash evidence for the prosecution after the close of the defence case. No further evidence can be admitted except under s. 540 for which valid reasons must be recorded 10 A. L. J. 383 = 13 Cr. L. J. 772. The Magistrate trying a case under s. 110 is bound by law to hear those witnesses only whose list is sent up by the Police along with the case, and as soon as the witnesses in support of the case have been heard, he has to ascertain the names of persons likely to be acquainted with facts of the case and shall summon only such of them as he thinks necessary. He is not bound by law to and should not save in every exceptional cases, call the other witnesses that the Police or anyone else may, from time to time, choose to produce 12 A. L. J. 262 = 15 Cr. L. J. 363.

34. Evidence may be recorded in part by one Magistrate and in part by successor.—The provisions of s. 350 apply to an inquiry instituted under section 107 with a view to enforcing the giving of security to keep the peace, and in such a case where the Magistrate by whom a part of the evidence is taken is succeeded by another Magistrate while the inquiry is pending, the person called upon to show cause why he should not give security may insist upon the recalling and re-examining of the witnesses whose evidence has already been taken by another Magistrate, 4 C. L. R. 452; see Notes under s. 350

35. Magistrate cannot, when inquiry is pending, send the case under s. 202 for report.—A Magistrate before whom an inquiry is pending under this section is not competent to take action under s. 202 of the Code after the person who was the subject of the inquiry has been called upon to show cause why security to keep the peace should not be taken from him, 1896 A. W. N. 140.

36. Magistrate initiating proceedings cannot send up the case to another Magistrate.—Proceedings under section 110 should be disposed of by the Magistrate who initiated them. He has no jurisdiction to send up the case to another Magistrate. The Code requires that he should pass the final order himself, either discharging or taking security from the accused, 14 Bom. L. R. 713 = 13 Cr. L. J. 743. In this case the Magistrate sent up the case to the District Magistrate for action under Regulation XII of 1827 and the order of the District Magistrate was quashed.

37. Joinder of charges.—The main principle applicable to a criminal trial, regarding joinder of charges and joint trial of accused persons should be applied to inquiries under this Chapter, 8 C. W. N. 180; 14 C. 358; 6 P. R. 1896; 6 A. 214. But in 11 C. W. N. 789 = 6 Cr. L. J. 1, it was held, distinguishing 25 M. 61 (P.C.) that the law as to joinder of charges against a person accused of definite offences have no application to an inquiry under section 110.

VI.—JOINT INQUIRY.

[See s. 219 for misjoinder of persons and s. 117 (4) for trial of persons associated together.]

38. Generally every person has a right to have his case inquired into separately.—Upon general principles, every person is entitled, in the absence of exceptional authority conferred by the law to the contrary effect, when required by the judiciary either to forfeit his liberty or to have his liberty qualified, to insist that his case shall be tried separately from the cases of other persons similarly circumstanced. Where an order has been passed under this section requiring more persons than one to show cause why they should not severally ing the joint trial of accused persons should be applied to inquiries under this section. Where both the parties to a proceeding under this section were tried together (some among them having also been examined as witnesses in the case) and were bound down as the result of that trial, held, there was misjoinder of the nature condemned by the Privy Council in 25 M. 61, such as could not be cured by s. 537, 8 C. W. N. 180; see also 14 C. 358. Every case should be considered by itself and on its own merits, and except in rare instances, it should not be mixed up with and should never be prejudiced by, that of other persons, 6 A. 214; 9 A. 452; Ratanlal 555; Weir II, 55; 1331 A. W. N. 28, 10 C. L. R. 335. Separate proceedings should be instituted against each person charged under section 109 unless there be such a connection between the parties as might indicate the necessity for a contrary course. Weir II, 51; Ratanlal 556; 9 A. 452; 6 A. 214 and 6 P. R. 1896; 20 A. L. J. 831; 45 A. 109; 27 C. 781; 47 M. L. J. 689.

39. Persons associated together may be dealt with jointly.—(a) When two or more persons have been associated together in the matter under inquiry, they may be dealt with in the same or separate inquiries as the Magistrate shall think just. S 117, cl. (4). The words 'associated together' apply to persons acting in concert whether that concert is due to mutual agreement amongst themselves or the order of a common master, 9 C. W. N. CCXXX. The Magistrate has a discretion to deal with the matter jointly or separately, even where association or the several accused is clearly established, 27 C. 781; 6 C. 96; 1331 A. W. N. 28; 15 C. 253 = 13 Cr. L. J. 760; 9 C. W. N. 898 = 1 C. L. J. 616 = 2 Cr. L. J. 554. See also 6 M. H. C. R. 120. (b) S 117 (4) refers to such cases as where several persons are charged with being concerned in a wrongful act that may occasion a breach of the peace (s. 107) or in fact regarding the dissemination of seditious matter (s. 103) not to proceedings under s. 110 & L. B. R. 46 = 6 Cr. L. J. 234. (c) In 13 C. W. N. 241 = 10 Cr. L. J. 460, a father and three sons were charged under cls. (a) and (f) of s. 110 and the evidence against them was all same and it was proved that the four were associated together. held that the case was one in which the evidence could be rightly dealt with together and any minute inquiry into the complicity of each accused was unnecessary. (d) Association as servants of common master.—When several persons serving under a common master, tried to extort kabulyats at enhanced rates from his tenants, held (HENDERSON, J., dissenting) that though each of the acts was not done by all of them together, yet s. 117 (4) would justify a joint inquiry under section 107, in spite of the fact that the acts imputed to them were committed by them not as individual members of society, but as servants of another person, 9 C. W. N. 893 = 1 C. L. J. 616 = 2 Cr. L. J. 534. See also 8 C. W. N. 180; 27 C. 781.

40. What is not association.—(a) Parties in conflict with each other—A joint trial of parties who have been in conflict with each other is illegal, 25 M. 61 (P.C.), applied 31 M. 278; 5 N. L. R. 63; 27 C. 781. See also 11 C. W. N. 472 = 5 C. L. J. 231 = 5 Cr. L. J. 197; 8 S. L. R. 207 = 18 Cr. L. J. 235. (b) Belonging to one tribe and village—In the absence of any evidence to prove that the accused constituted a gang, the mere fact that they belonged to one tribe and village with a bad name is not sufficient evidence of association, and therefore there cannot be a joint inquiry against all the accused, 1 P. R. 1895. (c) Where four men were charged with being thieves by habit, it was held to be an error to try them all together. The question whether a person is by habit a thief or not is personal to himself and forms a matter separate by itself, 4 L. B. R. 46 = 6 Cr. L. J. 234. (d) Opposing factions not to be dealt with in one proceeding—Where, according to the nature of the information received by the Magistrate, there were two opposing parties inclined to commit a breach of the peace, held applying by analogy the principles relating to the trial of members of opposing factions engaged in a riot that the Magistrate acted irregularly in taking steps against both parties jointly, and in holding the inquiry in a single proceeding. Such a procedure is not ipso facto null and void, but only where the accused have been prejudiced by it, 9 A. 452; 11 C. W. N. 472 = 5 C. L. J. 231 = 5 Cr. L. J. 197. See 8 C. W. N. 180 = 1 Cr. L. J. 53, 9 C. W. N. 898; 14 C. 353; 11 Bom. L. R. 740; 8 S. L. R. 207 = 16 Cr. L. J. 235. Two persons cannot be tried together unless their association in the same offences is made out, 21 P. R. 1916. In 14 A. L. J. 263 = 17 Cr. L. J. 165 = 33 In. Ca. 645 it was held that it was illegal to try two contending parties together as it was impossible to say that the two contending parties were associated together.

41. Joint trial not necessarily illegal.—A joint inquiry in the case of persons belonging to opposing factions is not ipso facto illegal, and even in cases where one and the same proceeding taken by the Magistrate under ss. 107, 112, 117 and 118 improperly deals with more persons than one the matter must be considered upon the individual merits of the particular case. Such an inquiry would at most amount to an irregularity which, according to the particular circumstances, might or might not be covered by the provisions of s. 537, 9 A. 452. Where there is no evidence of habitual association, beyond the fact of the two accused being master and servant, a joint trial is illegal, but the order need not be set aside, unless the accused was actually prejudiced, 9 O. C. 69 = 3 Cr. L. J. 280; 5 C. W. N. 249; 29 C. 779; 6 A. 214, Ratanlal 533; Weir II, 55; 10 C. L. R. 335. See, however, 6 Bom. L. R. 36, where 27 C. 781 is distinguished.

42. Prosecution must establish what each individual has done.—In proceedings instituted against more persons than one, it is essential for the prosecution to establish what each individual implicated has done to furnish a basis for the apprehension that he will commit a breach of the peace. In holding such an inquiry it is improper to treat what is evidence against one of such persons as evidence against all, without discriminating between the cases of the various persons implicated 9 A. 452, 6 A. 214. An order requiring certain persons to furnish security to keep the peace can only be justified upon the finding that each of these persons is likely to commit a breach of the peace, etc. 37 A. 33. The facts from which, for the purposes of section 107, it may be reasonably inferred that the person sought to be bound down, was likely to disturb the public peace, must be facts of a definite nature and must show that such persons are individually, not collectively, connected with them, 8 C. W. N. 180. Thus where a Magistrate bound down 26 persons to keep the peace, after recording evidence as to 11 of them only the order was set aside as to the persons not affected by the evidence, 10 C. L. R. 335. Where the evidence against certain persons was that they were Mewatis of a particular place and that Mewatis of that place were looked upon with terror by the other inhabitants of the neighbourhood and that they were dangerous characters but there was no evidence against each member of the gang held that before any of them could be called upon to give security, there should be evidence forthcoming tending to establish one or more of the points set out in section 110 against each of the accused 1905 A. W. N. 41 = 2 A. L. J. 174; 37 A. 33. See also 14 A. L. J. 430 and 856.

43. Magistrate must come to a separate finding against each.—Where a Magistrate bound down a party consisting of 17 persons without coming to a separate finding as regards each of them individually, the order was set aside, 35 C. 929; 1 P. R. 1895; 37 A. 33. Each accused is entitled to an entirely independent examination of his own case, 25 P. W. R. 1909 = 10 Cr. L. J. 591. The judgment must show that the Judge has considered the case of each individual prisoner 37 C. 91. See also 9 M. L. T. 271 = 12 Cr. L. J. 104. While it may not be contrary to law to have a joint trial in all cases, it is incumbent, on the Magistrate to exercise great care and caution in dealing with the evidence and to insist that definite evidence be given against each person charged 15 O. C. 263 = 13 Cr. L. J. 760.

VII—EVIDENCE.

44 There must be evidence before final order can issue.—No final action should be taken and no order having the effect of a conviction as against the accused should be passed without final evidence being recorded, 30 M. 330; 35 C. 674; 37 A. 30. Very clear and full evidence, with as much detail as is possible should be required before making an order under section 110, 1889 A. W. N. 114. An order to execute a bond for good behaviour cannot be made under section 110 in the absence of any evidence, as that section and s 117 prescribe inquiry and proof that it is necessary before the person arranged is ordered to execute a bond. Ratanlal 535. Legal evidence must be recorded, 8 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 162. See also 20 W. R. 18; 21 W. R. 6; 10 P. R. 1899. In a proceeding under section 107 it is incumbent on the Magistrate to adjudicate judicially on evidence given before him as to the necessity for taking security to keep the peace, 2 N.-W.P. H. C. R. 431.

(a) Admission does not dispense with proof—Where the Magistrate treated the statement by the accused s vakil, as an admission of an intention on the part of his clients to commit a breach of the peace and had bound them over the order was set aside, 30 M. 330; 6 B. H. C. R. Cr. 1 and 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 105. Without recording evidence it is illegal to bind down a person even though he may agree, 35 C. 674. Accused called upon to show cause under s 110, had he could furnish no securities nor show cause why he should not be bound over, as I am of bad character and have been to jail, and the Magistrate made an order under s 118, held, the order of the Magistrate was bad as the mere admission of the accused that he is of bad character and that he had been to jail does not show that he is an habitual thief. The Magistrate is bound to inquire into the truth of the information upon which action has been taken, 3 Bom. L. R. 269. The entry of "accused examined no defence" is not a sufficient compliance with the provisions of this section, 4 Bur. L. T. 24 = 12 Cr. L. J. 89. See, however 11 W. R. 50.

(b) Statement by accused s vakil does not dispense with proof—See 30 M. 330.

(c) Failure to show cause does not dispense with proof—Showing cause is not the mere putting in a written statement or making a verbal statement, but the supporting of that statement by such evidence as the party may be able to produce, 23 W. R. 9 at p. 11. When an order to show cause is made under section 112 and the accused does not show cause a Magistrate cannot make an order under s 116 in the absence of evidence, as ss 112 and 117 prescribe inquiry and proof that is necessary before the person arranged could be directed to execute bond, Ratanlal 585. The order under section 112 is not in the nature of a rule nisi, 9 A. 452; Ratanlal 58, 9 A. 42.

45. That a person in dangerous and desperate character must be based on evidence.—Evidence of general repute under s 117 (3) is not admissible to prove that a person is a desperate and dangerous character under cl (f) of this section, 34 M. 255, 13 Cr. L. J. 9 (All.), 3 C. W. N. 249. Definite evidence must be adduced to prove some specific act tending to show that the accused is a desperate and dangerous character to the knowledge of individuals, 29 C. 779. Where accused were charged with having made themselves very objectionable in the neighbourhood by annoying villagers in various ways by knocking at their doors at night or throwing brick bats on the roof and also with annoying respectable women, held, that acts of this description, even if proved, do not come within the terms of this section, as they do not constitute conduct so as to render them liable to give security for good behaviour by reason of their being at large without security hazardous to the community, 5 C. W. N. 249. It is not sufficient to ground a finding under cl (f) on vague and general evidence that someone was robbed or beaten and people say that the accused was responsible, 9 O. C. 69. See also 4 C. W. N. 97, 11 C. W. N. 789 = 6 Cr. L. J. 1, 23 A. 273, 13 C. W. N. 244 = 10 Cr. L. J. 460; 34 M. 255 and Note 52 below.

46. Nature of evidence—Enquiries under this chapter are governed by the ordinary rules of evidence from which the y a Magistrate

on the circum stances of each case. But when the nature of the Magistrate's information requires it, overt act, must be proved before an order can be passed under s 118, and such an order cannot be passed against any person simply on the ground that another is likely to commit a breach of the peace, 9 A. 452; 20 W. R. 57; 24 W. R. 30; 22 W. R. 79; 10 B. L. R. 441 = 19 W. R. 47. A previous conviction before it can be used must be strictly proved, 20 C. W. N. 725.

(a) Evidence in keeping the peace cases.—See Notes 4—9, supra.

(b) Statement of persons not called as witnesses and observations on such evidence—Conversations out of Court with persons, however respectable, are not legal or proper material upon which a Magistrate should adopt proceedings under s 110. The information to be required by a Magistrate, before issuing an order under s 112, may be, to some extent, of a hearsay and general description, but when the party to whom the order is directed appears in Court in obedience thereto, the inquiry must be conducted on the lines laid down in s 117. It is not because a man has a bad character that he is, therefore, necessarily liable to be called upon for sureties of the peace or for good behaviour. There must be satisfactory evidence in the case that he has done something, or taken some step that indicates in intention to break the peace. Though the task of preserving order in a certain district may be extremely difficult and an anxious one, the law does not empower any Court to put a man in prison simply because he has an evil reputation. If respectable persons, who can prove facts which would constitute the credible information legally necessary to justify issue of process and requirement of security, have not the courage to come forward and assist the Magistrate in the prevention of the breaches of the peace or of crimes by giving evidence in Court, it is unfortunate, to say the least of it, but the Magistrate is not, therefore, entitled to act upon inadequate proof obtained abundi which he himself described as not so strong as it ought to be. If, in the interest of public order or security to property, the attendance in Court of such persons was necessary, the Magistrate had the power, if he chose to exercise it, of compelling their appearance."—Per STRAIGHT, J, 6 A. 132 at p. 136.

(c) Police Report—A Magistrate should take evidence as to the general character of a person charged with bad livelihood and not convict him on the report of a Police-officer, which is not evidence, 5 W. R. 2. The report of an Inspector of Police and the evidence given by him are not sufficient to justify an order binding a person to keep the peace, 10 W. R. 55. See also 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 105. But when the Police have adduced satisfactory evidence that a person has no ostensible means of subsistence, a Magistrate should not discharge the accused merely on the ground that the statement by the accused to the Police cannot be proved, 3 N. L. R. 51 = 5 Cr. L. J. 434.

(d) Report of a Subordinate Magistrate is not sufficient—See 6 Bom. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 1; 5 Bom. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 105.

(e) Approver's evidence is not enough—In proceedings under section 110 the uncorroborated evidence of a person who had been an approver in a previous case is useless and should not be admitted 5 L. B. R. 72 = 10 Cr. L. J. 355.

(f) Extrajudicial knowledge of Magistrate is no evidence—See 22 W. R. 36 and 79; 24 W. R. 30; 6 A. 132; 37 A. 30. A Magistrate should not base his judgment upon his own knowledge of certain facts which he obtains from sources outside the record, 37 A. 33 and 14 A. L. J. 769.

(g) Record of previous convictions is no proof—The mere record of previous convictions, on account of which the person has undergone punishment, does not satisfy the requirements of section 117, and it is wrong to use these provisions so as to add to the punishment for past offences. The object of taking security from a person is solely to secure his good behaviour in future, 10 B. 174, 2 A. 635, 6 W. R. 6. See also 13 C. W. N. 318 = 9 C. L. J. 439 = 10 Cr. L. J. 123. See however, 2 B. L. R. Appx 28. Where the accused were charged with unlawful assembly and trespass and the Magistrate acquitted the accused, but eventually ordered the parties to execute bonds and furnish security, refusing to take further evidence and relying on the evidence which had been given before him in the original case in the presence of the accused, held that the proceedings were irregular, and that the order was bad 22 W. R. 9. Where a Magistrate bound down a person to keep the peace on the strength of the evidence taken before him in another case in which he (the accused), was acquitted, it was held that the Magistrate ought not to have admitted this evidence 24 W. R. 4.

47. Can accused examine himself as a witness?—Having regard to the conflicting nature of the authorities, it is highly doubtful whether a person against whom proceedings have been taken under this section is an accused and whether he is a competent witness on his own behalf. As under s 342 no oath should be administered to an accused.

48. Evidence must be confined to the substance of the information set out in the preliminary order.—A Magistrate should base his order upon the substance of the information given in the summons and where he found that the grounds of complaint referred therein were unfounded it was held that he could not proceed to adjudicate that an entirely different ground existed upon which it was likely that a party charged would commit a breach of the peace, 21 W. R. 6. Under such circumstances, he is bound to discharge the accused under s 119, the case not having been proved. In 17 C. W. N. 331 = 13 Cr. L. J. 784, it was held that ss. 117 and 118 were not strictly limited by the precise terms of the order drawn up under s 112, if, however, the person eventually bound down could show that he was misled or prejudiced by the terms of the order drawn up under s 112, there would be a clear case for granting him relief. In this case it was stated in the preliminary order that as it appeared to the Magistrate that K was 'by general repute' a thief and a burglar 'he was called upon as such to furnish security" It was alleged on behalf of the defence that he ought to have been called upon to show cause as being 'by habit' a thief and that as he was not so addressed he could not be bound down. But the evidence was directed to show K was a habitual thief and the cross-examination was directed to the evidence to that effect and it was held that the accused had not been prejudiced. See 14 Cr. L. J. 65 (M.) The further evidence that the Magistrate is authorized to take under cl (1) of s 117 is evidence eiusdem generis with the evidence described in the words which immediately precede it, that is, bearing upon the truth of the information upon which action has been taken 36 A. 239.

49. Onus of proof.—An order passed by a Magistrate requiring any person to "show cause" why he should not be ordered to furnish security for keeping the peace is not in the nature of a rule nisi, implying that the burden of proving innocence is upon such person. The onus of proof lies upon the prosecution to establish circumstances justifying the action of the Magistrate in calling upon persons to furnish security, 9 A. 432; 7 C. P. Cr. 9; 4 B. L. R. 46 (F. B.); 2 N.-W. P. H. C. R. 431. The onus lies on the party on whose complaint the summons was issued, 12 W. R. 60; 2 N.-W. P. H. C. R. 431.

(a) Where evidence on both sides is interested and weak, prosecution must fail—The burden of proving an accused's bad character lies on the prosecution, and therefore, when the evidence on both sides was of an indifferent and interested character the prosecution must fail. Cases should be decided on evidence taken in Court and not on personal knowledge of the Magistrate, 27 C. 781; 9 A. 432. Evidence should, as a rule, be tested by its quality rather than by its quantity, and where the quality on both sides is indifferent, the prosecution must fail. Where the quality is good on both sides, it must also fail if the evidence for the defence altogether outweighs that for the prosecution, 4 P. R. 1893; Appeal Court must consider all the evidence when evidence has been let in by the defence, and it is also the duty of the Appellate Court to go through the evidence of the defence and consider it 17 C. W. N. XX.

(b) When the evidence is good and equally balanced, prosecution must fail—When the evidence is equally balanced no order for security should be made 11 A. L. J. 461 = 14 Cr. L. J. 407, 10 A. L. J. 393 = 13 Cr. L. J. 772.

50. Magistrate must carefully test the evidence for the prosecution.—In dealing with cases under this Chapter, Magistrates ought, especially where no conviction is proved, to take great care to test the evidence for the prosecution. It is not sufficient simply to record the statement of three or four persons that the individual charged has the reputation of being an habitual offender, but the Magistrate should ascertain what the witnesses' means of knowing anything about the accused are whether the accused is known to have associated with criminals, whether he has frequently been known to have been near the place where thefts, etc., have been committed, whether he has any and what means of livelihood, whether there has been any quarrel in which the accused was concerned which would supply a motive for bringing a false charge, and whether any instances of the commission of offences by the accused even if no conviction has been had, are known to the witnesses.—PER AGNEW, J., in Cr Ref 5 of 1891 Spl Court Lower Burma. See also Ratanlal 639.

51. How evidence should be recorded See Note 32 above

VIII.—EVIDENCE OF GENERAL REPUTE.

52. Evidence of general repute may be adduced only to prove that a person is an habitual offender.—See s 117 (3). A provision of law which is an exception to the general rules of evidence must be only applied to the cases to which it is confined by the Legislature, 34 M. 255. Evidence of general repute can be allowed only in cases when security for good behaviour is demanded from habitual offenders, 23 A. 273, 29 C. 779; 34 M. 255.

(i) General repute inadmissible in cases when person is called upon to keep the peace—In a case where a person is to be called upon to furnish security to keep the peace, evidence of general repute cannot be made use of to show that such person is likely to commit a breach of the peace. Such evidence can be adduced only when a person is called upon to furnish security under s 110, 25 A. 273; see 21 P. R. 1893.

(ii) General repute inadmissible to prove that a person is a desperate and dangerous character under s 110, cl (f).—Evidence of general repute cannot be allowed to prove a charge under s 110 cl (f) of being a desperate and dangerous character, 34 M. 253; 5 C. W. N. 249; 13 Cr. L. J. 9 (All). See Note 45.

53. General repute is the reputation which a person bears in the place in which he lives.—The following observations of PETHERAM, C.J. and BYFIELD, J. deserve careful perusal. Evidence of general reputation is admissible in a case of this kind under the concluding part of s 117. Now the evidence of associating with badmashes on this record fills pretty much in the same category as evidence of a general repute because the evidence of consorting with badmashes except in one or two instances which I shall mention later on, is really evidence which is supposed here to be evidence of repute. Now as to that after considering the evidence very carefully and putting the greatest value upon it we think that none of it is practically evidence of general repute at all. What it is is that it is evidence that there were rumours in this City of Patna that this particular man had committed acts of extortion on various occasions that he had badmashes in his employ to assist him in that way and generally that he was a man of bad character. It is hardly necessary to say that evidence of rumour is mere hearsay evidence and hearsay evidence of a particular fact. Evidence of repute is a totally different thing. A man's general reputation is the reputation which he bears in the place in which he lives amongst all the townsmen and if it is proved that a man who lives in a particular place is looked upon by his fellow townsmen whether they happen to know him or not as a man of good repute that is strong evidence that he is a man of that character. On the other hand if the state of things is that the body of his fellow townsmen who know him look upon him as a dangerous man and a man of bad habits that is strong evidence that he is a man of bad character, but to say that because there are rumours in a particular place among a certain class of people that a man has done particular acts or has characteristics of a certain kind those rumours are in themselves evidence under this section is to say what the law does not justify us saying and consequently we think that the evidence of general repute in this case is evidence of little or no value. And in addition to the evidence which is supposed to be evidence of repute there are whole pages of evidence which is hearsay evidence on the face of it and there is line after line of evidence in which witnesses deliberately state and are allowed deliberately to state, things which they heard from other people which can be no evidence of repute and no evidence of the circumstances. 23 C. 621 at p 628; 1903 A. W. N. 181, 10 O. G. 132. The general repute of a person includes what is generally said of him in the neighbourhood in which he lives 10 O. G. 168 = 6 Cr. L. J. 236. Evidence of general repute may be either evidence as to the general opinion of the neighbourhood or community in which the person concerned lives or to which he belongs or the personal opinion of the witnesses who are examined. The test of the admissibility of evidence of the former kind is whether it shows the general reputation of the man not necessarily the opinion of the entire community to which he belongs but at least the opinion of a considerable number of persons. It must not be merely the repetition of what one or two persons have said to the witness. A witness to general repute when he gives his own opinion may be asked to give the grounds of his opinion and to give the names of the persons whom he has heard speak against the character of the persons concerned 12 A. L. J. 937 = 15 Cr. L. J. 705. Where it is sought to prove the reputation of a person the evidence which is required is the evidence of respectable persons who are acquainted with the person on his trial who live in the same neighbourhood and are aware of his reputation and should ordinarily not be officials 8 Bar. L. T. 83 = 16 Cr. L. J. 533. Statements to the effect that rumours unfavourably to the character of the accused have begun to get about in consequence of their intimacy with criminal classes though admissible to prove general repute are of little value 12 Cr. L. J. 542 (Q). When the person against whom a proceeding is instituted is a well known resident of a city his fellow-citizens though not living in the neighbourhood are competent witnesses to prove his general repute 11 C. W. N. 789 = 6 Cr. L. J. 1. Where a large body of apparently respectable witnesses of the immediate neighbourhood testify to the character of the accused as against the evidence of Police-officers an order under this section is not justifiable 37 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 603, 433 P. W. R. 1914 = 16 Cr. L. J. 108. Where in consequence of a series of dacoities having taken place in certain villages a proceeding under s 110 is instituted against a person for being a robber by habit the evidence of general reputation, coming from the people of the villages where dacoities had taken place is certainly to be treated as evidence of general repute is required by s 117 although that person did not live amidst those people 35 C. 263. Where evidence of the prosecution is of a very vague character and when it is a question of establishing a case of this sort merely upon the evidence of bad repute the Court may reasonably be required to take into consideration the value and weight of evidence as to repute tendered on behalf of the prosecution as compared with the evidence for the defence. In any inquiry into general repute evidence of accused's own caste-fellows and neighbours is the best sort of evidence available, 12 Cr. L. J. 542 (Q). See also 30 P. L. R. 1916; 2 R. 686; 2 R. 641.

54. The evidence of bad repute must be overwhelming.—When security is demanded from a person on the evidence of general repute only that repute must be universal and there should be no doubt about it 43 P. W. R. 1914 = 16 Cr. L. J. 106; 2 P. R. 1897 and 4 P. R. 1898. For a man of a bad general reputation, it is not necessary that there should be no one to give him a good character, but it is necessary if at the evidence should be so strong as to leave no doubt what a man's general reputation is. When as good witnesses come forward to state that a man's reputation is good as those who state the contrary, it can hardly be held safely that that man's general reputation is bad, unless there is something to corroborate the evidence of witnesses against him, 2 P. R. 1898; see also 12 P. R. 1892. Where there is nothing but evidence of general repute to go upon, that evidence must be so general and overwhelming as to leave no practical doubt that the accused has been in the habit of committing thefts and robberies or other offences of the kinds specified, and before making an order for security, the Magistrate must be satisfied that, as a matter of fact, the suspected person has committed several offences in the past and is ready to commit them again when opportunity offers. Ratanlal 639.

55 General reputation must be proved by evidence in the ordinary way—not necessary to adduce evidence of specific acts.—The evidence that is required to justify an order under s 110 and s 120 is not necessarily the evidence that the accused has committed definite criminal offences for each of which he would be individually brought to book, but evidence sufficient to prove in a judicial inquiry that he comes within the category of one of the sub-secs (a) to (f) of s 110 and a Magistrate trying a case of this kind must find it as a fact to be proved in the ordinary way by evidence of general repute or otherwise, that the accused does come within this classification, 10 P. R. 1899. Where persons were proceeded against under that section on the ground that they were thieves and dacoits by habit and the only evidence against them was the evidence of certain respectable persons none of whom knew personally the individuals charged and who only stated that they heard that the accused were thieves and dangerous characters, but could not mention the names of the persons from whom they received the information, held, such evidence could not be relied upon as it would work serious prejudice to the accused 29 C. 779; Ratanlal 45; 8 P. W. R. 1817 (Cr.). Where actual convictions are not relied on, great care should be taken to test evidence on behalf of the prosecution with a view to ascertain what the witnesses' means of knowing the facts stated by them may be, viz., the accused's movements, his constant companions, his way of earning livelihood, his antecedents, etc., 2 Bom. L. R. 87, 33 C. 243; and the mere statement of the accused 'I am of bad character and have been to jail' is not by itself sufficient, 3 Bom. L. R. 289. The finding that the person proceeded against was a man of bad character does not bring the case within the section 8 M. L. T. 245 = 11 Cr. L. J. 638. But the finding that an accused person, is by general repute, a habitual offender committing mischief and that he protects thieves is sufficient to warrant action under the section. It is not necessary for the purposes of the section that specific instances should be given, 9 Bom. L. R. 165 = 5 Cr. L. J. 178.

(i) Witness as to general repute must speak from personal knowledge—A vague and general statement that a man is an habitual offender is not sufficient evidence on which an accused person might be bound over under the section, and the evidence of the repute of an accused person must be that of persons who are speaking to matters within their personal knowledge, 1 A. L. J. 616. For a finding that a person is by habit a thief evidence should be of such a nature as to show reasonable and definite grounds for such a conclusion, 8 C. W. N. 543. Where witnesses are examined as to general character, their testimony is not of much value as to the habits of the suspected person, unless they can, in support of their opinion, adduce instances of misconduct imputed. Having regard to the last but one clause of s 117, the fact that a person is an habitual offender may be proved by evidence of general repute, it would not be right to lay down as a hard and fast rule that evidence must be given to show that the person against whom proceedings are instituted under Chapter VII has actually been convicted of ————— this Chapter, Magistrates ought especially for the prosecution and to assure themselves of the class named. They should not rest satisfied merely with the bare statement that the accused is reported to be an habitual offender, 1 Bur. & R. 542, see 35 C. 232.

(ii) Mere suspicion is not evidence of general repute—Evidence as to cases in which the person proceeded against was suspected is not evidence of general repute, 11 A. L. J. 461 = 14 Cr. L. J. 407, following Cr. L. P. No. 344 of 1911. The only evidence against the accused was to the effect that he bore a bad character and that he was suspected on many occasions by the Police. held that in the absence of any evidence to show that any complaint of any definite offence was preferred against him at any time, either to the Police or to the Magistrate the order could not be sustained. 1905 A. W. N. 34, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 355 = 2 Cr. L. J. 359. Proceedings under section 110 ought not to be instituted on an indefinite charge after prosecutions on definite charges under the Penal Code have failed. Persons ought not to be bound down under that section upon the mere statements of witnesses that they suspect or are under the impression that the persons proceeded against are thieves or dacoits when no fact is mentioned to indicate that there was sufficient reason for their suspicion or impression, 11 C. W. N. 413 = 5 Cr. L. J. 191; 11 C. W. N. 129 = 4 Cr. L. J. 466. The provisions of this Chapter should not be abused, and there must be reliable evidence against a man before he can be required to give security. Where the person called on, had been once convicted of theft, and his house was searched on three occasions but no stolen property was found and there was no suggestion that he protected or harboured thieves, but was said to have associated with two or three persons of bad character it was held that no security should have been demanded in the case, 23 P. L. R. 1907; 12 Cr. L. J. 542 (Oudh), 20 P. W. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 550. Evidence of cases in which the applicant was suspected is not evidence of general repute 11 A. L. J. 461. Evidence consisting of (i) Police lists of cases in which the accused is said to have come under suspicion, (ii) statements of witnesses each of whom says that he suspected the accused of complicity in this or that isolated offence, (iii) a list of cases in which the accused's house has been searched on suspicion that he had committed some offence, does not constitute evidence of general repute 12 A. L. J. 937 = 15 Cr. L. J. 705.

(iii) Mere rumour not evidence of general repute—Evidence that there are rumours, in a particular place that a man has committed acts of extortion on various occasions, that he has badmashes in his employ to assist him, and generally that he is a man of bad character, is not evidence of general repute under s. 117 23 C. 621. A rumour that a man is a bad character is not evidence of general repute 1 A. L. J. 811 = 1 Cr. L. J. 984 and 616; 10 A. L. J. 383 = 13 Cr. L. J. 772. Vague and general evidence that someone was robbed or beaten and people say that accused was responsible for it is insufficient 9 O. C. 69 = 3 Cr. L. J. 290.

(iv) Hearsay evidence as to general repute admissible—Hearsay evidence amounts to evidence of general repute and is admissible for purposes of section 110 as the object of the legislature is simply to provide preventive measures. In such cases, evidence of repute, though hearsay, is admissible, 6 Bom. L. R. 34; 3 M. 238; 9 Bom. L. R. 164 = 5 Cr. L. J. 178 and 5 L. B. R. 72.

55. Association with bad characters.—Evidence of association with bad characters is evidence of reputation, but such reputation can only be based upon association with proved bad characters and not with reputed bad characters, 13 C. W. N. 318 = 10 Cr. L. J. 122. See also 23 P. L. R. 1907, 12 Cr. L. J. 542 (O).

57. How far past acts are evidence of general repute.—On an inquiry whether the defendant is a habitual offender, evidence of acts of misconduct committed by him years ago is admissible as indicating the formation of the habit, 11 C. W. N. 789 = 6 Cr. L. J. 1, 33 C. 156, 31 C. 419. But such evidence unless supplemented by evidence of misconduct committed by him defendant within a year or so before the institution of the proceedings under this Chapter cannot justify the making of the order under s. 118 11 C. W. N. 789 = 6 Cr. L. J. 1. The commission of offences in the past is involved in the terms habitual robber etc., Ratanlal 639, 642. A conviction under the section is illegal if it is based on nearly the same evidence on which the accused were discharged by the same Magistrate a year before, if no fresh acts implicating the subject have since happened, 33 P. W. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 603. It is incumbent on the prosecution to prove that since the previous orders of discharge were passed the suspects have acquired the reputation of the subject of the proceedings. Previous convictions are not substantive evidence in a case under the section, though they may have an effect in deciding for what length of time the accused is to be bound down, 13 C. W. N. 318 = 10 Cr. L. J. 122 distinguishing 33 C. 1036. Where a person has just undergone imprisonment for failing to give security, the evidence must be confined to facts and circumstances alleged against him after release from his last security, 19 C. W. N. 223 = 16 Cr. L. J. 312. See also 10 B. 174, 2 A. 835. Where, however, a Churm in of the Managing Committee of a Municipality was proceeded against under s. 110 as being a habitual receiver of stolen property, held, that if evidence of general reputation is put forward in a case of this kind it must so far as general reputation goes, almost inevitably be evidence of a reputation which has been acquired since the last appointment as at the time he was appointed his general reputation hardly could be that of a receiver of stolen property, 16 Bom. L. R. 943 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 261 = 16 Cr. L. J. 91.

58. How far may Police-officers and their diaries be used to prove general repute?—A Police-officer is certainly a competent witness to speak to the reputation of persons who dwell within his circle. No doubt in the course of inquiries his suspicion may have been directed against certain persons and he may by reason thereof have received an impression as to their character and their reputations. He is no doubt entitled when he has sworn to the reputation of a man, to give the basis of his knowledge and to point out how he has come to consider the accused a man of bad character. But it is quite a different thing for the Magistrate to take into evidence a list of cases in which other Police-officers, who have not been called as witnesses, have remarked in their diaries that suspicion had fixed itself on a certain person. If the local Police feel at all disposed to do harm to any resident of their circle it is a very simple matter for them to enter in their diaries from time to time that suspicion has fallen on certain persons and then finally to have their names registered in the Police register of bad characters and ultimately to take steps against them. Though this is not always or frequently done it is so easily done that this class of evidence is of very little value and unless the actual Police-officer is called who made the inquiry in his diary a list of such cases is totally inadmissible in evidence. It is also very easy for a Police-officer to say that suspicion fell on the accused in certain cases 13 Cr L J 9 (A). Generally Police-officers are called as witnesses only to prove the currency in their circle of a rumour to the effect that a certain person is an associate of bad characters or otherwise a person who needs watching under the section and therefore when their evidence is based upon hearsay rumour and above all on diaries they are of infinitesimal value more particularly when witnesses come forward on either side who are not Police-officers 13 A. L. J 412 = 16 Cr L J 231. Police diaries are dangerous evidence against an accused person. See also 8 Bur L T 53 = 16 Cr L J 553.

IX—FINAL ORDER

59 Final order must correspond with preliminary order—See s 118 proviso (1). Under the first clause of the proviso to that section it is illegal to require a bond for good behaviour when the notice was to show cause with respect to a breach of the peace 25 C. 798. Nor can a Magistrate make an order under that section or a longer period than that mentioned in the notice issued under s 112 26 M 471, 4 L B R 135 = 7 Cr. L J 412, nor for a larger amount 11 P W R 1907 = 5 Cr L J 219, 18 W R 61. Nor can he impose fresh conditions 1906 A W N 278 = 4 Cr L J 403, 11 O C 267. But the accused can be discharged upon his own recognizance although the preliminary order under s 112 required a bond with sureties. Where heavier security is thought necessary fresh summons must be issued 9 B L R Appx. 44. When a Magistrate calls upon persons to show cause why they should not be bound down in their own recognizances to keep the peace he cannot go beyond the requisition and upon the adjudication of the matter order them to furnish other securities besides 25 W R 50, 21 W R 6. See Note 93.

60 In cases under s 110 Magistrate must find on which of the several clauses the order is based—The words of the section should be strictly adhered to in orders made under that section 5 L B R 72. A Magistrate making an order under s 110 or a Sessions Judge conforming the same under s 123 is bound to find a special ground on which the order may be based. When therefore a finding was in general terms that it is for the interest of the community at large that the accused should be bound over to be of good behaviour, held that such finding was not sufficient 27 C 656. On the conclusion of the inquiry if the Magistrate considers that the accused is a person falling within any of the descriptions stated in s 110 he should record a distinct finding of the specific descriptions which he considers proved. If the finding be insufficient as occasionally occurs namely, that the accused is a bad character or a notorious thief (which finding might possibly have been sufficient under the old Code) the final order based upon it will be open to reversal. The same will be the case if the finding be that is a habitual thief (or as the case may be) but the finding is not supported by evidence that the misconduct is habitual. Ordinary proof of habitual misconduct will justify the conclusion that security is necessary but the Magistrate has a discretion in the matter. In exercising this it should be remembered that the object of the proceedings is to deter and not to punish. A convict just released from jail should not as a rule be put upon security until there has been a fair opportunity of judging whether the punishment he has already undergone is not in itself a sufficient deterrent against relapse into evil courses—Pony Cr p 167.

61 Magistrate must state his reasons for the order—See s 118. It is not sufficient that the Magistrate is morally satisfied but the Magistrate should give reasons for his finding based on legal proof the accused should be bound over, 10 B 174.

62 Persons other than the party proceeded against cannot be bound over by the final order—
(a) Witness—A witness for the defence in case of rioting having admitted being present at or near the scene of the riot but denied that the accused took any part in it the Magistrate after finding the accused guilty and without further proceeding called upon both the accused and his witness to enter into bonds to keep the peace for one year. held that this procedure was illegal so far as the witness was concerned 5 M 330. But if the Magistrate desires to put him on recognizance to keep the peace he must first be called upon to show cause under this section and evidence must be taken in his presence on the question whether there was reasonable ground for believing he was likely to commit a breach of the peace 4 B L R (FB) 46. (b) Complainant—So also it is illegal to bind down a complainant 3 P R 1902. (c) Principal can only be bound on when notice issued to agent—Where the manager of an and go factory is obliged to enter into recognizances to keep the peace there is no reason nor has the Magistrate any authority to extend the order to the proprie or of the factory also. The statements, made by both the contending parties before the Magistrate, must be regarded as evidence upon which the Magistrate may act, if he thinks it sufficient, without taking further evidence upon the subject, 18 W. R. 11. See also 33 C. 156.

63. Compensation cannot be awarded.—See s. 250. An application to take proceedings under this Chapter, does not amount to an accusation for an offence and the Magistrate in such cases does not pass any order of acquittal or discharge within the meaning of s. 250 and, therefore, a Magistrate is not authorized to award compensation under s. 250 if he dismisses the application 15 A. 383; 7 A. L. J. 743; 36 A. 332; 37 P. R. 1884; 16 P. R. 1893; 4 P. R. 1896; 33 P. R. 1902; 25 B. 43

64. Can Court enhance security?—It is competent to the Court calling upon persons to furnish security to enhance the amount of such security, provided the persons from whom security is demanded have an opportunity to appear and show cause against the order for enhancement of such security, 1895 A. W. N. 241, but see Note 59

64-A. Magistrate cannot postpone proceedings.—An order postponing proceedings instituted under s. 491, Act X of 1872, until the person called upon to show cause shall have established in a Civil Court the title claimed by him to the disputed property, with reference to which there is a breach of the peace, amounts to a discharge, and the Magistrate cannot order the person so called upon to attend daily at his Court on a personal recognizance pending such adjournment, 5 C. L. R. 366

X.—ENFORCEMENT OF THE FINAL ORDER—GIVING OF SECURITY AND ORDER OF IMPRISONMENT.

65. On failure to furnish security, the accused must be forthwith committed.—If for any cause the accused has not a reasonable opportunity of furnishing sureties with which he ought under normal circumstances, to come already furnished the only legal method of giving him time for this purpose is to postpone the making of the final order under s. 118 for such period as may be deemed necessary. After the order is passed it is illegal to allow time to find sureties.—Puny Cir., Chap. XLIV, para 13 (a), p. 168. The Court should on non-compliance to furnish security by the date fixed commit the accused to custody. Where a person ordered to execute a bond and find sureties for good behaviour on 17th December, 1907, was sentenced to imprisonment for default on 24th February, 1909, held, the order for imprisonment was illegal 6 M. L. T. 308 = 10 Cr. L. J. 481. If from any cause the accused has not had a reasonable opportunity of furnishing sureties, with which he ought under normal circumstances to come already furnished the only legal method of giving him time is to fix a later date as provided for by s. 120 (2).

66. Security cannot be asked till expiry of imprisonment if person ordered to give security has been 'sentenced' to imprisonment.—Section 120 authorizes that the period for which security is required in an order under s. 118 shall commence on the expiration of any sentence which the accused may be sentenced to or may be undergoing at the time when the order under s. 118 is made. But it is premature and illegal to pass against him an order under s. 123, while such imprisonment lasts. The order under s. 123 should not be passed until the expiry of any term of imprisonment which a person may be undergoing, 4 Bom. L. R. 934. See 24 W. R. 13; 1 A. 666, 9 C. 215. See also 5 L. B. R. 34, where it was held that the order of the Magistrate that security should be furnished within a month from the date of order while the substantive term of imprisonment was seven years was illegal. Under ss. 120 and 123 a convict undergoing a sentence of imprisonment cannot be obliged to give security for good behaviour until the period of that imprisonment ends, nor can the order for imprisonment in default be made till then Ratanlal 765. A Magistrate cannot make an order for imprisonment in anticipation of default to give security under s. 118, Ratanlal 511; 432. In the case of a person convicted of an offence and sentenced to imprisonment as a punishment, the order requiring security should not direct, that he should execute the bond to keep the peace at the end of the term of imprisonment to which he has been sentenced. The person convicted is at perfect liberty to execute the bond at once or at any time during the term of imprisonment, 7 N-W P. H. C. R. 323. Nor can the Magistrate direct that the security should be given within a month while the term of imprisonment has still to run, 3 L. B. R. 34 (F.B.). If, in the meantime, he is convicted of another offence and sentenced to a fresh term of imprisonment, the order should not be passed until the expiry of both imprisonments, Ratanlal 774; see also 4 Bom. L. R. 934. A sentence on imprisonment on default of furnishing security cannot be made to run concurrently with some other sentence which the accused is already undergoing, 16 Cr. L. J. 272 (M) But in 4 L. B. R. 205 (F.B.) = 7 Cr. L. J. 472 it was held that there was no strong objection to an order for imprisonment being made before the expiry of the substantive sentence of imprisonment

67. Commencement of a second order for security made during pendency of a previous order.—A Magistrate required a person to give security to keep the peace for one year During its subsistence, he required the same person to give further security for one year, the latter order to take effect on the expiry of the term of security already taken under the previous order, held, that such a postponement is not contemplated by law, but if on the expiry of the first order the dispute still existed then further security can be demanded on fresh proceedings being taken, 4 C. W. N. 121. But in support of such fresh proceedings, evidence relating to events prior to first period ought not to be admitted, 1905 A. W. N. 34; 1906 A. W. N. 30 and 28 A. 306.

68 The period of imprisonment in default of security should be the same as the period for which security is demanded.—An order requiring the accused to execute a bond in the sum of Rs 30 with surety for the same amount, that he would be of good behaviour for a period of six months, in default to be kept in rigorous imprisonment for three months, or until such time as he executes the required bond, is wrong and bad in form, Ratanlal 684. A Magistrate is not competent to award a shorter term of imprisonment in default of security than that for which security is required, but if he thinks that the term should be shortened his proper course is to report the matter to the District Magistrate, who will take action under s 124, Ratanlal 685. An order passed by a Joint Magistrate directing that a person do give security for a period of more than one year, and that on failure to give the security, he should be imprisoned for two years was held to be bad on the face of it and not cured by the District Magistrate reducing on appeal the period for security to one year and, the period of imprisonment also to one year, as the provisions of cl (2) of this section are imperative, Weir II, 57; 23 A. 422.

69. Order directing imprisonment until giving of security is bad.—An order directing an accused person to be imprisoned until he gives security is bad, a definite period for such imprisonment should be stated in the order, 8 C 644.

70. Direction for solitary confinement is not legal.—In the order of rigorous imprisonment passed on the accused on their failing to furnish the security demanded under s 118, a Magistrate has no power to direct that the accused should be kept in solitary confinement for a portion of the period of imprisonment, 36 A. 499.

71. No fresh warrant necessary to detain person ordered to furnish security if he is already undergoing imprisonment.—In cases where a prisoner is required to furnish security for good behaviour for a certain period on the expiration of his sentence of imprisonment, the period for which such security is required commences on the expiration of the sentence. If, when it commences, the prisoner does not furnish security, he is at once liable to be detained in prison till he does furnish it, no warrant for his detention is necessary, Ratanlal 511. See, however, Ratanlal 432 But where a person is not already undergoing imprisonment, a warrant is necessary for his detention under cl (2) of section 123 pending reference to the Court of Session

72. If person undergoing imprisonment for default in furnishing security is sentenced to imprisonment, the sentence must commence at once.—See s 397 Imprisonment ordered in default of security is not a punishment for another offence Therefore when a sentence of imprisonment on conviction for an offence is passed upon a person already imprisoned under this section, the commencement of the sentence on conviction ought not to be postponed until the termination of the imprisonment under the security order, 1 Bar. B. R. 464; Ratanlal 970; 5 Bom. L. R. 26. See 27 M. 525; Weir II, 452; 31 M. 513; 37 B. 178; 8 N. L. R. 20 = 13 Cr. L. J. 169; 7 B. L. R. 203 = 15 Cr. L. J. 592; (1914) M. W. N. 500 = 16 Cr. L. J. 137; 16 Cr. L. J. 622. The two sentences of imprisonment must run concurrently, 34 B. 326. Nor can a sentence under section 123 run concurrently with any other sentence under s 35, see 4 Bom. L. R. 876; 6 Bom. L. R. 1098. But in 30. A. 334, it was held that if a person undergoing imprisonment on failure to furnish security is convicted and sentenced to a term of imprisonment, the latter sentence should follow the first. See also 1 Patna L. J. 212.

XI.—PROCEEDINGS UNDER DIFFERENT SECTIONS NOT TO BE MIXED UP.

73 Magistrate cannot proceed under s. 107 trate finds that s 110 with reference to which he issued deal with the case is one under s 107 without first altered view of the circumstances The notice issued with reference to s 110 (c) cannot be held to be sufficient as a preliminary to making an order under s 107 The facts necessary to be proved to make the accused liable under s. 110 (c), are different from those necessary to be proved in order to make them liable under section 107, and the party proceeded against should have notice of the facts on which the Magistrate proposes to proceed against him. The omission to issue such fresh notice is a non-compliance with an express provision of the law, rendering the subsequent proceedings invalid, 30 M. 232.

74 Magistrate ought not to issue order under s. 110 after instituting proceedings under s. 107.—When the notice was to show cause why a person should not be bound down to keep the peace, he cannot be directed under s. 118 to execute a bond for good behaviour, 25 C. 798; but where the evidence was recorded at length and the parties had opportunity to cross-examine and were not prejudiced, held the irregularity was cured by s. 537, 14 Cr. L. J. 63 (M.).

75 Amalgamation of ss. 109 and 110 not legal.—B was ordered by a first-class Magistrate to execute a bond for good behaviour with one surety for six months under s. 109 (b), and a similar bond for one year under s. 110. B having failed to execute the two bonds was sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for six months and one year, respectively. Held reversing the order requiring the bond for six months, that the Magistrate could not legally amalgamate ss. 109 and 110, and require the execution of two bonds for good behaviour for an aggravated rigorous imprisonment for 18 months, and that at should have been observed, Ratanlal 946. There together, 6 M. L. T. 158 = 10 Cr. L. J. 243; 11 Cr. L. J. 50 (M.), 38 M. 555 and 556, foot note. Where it was not clear that the accused was aware whether the case he had to meet was one under s. 109 or s. 110, an order requiring security was set aside, 11 C. 13.

76. Inquiries under ss. 109 and 110 not to be conducted together.—A person called upon to give security under s. 109 and another person required to give security under s. 110 cannot be dealt with together in one and the same inquiry under s. 117. Proceedings under ss. 109 and 112 cannot be amalgamated with proceedings under ss. 110 and 112, the scope of the two proceedings being essentially different, 8 O. C. 91 = 2 Cr. L. J. 224; 11 Cr. L. J. 50.

77. Order under s. 110 cannot be passed during continuance of order under s. 109.—Sections 109 and 110 have the same object, and an order under s. 110 is not valid during the continuance of an order under this section, the evidence required to secure an order under either section being of the same nature, 8 C. W. N. 553.

78. Inquiries under s. 107 and under s. 145.—See Notes under Heading III above. A Magistrate is not justified in passing an order under s. 107 in proceedings commenced under s. 145, see 14 A. L. J. 794.

XII.—BAIL AND DETENTION IN CUSTODY.

[See s. 107 (3) and (4) for procedure and detention in custody when Magistrate is not empowered to act, and s. 123 (2) for detention in prison pending orders of Sessions Judge s. 114 for immediate arrest when a breach of the peace is apprehended and ss. 496—502 for general provisions as to bail.]

79. Generally the person proceeded against has a right to be let on bail.—The terms of s. 496 are wide enough to entitle a person proceeded against under this Chapter VIII (B) to claim bail as of right, 12 Cr. L. J. 833 (B) following 6 N-W. P. H. C. R. 366. When proceedings has been instituted against a person under s. 107, it is only in the special circumstances referred to in clauses (3) and (4) of that section that the law empowers a Magistrate to detain the person in custody until the completion of the enquiry, s. 496 is imperative and under its provisions the Magistrate is bound to release such person on bail or recognizance, 32 C. 80, 22 M. L. J. 357 = 13 Cr. L. J. 447. A Magistrate is not competent to refuse bail unless the law expressly sanctions the refusal, 1 C. L. R. 130. See also 6 A. 132, 14 A. 45, 11 C.W. N. 121 = 4 Cr. L. J. 456. In 38 M. 474 it was held that s. 496 does not give an absolute right to any person who appears or is brought before a Court and is not charged with a non bailable offence, but that section must be read along with any other provision giving a special right of detention to the Court as s. 107 (4), see also 31 M. 385 and 17 Cr. L. J. 77.

80. Condition cannot be attached to letting on bail.—When the Magistrate in allowing bail to the petitioners, made it conditional on their undertaking that no attempt would be made by them or their agents to realise rent by force and nothing would be done to induce a breach of the peace, held that the condition could not be imposed under section 107 and should therefore be struck out of the bail-bond, 11 C. W. N. 121 = 4 Cr. L. J. 456. For power to grant bail, see 12 Cr. L. J. 533 (Bom).

81. Bail cannot be asked for before initiation of proceedings.—No bail should be called for from a person against whom proceedings under s. 107 are contemplated, but not initiated, 11 C. W. N. 415 = 5 Cr. L. J. 194. The most that can be required of him is to furnish recognizance, and that only when there is any likelihood of his absenting himself from Court.

82. Jurisdiction of Magistrate to order detention in custody pending enquiry.—(a) Good behaviour cases—It is illegal for a Magistrate to order detention at the request of the Police, of persons who were reported to him, as persons against whom an inquiry under s 110 ought to be made. Nor is he authorized to order further detention without recording his reasons for so doing. A Magistrate has no jurisdiction of any kind to act under this section until he has such information before him as will suffice for his making an order in writing, setting forth its substance and other particulars required by s 112. 12 A. L. J. 336 = 15 Cr. L. J. 696. See also 36 A. 262. (b) Keeping the peace cases—See s 107 (3) and (4), proviso to s. 114 and Notes 33 and 34 to s 107.

83. Unnecessary detention in prison may vitiate inquiry.—Detention in jail of a person against whom an inquiry under Chapter VIII is in progress is an illegality which vitiates the trial, 16 Bom. L. R. 943 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 261.

84. Person proceeded against under this Chapter cannot be remanded under s. 167.—S 167 which authorizes a Magistrate to remand an accused person to Police custody pending investigation does not appear to apply to cases under Chapter VIII, per KNOX, J., in 36 A. 262. See also 12 A. L. J. 336 = 15 Cr. L. J. 696.

85. Re-arrest of person admitted to bail.—Having regard to the language of the proviso to section 114, it was doubted in 32 C. 80 whether a Magistrate had power under the proviso to re-arrest a person who had already appeared and been admitted to bail. The proviso seems to limit the Magistrate's power to cases under s 107.

86. Committing to custody pending receipt of report as to adequacy of security illegal.—The practice of sending a person to jail against whom an order under ss 110–118 has been passed, pending the receipt of a report from the Revenue and Police-officers is illegal. Imprisonment should follow failure to furnish adequate security, and should not precede a finding that the security is inadequate, 18 P. R. 1906 = 14 P. L. R. 1907 = 5 P. W. R. 1907 = 5 Cr. L. J. 148; 16 Bom. L. R. 943 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 261. See also 12 A. L. J. 336 = 15 Cr. L. J. 696.

87. Imprisonment cannot be awarded in anticipation of default.—A Magistrate cannot award imprisonment in default of furnishing security for good behaviour in anticipation of such default being made, Ratanlal 395 and 408, but see 4 L. B. 205. It is not competent to a Magistrate to pass an order for the imprisonment of the accused made in anticipation of his default to give security under s 188, Ratanlal 408. The imprisonment is provided as a protection to society against the perpetration of crime by the individual and not as a punishment for a crime committed, 1 C. L. R. 95.

88. Punishment for escape from lawful custody.—An escape from custody when being taken before a Magistrate for the purpose of being bound over to be of good behaviour is now an offence punishable under s 225-B, I P C., s 8 C 331 is superseded by the addition of that section to the Penal Code. See Note 4 to s 55.

XIII.—INQUIRY INTO FITNESS OF SURETIES.

89. Magistrate who passed the order under s 118 must himself conduct the inquiry and cannot delegate.—A Magistrate who has passed an order under section 118 cannot delegate his function to a subordinate to inquire into the sufficiency or otherwise of the security tendered and decide the question on the report of the subordinate. The Magistrate that passed the order ought himself to make the inquiry and pass decision on the sufficiency or otherwise of the security, 27 A. 293; 26 A. 371; 23 A. 272; 1898 A. W. N. 154; 1 A. L. J. 801 = 1904 A. W. N. 231; 15 O. C. 263 = 13 Cr. L. J. 760; 2 S. L. R. 11 and 15; 5 S. L. R. 87 = 12 Cr. L. J. 410; 15 Cr. L. J. 727 (A.), 12 A. L. J. 1004 = 16 Cr. L. J. 54; 16 Cr. L. J. 445 (A.), per RIVES, J. (COXE, J. contra) in 37 C. 91; 42 C. 706. In 9 C. W. N. XXIII, it was held that when questions of fact are raised, the Magistrate ought to enquire into the sufficiency of the security himself and not be guided merely by the report submitted by the Police. See also 11 O. C. 5 and 3 C. L. J. 575 = 3 Cr. L. J. 468. He cannot send the security bond to a Tahsildar for report, 18 P. R. 1906 = 14 P. L. R. 1907 = 5 Cr. L. J. 148; 6 P. R. 1914 = 13 P. L. R. 1914; or for attestation, 8 and 7 P. W. R. 1907 = 56 and 57 P. L. R. 1907. See also 20 C. W. N. 1133 = 24 C. L. J. 51.

90. Inquiry into fitness of surety is a judicial proceeding and must be properly conducted.—In an inquiry under this section into the fitness of a surety, the Magistrate has power to record evidence upon oath or solemn affirmation, so that any false statement made therein, will render the deponent punishable under s. 193, I P C. 26 A. 371. See also 1898 A. W. N. 154; 1903 A. W. N. 36; 8 S. L. R. 173 = 16 Cr. L. J. 100,

82. Jurisdiction of Magistrate to order detention in custody pending enquiry.—(a) Good behaviour cases—It is illegal for a Magistrate to order detention at the request of the Police, of persons who were reported to him, as persons against whom an inquiry under s 110 ought to be made. Nor is he authorized to order further detention without recording his reasons for so doing. A Magistrate has no jurisdiction of any kind to act under this section until he has such information before him as will suffice for his making an order in writing, setting forth its substance and other particulars required by s 112. 12 A. L. J. 336 = 15 Cr. L. J. 696. See also 36 A. 262. (b) Keeping the peace cases—See s 107 (3) and (4), proviso to s 114 and Notes 33 and 34 to s 107.

83. Unnecessary detention in prison may vitiate inquiry.—Detention in jail of a person against whom an inquiry under Chapter VIII is in progress is an illegality which vitiates the trial, 16 Bom. L. R. 943 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 261.

84. Person proceeded against under this Chapter cannot be remanded under s 167.—S 167 which authorizes a Magistrate to remand an accused person to Police custody pending investigation does not appear to apply to cases under Chapter VIII, per KNOX, J., in 35 A. 262. See also 12 A. L. J. 336 = 15 Cr. L. J. 696.

85. Re-arrest of person admitted to bail.—Having regard to the language of the proviso to section 114, it was doubted in 32 C. 80 whether a Magistrate had power under the proviso to re-arrest a person who had already appeared and been admitted to bail. The proviso seems to limit the Magistrate's power to cases under s 107.

86. Committing to custody pending receipt of report as to adequacy of security illegal.—The practice of sending a person to jail against whom an order under ss 110—118 has been passed, pending the receipt of a report from the Revenue and Police-officers is illegal. Imprisonment should follow failure to furnish adequate security, and should not precede a finding that the security is inadequate, 18 P. R. 1906 = 14 P. L. R. 1907 = 5 P. W. R. 1907 = 5 Cr. L. J. 143; 16 Bom. L. R. 943 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 261. See also 12 A. L. J. 336 = 15 Cr. L. J. 696.

87. Imprisonment cannot be awarded in anticipation of default.—A Magistrate cannot award imprisonment in default of furnishing security for good behaviour in anticipation of such default being made, Ratanlal 395 and 408, but see 4 L. B. 205. It is not competent to a Magistrate to pass an order for the imprisonment of the accused made in anticipation of his default to give security under s 188, Ratanlal 408. The imprisonment is provided as a protection to society against the perpetration of crime by the individual and not as a punishment for a crime committed, 1 C. L. R. 95.

88. Punishment for escape from lawful custody.—An escape from custody when being taken before a Magistrate for the purpose of being bound over to be of good behaviour is now an offence punishable under s 225-B, 1 P. C., 8 C. 331 is superseded by the addition of that section to the Penal Code. See Note 4 to s 55.

XIII.—INQUIRY INTO FITNESS OF SURETIES.

89. Magistrate who passed the order under s 118 must himself conduct the inquiry and cannot delegate.—A Magistrate who has passed an order under section 118 cannot delegate his function to a subordinate to inquire into the sufficiency or otherwise of the security tendered and decide the question on the report of the subordinate. The Magistrate that passed the order ought himself to make the inquiry and pass decision on the sufficiency or otherwise of the security, 37 A. 293; 26 A. 371; 25 A. 272; 1898 A. W. N. 154; 1 A. L. J. 601 = 1904 A. W. N. 231; 15 O. C. 263 = 13 Cr. L. J. 760; 2 S. L. R. 11 and 15; 5 S. L. R. 87 = 12 Cr. L. J. 410; 15 Cr. L. J. 727 (A); 12 A. L. J. 1004 = 16 Cr. L. J. 54; 16 Cr. L. J. 445 (A), per RYAN, J. (COXE J. contra) in 37 C. 91; 42 C. 706. In 9 C. W. N. XXIII, it was held that when questions of fact are raised the Magistrate ought to enquire into the sufficiency of the security himself and not be guided merely by the report submitted by the Police. See also 11 O. C. 5 and 3 C. L. J. 575 = 3 Cr. L. J. 468. He cannot send the security bond to a Tahsildar for report, 18 P. R. 1906 = 14 P. L. R. 1907 = 5 Cr. L. J. 143; 6 P. R. 1914 = 12 P. L. R. 1914; or for attestation, 6 and 7 P. W. R. 1907 = 56 and 57 P. L. R. 1907. See also 20 C. W. N. 1133 = 24 C. L. J. 51.

90. Inquiry into fitness of surety is a judicial proceeding and must be properly conducted.—In an inquiry under this section into the fitness of a surety, the Magistrate has power to record evidence upon oath or solemn affirmation so that any false statement made therein will render the deponent punishable under s 193, 1 P. C. 26 A. 371. See also 1898 A. W. N. 154; 1903 A. W. N. 36; 8 S. L. R. 173 = 16 Cr. L. J. 100.

91. Evidence must be taken before rejecting sureties.—A conclusion arrived at by the Magistrate merely on the strength of a Police report, in respect of which there has been no formal inquiry in Court is not warranted by law. There must be some sort of independent inquiry by the Magistrate showing that a judicial discretion has been exercised as to the question of the fitness of the proposed surety, 27 A. 293 followed, 12 A. L. J. 1004 = 16 Cr. L. J. 54; 42 C. 706. A Magistrate cannot refuse a surety merely relying on a Police report. If any information was derived from the Police report, it is the duty of the Magistrate to take evidence as to what is the basis of the report and should come to a decision thereon himself, 15 O. C. 263 = 13 Cr. L. J. 760; 13 A. L. J. 469 = 18 Cr. L. J. 413. A Magistrate cannot properly base his order on an adverse opinion formed on statements (e.g., statement of Police Inspector) which no judicial tribunal could accept as evidence, 8 S. L. R. 173 = 16 Cr. L. J. 100. The Magistrate must not deal with the application in a summary manner and reject sureties for the reason they have produced no evidence as to character, 8 S. L. R. 173 = 16 Cr. L. J. 100. A Magistrate cannot rely on his own knowledge, dispense with an inquiry and take no evidence at all. He should examine the sureties as to their fitness and take such evidence as the accused may give and base his decision on the evidence so recorded, 7 S. L. R. 94 = 15 Cr. L. J. 378. The Magistrate has a wide discretion to accept or reject a certain surety, but the discretion must be exercised only after a satisfactory inquiry in accordance with law, 12 A. L. J. 1004; mere conjectures and surmises are not enough to reject a surety, 10 C. W. N. 1027 = 4 Cr. L. J. 169. Sureties ought not to be rejected on the strength of the reports received from the Tahsildar and Inspector of Police, without giving them an opportunity of meeting any allegations that may be made against them, 15 Cr. L. J. 727 (A.) When the Magistrate has received information adverse to the fitness of the surety, that must be brought to his notice.

92. Grounds for refusing sureties must be based on evidence and must be valid and reasonable.—Mere conjectures and surmises are not sufficient, 10 C. W. N. 1027 = 4 Cr. L. J. 169. The judgment ought not to be based on mere personal knowledge, 7 S. L. R. 94 = 15 Cr. L. J. 378; 14 C. W. N. 709 = 11 Cr. L. J. 243; nor upon the reports of the Police and subordinate officers, 12 A. L. J. 1004 = 16 Cr. L. J. 54. The ground on which a Magistrate has power to refuse to accept any surety must be a valid and reasonable one, 22 W. R. 37; 41 C. 764. As long as the security is good and sufficient and the sureties are of a satisfactory class, they cannot be rejected, 7 N.-W. P. H. C. R. 249. The discretion conferred upon a Magistrate by this section is a wide one and the High Court will not lightly interfere with any reasonable exercise of the same. Where the Magistrate himself, from the circumstances on the record had not drawn the inference that the sureties offered would not exercise proper control over the person bound over, or that they had offered themselves only in order to assist the accused in pursuing a career of crime, the High Court in revision set aside the order rejecting them as sureties, 15 Cr. L. J. 727 (A.) Mere reluctance to be surety constitutes no valid objection unless the Magistrate is satisfied that he is not a free agent, 8 S. L. R. 173 = 16 Cr. L. J. 100.

93. Magistrate must not reject sureties because they do not conform to an arbitrary standard not set up in the preliminary order.—If the Magistrate considers it necessary to limit the class of sureties he should so state in his preliminary order. It is obviously unfair to a suspect to call on him to produce sureties of a certain class and then to reject the persons offered because they do not conform to an arbitrary standard not set up in the order, 8 S. L. R. 173 = 16 Cr. L. J. 100. It is obviously unfair to an accused person to order him to produce sureties living in his neighbourhood and then to reject the man offered because they are his neighbours, nor is it reasonable to reject a surety merely because he is of the same caste as the suspect unless the preliminary order imposes such a limitation.

94. Duty of Magistrate having private information adverse to the surety.—Where the Magistrate stated in his explanation as a reason for rejecting sureties that he relied on an inquiry instituted by himself in which he heard various matters which showed that the sureties were generally speaking bad characters, held that the order was bad. The Magistrate in rejecting sureties under s 122 has to record his reasons for doing so. From this it seems to follow that the reasons must have been carefully considered and tested. This is best done by their being brought to the notice of the persons who are refused as sureties and by their having an opportunity for controverting them. The Magistrate before rejecting the sureties in this case for the reasons alleged, should have brought them to their notice and heard what they had to say on their own behalf, 14 C. W. N. 709 = 11 Cr. L. J. 243. Sureties ought not to be rejected on the strength of Police reports without giving them an opportunity of meeting any allegations that may be made against them, 15 Cr. L. J. 727 (A.)

95. Burden of proof as to fitness of sureties.—Although it is the duty of the Magistrate to take evidence of the fitness of the surety, that burden is ordinarily on the accused. If the Magistrate is not satisfied with the evidence of the surety,

S. 122 recognises only one ground, ie., the ground that for reasons to be recorded by the Magistrate such surety is an unfit person.² The reason given by the Magistrate must therefore be a positive reason for believing the surety to be unfit. It is not sufficient for the Magistrate to say that he is not satisfied with the evidence called by the accused. If he is not so satisfied he must make further inquiry and come to a definite conclusion one way or the other. No presumption ought to be made against a witness's credibility merely because he has offered to be a surety for a bad character. The presumption ought to be the other way, for otherwise no respectable person will undertake the responsibility, 8 B. L. R. 322 = 16 Cr. L. J. 479.

96. Effect of omission to state reasons for refusing sureties.—Where the Magistrate failed to record any reasons for his refusal to accept the sureties and in his explanation stated he was not able to remember the exact circumstances, held that the sureties must be accepted, 13 C. W. N. XXVII.

97. Surety once accepted can afterwards be rejected and security-bond cancelled.—Under the present amendment a Magistrate may reject any surety previously accepted, provided he follows the procedure laid down under the new amendment.

XIV.—CONDITIONS AS TO FITNESS OF SURETY.

98. Test as to fitness of sureties.—See s. 122. It is difficult to reconcile the various views as to the imposition of limitations on the qualifications as to the fitness of a surety. All that the Legislature says is that a Magistrate may refuse to accept any surety on the ground that such person is an unfit person, s. 122. The Legislature has not particularised any kind of unfitness. Has the word 'unfit' reference only to the pecuniary position of the person offered? Though there are some decisions which lay down that the principal thing is to see whether the proposed surety is a man of substance, the generally accepted view seems to be that the Magistrate is at liberty to take into consideration the 'moral unfitness' of the person as well, then again there is a marked difference of opinion as to whether a Magistrate can refuse to accept a surety because he is not in a position to exercise control over the principal.

Calcutta—The primary test is whether the sureties are able to pay the sums for which they become bound, but there may be other objections as well which must be dealt with in each case as it arises—The question whether a person tendered as security in a case is fit or not, is one of pure fact in each case and must be decided according to the particular circumstances of each case. If his position in life is from a monetary point of view unsatisfactory, having regard to the amount of the security demanded, nothing more is necessary. He must be discarded. Otherwise no hard and fast rule can be laid down, that any given set of circumstances or that a particular degree of distance, either of affinity or topographically in the place of residence of the parties, can in any way decisively help in answering the question whether the security offered is sufficient. Unless the action of the local authorities who are responsible for the public peace appears to be arbitrary or extravagant the High Court will not interfere, 13 C. W. N. CLIX; 13 C. W. N. 80 = 8 C. L. J. 243 approved. It was held in 6 C. W. N. 593, followed in 35 C. 400 that in accepting a surety, the question is not whether or not a surety can supervise a person for whom he stands surety, but, whether he is a person of sufficient substance to warrant his being accepted and therefore such objections to the acceptance of sureties tendered as (i) that they were unfit to control the defendant, or (ii) that they were not residents of the village, or (iii) that the two sureties were members of the same firm are not valid. It is not necessary that a surety should live in the neighbourhood of his principal so as to keep his eye on him. The facts that the sureties offered were not resident in the village where the principal lived and that they were related to one C who was suspected to have in his possession properties stolen by the principal, were not grounds for rejecting the sureties, 9 C. W. N. XXIII. Where a Magistrate refused to accept sureties upon the grounds (i) that three out of four sureties were not residents of the village where the defendants lived, (ii) that none of them had sufficient moveable property, (iii) that all of them were reported to be of bad character, (iv) that three of them were relations of a person who was suspected of receiving, held, that grounds (i), (ii) and (iv) were not sufficient, that ground (iii) might be sufficient, but the Magistrate in determining that question, could not act on a report submitted by the Police but must hold an inquiry in respect thereto, 3 C. L. J. 575 = 3 Cr. L. J. 468. In deciding whether sureties tendered in bad livelihood cases are to be accepted or refused, the first matter to be enquired into is the ability of the sureties to pay the sums for which they become bound but there may be other objections to be considered but any such objections must be dealt with in each case as it arises, 6 C. W. N. 593 and 35 C. 400 followed 13 C. W. N. 80 = 8 C. L. J. 243 = 8 Cr. L. J. 388 approved. Where no other cause of unfitness is made out, when they are pecuniarily fit, they must be accepted 37 G. 445; 17 C. W. N. CXX. In 41 C. 764, after reviewing some of the decisions, the Court was of opinion that the law now appears to have come back to the point at which it originally stood in the statute book, and in the judgment in 22 W. R. 37. "The statute merely says that the Magistrate may refuse to accept any surety offered under this Chapter, for reasons to be recorded by him that such surety is an unfit person and in 22 W. R. 37 it is laid down that the ground of refusal must be valid and reasonable. That is all." The Court was further of opinion that the head note to 37 C. 446 is rather misleading, for it is set out that where a surety is competent in a pecuniary sense, the fact that he is not in a position to exercise control over the person bound down so as to ensure good behaviour in future is not a sufficient ground for rejection. But the Judges never laid down any such doctrine. They say there may be other objections to a man becoming surety although he is pecuniarily fit for the position, but that it is not possible to specify, and such an objection must be dealt with in each case as it arises. See also 12 C. W. N. XCIX. It is not proper to call upon sureties to state in writing what influence they have over the accused and they cannot be rejected if they fail to do so, 37 C. 91. See 20 C. W. N. 1133.

Allahabad.—The test is whether the surety can exercise proper influence over the person who has been bound over—In accepting a surety, if the Magistrate is satisfied that he can exercise proper influence over the person who has been bound over, it is immaterial where that person may reside, 8 A. L. J. 785 = 12 Cr. L. J. 472; mere solvency of the surety is not the only test of his fitness. The Magistrate has also to consider the ability of the surety to guarantee the good conduct of the principal, 20 A. 206. "One object in obliging men to produce sureties for good behaviour is that the sureties should have an interest in seeing that the man does behave well, and that they should also be in a position to exercise some influence over the man for whom they are to be sureties. As a rule, the latter object could not be effected if the sureties were men from a great distance, and if they were persons, who from their age, or social position, or otherwise were unlikely to be able to exercise influence over the person for whom they were put forward as sureties," 1895 A. W. N. 143. "The object of requiring security to be of good behaviour is, not to obtain money for the Crown by the forfeiture of recognizances, but to ensure that the particular accused person shall be of good behaviour for the time mentioned in the order. It is, therefore, reasonable to expect and require that sureties to be tendered should not be sureties from such a distance as would make it unlikely that they could exercise any control over the man for whom they were willing to stand surety. Of course, Magistrate must not act arbitrarily in these cases, they must be guided in each case by the facts of the case," 20 A. 206; 1898 A. W. N. 199; 12 A. L. J. 1004 = 16 Cr. L. J. 54.

Sindh—Conditions as to character and status may be imposed, but the power must be reasonably exercised so that if the suspect have a bona fide intention to be of good behaviour, it will not be impossible for him to find sureties—S 112 gives the Magistrate power to define the class of sureties and it is open to him to require that they shall be landholders in the neighbourhood of the accused either holding 100 acres of land or paying income-tax and able to control the accused, 8 S. L. R. 229 = 16 Cr. L. J. 253, or that they should not be of inferior standing to the suspects, and of respectable character 8 S. L. R. 173 = 16 Cr. L. J. 100. In 8 S. L. R. 322 = 16 Cr. L. J. 479, the word 'standing' was criticized as being too vague. Sureties cannot be rejected on the ground, that they will not be able to influence the bad characters by example and precept 1 S. L. R. 14 = 9 Cr. L. J. 256 nor can they be rejected on the ground of relationship 1 S. L. R. 3 = 9 Cr. L. J. 247. It is open to a Magistrate to require 'respectable or suitable' sureties and a Magistrate may fairly demand a reasonable degree of social importance and influence in the sureties. A Magistrate is justified in using and applying his knowledge of his division when acting under s 122 and if he knows that the inhabitants generally of a village bear a bad character, he is justified in rejecting such surety provided he records his reasons 3 S. L. R. 158 = 11 Cr. L. J. 198. It is competent to a Magistrate to direct that the sureties shall be of the class of Zemindars holding 20 acres of land round Larkana, 3 S. L. R. 239 = 11 Cr. L. J. 417. See also 1 S. L. R. 46 = 8 Cr. L. J. 166.

Burma.—In British Burma, the following rules as to sureties are in force—(a) The Court will reject as sureties all officials of the Courts and any relations of such officials, except in a case where they may be nearly related to or neighbours of the persons called upon to give security. (b) The Court will also reject as sureties all persons who the Court knows or has reason to believe are making a profession of becoming sureties for others in consideration of payment. (c) The officials of all Courts are prohibited under pain of dismissal from receiving any commission on the amount of the surety bond in cases where they are admitted as sureties—British Burma Gazette, Pt. III, p. 3. The sureties required are persons who are in a position to influence the person proceeded against and likely to be able to restrain him and who if they fail to do so can forfeit the amount in the bond, 8 Bur. L. T. 53 = 16 Cr. L. J. 553. In imposing limitations on sureties Magistrates should not act arbitrarily, U. B. R. (1914), 4 Qr. 144.

Bombay.—Ability to control the accused is not a desirable condition—The condition attached to a surety bond that he should be able to control the accused is not a desirable condition, 16 Bom. L. R. 133 = 1 Bom. Cr. Ca. 1835 = 15 Cr. L. J. 253.

99. Whether Magistrate may restrict the locality of sureties?—A Magistrate has no right to impose an arbitrary condition not essential to restrain a party from the infringement of the law, e.g., a condition requiring the accused to furnish two sureties being persons of respectability and substance, not related to him, and residing within one mile of his house, 22 W. R. 37; followed in 10 C. W. N. 10274 = Cr. L. J. 169; 38 P. R. 1890; 60 C. 199. A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to put such restriction on the nature of the sureties as to direct that they should be local, until and unless such objection is subsequently taken by the Police, 15 Cr. L. J. 254 (C.). The Allahabad view is that some such limits may be imposed, but they must not be too narrow. Where the sureties were limited to the Mirzapore Municipality, the High Court while being of opinion that the Magistrate was competent to assign some geographical limits within which the sureties must be residing, held that the limits imposed by the Magistrate were too narrow and extended it by adding the word "or to some place in the immediate neighbourhood" 24 A. 471; 1898 A. W. N. 199; 12 A. L. J. 1004 = 16 Cr. L. J. 254. In 14 Cr. L. J. 216 (A) residence within nine miles was considered to be an arbitrary limit. See also 7 A. L. J. 993 = 11 Cr. L. J. 536 and 10 A. L. J. 854 = 3 Cr. L. J. 831, where a limit of five miles was imposed by the Magistrate, but was set aside by the High Court. The 22 W. R. 37 case was not approved, by EDGE, C. J., in 1895 A. W. N. 143 and 20 A. 208. Where several sureties are required it is not necessary that each one of them should live in the immediate neighbourhood of the accused, 17 Cr. L. J. 95. See also 22 Bom. L. R. 190.

100. Relationship is no disqualification.—The fact that the sureties offered are the relations of the accused, far from being a disqualification is a circumstance which would be an additional qualification if the sureties are in other circumstances suitable, 25 A. 131; 6 P. R. 1914 = 142 P. L. R. 1914. Sureties ought not to be rejected on the ground that they are the caste fellows or relatives of the accused, 16 Bom. L. R. 138 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 188 = 15 Cr. L. J. 268. See also 10 C. W. N. 1027 = 4 Cr. L. J. 169. In 41 C. 764, the reason given by the Magistrate for refusing to accept the brothers as sureties being that the person bound down was a notorious dacoit and there was a consensus of opinion that the brothers would not be able to keep him in control, was accepted by the High Court. See also 8 S. L. R. 173 = 16 Cr. L. J. 100; 22 Cr. L. J. 22.

101. Whether condition that sureties should or should not be of a particular class may be imposed?—In 1 Bom. L. R. 520, the Magistrate added a condition to his order that the 'surety' must be not from Kaharats and must not be Kumbi by caste, as those persons assist accused often for the sake of money, the High Court annulled it as illegal. In Ratanlal 876, the Magistrate ordered the accused to give the security of 'two respectable landholders', on revision the word, 'persons of respectability and substance' were substituted. There is no objection to the condition requiring the sureties to a bond to belong to the landholding class, 16 Bom. L. R. 138 = 15 Cr. L. J. 268. In 20 A. 206, it was held that the provision in s 112 directing the Magistrate to specify in his order the character and class of the sureties required, enables the Magistrate, for example to require landholders as sureties and in such a case to refuse to accept pleaders or others as sureties. In 18 P. R. 1906 = 5 Cr. L. J. 148, it was held that a Magistrate had no power to order that security be given by any particular person or class of persons, or to prohibit the acceptance of security from landbaridars, snamdars and chowkidars. But see 3 S. L. R. 169 = 11 Cr. L. J. 198; 3 S. L. R. 239 = 11 Cr. L. J. 417; 8 S. L. R. 229 = 16 Cr. L. J. 232; 8 S. L. R. 322 = 16 Cr. L. J. 479; 8 S. L. R. 173 = 16 Cr. L. J. 100.

102. Prior conviction is no disqualification to be a surety.—The fact that the proposed surety has on one occasion been convicted of offences under ss 147 and 325, I P. C., does not of itself render him for ever afterwards unfit for being a surety 26 A. 189, 18 A. L. J. 324, 25 C. W. N. 140; 20 Bom. L. R. 190.

103. Other illegal limitations.—A Magistrate cannot direct the exclusion of immoveable property from the security to be furnished, 18 P. R. 1906 = 14 P. L. R. 1907 = 5 P. W. R. 1907 = 5 Cr. L. J. 143; or order that the surety should pledge all his proprietary rights in a land, 7 N-W. P. H. C. R. 249. The fact that a person offering himself as surety for the good behaviour of another has given evidence in favour of that person in a proceeding under s 109 or s 110 which resulted in the passing of the order requiring security would not at all be a good reason for refusing to accept the surety, 15 Cr. L. J. 271 (A). See also 17 Cr. L. J. 81 and 97.

XY.—BOND AND ITS FORFEITURE.

104. Form and contents of bond.—See Sch. V, Form X at p 52 A for a bond to keep the peace under s. 107, Form XI for a bond for good behaviour under ss 108, 109 and 110. Where a bond is not executed till after the date on which the period for which the security is required commences, it should state plainly the date on which the period expires 4 Bur. L. T. 270 = 13 Cr. L. J. 62; it is a serious mistake to make each of the sureties liable for the full penalty of the bond, U. B. R. (1897—1901) 1, 119 followed in 4 Bur. L. T. 270 = 13 Cr. L. J. 62. A surety cannot be made liable for an amount larger than the one for which the principal has executed the bond, 5 Bur. L. T. 101 = 13 Cr. L. J. 483.

105. Minors cannot execute bonds under this Chapter.—See clause 3 of s 117 and 4 L. B. R. 12 = 6 Cr. L. J. 123.

106. No Court-fee payable on bond.—No Court fee is payable on security bonds for keeping the peace by, or for good behaviour of persons other than the executants—Gazette of India 1889, Pt I p 506

107. When sureties indispensable.—For bonds under ss 109 and 110 surety is not optional but indispensable, while for bonds under ss 106 107 and 108 the bond may be with or without sureties

108. Taking sureties without personal recognizance is illegal.—There is no provision of law empowering a Court to call upon a person to provide sureties for good behaviour without his giving his own bond at the same time 27 A. 262. Where preliminary notice to the accused was issued by a Magistrate calling on them to furnish sureties only for their good behaviour, but not personal recognizances, but when the accused appeared before the Magistrate, he directed them to give personal recognizances as well as sureties for a period more than one year and the Sessions Judge noticing this irregularity while acting under clause (2) of this section, ordered the accused to furnish sureties only, held, that such an order was not contemplated by the Code and therefore bad. There is no provision of law empowering a Magistrate to call upon a person (not a minor) to provide sureties only for his good behaviour, without his giving his own bond at the same time, 27 A 882. The Rulings in 18 W. R. 61, 7 W. R. 23, 18 W. R. 57 are no longer law, in virtue of the first proviso to s. 118

109. Separate bonds from accused and his sureties ought not to be taken.—There is no warrant in law for taking separate bonds from the accused and his sureties individually and severally, exceeding in the aggregate the amount for which the accused is liable 30 P. R. 1990.

110. When cash deposit instead of recognizance may or may not be accepted.—See s 513 (a) In cases of good behaviour bonds under ss 108 109 and 110 deposit of cash or Government promissory notes cannot be accepted in addition to or in lieu of bond. The provisions of s 513 are not applicable to bond for maintaining good behaviour. An order requiring persons to deposit cash in lieu of entering into a bond as security of their future good behaviour is bad in law, 6 C. 16; Ratanlal 671. See, however, 7 W. R. 30. (b) In cases of keeping the peace bonds, deposit may be accepted instead of personal recognizance by the principal (c) No deposit can be accepted from a surety in lieu of bond, 32 B 449

111. Breach of bond for good behaviour.—Where a person bound over is not shown to have committed an offence, or to have attempted to do so, or to have abetted such a thing, his bond for good behaviour could not be forfeited under s 121. Section 121 is explicit and so far as bonds for good behaviour are concerned, is exhaustive though it might not be so as regards bonds for keeping the peace 5 P. R. 1910 = 8 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 252. Where an accused person was ordered to give security for good behaviour under s 109, for one year, and within the year he was found in possession of costly cloths for which he could not satisfactorily account he cannot be directed to pay the penalty of the bond unless there was proof that any actual theft of the clothes had taken place Weir 11, 57. A conviction under s 13 of the Gambling Act III of 1867 would work a forfeiture 1906 A. W. N. 13 = 3 Cr. L. J. 91. So also dishonest receipt of stolen property in a Native State, 28 P. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 635. In 15 P. R. 1910 = 14 Cr. L. J. 575, it was observed that when men stood surety in respect of s 110, they undertook liability for such good conduct only on the part of the person for whom they stood surety as is indicated by the circumstances under which the security was demanded, and that it would be impossible to work the security system in any other way, as no man would ever undertake to be a surety if thereby he were compelled to undergo liability for any conceivable form of offence committed by the person for whom they stood as surety. In this case A was required to give security for being suspected as a thief and notorious receiver of stolen property and B a resident of another village was accepted as A's surety, A was subsequently convicted under s 326 I P. C., on a serious charge of violence. It was held that the man who stands surety for another should always be treated in a considerate manner and it is contrary to all principles of justice that he should be held liable for a sudden act of violence especially when he was a resident of another village and has no possible opportunity of controlling the everyday life of the offender. In 10 P. R. 1915 = 7 P. W. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 349, it was held that the report of the above case was misleading and that the Chief Court had not overlooked the provisions of section 121 and laid no hard-and-fast rule as to forfeiture and all that the ruling indicated was the necessity for moderation and reasonable exercise of discretion in determining the extent if any, to which a conviction would justify the rigorous measures of forfeiture. In this case the principal was placed on security under s. 110 not merely as being a receiver of stolen property, but also as being a dangerous man and dacoit and therefore his conviction for a bad offence under s. 325, I P. C., was held to entail forfeiture. See also 6 P. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 237. A bond under section 110 can be forfeited on a conviction under section 323 I P. C. 4 L. 462.

99. Whether Magistrate may restrict the locality of sureties?—A Magistrate has no right to impose an arbitrary condition not essential to restrain a party from the infringement of the law, e.g., a condition requiring the accused to furnish two sureties being persons of respectability and substance, not related to him, and, residing within one mile of his house, 22 W. R. 37; followed in 10 C. W. N. 10274 = Cr. L. J. 169; 33 P. R. 1880; 5 O. C. 199. A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to put such restriction on the nature of the sureties as to direct that they should be local, until and unless such objection is subsequently taken by the Police, 15 Cr. L. J. 254 (C.). The Allahabad view is that some such limits may be imposed, but they must not be too narrow. Where the sureties were limited to the Mirzapore Municipality, the High Court while being of opinion that the Magistrate was competent to assign some geographical limits within which the sureties must be residing, held that the limits imposed by the Magistrate were too narrow and extended it by adding the word "or to some place in the immediate neighbourhood" 24 A. 471, 1898 A. W. N. 199; 12 A. L. J. 1004 = 16 Cr. L. J. 254. In 14 Cr. L. J. 214 (A) residence within nine miles was considered to be an arbitrary limit. See also 7 A. L. J. 993 = 11 Cr. L. J. 536 and 10 A. L. J. 354 = 3 Cr. L. J. 831, where a limit of five miles was imposed by the Magistrate, but was set aside by the High Court. The 22 W. R. 37 case was not approved, by EDGE, C. J., in 1895 A. W. N. 143 and 20 A. 208. Where several sureties are required it is not necessary that each one of them should live in the immediate neighbourhood of the accused, 17 Cr. L. J. 93. See also 22 Bom. L. R. 190.

100. Relationship is no disqualification.—The fact that the sureties offered are the relations of the accused, far from being a disqualification is a circumstance which would be an additional qualification if the sureties are in other circumstances suitable, 25 A. 131; 6 P. R. 1914 = 142 P. L. R. 1914. Sureties ought not to be rejected on the ground that they are the caste fellows or relatives of the accused, 16 Bom. L. R. 138 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 188 = 15 Cr. L. J. 288. See also 10 C. W. N. 1027 = 4 Cr. L. J. 169. In 41 C. 764, the reason given by the Magistrate for refusing to accept the brothers as sureties being that the person bound down was a notorious dacoit and there was a consensus of opinion that the brothers would not be able to keep him in control, was accepted by the High Court. See also 8 S. L. R. 173 = 16 Cr. L. J. 100; 23 Cr. L. J. 22.

101. Whether condition that sureties should or should not be of a particular class may be imposed?—In 1 Bom. L. R. 520, the Magistrate added a condition to his order that the 'surety' must be not from Kaharats and must not be Kunbi by caste, as those persons assist accused often for the sake of money, the High Court annulled it as illegal. In Ratanlal 876, the Magistrate ordered the accused to give the security of 'two respectable landholders', on revision the words 'persons of respectability and substance' were substituted. There is no objection to the condition requiring the sureties to a bond to belong to the landholding class, 16 Bom. L. R. 138 = 15 Cr. L. J. 288. In 20 A. 206, it was held that the provision in s. 112 directing the Magistrate to specify in his order the character and class of the sureties required, enables the Magistrate, for example, to require landholders as sureties and in such a case to refuse to accept pleaders or others as sureties. In 18 P. R. 1908 = 5 Cr. L. J. 148, it was held that a Magistrate had no power to order that security be given by any particular person or class of persons, or to prohibit the acceptance of security from lambyardars, snamdars and chowkidars. But see 3 S. L. R. 163 = 11 Cr. L. J. 498; 3 S. L. R. 239 = 11 Cr. L. J. 417; 8 S. L. R. 229 = 16 Cr. L. J. 252; 8 S. L. R. 322 = 16 Cr. L. J. 479; 8 S. L. R. 173 = 16 Cr. L. J. 100.

102. Prior conviction is no disqualification to be a surety.—The fact that the proposed surety has on one occasion been convicted of offences under ss. 147 and 325, I P. C., does not of itself render him for ever afterward unfit for being a surety, 26 A. 189; 18 A. L. J. 324, 25 C. W. N. 140; 20 Bom. L. R. 190.

103. Other illegal limitations.—A Magistrate cannot direct the exclusion of immoveable property from the security to be furnished, 18 P. R. 1906 = 15 P. L. R. 1907 = 5 P. W. R. 1907 = 5 Cr. L. J. 143; or order that the surety should pledge all his proprietary rights in a land, 7 N. W. P. H. C. R. 249. The fact that a person offering himself as surety for the good behaviour of another has given evidence in favour of that person in a proceeding under s. 109 or s. 110 which resulted in the passing of the order requiring security would not at all be a good reason for refusing to accept the surety, 15 Cr. L. J. 727 (A). See also 17 Cr. L. J. 91 and 97.

XY.—BOND AND ITS FORFEITURE.

104. Form and contents of bond.—See Sch. V, Form X at p. 52 A for a bond to keep the peace under s. 107, Form XI for a bond for good behaviour under ss. 108, 109 and 110. Where a bond is not executed till after the date on which the period for which the security is required commences, it should state plainly the date on which the period expires 4 Bur. L. T. 270 = 13 Cr. L. J. 62; it is a serious mistake to make each of the sureties liable for the full penalty of the bond, U. B. R. (1897–1901) 1, 119 followed in 4 Bur. L. T. 270 = 13 Cr. L. J. 62. A surety cannot be made liable for an amount larger than the one for which the principal has executed the bond 5 Bur. L. T. 101 = 13 Cr. L. J. 485.

105 Minors cannot execute bonds under this Chapter—See clause 3 of s 117 and 4 L B R 12 = 6 Cr L J 123.

106 No Court fee payable on bond—No Court fee is payable on security bonds for keeping the peace by or for good behaviour of persons other than the executors—Gizelle of India 1889 P I p 506

107 When sureties indispensable—For bonds under ss 109 and 110 surety is not optional but indispensable while for bonds under ss 106 107 and 108 the bond may be with or without sureties

108 Taking sureties without personal recognizance is illegal—There is no provision of law empowering a Court to call upon a person to provide sureties for good behaviour without his giving his own bond at the same time 27 A 262 Where preliminary notice to the accused was issued by a Magistrate calling on them to furnish sureties only for their good behaviour but not personal recognizances but when the accused appeared before the Magistrate he directed them to give personal recognizances as well as sureties for a period more than one year and the Sessions Judge noticing this irregularity while acting under clause (2) of this section ordered the accused to furnish sureties only held that such an order was not contemplated by the Code and therefore bad. There is no provision of law empowering a Magistrate to call upon a person (not a minor) to provide sureties only for his good behaviour without his giving his own bond at the same time 27 A 882 The Rulings in 18 W R 61, 7 W R 23, 18 W R 57 are no longer law in virtue of the first proviso to s. 118

109 Separate bonds from accused and his sureties ought not to be taken—There is no warrant in law for taking separate bonds from the accused and his sureties individually and severally exceeding in the aggregate the amount for which the accused is liable 30 P R 1890

110 When cash deposit instead of recognizance may or may not be accepted—See s 513 (a) In cases of good behaviour bonds under ss 108 109 and 110 deposit of cash or Government promissory notes cannot be accepted in addition to or in lieu of bond The provisions of s 513 are not applicable to bond for maintaining good behaviour An order requiring persons to deposit cash in lieu of entering into a bond as security of their future good behaviour is bad in law 6 C 14, Ratanlal 671 See however 7 W R 30 (b) In cases of keeping the peace-bonds deposit may be accepted instead of personal recognizance by the principal (c) No deposit can be accepted from a surety in lieu of bond 32 B 449

111 Breach of bond for good behaviour—Where a person bound over is not shown to have committed an offence or to have attempted to do so or to have abetted such a thing his bond for good behaviour could not be forfeited under s 121 Section 121 is explicit and so far as bonds for good behaviour are concerned is exhaustive though it might not be so as regards bonds for keeping the peace 5 P R 1910 = 8 P W R 1910 = 11 Cr L J 252 Where an accused person was ordered to give security for good behaviour under s 109, for one year and within the year he was found in possession of costly cloths for which he could not satisfactorily account he cannot be directed to pay the penalty of the bond unless there was proof that any actual theft of the clothes had taken place Weir II 87 A conviction under s 13 of the Gambling Act III of 1867 would work a forfeiture 1906 A W N 13 = 3 Cr L J 91 So also dishonest receipt of stolen property in a Native State 28 P R 1910 = 11 Cr L J 635 In 15 P R 1910 = 14 Cr L J 573, it was observed that when men stood surety in respect of s 110 they undertook liability for such good conduct only on the part of the person for whom they stood surety as is indicated by the circumstances under which the security was demanded and that it would be impossible to work the security system in any other way as no man would ever undertake to be a surety if thereby he were compelled to undergo liability for any conceivable form of offence committed by the person for whom they stood as surety In this case A was required to give security for being suspected as a thief and notorious receiver of stolen property and B a resident of another village was accepted as A's surety A was subsequently convicted under s 326 I P C on a serious charge of violence It was held that the man who stands surety for another should always be treated in a considerate manner and it is contrary to all principles of justice that he should be held liable for a sudden act of violence especially when he was a resident of another village and has no possible opportunity of controlling the everyday life of the offender In 10 P R 1915 = 7 P W R 1915 = 18 Cr L J 849, it was held that the report of the above case was misleading and that the Chief Court had not overlooked the provisions of section 121 and laid no hard-and-fast-rule as to forfeiture and all that the ruling indicated was the necessity for moderation and reasonable exercise of discretion in determining the extent if any to which a conviction would justify the rigorous measures of forfeiture In this case the principal was placed on security under s. 110 not merely as being a receiver of stolen property but also as being a dangerous man and dacoit and therefore his conviction for a bad offence under s. 325 I. P. C. was held to entail forfeiture. See also 8 P. R. 1915 = 16 Cr L J 287 A bond under section 110 can be forfeited on a conviction under section 323 I P C 4 L 462.

112. Breach of bond for keeping the peace.—Section 121 deals with the description of bonds, one for keeping the peace and the other for good behaviour. A bond to keep the peace cannot be enforced on conviction of any offence other than an offence connected with a breach of the peace itself. Thus a conviction for theft or one for wrongful confinement and extortion will not justify a forfeiture of such bond, 18 W. R. 63. Nor one for abduction of a female 7 P. R. 1906. Nor a secret attempt to poison a person, 22 P. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 605. See also 19 W. R. 48 and Notes to s 514.

113. Not necessary that some offence should be committed to entail forfeiture of bond for keeping the peace.—It is clear from the terms of the bond for keeping the peace that no offence need be committed to entail forfeiture. See Form X, Sch V. All that is required is that the person bound commits a breach or the peace or does any act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace. It was contended that having regard to the language of the penultimate clause of s 502 of Act X of 1872 that there must be evidence that the party bound down had committed an offence. Held "whatever may be the extent of the application of this very wide language (s 502), we are satisfied that it is intended merely as an illustration of some modes in which the peace may be broken, and is not to be read as a definition of the acts which will give rise to the liability to the penalty of the bond, so as to confine the liability to occasions on which some actually punishable offence has been committed, or to render it incumbent on the prosecution in calling upon the defendant to show cause why the penalty should not be levied, to establish the actual commission of an offence. All that is necessary to show is that some act was done which was likely in its consequences to provoke a breach of the peace, and it is not material to consider whether the person bound did the act himself with his own hand, or made use of other persons to do it," 2 M. 169 at p. 173.

114. Breach may be committed anywhere.—If in one district A executes a bond to keep the peace towards B and afterwards A is convicted of having assaulted B in another district, A would forfeit the bond and the Magistrate of the former district could proceed against him under this section, 2 B. L. R. Appx. Cr. 11. This term also covers the dishonest receipt of stolen property in a Native State by a British subject, 28 P. R. 1910 = 199 P. L. R. 1910 = 45 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 635.

115. Procedure on breach.—See s 514. (a) Principal should not be forthwith committed to prison.—When a person forfeits his bond by reason of his conviction for an offence involving a breach of the peace he cannot be forthwith committed to prison for the unexpired portion of the term for which security had been taken, but the amount of his forfeited bond might be exacted, 28 A. 629.

(b) Opportunity must be given to him to show cause.—A Magistrate ought not to forfeit a recognizance to keep the peace, unless the person charged with the breach has had an opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses upon whose evidence the rule to show cause has been issued, 4 C. 865 = 4 C. L. R. 243 (F.B.).

116. Must the forfeiture be enforced immediately?—(a) Yes, according to Punjab and Calcutta. The spirit of s 514 is, that if a Magistrate, who convicts a person of an offence, which involves the forfeiture of his bond under s 107, does not make any order for forfeiture, he must be taken to have decided not to take action on the bond in respect of that particular breach of the peace, and cannot thereafter consider and add to his order by directing forfeiture of the recognizance, 18 P. R. 1915 = 7 P. W. R. 1915 (F.B.) = 14 Cr. L. J. 67; following 25 P. R. 1904; 1 C. L. R. 134; and dissenting from 26 A. 202. If therefore a Criminal Court, knowing that the person charged before it is under security to be of good behaviour, in sentencing that person in the case before it makes no reference to any confiscation of security and takes no steps towards its confiscation, it is not competent for that Court or any Court in a subsequent and separate proceeding to take such steps, 6 P. W. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 194. (b) Contra Allahabad.—The mere fact that no immediate action under s 514 is taken against a person under recognizance to keep the peace or against his surety on a conviction of the former for an offence involving a breach of the peace, is no bar to the taking of such proceedings at a subsequent time, as e.g., after the time for appealing has expired or after an appeal by the principal has been dismissed, 26 A. 202; 3 C. L. R. 406.

117. On forfeiture, are both principal and surety liable to pay?—The bond contemplated by ss 112 and 118 where there are sureties, is one bond for one amount, and is discharged on forfeiture, by payment, of the amount due by either the principal or the surety, 25 P. R. 1894. A person bound over under s 109 having committed an offence, the Magistrate required him to pay Rs 100, the amount of penalty and make the sureties too to pay a like amount held, that the language of ss 109 and 110, leaves no doubt that the sureties to be required under these sections are sureties in the ordinary sense of the term. They undertake that their principal will be of good behaviour and in case of a breach, the principal and sureties are jointly and severally liable for sum named in the bond and no more. The penalty is not required to be paid twice over, once by the principal and once again by the surety, 1905 U. B. R. (Cr. P. C.) 31 = 2 Cr. L. J. 483. See also U. B. R. 1904, at p. 13, which was dissented from in 36 C. 562, where it was held that both the principal and surety are liable to pay as the object of the surety-bond is to prevent crime and not to obtain money for the Crown and that Form XI, Sch. V, confirmed the view that the object of requiring a surety is to get an additional security for the principal's securing the peace and not to recover the bond amount, 4 L. 462; 5 L. 448. In this case 36 Cr. L. 562 was dissented from.

Held, that a bond for good behaviour under s. 110 is for one amount and is discharged on forfeiture by the payment of that amount either by the principal or by the surety. In no case can a larger amount be recovered either from principal or the surety or from both (36 C. 562 not followed). 4 L. 462.

118. Bond cannot be enforced more than once.—Where a bond has been forfeited and a portion of the penalty recovered, it cannot again be enforced on a subsequent conviction, 11 P. R. 1889. A bond cannot be renewed without fresh proceedings being taken under s. 112 7 M. L. T. 90 = 11 Cr. L. J. 244; U. B. R. 1. 159 = 14 Cr. L. J. 430. A Magistrate may remit any portion of the full amount under s. 514 (5), but such a remission is clearly an extinction of the liability of the parties to it for the amount remitted and once the bond is forfeited there is an end of it, (1913) U. B. R. 1. 159 = 14 Cr. L. J. 430.

119. Bond not according to law cannot be enforced.—Where a bond was executed under a mistake in the form of bonds under s. 107 while a bond under s. 110 had been ordered held that the bond was void and the error not cured under s. 537, 32 P. R. 1903.

120. Bond cannot be forfeited for offence committed before execution.—When the offence was committed prior to the date on which the bond was executed the bond could not be forfeited by reason of the commission of the offence, 22 P. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 605.

121. Surety bond executed during inquiry remains in force until execution of the final bond.—A bond executed by a person who stood surety for the appearance of the accused up to the conclusion of the case under this section is in force, where a Magistrate holds the case proved against the accused until the accused has appeared with his sureties and executed his bond, 32 P. R. 1914 = 16 Cr. L. J. 74.

122. Forfeiture of bond for good behaviour under the English Law.—The use of the expression "good behaviour" involves no obscurity to anyone acquainted with its history. By the Statute 34 Edw. III, Chap. I Justices were empowered "to bind over to the good behaviour towards the Sovereign and his people all of them that be not of good fame to the intent that the people be not troubled or endangered, nor the peace diminished. It was realized that the expressions not of good fame and 'good behaviour' left much to be determined by the Magistrate himself but it seems to have been very early accepted as settled law that a recognizance for good behaviour would not be forfeited by barely giving fresh cause of suspicion of that which perhaps may never actually happen, for though it is just to compel suspected persons to give security to the public against misbehaviour that is apprehended yet it would be hard upon such suspicion, without the proof of any actual crime to punish them by forfeiture of the recognizance (Stephens, Vol. IV, Bk. VI, Chapter XIII). The common law therefore interprets a recognizance for good behaviour in terms even less wide than s. 121, Cr. P. C. and s. 23 of the Sindh Regulation III of 1892. The expression 'to be of good behaviour' when used in a recognizance had under the common law a well-recognized and limited meaning long before it was introduced into the Statute Book, and here are no grounds whatever for supposing that the Indian Legislature intended to widen this meaning further than they have done in clear terms in s. 121 Cr. P. C. and s. 23 of the Sindh Regulation '7 S. L. R. 194 = 15 Cr. L. J. 544.

123. Deposit of security amount by principal with surety.—See Note 162.

XVI.—TRANSFER.

124. Under s. 192, District Magistrate, etc., may transfer cases of which he has taken cognizance.—It was held in 35 C. 243 that s. 192 applied to any case cognizable by a Criminal Court, and was not restricted to criminal cases only—(a) Cases under s. 107—The object of s. 107 is merely to restrict the institution of proceedings against persons residing outside the districts, and not to restrict the power of the District Magistrate to transfer such proceedings to a Subordinate Magistrate after intimation 31 C. 350. But the transfer cannot be made to a Magistrate (e.g., with second class powers who is incompetent to conduct proceedings under this section, 37 A. 20. See 8 C. 851; 22 C. 895 and 24 A. 151. See, however, 13 C. W. N. 580 = 9 Cr. L. J. 148 (b) Cases under s. 110—A District Magistrate is competent under s. 192 to transfer a case under s. 110 35 C. 243; 24 A. 151; 37 A. 20. It was held in 1 S. L. R. 2 = 9 Cr. L. J. 246 following 31 C. 350.

and 24 A. 151 that it was competent to a District Magistrate to transfer proceedings which had been properly instituted before a competent Magistrate, to a Magistrate subordinate to himself who would then be competent to proceed with the inquiry even though he was not competent to institute the same.

125. Under s. 523, District Magistrate, etc., may withdraw or recall cases under this Chapter.—See s 523 and Notes thereto.—Under s 523, a District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate has power before the completion of the inquiry to withdraw or recall any case falling under this section from a Subordinate Magistrate and try it himself. So can a Chief Presidency Magistrate in a Presidency town.

126. Jurisdiction of High Court to transfer cases under this Chapter.—See s 526. Excepting Punjab and Bombay it is held that proceedings under this Chapter may be transferred by the High Court,

(a) Cases under s 107—32 A. 642; 41 C. 719. In 17 C. W. N. 536 = 15 Cr. L. J. 382 the undesirability of transferring preventive proceedings from one district to another was pointed out.

(b) Cases under s 110—Proceedings may be transferred from one district to another, 28 C. 709; 11 C. W. N. 60XXXI; 32 A. 662. In 16 A. 9; 31 A. 47; 19 A. 291 it was laid down that proceedings cannot be transferred to a different district as no Magistrate other than one within whose local jurisdiction the person is found, against whom proceedings are instituted has jurisdiction.

127. Transfer must be to a competent Magistrate.—The transfer may give local jurisdiction, 24 A. 151; but if the Magistrate to whom the case is transferred is not competent as being duly empowered he can not conduct the proceedings. It was held in 37 A. 20 distinguishing 24 A. 151, that the District Magistrate cannot transfer the proceedings under this section to a Magistrate who is not competent to conduct proceedings under this Chapter, e.g., a Magistrate with second-class powers. In 24 A. 151 the transfer was to a Magistrate of the first class competent to conduct the proceedings, but without local jurisdiction. A Magistrate of the first class having jurisdiction throughout a district, but not specially empowered under this section cannot exercise jurisdiction in a case under it upon a transfer thereof to him by the District Magistrate under s 192. Ratanlal 838; 22 C. 898.

128. Transfer by a Magistrate having no power.—When a Magistrate having no power to transfer a case under s 110, transfers the case erroneously and in good faith to another Magistrate, the proceeding before the latter Magistrate will not be void, as such transfer would only amount to an irregularity which would be covered by the provisions of s 529, cl. (f), 35 C. 243. See also 4 C. W. N. 821 and Notes under s 529.

130. Is power of transfer taken away after Magistrate 'has taken action'?—See s 117 (1). Proceedings under s 110 had been started against G and two others before a first-class Magistrate of M. When the case came on for hearing, two of the persons admitted the facts alleged against them and offered to find security. Thereupon the Magistrate informed G although no evidence had been recorded against him, that unless he also admitted and furnished necessary securities, he would be dealt with severely and would be sent to jail. Upon an application for transfer, held, that having regard to the fact that the Magistrate concerned has 'acted' within the meaning of this section, the High Court has no power to make an order for transfer, 19 A. 291. It was held in 15 Bom. L. R. 713 = 13 Cr. L. J. 748 that a first-class Magistrate who had initiated proceedings and taken evidence was not competent to send up the case to the District Magistrate. The Ruling in 19 A. 291 was under s 117 of the old Code. The word 'acted' is now omitted, and for it the words 'has taken action' have been substituted in the present s 117. The result seems to be that there will be no difficulty now in transferring a case before a Magistrate 'has taken action,' i.e., recorded evidence under the section.

XXVII.—FURTHER INQUIRY AND RE-INQUIRY.

131. Can further inquiry be directed under s. 437 in cases of discharge under this Chapter?—See s 437 and Notes thereto. There are conflicting decisions as to whether further inquiry under s 437 could be directed in the case of a person discharged under s 119, but see the amendment of s 436 and Note 21 to s 436. See also 2 R. 30; 46 A. 285.

Madras, Punjab and Upper Burma hold that no order for further inquiry can be made. A person proceeded against under this Chapter is not an accused person within the meaning of s 437 and the order of discharge under s 119 is not the same as 'discharge' in s 437, 33 M. 65; 7 M. L. J. 104 = 11 Cr. L. J. 251;

The fact that the word 'accused' is nowhere used in Chap. VIII, coupled with the provisions of s 119, by which in proceedings of this kind the final order must always be one of discharge, when a case for requiring security is not made out, is sufficient to show that the provisions of s 437 were not intended to apply to proceedings under this Chapter (1914) U. B. R. 3 = 15 Cr. L. J. 531. See also 36 M. 315.

Bombay, Allahabad and Calcutta held that further inquiry may be directed. See 16 B. 661; 35 B. 401; 1899 A. W. N. 203; 21 A. 107; 24 A. 148; 36 A. 147; 23 C. 493; 4 C. L. R. 452; 27 C. 656; 36 C. 163. In 1900 A. W. N. 206; 27 C. 662; 33 C. 8 and 13 C. W. N. CGLXI, however the contrary view was held. See also the article in 3 C. W. N. CLXY, where the conclusion in 21 A. 107 is questioned. 19 A. L. J. 935 following 21 A. 107.

132. Is s. 403 or s. 494 a bar to a re-inquiry on the same facts?—It was held in 36 M. 315 approving 33 M. 85 that neither s. 494 nor s. 403 applies to security proceedings under Chap. VIII. S. 495 applies only where the proceedings can end in acquittal or discharge of the accused. A proceeding under this Chapter does not terminate in either of the two ways. Proceedings drawn up against certain petitioners terminated in their discharge as the Police report, dated 27th July, on which proceedings were instituted did not exist. The Police report was dated 29th July, but were referred to in the proceedings by mistake as of the 27th July. Another Magistrate drew up fresh proceedings on the Police report of 29th July, held that the present proceedings based on a Police report which was not the foundation of the former proceedings were not invalid, 14 Cr. L. J. 189 (C). See, however, 35 B. 401. See also Note 57 above.

XVIII.—APPEAL.

133; 134; 135; 136. Appeal lies against orders requiring security to keep the peace as well as against orders requiring security for good behaviour.—Under the old Act distinction was made between an order for security to keep the peace and an order for security to be of good behaviour, but now by the amendment to s. 406 all orders under s. 118 whether to give security for keeping the peace or for good behaviour are made appealable. Under s. 406 an appeal ordinarily lies to the Court of Session against an order of any Magistrate except the Presidency Magistrate from whose order an appeal lies to the High Court. So under the present amendment, 27 A. 623; 11 Bom. L. R. 740; 25 C. W. N. 383, have become obsolete. See s. 406 and Notes thereon.

137. No appeal against order of Sessions Judge made on a reference from Subordinate Magistrate.—See s 123(2) (3). No right of appeal lies from the order of a Sessions Court fixing the period of detention on an accused person refusing to furnish security, 24 W. R. 12. When the Sessions Judge confirms the order of the Magistrate the order of the Magistrate merges into that of the Sessions Judge and there is no appeal, 23 P. R. 1886; 15 P. R. 1900; 1893 A. W. N. 183, 35 B. 271 and Note 134. The order is not a conviction on a trial held by a Sessions Judge, nor a sentence of a District Magistrate subject to confirmation of the Sessions Judge, and therefore under s. 404 no appeal would lie to the High Court from an order made by District Magistrate under this section and on reference confirmed by the Sessions Judge, 9 C. 878; 24 W. R. 12.

138. Appeal against order directing forfeiture of bond.—See ss 514 and 515 and Notes thereto.

139. No appeal lies to the Privy Council.—See 18 C. L. J. 119 = 14 Cr. L. J. 338 under s. 41 of the Letters Patent, see Appendix.

XIX.—REVISION.

140. All orders subject to revision by High Court.—We have considered the question whether these orders should be subject to appeal or revision, and we have come to the conclusion that they ought to be subject to revision, as the High Court can then act of its own motion as well as on the petition of the party aggrieved. In case there should be any doubt on the point, we have provided in s. 439 (6) that all orders under the Code (not expressly excepted) made by an inferior Court shall be subject to revision by the High Court.—See Com. Rep. Orders passed by District Magistrates are not appealable but the High Court can revise them on the same principles as apply generally to the revision of other non-appealable orders 10 P. R. 1899. See Notes to s. 439. For instance of a case where on merits High Court will interfere, see 17 Cr. L. J. 461. See also 14 A. L. J. 215.

(i) High Court may set aside the initial order.—The High Court has power to revise the initial order under section 112 if sufficient grounds are shown, 18 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 338; even if the Magistrate has before him a Police report prima facie sufficient to justify the commencement of the proceedings, 17 C. W. N. 238 = 16 C. L. J. 467 = 14 Cr. L. J. 5. In this case the High Court was of opinion that proceedings were not bona fide. See also 32 C. L. J. 131; 20 B. 543; 17 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 389; 8 S. L. R. 207 = 16 Cr. L. J. 235. The High Court may stay further proceedings, 14 C. W. N. CLXXII.

141. High Court will interfere only on strong and clear grounds.—The power to demand security from certain classes of persons suspected, is a power that is almost as much of an executive as of a judicial nature. It is a preventive jurisdiction. The District Magistrate who is the chief executive officer of a district is primarily responsible for the maintenance of the law and order in his district, and the jurisdiction with which he is invested in regard to suspected persons mentioned in the section is a very large one. The provisions of the Code indicate that the Legislature intends the responsibility for the due exercise in individual cases of this particular kind of preventive jurisdiction to rest chiefly with the District Magistrate, and it would be going counter to the spirit of the Code in this respect, to give to persons ordered to furnish security a remedy in the nature of an appeal to this Court, which has not been granted to them by the Legislature. Therefore the Chief Court would interfere with the orders passed by a Magistrate only on the very clearest and strongest grounds, grounds which demonstrate that there has been in the particular case miscarriage of justice. The Chief Court on the revision side will be bound by the findings of facts of the District Magistrate and will not treat an application for revision as a quasi appeal, 23 P. R. 1839. When the judgment of a District Judge deciding an appeal under section 110 is very short and does not show that the evidence has all examined and carefully weighed, the High Court will interfere in revision, 13 Cr. L. J. 9 (A). See also 6 A. L. J. 437 = 9 Cr. L. J. 593; 8 P. R. 1904; 42 P. R. 1835; 12 Cr. L. J. 543 (Oudh). The High Court very seldom interferes with orders under this section in revision, except where the circumstances are very exceptional. So where the applicant was sent to jail while the inquiry was in progress, the High Court held that it was an illegality which prejudiced his interest in the inquiry, 16 Bom. L. R. 943 = 16 Cr. L. J. 91. If there is no evidence on the record, the order will be set aside on revision, 34 P. W. R. 1912 = 195 P. L. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 720. When there is nothing on the record to show that an inquiry is required by s. 117 was held, the order must be set aside, 37 A. 30. That the accused was convicted at a trial is no foundation for proceedings under this section.

In 22 A. L. J. 678 it was held that the High Court would rarely interfere in revision in cases under s. 110, but it had to be satisfied that the evidence was of a character which would reasonably support the inference that it was necessary in the public interest to send a man to jail or to bind him down.

142. Order refusing to accept sureties.—The question as to whether a particular person is fit or not is for the Magistrate to decide, the matter is left to his discretion, 8 C. L. J. 243 = 13 C. W. N. 80. The discretion conferred upon a Magistrate by s. 122 is a very wide one and the High Court will not slightly interfere with the same. 12 A. L. J. 1004 = 16 Cr. L. J. 54, but if the discretion has not been judiciously exercised the High Court will interfere, 15 Cr. L. J. 727 (A). When no reasons were given why a surety was rejected, the High Court directed the sureties to be accepted, 13 C. W. N. XXVII. See Notes under Heading XIV.

143. Complainant has no right of audience in the High Court.—Where a rule is issued on a Magistrate to show cause and the order sought to be set aside is one only intended to secure the peace of the district by binding down the petitioner, the Magistrate is the only party entitled to be heard. Any other party interested in the result of the order, cannot appear, 25 C. 798.

XX.—NATURE OF PROCEEDINGS UNDER THIS CHAPTER—WHETHER PERSONS PROCEEDED AGAINST ARE "ACCUSED" PERSONS?

144. Is a proceeding under this section 'criminal,' a 'trial' or an 'inquiry' and the person proceeded against 'an accused.'—It is hard to reconcile the various decisions as to the nature of the proceedings under this Chapter and the status of the person proceeded against. All the cases bearing on the subject, have been brought together here.

The procedure prescribed by s. 117 for conducting inquiries under Chapter VIII is that for conducting trials. Persons ordered to give security may, under s. 123 be imprisoned. An order under s. 106 (3) is treated as an enforcement of sentence, s. 423 (1) (d). Taking into consideration these facts, it was held in 28 M. L. J. 307 = 1915 M. W. N. 224 = 16 Cr. L. J. 303, following 27 M. 510, that proceedings under this Chapter are of a criminal nature.

145. Proceeding in a criminal trial within the meaning of s. 15 of the Letters Patent.—In the above case of 28 M. L. J. 307, it was further held that though the definition of 'inquiry,' s. 4 (p) be used as a text, such proceedings might fall within the scope of 'an inquiry' rather than of 'a trial,' it was not to be supposed that when the Letters Patent were enacted in 1815 this definition was in the mind of the Legislature and therefore the proceedings of a Magistrate under this Chapter are proceedings in a criminal 'trial' and any order passed in appeal or revision in connection with such a proceeding is also an order in a criminal 'trial' and there is no appeal against such an order under s 15 of the Letters Patent, 27 M. 510 followed

146. Order of imprisonment on failure to give security is not a conviction of an offence within the meaning of s. 75, I P. C.—A previous order under this section requiring the accused to give security for good behaviour cannot be taken into consideration for the purpose of enhancing sentence, when the accused is convicted of an offence under the I P. C. An order under this section not being a conviction, s 75, I P. C., is not applicable, 1 Bur. B. R. 490. See also 1893 A. W. N. 43.

147. The person proceeded against is not an accused within the meaning of s. 161.—See 36 A. 262; 5 Bom. L. R. 27; 32 C. 80 and Note 16 to s 167

148. A proceeding under this Chapter is a 'case' within the meaning of s. 192.—See 28 C. 703; 29 C. 339; 31 C. 350; 35 C. 243; 24 A. 151 and Note 124

149. The person proceeded against is not an 'accused' within the meaning of s. 250.—No compensation can be awarded under s 250 to a person proceeded against under this Chapter See 25 B. 48; 15 A. 385; 7 A. L. J. 743; 36 A. 382; 4 P. R. 1896; 33 P. R. 1902 and Note 11 to s 250

150. Person proceeded against is an 'accused' within the meaning of s. 340.—See 23 C. 493; 21 A. 107; 13 P. R. 900 and Note under s 340

151. Whether person proceeded against is an 'accused' within the meaning of s. 342?—See Note 47

152. A proceeding under this Chapter is an 'inquiry' within the meaning of s. 350.—See 4 C. L. R. 452; 23 W. R. 62 and Note 5 to s 340

153. A person 'discharged' under this Chapter is not 'acquitted' of an offence within the meaning of s. 403.—See 33 M. 85; 36 M. 315; 27 C. 662; 14 Cr. L. J. 189 (C), Note 10 to s. 403 and Note 132

154. Is an order of imprisonment under s. 123 same as sentence of imprisonment under s 397?—It has been held in 27 M. 525; 31 M. 515; 14 P. R. 695; Ratanlal 1970; 34 B. 326; 7 S. L. R. 203 = 15 Cr. L. J. 592; 8 N. L. R. 20 = 13 Cr. L. J. 189, that a person undergoing imprisonment under this section for failure to furnish security to be of good behaviour is not undergoing a sentence of imprisonment within meaning of s. 397, so that the term of imprisonment for an offence cannot be made to commence on the expiration of the period for which he had been committed, such a person is merely committed to prison and not sentenced See 4 M. H. C. R Appx. XLVI. Contra 30 A. 334; Ratanlal 774. The words "committed to prison" in sub-sec. (1) and "detain in prison" in sub-sec. (2) are equivalent to a sentence of imprisonment, 30 A. 334.

155. Proceeding under this Chapter is not a 'trial' within the meaning of s. 410.—See 9 C. 878, where it was held that no appeal lay against the order of a Sessions Judge directing imprisonment under s 123

156. Whether the person proceeded against is an 'accused person,' within the meaning of s. 437?—See Note 131 and Notes 21 and 22 to s 437

157. A proceeding under this Chapter is a 'charge' within the meaning of s. 463.—See 38 C. 163, where it was held that the party against whom proceedings under s. 107 are instituted is an 'accused person' and his case comes under s. 443 if he is an European British subject. See Note 4 to s 443

158. Whether proceedings are 'criminal cases' within the meaning of s. 526?—See 41 C. 719; 23 M. L. J. 307 = 16 Cr. L. J. 303, Note 126 and Note 11 to s 526. In 5 P. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 563, it was held that proceedings under s 110 not being a 'criminal case' the Chief Court of Punjab had no jurisdiction under s 528 or under s 33 of the Punjab Courts Act to transfer the proceedings. The observations of the referring Judge in Cr M case 28 of 1913 and 25 B. 179 were approved. The Calcutta and Madras view was not followed See the referring judgment of RATTIGAN J., in 16 Cr. L. J. 249.

159. Proceeding is a 'case' within the meaning of s. 528.—See 8 C. 831 and 33 C. 243 and Notes under ss 192 and 528.

XXI.—MISCELLANEOUS.

160. Disqualifying interest of Magistrate to take proceedings under this Chapter.—When a Magistrate imports his own personal knowledge of the character of a party in addition to other information in instituting proceedings under this section, he is not competent to inquire into the truth of the information under s 117, 29 C. 392; 27 P. R. 1903. See also 2 A. 405; 4 P. R. 1893. If a Magistrate institutes proceedings on materials based on his own knowledge of the character of a party he is not a proper person to proceed with the trial under this section. Though perhaps, s. 191 might not be applicable to proceedings under this Chapter, yet, the principle holds that no man ought to be a Judge in his own case, 29 C. 892; 27 P. R. 1903; 2 A. 405. The Magistrate should exercise the greatest caution and impartiality and be careful not to be influenced by outside gossip and vague rumour. Cases under this Chapter ought to be decided solely on evidence taken in Court and a Magistrate is not entitled to rely on his own personal knowledge, 4 P. R. 1898.

161 Damages for maliciously instituting proceedings under this Chapter.—A person who lays an information before a Magistrate in consequence of which proceedings are instituted under this section, may be liable in damages for malicious prosecution, 9 O. C. 357 dissenting from 13 M. L. J. 370; 17 C. L. J. 105; 20 C. L. J. 518, 43 A. 402 following 41 A. 503.

162. Principal cannot recover money deposited with surety for giving security.—The object of the law will be frustrated if the amount for which a surety is responsible is deposited with him by or on behalf of the person for whose conduct he undertakes responsibility. He would then only be responsible in name. In 1 A. 781, it was held that no suit can be brought against the surety for the return of the deposit, the consideration for such agreement being unlawful.

163 Power to cancel order.—In 10 W. R. 40, it was held that under the 1881 Code a Magistrate has power to cancel an order summoning a person to show cause why he should not enter into a bond to keep the peace. Under the present Code, see the provisions of ss 125, 126 and 539 (f) and also 1 C. W. N. 394 and 29 C. 455 as to cancellation of bonds taken under this Chapter.

164. Statement under s 107 contained in the complaint is absolutely privileged.—Statements made in a complaint to a Magistrate under s 107 of the Code praying that security should be taken from a person for keeping the peace and a repetition of the same before the Police are absolutely privileged. And no action for defamation in respect of such is maintainable. 49 M. 315.

165. Whether s 360 of the Code applies to inquiries under this Chapter.—It is held that s 360 of the Code is not mandatory in proceedings under s 107 as the procedure for s 107 is that of summons cases according to s. 355, 52 C 668, but as far as s 110 is concerned it is held that s 360 is mandatory and non-compliance with s 360 vitiates proceedings under s 110 because the evidence in an enquiry under s 110 must be recorded as in a warrant case, i.e., under s 356 52 C. 470, also 52 C. 832.

124. (1) Whenever the District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate is of opinion that any person imprisoned for failing to give security under this Chapter, whether by the order of such Magistrate or that of his predecessor in office, or of some Subordinate Magistrate, may be released without hazard to the community or to any other person, he may order such person to be discharged.

Power to release persons imprisoned for failing to give security

(2) Whenever any person has been imprisoned for failing to give security under this Chapter the Chief Presidency or District Magistrate may (unless the order has been made by some Court superior to his own) make an order reducing the amount of the security or the number of sureties or the time for which security has been required.

(3) An order under sub-section (1) may direct the discharge of such person either without conditions or upon any conditions which such person accepts.

Provided that any condition imposed shall cease to be operative when the period for which such person was ordered to give security has expired.

(4) The Local Government may prescribe the conditions upon which a conditional discharge may be made.

(5) If any condition upon which any such person has been discharged is, in the opinion of the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate by whom the order of discharge was made or of his successor, not fulfilled, he may cancel the same.

(6) When a conditional order of discharge has been cancelled under sub-section (5), such person may be arrested by any Police-officer without warrant, and shall thereupon be produced before the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate.

Unless such person then gives security in accordance with the terms of the original order for the unexpired portion of the term for which he has in the first instance committed or ordered to be detained (such portion being deemed to be a period equal to the period between the date of the breach of the conditions of discharge and the date on which except for such conditional discharge he would have been entitled to release) the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate may remand such person to prison to undergo such unexpired portion

A person remanded to prison under this sub-section shall subject to the provisions of section 122 be released at any time on giving security in accordance with the terms of the original order or the unexpired portion aforesaid to the Court or Magistrate by whom such order was made, or to its or his successor

Notes.—1 District Magistrate.—The powers of the District Magistrate under this section are distinct from his appellate powers under s. 406. In the town of Madras the Commissioner of Police exercises the powers of a District Magistrate and orders a discharge under this section. See Act III of 1888 (C) the old Act \ III of 1867. It entirely rests with the District Magistrate who is responsible for the peace of his district to decide when and under what circumstances it would be safe for him to act under this section 1893 A W N 183, 1905 A W N 143.

2 Proceedings of Magistrate not empowered void.—If any Magistrate not being empowered by law in that behalf discharges a person lawfully bound to be of good behaviour his proceedings are void. S 530 cl. (e) b it no provision is made to meet the case of a Magistrate not empowered discharging a person lawfully bound to keep the peace

Power of District Magistrate to cancel any bond for keeping the peace or good behaviour

125. The Chief Presidency or District Magistrate may at any time for sufficient reasons to be recorded in writing cancel any bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour executed under this Chapter by order of any Court in his district not superior to his Court

Notes.—1 Scope of the power conferred by the section.—In Calcutta Madras Punjab and Central Provinces it has been held that this section permits the District Magistrate to go into the facts and hold that there never was any ground for the bond. The jurisdiction conferred on District Magistrates by this section is not appellate or revisional but an original jurisdiction in the exercise of which the District Magistrate may cancel any bond when it is made to appear that by reason of circumstances arising subsequent to the date of the execution of the bond the continuance of the same is not necessary. But he has no power to declare that a bond to keep the peace was never necessary because there is no appeal from orders requiring security to keep the peace except that an Appellate Court can under s. 423 (d) on an appeal properly before it set aside an order made under s. 106 should it see fit to do so. All that a District Magistrate can do is to make a reference to the High Court under s. 438 if the case be deemed to be a proper one 32 C. 943. But this ruling was expressly overruled in 34 C. 1 (F.B.) where it was held a District Magistrate has power under this section to direct the cancellation of a bond to keep the peace executed pursuant to an order of Subordinate Magistrate for any reasons which may appear sufficient to him. He is not restricted to grounds which may have arisen subsequent to the execution of the bond and which may render to continuance of the bond unnecessary. He may cancel the bond on the ground that it should never have been required. Followed in 12 P. W. R. 1903 = 7 Cr. L. J. 248. This decision was approved and followed by the Madras High Court, 37 M. 125 (F.B.). So also in 11 N. L. R. 98 = 16 Cr. L. J. 553, it was held that the District Magistrate may cancel the bond for the reasons that the materials before the Subordinate Magistrate are not sufficient. See also 37 C. 72. Contra Allahabad and Oudh. In 35 A. 103, TUDBALL, J. was of opinion that the cancellation of bonds contemplated in this section can be only on the ground that the bonds are no longer necessary and that a District Magistrate could not treat the application against an order passed by a first-class Magistrate under this Chapter as an appeal and come to the conclusion that this order was void ab initio. The Calcutta Rulings were not referred to. In 18 Cr. L. J. 721 (O) the decision in 32 C. 943 was followed 44 A. 614 20 A. L. J. 521.

2. Bond cannot be cancelled before it is executed.—An order for cancelling a bond under this section can never be made before it is actually executed 32 C. 943.

3. Security bond cannot be cancelled and accused sent to jail.—A District Magistrate cannot under this section cancel the security bond accepted by a Subordinate Magistrate and order that the person proceeded against should be imprisoned until a fresh security-bond is given merely because in the opinion of the District Magistrate the surety accepted was not a fit and proper person 29 C. 453. The bond contemplated by this section is the bond which has been given by the person against whom the order has been passed under s 118 and not the bond of the surety, 8 A. L. J. 639 = 12 Cr. L. J. 430. See also 16 P. R. 1905 = 120 P. L. R. 1905 = 2 Cr. L. J. 278. Where a Deputy Magistrate directed the petitioner to furnish security for good behaviour and accepted the sureties tendered, but the matter somehow coming to the notice of the Deputy Commissioner, the latter officer cancelled the order of the Deputy Magistrate on the ground that the security was insufficient and ordered the issue of warrants for the petitioner's arrest. Held, that the order of the Deputy Commissioner was inconsistent with the spirit of this section read with ss 124 and 126 and was illegal. If the Deputy Commissioner was dissatisfied with his subordinate's inquiry as to the sufficiency of the security, he should have held such inquiry as he thought necessary, after notice to the parties concerned and reported the matter to the High Court. The law gives him no power to deal with it himself, 8 O. C. 245 = 2 Cr. L. J. 507. See also 7 O. C. 413; 1 C. W. N. 394.

4. On cancelling bond, further inquiry cannot be directed.—A District Magistrate cannot after setting aside an order to give security for good behaviour, direct further inquiry as there is no provision of law authorizing District Magistrate to direct 'further inquiry' in proceedings for security for good behaviour, 83 C. 8.

5. Magistrate cannot institute proceedings under s 476, infra.—As laid down in 34 C. 1, a District Magistrate has full power to cancel the bond for reasons which appear to him to be sufficient, but that section does not give him a right to hear an appeal against the order of a Subordinate Magistrate passed under s 107, so as to justify the District Magistrate to institute proceedings under s. 476. In such a case a proceeding under s 125 is not a judicial proceeding 37 C. 72.

6. Magistrate must give opportunity to the parties concerned to represent their case.—A District Magistrate fixed a date for hearing of a petition to cancel the bond, and no intimation was given to petitioners that they would be heard in camp. On the said date, the case was called, and the petitioners could obviously put in no appearance. The petition was dismissed. Held, that the Magistrate should have heard them, having given them a date for appearance, 53 P. L. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 143. In 15 A. L. J., p. 469 the point whether an order under section 125 of the District Magistrate was a judicial act or whether it was merely an executive function was raised, but was not decided and it was held that while making an order under section 125, a Magistrate ought to hear the applicant or his pleader before the application is rejected. Inter alia it was also remarked that application for revision made to the High Court in respect of orders to give security to keep the peace ought not to be rejected solely on the ground that the applicant has not first made an application to the District Magistrate.

7. Effect of cancellation.—Cancellation of the bond by the District Magistrate under this section will discharge the accused and his surety from all liability. The District Magistrate will ordinarily cancel the bond, if there is no ground for thinking that a breach of the peace or other offence is likely, or the bond has been wrongly taken 1905 A. W. N. 143.

8. Cancellation by Magistrate not authorized void.—If a bond to keep the peace is cancelled by any Magistrate, other than a District or Chief Presidency Magistrate, the cancellation is void, s 530, cl. (f).

9. Where proceedings under section 107 were started in one district and transferred to another.—A District Magistrate under section 125 means the District Magistrate of the district to which proceedings are transferred from another district, where proceedings under section 107 were started in one district and transferred to another the District Magistrate of the latter has alone jurisdiction under section 125, 23 C. W. N. 933.

126. (1) Any surety for the peaceable conduct or good behaviour of another person may at any time apply to a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class to cancel any bond executed under this Chapter within the local limits of his jurisdiction.

Discharge of sureties

(2) On such application being made, the Magistrate shall issue his summons or warrant, as he thinks fit requiring the person for whom such surety is bound to appear or to be brought before him.

* Sub-section (1) of s 126 has been re-numbered as s 124 a by Act XVIII of 1913.

† Words in the inverted commas were substituted by Act XXIII of 1922.

and shall order such person to give for the unexpired portion of the term of such bond fresh security of the same description as the original security. Every such order shall for the purposes of ss 121, 122, 123 and 124 be deemed to be an order made under section 106 or section 118 as the case may be.

Notes—1 On application of surety the Magistrate is bound to cancel.—When an application is made by a surety under this section the Magistrate has no option but to cancel the surety bond but not until the principal appears or is brought before him. The principal if then unable to give fresh security will be committed to jail under s 123 (1).

2 Appeal.—An appeal will lie under s 406 from orders made under this section in respect of security bonds for good behaviour since orders under this section are deemed to be made under s 118.

3. Effect of cancellation.—When the effect of an order discharging a surety is to remit the suspect to prison for a term exceeding one year the Magistrate is bound to refer the case to the Sessions Court. S S L R. 87 = 12 Cr L J 410

CHAPTER IX

UNLAWFUL ASSEMBLIES

"The rules for calling out and employing the military in aid of the civil power were first enacted in the Code of 1872 and embody (according to Sir J STEPHEN) the principles laid down in the charge of TINDAL C.J. to the grand jury of Bristol in 1832 as to the duty of soldiers in dispersing rioters. The rules carry the law some what further than it has yet been carried in England as they expressly indemnify all persons acting in good faith in compliance with requisition under ss. 128 and 130 and forbid prosecutions of Magistrates, soldiers and Police-officers except with the sanction of the Governor-General in Council.—Stokes Anglo-Indian Codes Vol II Introduction p 11

127. (1) Any Magistrate or officer in charge of a Police-station may command any unlawful assembly or any assembly of five or more persons likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace to disperse and it shall thereupon be the duty of the members of such assembly to disperse accordingly.

(2) This section applies also to the Police in the town [] of Calcutta [].

Notes.—1 Definition of the term "unlawful assembly."—An assembly of five or more persons is designated an unlawful assembly if the common object of the persons composing that assembly is—first—to overawe by criminal force or show of criminal force the Legislative or Executive Government of India or the Government of any Presidency or any Lieutenant Governor or any public servant in the exercise of the lawful power of such public servant or second—to resist the execution of any law, or of any legal process, or third—to commit any mischief or criminal trespass or other offence fourth—by means of criminal force or show of criminal force to any person to take or obtain possession of any property or to deprive any person of the enjoyment of a right of way or of the use of water or other incorporeal right of which he is in possession or enjoyment or to enforce any right or supposed right or fifth—by means of criminal force or show of criminal force to compel any person to do what he is not legally bound to do or to omit to do what he is legally entitled to do.

Explanation.—An assembly which was not unlawful when it assembled may subsequently become an unlawful assembly.—S 142 I P C.

2 Punishment.—Whoever joins or continues in an unlawful assembly knowing that such unlawful assembly has been commanded in the manner prescribed by law to disperse shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years or with fine or with both.—S 145 I P C.

* The whole of this Chapter as far as it applies the City of Bombay is repealed by the City of Bombay Act of 1905. Crs 2 (1) and Schedule.

Whoever knowingly joins or continues in any assembly of five or more persons likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace after such assembly has been lawfully commanded to disperse, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months or with fine or with both

Explanation—If the assembly is an unlawful assembly within the meaning of s 141, the offender will be punishable under s 145—S 151 I P C

3. An order by a superior Police officer lawful—An order to disperse passed by an officer superior in rank to an officer in charge of a Police-station is a lawful order within the meaning of this section 7 B 42 See s 151

4. Disturbance of public peace.—Where the object of three persons was to draw a crowd and their action was such as was calculated to and did draw a crowd of fifty or sixty persons likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace held that the gathering constituted an unlawful assembly 7 B 42

5. Relations of Subordinate Magistrates to Police—In all cases of an unlawful assembly, a riot or a disturbance of the peace having occurred or being apprehended the Police will take the initiative but if they find themselves not strong enough for the occasion immediate application is to be made to the nearest Magistrate which under the terms of Act V of 1861 means all persons within the general Police district exercising all or any of the powers of a Magistrate and therefore includes the Tahsildars who are bound on requisition from the Police Inspector to appoint from the residents of the neighbourhood as many special Police-officers as the said Inspector may deem necessary All revenue chuprasis and messengers of all kinds may legally be appointed special Police-officers Thus the whole resources of the Civil Government are at once on a special occasion brought to the assistance of the Police for the purpose of restoring public order—Punjab Pol Cir Chap XXI III p 318 Punjab Cir 320

6. Lawful assembly may be commanded to disperse.—S 151 I P C clearly contemplates lawful assemblies as the explanation shows and a perfectly innocent and lawful assembly may be lawfully commanded to disperse by a Magistrate 22 P R 1887

7. Duty of Magistrates under English law—In R v Pinney 3 St. Tr (US) 11, it was laid down that the general rules of law require of Magistrates that at the time of riots they should keep the peace restrain the rioters and pursue and take them and to enable them to do this they may call on all the King's subjects to assist them which they are bound to do upon reasonable warning and in point of law a Magistrate would be justified in giving fire-arms to those who thus come to assist him but it would be imprudent in him to give them to those who might not know their use and who might be under no control and who not being used to act together might be cut off from the rest of the Police and the arms by these means get into the hands of rioters It is no part of the duty of a Magistrate to go out and head the constables or to marshal and arrange them neither is it any part of his duty to hire men to assist him in putting down a riot not to keep a body of men as a reserve to act as occasion may require. Nor is a Magistrate bound to ride with the military if he gives the military officers orders to act that is all that is required of him Russell 431—439

128. If upon being so commanded any such assembly does not disperse or if without being so commanded it conducts itself in such a manner as to show a determination not to disperse any Magistrate or officer in charge of a Police station whether within or without the Presidency towns may proceed to disperse such assembly by force and may require the assistance of any male person not being an officer or soldier in His Majesty's Army or a Volunteer enrolled under the Indian Volunteers Act 1869* and acting as such for the purpose of dispersing such assembly and if necessary, arresting and confining the persons who form part of it in order to disperse such assembly or that they may be punished according to law

* Act XX of 1859 sec 24 of this Act which empowers Volunteers to prevent disturbance of the public peace and disperse unlawful assemblies and apprehend certain suspected persons See also s 42 supra and ss 21 and 22 of the Police Act of 1861 s 49 of the Madras Police Act XXIV of 1859 and ss 27 and 28 of the same Act VII of 1867

Notes.—1. Procedure to be adopted in dispersing unlawful assemblies.—

The following procedure will be adopted, according to circumstances, in dispersing unlawful assemblies showing a disposition to disobey orders to disperse —

(a) In ordinary cases —

(i) As many Police as may be considered sufficient, or as may be available, will be marched to the scene, and if the dispersal cannot be effected by simply marching the party of Police (information appropriate to the circumstance) up and down the street or across the place to be cleared, a detachment will be drawn up in double ranks, and orders given to "draw batons and advance," and on arriving within 50 yards of the crowd, the front rank will be ordered to "charge and use batons," the rear ranks continuing to advance in support, and, if necessary, charging as well.

(ii) It must be remembered that the closer a crowd is pressed, the less are the members of it capable of offering resistance by the use of lathis, stones, etc., and that the baton is pre-eminently a weapon for use in close grapple with an adversary, so that in large open spaces, flank attack, with the object of closing up the mob and preventing their deriving advantage from superiority in numbers, will sometimes be found expedient.

(b) In more serious cases where danger to life or property is apprehended.—

(i) On being requisitioned, a squad of Police, properly armed and accoutred, and carrying ten rounds of buckshot ammunition per man, in command of a responsible officer, will proceed with all despatch to the scene.

(ii) The officer in charge of the squad will halt at 80 yards distance from the scene, and giving orders to fix bayonets, will report himself to the Magistrate, or Police-officer superior in rank to himself who may be present, and will thereafter act under the orders of such Magistrate or superior officer.

(iii) The Magistrate or superior Police-officer, or other subordinate officer, as circumstances may permit, supported by a file (who will duly come to the charge on being halted), will proceed to within speaking distance of the mob, and command it to disperse, and distinctly warn it that the fire will be effective and that blank cartridge will not be used.

(iv) If the mob shows itself aggressive and determined not to disperse, the officer and his aforesaid will fall back, and the squad will, on due command to that effect, load, after which another warning to the rioters to disperse will be given, and if not obeyed within a reasonable time, fire will be opened on distinct word of command by the officer in charge of the squad, either by specified number of files or by ranks of sub-sections or sections, or he may order a volley, according to the requirements of the situation. He must bear in mind the general rule that, if possible, halt the men should have their arms loaded.

(v) The fire should be so directed as to inflict as little bodily harm as possible, aim in the first instance, being taken at the feet of the nearest rioters, and due care being observed to avoid firing on persons separated from the rioters.

(vi) Firing must cease the instant it is no longer necessary, i.e., on the mob showing the slightest indication of retiring or dispersing.

(vii) When a Magistrate or superior Police-officer is present the Police-officer in charge of the squad will act entirely under the orders of such Magistrate or officer, but when he is alone and acting on his own responsibility, he must distinctly understand that no firing can be commenced until some overt act of violence is committed by the rioters.

(viii) If compelled to open fire, it is to be remembered the utmost humanity shall be used consistent with securing the public safety.

(ix) After the order "cease fire," and should no further apprehension exist, the wounded will be sent to the nearest hospital, and the senior Police-officer, will take account of the ammunition used; and if no Magistrate is present, to draw up an accurate report of all that transpired.

(x) District Superintendents should occasionally practise their men in this imaginary riot-drill, generally by sections, sometimes by all the Police he can find available.—See Pol. Man. I, A. 16.

2 Use of fire arms in the suppression of riots—When a Magistrate or an officer in charge of a Police-station engaged in dispersing an unlawful assembly is compelled in the last resort to direct the Police acting under him to use their fire arms he shall give the rioters the fullest warning of his intention warning them beforehand that the fire will be effective that the ball or buckshot will be used at the first round and that blank cartridges will not be used Firing shall cease the instant it is no longer necessary Care should be taken not to fire upon persons separated from the crowd nor to fire over the heads of the crowds as thereby innocent persons may be injured Blank cartridges should never be served out to Police employed to suppress a riot.—Dom Pol W: p 70

3 Madras Rules—The following are the rules to be observed by the Police when compelled to use fire-arms to disperse riotous assemblies —

(1) When the Police party is under twenty files it will be told off into four sections If there should be more than twenty files the party will be told off into more sections than four

(2) All commands to the Police are to be given by the officer in command of the party The Police are not on any account to fire excepting by word of command of their officer who is to exercise a humane discretion respecting the extent of the line of fire

(3) In order to guard against all misunderstandings officers commanding Police parties are on every occasion when employed in the suppression of riots or enforcement of the law to ensure that the fullest warning is given to the mob before any order is given to fire and to take the most effectual means to explain beforehand to the people opposed to them that in the event of the Police party being ordered to fire their fire will be effective

(4) If the officer in command should be of opinion that a slight effort would suffice to attain the object he is to give the word of command to one or two specified files to fire If a greater effort should be required he is to give the word of command to one of the sections told off as above order to fire—the fire of the other sections being kept in reserve till necessary and when required the fire of each of them being given by the regular word of command of the officer in command.

(5) The firing is to cease the instant it is no longer necessary Care is to be taken not to fire upon persons separated from the crowd. It is to be observed that to fire over the heads of a crowd engaged in an illegal pursuit would have the effect of favouring the most daring and the guilty and might have the effect of sacrificing the less daring and even the innocent.

(6) If firing should unfortunately be necessary all Police-officers and constables must feel that they have a serious duty to perform and they must perform it with coolness and steadiness and in such a manner as to be able to discontinue their fire the instant it shall be found no longer necessary

(7) As a warning to rioters before firing commences —

I A single shot will be discharged in the air If this is ineffective

II The first round fired into a body of rioters will invariably consist of buckshot instead of ball

Note—It should be clearly understood that blank cartridge is never to be served out to Police employed to suppress a riot.

4. Special Police officers—See ss 15 and 17 of Act V of 1861 (Police Act).

129. If any such assembly cannot be otherwise dispersed and if it is necessary for the public security that it should be dispersed the Magistrate of the highest rank who is present may cause it to be dispersed by military force

Use of military force.

130. (1) When a Magistrate determines to disperse any such assembly by military force he may require any commissioned or non-commissioned officer in command of any soldiers in His Majesty's Army or of any volunteers enrolled under the Indian Volunteers' Act 1869 to disperse such assembly by military force and to arrest and confine such persons forming part of it as the Magistrate may direct or as it may be necessary to arrest and confine in order to disperse the assembly or to have them punished according to law

Duty of officer commanding troops required by Magistrate to disperse a semibly

(2) Every such officer shall obey such requisition in such manner as he thinks fit but in so doing he shall use as little force and do as little injury to person and property as may be consistent with dispersing the assembly and arresting and detaining such persons

Note—This section leaves it entirely to the discretion of the officer in command as to how he will disperse the assembly or arrest and confine the persons forming part of it

131. When the public security is manifestly endangered by any such assembly and when no Magistrate can be communicated with any commissioned officer of His Majesty's Army may disperse such assembly by military force and may arrest and confine any persons forming part of it in order to disperse such assembly, or that they may be punished according to law but if while he is acting under this section it becomes practicable for him to communicate with a Magistrate he shall do so and shall thenceforward obey the instructions of the Magistrate as to whether he shall or shall not continue such action

Note—This section empowers commissioned officers only Protection against prosecution for acts done under this Chapter

132. No prosecution against any person for any act purporting to be done under this Chapter shall be instituted in any Criminal Court except with the sanction of the Governor General in Council and—

- (a) no Magistrate or Police-officer acting under this Chapter in good faith
- (b) no officer acting under section 131 in good faith
- (c) no person doing any act in good faith, in compliance with a requisition under section 128 or section 130 and
- (d) no inferior officer or soldier or volunteer doing any act in obedience to any order which he was bound to obey shall be deemed to have thereby committed an offence

Notes.—1 Good faith—Nothing is said to be done in good faith which is done without due care and attention. See ss 52 and 76 I.P.C. and s 3 (20) of the General Clauses Act of 1897

2 The sanction required by this section is that of the Governor General in Council and want of such sanction cannot be cured by s 537 as is the case also where sanction is required under ss. 196 and 197, 31 M 80 where 29 M 149 is followed and 22 C. 176 dissented from

A Police-officer in charge of a patrol boat has no authority to act under Chapter 9 of the Code and no sanction under s 132 is necessary for his prosecution for firing on an unlawful assembly in order to disperse it 50 C. 318

3 Inferior officer, or soldier, or volunteer—The words in good faith are omitted in clause (d) so that now obedience to order is sufficient justification in the case of these persons so long as the order is one which they were bound to obey. As to the definition of these classes of persons see Act V of 1869 (Indian Articles of War) as amended by Act XII of 1894 and the Indian Volunteers Act XX of 1869

CHAPTER X

PUBLIC NUISANCES

* * 133. Whenever a District Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class considers, on receiving a Police report or other information and on taking such evidence (if any) as he thinks fit that any unlawful obstruction or nuisance should be removed from any way, river or channel which is or may be lawfully used by the public, or from any public place, or

* This section was substituted for the original section by Act XVIII of 1923, s. 21

that the conduct of any trade or occupation, or the keeping of any goods or merchandise, is injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community, and that in consequence such trade or occupation should be prohibited or regulated or such goods or merchandise should be removed or the keeping thereof regulated, or that the construction of any building, or the disposal of any substance, as likely to occasion conflagration or explosion, should be prevented or stopped, or that any building, tent or structure, or any tree is in such a condition that it is likely to fall and thereby cause injury to persons living or carrying on business in the neighbourhood or passing by, and that in consequence the removal, repair or support of such building, tent or structure, or the removal or support of such tree is necessary, or that any tank, well or excavation adjacent to any such way or public place should be fenced in such manner as to prevent danger arising to the public, or that any dangerous animal should be destroyed, confined or otherwise disposed of, such Magistrate may make a conditional order requiring the person causing such obstruction or nuisance, or carrying on such trade or occupation, or keeping any such goods or merchandise or owning, possessing or controlling such building, tent, structure, substance, tank, well or excavation, or owning or possessing such animal or tree, within a time to be fixed in the order, to remove such obstruction or nuisance, or to desist from carrying on, or to remove or regulate in such manner as may be directed, such trade or occupation, or to remove such goods or merchandise, or to regulate the keeping thereof in such manner as may be directed, or to prevent or stop the erection of, or to remove, repair or support, such building, tent or structure, or to remove or support such tree, or to alter the disposal of such substance, or to fence such tank, well or excavation, as the case may be, or to destroy, confine or dispose of such dangerous animal in the manner provided in the said order, or, if he objects so to do, to appear before himself or some other Magistrate of the first or second class, at a time and place to be fixed by the order, and move to have the order set aside or modified in the manner hereinafter provided

(2) No order duly made by a Magistrate under this section shall be called in question in any Civil Court

Explanation—A 'public place' includes also property belonging to the State, camping grounds and grounds left unoccupied for sanitary or recreative purposes "

Notes.—For offences affecting the public health, safety, convenience, decency and morals, see Chapter XIV, ss 268—294, I P C

1. For Form of the order for the removal of nuisances, see Sch. V, No 16 See Form 19 for orders under s 142 in cases where immediate action is urgently called for

2. 'Person.'—This includes a company or association.—See s 11, I P. C., and General Clauses Act, 1897 s 3(3),

I.—APPLICATION OF CHAPTER.

3. Criminal Courts are bound by order of Civil Court restraining the complainant by an injunction not to interfere with alleged nuisance, 34 P. W. R. 1917 (Cr.)

4. Chapter not to be worked so as to interfere with the free enjoyment of private property.—The provisions of this Chapter should be worked so as not to become themselves a nuisance to the community at large. Although every man is bound to so use his own property that it may not work legal damage or harm to his neighbour, yet, on the other hand, no one has a right to interfere with a full and free enjoyment by another of his property, except on clear and absolute proof that such use of it by him is producing such legal damage or harm, and therefore a lawful and necessary trade, such as tanning should not be meddled with unless it is proved that it is injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community—Per TREMLET, J., 17 P. R. 1898, 20 P. W. R. 1911; 117 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 146; 36 A. 209. Considerations of justice and equity should form the rule of a Magistrate's conduct in dealing with a nuisance 2 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 334

S 133 of the Code is not intended to be employed to avoid the necessity of filing a civil suit in regard to a construction which has been in existence for 15 years, 24 A. L. J. 112.

5. When proceeding to be instituted under this section and when under s 143 or s. 144—Public nuisances specifically provided for in this section are taken out of the general provision in s 144, Weir II, 88; Ratanlal 50 But where a nuisance is not specified in this section, e.g., prevention of burial on sanitary grounds in certain places it must be dealt with under the general, s 143 or s 144, Weir II, 64 A Magistrate having once commenced proceedings under this section must proceed under this and the following sections of the Chapter and cannot take up the matter summarily under s 143, 8 W. R. 37; 11 B. 375; 2 M. I. A. 428 at p 435.

6. S. 133 does not oust the jurisdiction of a Magistrate to proceed under s. 147.—“We are not prepared to follow 4 M. 121 if it was intended to decide therein that the fact that s. 133 expressly provides for an order by the Magistrate directing the removal of obstruction to pathways, necessarily implies that a similar order cannot be passed in proceedings under s. 147 The same remark applies to the similar obiter dictum in Weir I, 143”, 26 M. L. J. 233 = 15 M. L. T. 230 = 15 Cr. L. J. 362.

7. Orders under s. 147 cannot be passed when proceedings instituted under s. 133.—(When proceedings are taken under this section no order can be passed under s 147 Proceedings under this section are, under an entirely different Chapter of the Code and are made for entirely different purposes and have nothing whatever to do with proceedings under Chapter XII, 19 C. W. N. 667 = 12 Cr. L. J. 43.

8 Distinction between this section and s. 33 of Bom. Act VII of 1867.—Held per CHANDAYARKER, J., “... by character, i.e., to his own purpose, on appropriate a public thoroughfare to his own purpose, such as by building a pucca wall, the appropriation must be treated as having been intended to be permanent and the act would fall more appropriately under this section, 6 Bom. L. R. 388, where a conditional order was.

II.—COMPETENCY OF MAGISTRATES.

9. In the United Provinces powers to institute proceedings may be conferred on Municipal Boards.—The powers of a District Magistrate under this section may be conferred upon Municipal Boards in the North and the Central Provinces Municipal Act XXIII of 1899, s. 86, respectively

10. First-class Magistrates empowered by Local Government.—In Madras all Magistrates of the first class have been empowered to act under this section (Fort St. George Gazette, 1873 p 717) So, too, in Bombay, except where the Magistrate is an Honorary Magistrate, when a special order is necessary in each case (Bombay Gazette, 1872, p 1325, ibid., 1873, 16). In Punjab also, all Magistrates are so empowered, subject however to the control of the District Magistrate 1878, Pt. I, p

11. Presidency Magistrates.—In Presidency towns, the Magistrate is not empowered to act under this section. Their power is under the Penal Code, the Acts and other Local Acts like the Fire Brigade Act, the Mu with the place where the alleged obstruction exists in a public thoroughfare, 25 W. R. 4. The fact that the residents of a particular village had a right to take cattle across a field was held not sufficient to constitute a public right of way, 1906 A. W. N. 190 = 4 Cr. L. J. 63. It is not necessary that the way should be one which is generally used by the public. All that the section requires is that the way should be one which is or may be lawfully used by the public, 10 Cr. L. J. 210 (C). A Magistrate has jurisdiction to take action under s 133 only if he is satisfied that the unlawful obstruction was of a channel which is or may be lawfully used by the public, 38 A. 209. The fact of a Magistrate taking action under this section is prima facie evidence that he considers the locus in quo to be a thoroughfare or public place, and if no objection is taken that it is not such, and the jury find that the order under this section is reasonable and proper, the High Court will not interfere, 8 C. L. R. 399. In 12 A. L. J. 1024 = 15 Cr. L. J. 724, it is, however, laid down that there must be a finding that the obstruction is on a way that may be lawfully used by the public or in a public place. Before a Magistrate can make an order under this section to remove an obstruction from a path alleged to be a public thoroughfare, he must first, have come to the conclusion that the path is open to the use of the public, 5 C. L. R. 379; also 9 B. L. R. 417; 18 W. R. 41. In a case of a complaint for the removal of an obstruction from a road, etc., a Magistrate should first inquire if the road is a public one or not. If he finds in the affirmative, he has jurisdiction to proceed. If in the negative, he should withhold his hand and abstain from carrying out the order for the removal of the obstruction, 15 W. R. 67. See 21 W. R. 64 and 25 W. R. 4.

IV.—JURISDICTION OF MAGISTRATE OUSTED WHEN BONA FIDE CLAIM SET UP.

20. Bona fide claim will oust Magistrate's jurisdiction.—The powers embodied in ss. 133—137 with regard to the obstruction of public ways, are not intended to be exercised where there is a bona fide dispute as to the existence of the public right, 4 Bom. L. R. 637; 15 Bom. L. R. 57 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 13 = 14 Cr. L. J. 74; 28 A. 98; 22 B. 983. Where there is such a dispute, the Court should pass no order under those sections until the public right has been established by proper legal proceedings, civil or criminal, 11 C. 8; Wals II, 61; 4 C. W. N. 596; 12 C. 137 and 696; 17 C. 562; 18 C. W. N. 1143 = 19 C. L. J. 631 = 15 Cr. L. J. 815. Though length of enjoyment cannot legalise a nuisance, yet long possession or enjoyment of what is said to be a nuisance may give to the objection of the person so possessing it the character of a bona fide dispute as to title, such as might have the effect of ousting the jurisdiction of the Magistrate under this section. At any rate, he must be allowed an opportunity to have the question determined by a Civil Court, 25 C. 278. Where the opposite party raises the objection that the way alleged to be obstructed was not one which is or may be lawfully used by the public, the Magistrate is bound to find whether the objection is a bona fide one, and if he finds in the affirmative, he should abstain from further action until the public right of way is determined by a competent Court, 3 C. W. N. 345; 26 C. 869; 8 C. W. N. 143; 15 C. 564 at p. 573; 42 C. 158. If there is no finding that the claim is not made and put forward in good faith the order will be set aside 21 C. L. J. 116 = 16 Cr. L. J. 160. In 49 C. 682 (F.B.) all the previous cases were considered and it was held that in a proceeding under section 133 for the purpose of compelling removal of an obstruction from a public way, the Magistrate's jurisdiction is not ousted because of a bona fide claim of title being raised. But of course in view of the latest amendment by the insertion of section 133-A, a Magistrate is bound to stay proceedings if he finds that there is reliable evidence in support of the denial of the public right until the matter of such right has been decided by a competent Civil Court. 4 P. 763. See s 133-A, which is newly added.

21. Mere assertion of claim will not oust the jurisdiction of the Magistrate.—It is not open to any person illegally causing obstruction to public property to set up a bogus question of title for the purpose of ousting the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, and, notwithstanding the raising of such a question, the Magistrate is entitled to hear a case sufficiently to enable him to make up his mind whether or not a bona fide question of title is raised, 15 C. 564; 17 C. 562; 25 C. 278; 31 C. 979; 28 A. 98; 42 C. 158. The mere assertion of a claim of title made without reasonable ground or honest belief in it, or honest intention to support it, will not oust a Criminal Court of its jurisdiction under ss. 133—137, 15 C. 564, 17 C. 562; 3 C. W. N. 345; 2 C. W. N. 536; 7 C. W. N. 117; 31 C. 979; 10 Bom. L. R. 563 = 8 Cr. L. J. 33; 23 C. 499 and 25 C. 278. Where the effect of the Magistrate's finding was that the petitioner's claim was not a bona fide assertion of title, but was an attempt to cause annoyance and inconvenience to a person with whom he was at enmity and that his act amounted to obstruction to the entrance to a public ghat, held, that the order under this section and the order absolute under s. 137, were not improper, 1 C. L. J. 434 = 2 Cr. L. J. 349. It does not follow, that because the land over which a right of way is claimed belongs to a particular person, that person must necessarily be acting bona fide when he denies that there is a right of way over the land. Where there is no question as to the bona fides of the applicant's allegation, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to go into the main issue between the parties as to whether the road was a public or a private one, 1 Brr. L. R. 830.

Jurisdiction of a Magistrate to take action under s. 133 of the Code is not ousted because one of the parties to the dispute may have set up a bona fide claim of right to the subject thereof (28 A. 98 overruled), 45 A. 640 But see 24 A. L. J. 351 and s. 139-A newly added

22. Even when claim not substantiated, Magistrate must determine whether claim bona fide or not.—See 15 C. 564; 25 C. 278; 11 C. 8; 12 C. 696; 17 C. 562; 2 C. W. N. 354; 3 C. W. N. 343; 7 C. W. N. 117; 8 C. W. N. 143; 1900 A. W. N. 204; 29 A. 93; 22 B. 988; 4 Bom. L. R. 637; 10 Bom. L. R. 563—8 Cr. L. J. 33

23. But Magistrate cannot decide title.—Where a bona fide question of title is raised, the trying Magistrate should not go further and decide whether the title set up does or does not exist. He should proceed no further under this Chapter, but leave the matter to be decided by the Civil Court, 28 A. 98. See 10 C. W. N. 849—4 Cr. L. J. 42; 11 C. W. N. 26; 15 Bom. L. R. 57—2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 13—14 Cr. L. J. 74 In 35 C. 283, the Magistrate came to the conclusion that the claim of the petitioner, if any, had been barred by limitation. He, however, stayed the passing of the final order for one month in order to allow the petitioner an two months after the expiration was bad in law, as he should was raised and as he was not competent to decide whether the claim was barred by limitation. Also see 12 C. 137; ibid, 696; 4 P. R. 1897; 6 P. R. 1897, p. 9; 2 P. R. 1903, 35 C. 233, 10 Bom. L. R. 583—8 Cr. L. J. 33; 18 C. W. N. 1143—19 C. L. J. 631.

24. Claim to be set up at or before first hearing.—In proceedings with reference to obstructions to public ways, it is open to the Magistrate to inquire into the bona fides of the claim, and where he decides against its bona fides he must state reasons for his decision, which will be subject to revision by the High Court. Such a claim must be set up or before the hearing and not afterwards, 15 C. 564; 23 C. 499; 1 C. L. J. 434—2 Cr. L. J. 349; 7 C. W. N. 117.

25. Where there is a bona fide dispute between a private individual and Government.—As to the right to a ground on which an encroachment is alleged to have been made by the private individual by building a wall a Magistrate should not proceed under this section until that dispute is settled in a Civil Court, Ratanlal 378. See 2 Bom. L. R. 918, 24 A. L. J. 112

26. No ouster of jurisdiction, when encroachment is upon way admittedly public.—When the encroachment complained of is upon a way admittedly public, the jurisdiction of the Magistrate is not ousted by any claim of the person encroaching, however bona fides 6 C. W. N. 856; 35 A. 209. The decisions in 15 C. 564; 17 C. 562 and 25 C. 278, were distinguished on the ground that in these cases the question was whether the way obstructed was or was not a public way

Y—WHAT WOULD AMOUNT TO PUBLIC NUISANCE.

27. Obstruction to public water-courses.—Where the inhabitants of one village have placed an unlawful obstruction to prevent the flow of water along its natural channel and the resultant injury affects a large area of cultivated land and a considerable body of persons, the case is one of a public nuisance. A common nuisance cannot be excused on the ground that it causes some convenience or advantage to one party, 34 A. 345; a dispute between two villages in respect of the right of one to dig and clear a water-course for irrigation purposes denied by the other is a dispute within the meaning of this section, 23 P. W. R. 1912—13 Cr. L. J. 594. See also 35 A. 209 in Note 37

28. Cremation on private land may become a nuisance.—Though a burning ghāt or cremation ground may not itself be a nuisance within the meaning of cl. 2 of this section, still a Magistrate will have jurisdiction under that clause, if it is shown that such a ghāt or ground is in such an offensive state, or that cremation is carried on upon it in such an offensive manner as to be a source of injury, danger or annoyance to persons living in the vicinity, 25 C. 425.

29. Privies on private property.—Where a privy is allowed in such a condition as to be a nuisance to passers by, lawfully using a public place or way, proceedings to cause the nuisance to be abated may be instituted under this Chapter. This section, however, does not empower a Magistrate to order a privy to be removed merely because it is only recently made in any locality, 4 Bom. L. R. 832

30. Unlawful obstruction to river.—Where the public used, for more than 20 years, to cross a river at a place where it was fordable all through the year, except for a few days during the freshes, and the petitioner erected a bund, as of right, lower down the river, the effect of which was to make the river unfordable by raising the height of the water, and the Magistrate made an order under this section directing the removal of the bund, held, that the order was not illegal. The right to erect a bund across the river could only have been an easement and the petitioner had by long desuetude lost the right, while the public had acquired a prescribed right of way. If it be conceded that the petitioner had a subsisting right to dam the river by putting up a bund, such right is subject to the maxim, "Sic utero tuo, ut alienum non laedas" and here the petitioner's action had caused obstruction to the public, 32 C. 930.

31. Building likely to fall, etc.—To justify an action under this section, there must be proof that the property is in presenti in a dangerous state. That it might become so by another man altering the adjoining premises or undermining the building in question, is not a ground for interference under the section, 5 P. R. 1890 at p. 11. Under the 1872 Code the Magistrate could only direct the removal. Now he may direct also its repair or support.

32. Carrying on trade injurious to the physical comfort of the community.—A Magistrate has jurisdiction to take proceedings under this section if the trade in question is injurious to the physical comfort of the community, but the interference with the public comfort must be considerable and a considerable section of the public must be affected injuriously, 20 P. W. R. 1911 = 117 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 146. See also 34 C. 73.

33. The motive with which the unlawful obstruction is caused is absolutely irrelevant.—The building of a cattle trough on Government waste land abutting on a public road is an obstruction and a nuisance under this section. The motive with which a public highway is obstructed is absolutely irrelevant and it does not matter whether in point of fact, the structure causes practical inconvenience or not, because the land on which it is built, though not at the time necessary for the continuous use of the public, may be required for such use when there is increased traffic or for any other similar reason, 23 A. 159. But an order that a man should remove his house based on his—not his house—being a public nuisance is ultra vires, 10 Bar. L. R. 130.

34. No length of enjoyment can legalize a public nuisance.—A previous sanction to the establishment of a trade such as a slaughter house does not entitle the proprietors to continue the business after it has become a public nuisance to the neighbourhood. No one has a right to corrupt the air of a particular locality by the exercise of a noxious trade, simply because at the commencement of the nuisance no person was in a position to be injured by it, no prescriptive right can be acquired to maintain, and no length of enjoyment can legalize, a public nuisance involving actual danger to the health of the community, 16 W. R. 6; 7 B. L. R. 499; Weir II, 59, 4 Bom. L. R. 882. Yet the long possession or enjoyment of what is said to be a nuisance may give to the objection of the person so possessing or enjoying it the character of a bona fide dispute as to title, such as might have the effect of ousting the jurisdiction of the Magistrate under ss. 133 and 137 and making the question a proper one for the Civil Court, 25 C. 278.

VI.—NUISANCES WHICH DO NOT JUSTIFY INTERFERENCE UNDER THIS SECTION.

35. Obstruction or nuisance to individuals not within the scope of this section.—This section does not apply to an alleged user by one man of his own property so as to cause injury to the property of another, Ratanlal 516, Ratanlal 50. See Notes 18 and 19.

(i) Private Channels.—A Magistrate has jurisdiction to take action under this section only if he is satisfied that the unlawful obstruction was of a channel which is or may be lawfully used by the public. Where, therefore, the owner of the field at a level lower than the surrounding lands, and through which the surplus water had flowed into a tank, erected a bund and raised the level of his field to such an extent that the flood water, instead of flowing into the tank as it used to do, was now held back and caused injury to the neighbouring fields. Held, that the case did not affect any public rights, and did not come within the purview of this section, 36 A. 209.

(ii) Private drains.—The obstruction of a drain into which sewage of certain premises fell does not fall under this section. In such cases the parties must be referred to civil suit, 8 W. R. 58; 1 W. R. 324 (Civ.).

(iii) Private path.—The obstruction of a private path is not a nuisance under this section, 2 W. R. 38. But a privy may be, even if situated on private land, 4 Bom. L. R. 882.

36. Future obstructions cannot be dealt with.—A Magistrate can only deal with existing obstructions. He has no power to direct what is to be done in case of any future obstruction, 21 W. R. 10.

37. Putting up a new market.—A person who opens a new market close to an old one cannot, by the mere fact of opening such a market, be said to carry on a trade or occupation that is injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community and a Magistrate is not justified in passing an order under this section, closing the new market. Even the fact that people in the old market are forcibly dragged from it to the one will not justify an order under the section, Weir II, 62 = 14 M. L. J. 207.

33. Profession of a prostitute.—This section does not warrant a Magistrate's interference with a prostitute for the purpose of removing her from her dwelling-house simply on the ground of the bad character of her profession, so long as she behaves herself orderly and quietly, creates no open scandal by riotous living, and causes no actual discomfort amounting to positive nuisance to the neighbourhood, 24 W. R. 68; 5 C. W. N. 566. The existence of the houses of prostitutes newly by the road-side and the fact that they ply their trade in those houses cannot affect the physical comfort of the passers-by, 5 C. W. N. 566. But where prostitutes are seen on the public road soliciting passers-by and actually having their charfoys with them, held that their occupation was clearly injurious to the health of the community, 2 P. R. 1900 = 24 P. L. R. 1900. But it does not come under nuisance as defined in s. 250, I. P. C., 22 A. 113.

39. Slaughtering cattle.—Where a Magistrate had treated the slaughtering of cattle as a "nuisance" and ordered its discontinuance within a private enclosure belonging to some Muhammadans held that though the act complained of might be shocking to the prejudices of a community, it could not properly be regarded as a nuisance 23 W. R. 72. But obstruction upon a public road is a nuisance, whether in point of fact it causes practical inconvenience or not 23 A. 159. See also 1901 A. W. N. 23.

40. Occupation injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community.—The interference with the public comfort must be considerable and the circumstances must show that a considerable section of the public must be affected injuriously and general equitable principles must not be lost sight of, 20 P. W. R. 1911 = 117 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 146. The working of rice husking machines near a residential quarter may become a nuisance, 9 P. R. 1904. The word physical was introduced into the Code of 1882 as the result of 2 B. 457.

41. Trades or occupations must in themselves be injurious.—In making an order under cl. 3 of this section, a Magistrate should be careful not to conound the occupation with the way in which it is conducted. The section deals only with occupation or trades which are in themselves injurious to health, etc., and has nothing whatever to do with trades which in themselves are innocuous, but in the course of which the manager or prier of them commits a public nuisance. Keeping a house of public entertainment is certainly not in itself an unhealthy trade, 47 P. R. 1833; 14 M. 364. A lawful and necessary occupation, such as tanning ought not to be interfered with unless it is proved that it is injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community, 17 P. R. 1833. The proprietor of a cremation ground cannot be said to be carrying on any trade or occupation within the meaning of this section, 23 C. 423.

(i) Practice of inoculation against smallpox, is no trade or occupation.—Parents inoculating themselves and their children upon an outbreak of small-pox cannot be said to be carrying on a trade or to be engaged in an occupation. An order under this section to stop this practice is not legal, (1913) U. B. R. 3rd Qr. 180 = 15 Cr. L. J. 253.

(ii) Cultivation is not an injurious occupation.—The cultivation of maize, pome and bajree in certain land within a short distance from a town is not an injurious occupation within the meaning of this section though their mode of cultivation may be in some respects objectionable, 39 P. R. 1839.

VII—PROCEDURE TO BE ADOPTED BY MAGISTRATE.

42. Rules laid down in this Chapter to be strictly followed.—Where a Magistrate commences proceedings under this section, he is not at liberty to proceed otherwise than in conformity with the rules laid down in Chapter X of this Code, 8 W. R. 37; 11 B. 375. Cases have come before the Judicial Commissioner in which proceedings under Chapter X have been instituted on a vernacular order merely initiated by the Magistrate. In proceedings thus laxly instituted other irregularities have naturally followed. The accused has not received proper notice of what he was required to do, and has not (as required by this section) been given an opportunity of appearing to show cause against the conditional order made by the Magistrate. The Judicial Commissioner would impress upon every Magistrate exercising powers under Chapter X the necessity of recording in each case a formal order in his own hand stating the information he has received and the order he proposes to issue and of seeing that a proper notice is issued to the accused giving him full information of what he is required to do, and an opportunity of appearing to show cause against the order, if he wishes to do so.—C. P. Cr., Part II No. 8. A Magistrate has no power to refer a dispute under this section to arbitration even if the parties agree on such a course being adopted 22 Cr. L. J. 377.

43. Chapter lays down procedure both for ascertainment of right and removal of obstruction.—The procedure prescribed by this and the following sections provides for the ascertainment of right as well as for the actual removal of the obstruction, 9 Bom. L. R. 30 = 5 Cr. L. J. 97.

43. Procedure under this Chapter.—A Magistrate duly empowered, after satisfying himself upon information of the necessity of instituting proceedings under section 133 may issue a conditional order requiring the person causing such obstruction, etc., within a time to be fixed by the order to remove the obstruction, etc., or to appear before the same or other Magistrate at a time and place, all to be specifically fixed by the order. The order must be duly served on the parties, see s. 134. If the matter is urgent the Magistrate may issue a temporary order under s. 142. If the party neither removes the obstruction, etc., nor appears to show cause, the Magistrate may make the order absolute under s. 136 and proceed to have the nuisance removed under s. 140 (2). If the party appears, he may either show cause by giving evidence or require the Magistrate to appoint a jury to consider the propriety of the order, s. 135. If a claim is put forward that the way is not open to the public, the Magistrate must take evidence and satisfy himself of bona fides of the claim and he must record a finding. If he is satisfied that the claim is bona fide, further proceedings must be dropped. If otherwise, the Magistrate must take evidence and inquire into the reasonableness and propriety of the order under s. 137, and if the Magistrate decides that the order is reasonable and proper he makes the order absolute and proceeds to enforce it under s. 140.

If the party requires a jury, the Magistrate shall under s. 138 forthwith appoint a jury and fix a time for the return of the verdict. No procedure is prescribed for conducting proceedings before the jury, but evidence must be adduced before them to enable them to come to a decision. If the jury decides that the order is reasonable or proper, the Magistrate may make the order absolute and enforce it under s. 140.

If the jury modifies the order, the Magistrate may or may not accept the modification. If either the jury propose a modification which the Magistrate does not accept or the verdict of the jury is adverse, the Magistrate must drop all further proceedings.

If owing to the default of the party proceeded against the jury is not appointed or if the jury do not return any verdict, the Magistrate is at liberty to proceed and pass such order as he may think fit under s. 140.

45. Proceedings under section 133 are ex-parte.—The proceedings under this section are entirely ex parte. The report or other information which the Magistrate has received before making the conditional order is not evidence against the opposite party, 24 C. 395. But under s. 137 he is bound to take evidence before making the order absolute. See also 20 C. W. N. 1171. See also 47 A. 341.

46. Party affected by order should have an opportunity to show cause.—A Magistrate cannot pass an order for the removal of a nuisance without calling on the party to show cause why the order should not be passed against him and without hearing the objections even if they are filed after the time fixed for their presentation, but before he takes up the case. When that party appears to show cause the Magistrate is bound to take evidence under s. 137, 8 C. L. R. 431; 26 W. R. 7, 11 B. 375, 13 C. W. N. CCLXXXIII. He is also bound, when required by a party, to compel the attendance of his witnesses, who, being summoned, do not appear, 6 C. W. N. 645. An order by a Magistrate under this section for the removal of a nuisance does not become absolute until an opportunity is given to the person affected by it to show cause why the order should not be carried into effect, 21 W. R. 86. See also 20 C. W. N. 1171.

47. When party fails to comply with conditional order, it becomes absolute.—When a Magistrate accepts the information, and bases a conditional order upon it, and when the party against whom the order is made neither does the act commanded, nor takes action to vacate the order the ex parte information becomes conclusive evidence and the omission becomes penal and subjects the party concerned to the penalty prescribed by s. 188, 1 P. C., 12 M. 475 at p. 478, 13 A. 577. Similarly, where the time fixed in the order has been allowed to pass without protest or compliance liability to punishment attaches at once without a necessity for further notice provided for in s. 140, 31 M. 280. But see 20 A. 501.

48. Question of jurisdiction must be raised before reference to jury.—Whether the proceedings instituted under this section do or do not come within its purview must be decided at the trial on point raised and before any reference to the jury, 5 C. W. N. 173. See, however, 18 C. W. N. 1163 = 19 C. L. J. 631.

49. Procedure when a bona fide claim is set up.—If the party proceeded against raises a question that the pathway is not a public property within the meaning of section 133 the Magistrate trying the case should be careful not only to decide as to whether the pathway in question is situated on a private land or if it is for public use, but he should, even when the claim on the objection is not substantiated, find whether the claim is bona fide or is set up only to oust the jurisdiction of the Court. If the Magistrate finds that the claim which is set up is a mere pretence, he should then proceed to pass a final order and make the rule issued by him absolute. If, however, he finds that the claim, although not substantiated is not mere pretence and is not raised to oust the jurisdiction of the Court, but that it is raised bona fide, he should stay his hand and refer the party to Civil Court. And if the party within a reasonable time does not have recourse to the Civil Court, the Magistrate may then proceed to make the rule absolute. Per SHARFUDDIN, J., in 42 C. 158.

Magistrate must take evidence—See s 137 and Notes thereunder

Magistrate must give reasons for his finding—A Magistrate should give reasons for holding that claim is not bona fide, 18 C 564.

50. Magistrate, and not jury, should decide whether way is public or private and whether claim is bona fide?—The jury is not competent to decide whether the way is public or not, for the Magistrate cannot institute proceedings under s 137 and appoint a jury under s 138 unless he finds the way is public, 3 C. W. N. 343. The Magistrate should himself determine prior to the appointment of a jury whether the claim is bona fide or not, 26 C. 869, 4 C. W. N. 696; 31 C. 979; 10 C. W. N. 843 = 4 Cr. L. J. 42; 14 C. W. N. 544 = 11 Cr. L. J. 305; 3 C. L. J. 360 = 3 Cr. L. J. 331 and see Notes 14 and 15 to s. 138, 5 C. W. N. 173, 19 C. L. J. 631 = 18 C. W. N. 1148 = 15 Cr. L. J. 515 and Note 4 to s. 135. See also 2 Pat. L. J. 67, see 4 Lah. 224

51. When party appears Magistrate must make judicial inquiry and record evidence.—See Notes 3—5 to s 137

52. Previous illegal orders no bar to fresh proceedings.—Where previous orders on application under this section are passed without taking any evidence, a Magistrate is bound to make judicial inquiry and decide the case upon the merits. The mere fact that previous applications had been rejected would not preclude a subsequent inquiry into the merits of a similar application under this section, 11 C 271. See also 42 C. 702.

VIII.—ORDERS NOT WITHIN THE SCOPE OF THIS SECTION.

53. General order prohibiting nuisances illegal.—A general order or proclamation prohibiting nuisance cannot be issued under this section. The order must be directed to any special class or individual. Otherwise its disobedience will not be punishable under s. 188 I P C. A first-class Magistrate issued an order presumably under this section, prohibiting the establishment of cotton ginning yards in the villages of—Taluka. A copy of the said order was posted at the bhavana of each village. The accused having established a cotton gin in contravention of the above order were tried and convicted under s. 188, I P C., and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs 10 each, held, that the conviction cannot be sustained, Ratanlal 342. A Magistrate cannot pass a general order directing the public not to frequent the roads and public places at the villages of P between certain hours, and a conviction for disobedience of such orders is bad, 12 C. L. R. 231. A hortatory proclamation issued by a Sub-divisional officer, calling upon the inhabitants of a town to keep themselves well supplied with pots filled with water upon their roofs and also with hooked sticks for use in beating out fires, and laying down certain precautions to be observed while cooking and in the use of fire generally throughout the dry season not being addressed to any particular person and not fixing any time or place for the consideration of objections against such order, was held not to be an order, the disobedience of which is not punishable under s 188, I P C. 1 Ben. A. R. 383

(3) The order must be issued to particular persons—The order must also be addressed to a particular person or persons 16 C. 9. It cannot be addressed to the public at large as in the case of orders under s 144

54. Order must not be vague and indefinite or ambiguous.—An order issued under this section must be such that the persons to whom it is directed must be able to learn from its contents what it is they are to do for the purpose of complying with it. Where a conditional order which was vague and indefinite had been made absolute, the High Court set the order aside and declined to send the case back for reconsideration as the conditional order itself was bad, 11 C. L. J. 114 = 11 Cr. L. J. 213. If the order be ambiguous and open to two interpretations the one most favourable to the accused must be adopted and not the other, 16 C. 9 at p 13, 44 C. 61

55. No unconditional order can be passed under s 133.—Every order must appoint a time within which and a place where a person to whom it is directed may appear before the Magistrate and move to have the order set aside or modified 9 C. 637.

56. Illegal orders cannot be passed under the cloak of executive authority.—Jurisdiction of Magistrate confined to cases specially mentioned.—The authority of every Magistrate to do any act as Magistrate or as Collector if such authority exists must ultimately be found in the powers conferred by Parliament. It is a mistake to assume that because an officer is an executive officer or a judicial officer, he has any power to interfere with private or public persons which cannot be derived from a lawful origin, viz., the Acts of Parliament, 17 A. 495 (F.B.) A Magistrate's powers under this section are confined to the instances specially mentioned therein which does not confer general power upon a Magistrate to pass any order he may consider necessary for the protection of the public health. It is only from a thoroughfare or public place that a Magistrate is at liberty to direct a nuisance to be removed, 22 W. R. 19. He cannot act when merely a private right is infringed, 25 W. R. 4 (i) Declaratory order—An application to have it declared that a certain place was one which could be used for cremation purposes would not come under any of the clauses of this section, 24 W. R. 6.

(ii) Custody of children—This section does not empower a Magistrate to pass an order regarding the custody and guardianship of children, Weir II, 66.

(iii) Over prohibition of objectionable accompaniments to religious ceremonies—This section applies only to an existing physical obstruction or nuisance which is capable of being removed. It cannot be made use of to put a stop to and prohibit certain objectionable accompaniments to ceremonies practised by a religious sect to the discomfort and annoyance of the majority of their townsmen, 1901 A. W. N. 128.

(iv) Prohibiting persons from drinking the water of a well—A Magistrate has no power to order a person not to drink the water of a certain well and prevent others from drinking it, 1893 A. W. N. 145.

(v) Order to close a graveyard—See 12 G. W. N. 70.

(vi) No power to direct new drain being put up—This section gives no power to a Magistrate to order the construction of a new drain, 1900 A. W. N. 138.

57. Order must conform to the provisions of s. 133.—(i) Verbal order is illegal—16 Cr. L. J. 24 (G.)

(ii) Proper order as to excavations is to fence them and not to fill—A District Magistrate passed an order under this section requiring the petitioner to fill up the excavations made by him in taking out earth for bricks that were being manufactured by him within the limits of G and to bring them up to the level of the adjacent lands to make the land one whole level and to take such steps as would not leave the possibility of any accident happening, held, that the order was illegal, as assuming the excavations to be adjacent to a way, etc., which was or might be lawfully used by the public or to any public place, the Magistrate could only order them to be fenced round and not filled up, 22 B. 714. See also 31 M. 290.

But where an excavation is a nuisance it may be filled up—The order of a Magistrate should be confined to a direction to remove the nuisance complained of. Where a tank is used as a reservoir for water a Magistrate's power extends only to having it fenced in order to prevent accidents but where it is proved to be injurious to the health and comfort of the community he may treat it as a public nuisance and cause it to be filled up 10 W. R. 27; 2 W. R. 36. The proprietor ought to have the discretion allowed him as to the mode in which he will remove the nuisance caused by the tank. If the Magistrate is compelled to direct the excavation of the tank the actual cost of excavation can alone be charged against the proprietor, at whose disposition the soil taken out in the course of excavation must be placed, 10 W. R. 51.

(iii) Form of order when burning ground is a nuisance—If a Magistrate finds a burning ghat to be a nuisance, he cannot order its removal, though he can order the removal of the nuisance, i.e. to take such steps as would result in the cremation of corpses at the burning ghat ceasing to be a nuisance to the public, 23 G. 425. See also 12 G. W. N. 70.

(iv) Form of order when forge is a nuisance—Where a Magistrate purporting to act under this section ordered a forge set up by L to be removed on the ground, that the sparks from it might set fire to cotton stored in an adjoining building belonging to a third person. Held that the Magistrate was not justified in ordering the summary removal of the forge, but he should have only directed L to alter its construction so that sparks shall not issue out of it into the open air when it is worked. Ratanlal 872.

IX.—FURTHER INQUIRY.

58. Further Inquiry.—Where a Magistrate has dropped proceedings under this section a District Magistrate or Sessions Judge has no power to order further inquiry s. 437 not being applicable, 24 C. 395. The proper course is to refer the matter to the High Court, 25 C. 423. See also 21 W. R. 86, 14 C. W. N. 17.

59 Revival of proceedings previously dropped.—P applied to the Sub-divisional Magistrate to take proceedings under this section in respect of a nuisance caused by I. In the course of the inquiry, owing to a representation of P's Mulhar, the proceedings were dropped. Subsequently P obtained from the District Magistrate an order under this section in respect of the same matter. It was objected that the matter having been once disposed of by the Sub-divisional Magistrate, could not be revised by the District Magistrate or any other Magistrate; held, that there was no such bar in law, the question involved being one of fact, depending on the circumstances of each particular case, whether fresh proceedings should be started or not. The question whether the matter properly comes within the section must be raised and decided at the trial, 5 C. W. N. 173. But a party has no right to compel the Magistrate to move in the matter after he has dropped proceedings, 14 C. W. N. CXGIX. See Note 54 above.

But in an Allahabad case, it was held that, where on a complaint made by a private person that one of the platform had been constructed on a public road and the Magistrate issued a notice on / to show cause why the platform should not be removed, took evidence and took into consideration the report made by a Deputy Magistrate and ordered that such portion of the platform as might be obstructing the high way be removed; held,—that the initial order was perfectly good, but the final order being vague, the case could be sent back for fresh enquiry. 23 A. L. J. 43.

80. High Court will not interfere where Magistrate has dropped proceedings.—A Magistrate to whom a complaint had been made against persons alleged to have obstructed a public thoroughfare issued order to them to remove the obstruction or to show cause against doing so, and then made over the case to a Deputy Magistrate to take the evidence of the witnesses, and on his report that the road was a private road, let the proceedings drop, held, that the Magistrate was competent to do so, being satisfied that there was no ground for his interference, and that the High Court would not, on revision, consider the value of the evidence on which the Magistrate acted, 1 C. L. R. 436. followed in 8 C. 893 = 11 C. L. R. 235.

X.—APPEAL.

81. No Letters Patent appeal from the order of a single Judge of a Chartered High Court.—Orders passed under Chapter X are orders in a criminal trial and no Letters Patent appeal lies therefrom, (1915) M. W. N. 240 = 18 Cr. L. J. 349.

XI.—REVISION.

82. Interference by High Court in revision.—In 9 B. L. R. 417, it was held (under s. 308, Act XXV of 1861), that if the Magistrate makes inquiry upon the evidence before him, he does not act without jurisdiction or in excess of jurisdiction. The High Court cannot set aside his order except on an error in law or an excess of jurisdiction. It is not a ground for interference that the Magistrate has come to an erroneous decision upon the evidence. But proceedings under this section being judicial proceedings they are open to review by the High Court on an error in law. See also 9 B. H. C. R. 169, which overrules 4 B. H. C. R. A. C. 150. See 7 B. L. R. 449.

83. Where Magistrate acts upon the evidence before him, the High Court will not interfere.—Where a Magistrate had ordered (under s. 308, Act XXV of 1861) the suppression of a trade or occupation as a nuisance, as injurious to the health of the community, the High Court will not interfere unless they find either that there was no reasonable evidence before the Magistrate of the trade being injurious to the health or comfort of the community, or that the ~~cause shown~~ was such as ought to have satisfied the Magistrate that his order for suppressing the trade was not reasonable and proper. The finding of fact by the Magistrate is correct, unless there is not on the record any evidence to warrant such finding, 7 B. L. R. 516.

84. Orders under s. 135 may be revised.—An illegal order made by a Magistrate under this section may be revised by the High Court under s. 439 read with ss. 435 and 423, cl. (c). 42 B. R. 1895; 8 P. R. 1904.

85. Orders under s. 137 may be revised.—See 1 C. L. J. 434 = 2 Cr. L. J. 439; 7 B. L. R. 516; 2 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 334.

86. Verdict of jury cannot be referred to High Court.—See Note 22 to s. 138.

87. High Court cannot revise executive orders except when a person is punished for its disobedience.—See 6 C. 83 and Note to s. 243.

XII.—NATURE OF PROCEEDINGS.

88. Person proceeded against is not an accused person.—Proceedings are civil rather than criminal.—Proceedings under this section are more of the nature of civil than of criminal proceedings, and a party to such a proceeding is not an accused person within the meaning of s. 312, and there is nothing to prevent his being examined on oath so that if such a person gives false evidence he may be prosecuted for an offence under s. 193, 1 P. C. The word accused does not necessarily mean and include any person over whom a Magistrate or other Court is exercising jurisdiction, 2 C. L. J. 449 = 9 C. W. N. 983. See, however, 16 B. 661; 21 A. 107 and 23 C. 493. In (1915) M. W. N. 240 = 16 Cr. L. J. 349; it was laid down that the fact that in such proceedings the person proceeded against is a competent witness on his behalf does not make the proceedings any the less a criminal trial and therefore it was held that no Letters Patent appeal lays against the order of a single Judge

XIII.—ORDERS UNDER THIS CHAPTER AND CIVIL PROCEEDINGS.

69. Civil suit to set aside the order does not lie.—It is not competent to a Civil Court to set aside the order of a Magistrate made under this section, on the ground that such order was made without jurisdiction, because the land with reference to which the order was made is private property and not a thoroughfare or public place. But it is competent to a Civil Court irrespective of any order made under this section, to try the question whether the land which formed the subject is private property and not a thoroughfare or public place, as between the parties to such suit and those who claim under them, 6 C. 291 = 7 C. L. R. 433. Sub-sec. (2) is in accordance with 3 B. L. R. Appx. 43 = 11 W. R. 434 (Civ.). Civil suits will not lie to set aside an order duly made by a Magistrate under this Chapter, or to restrain him from carrying out such order into effect, 4 B. L. R. 24 (F.B.) and 12 M. 475. See 14 C. 60.

70. The opposite party may institute a suit for declaration of his right.—A suit may lie for a declaration under s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, against anyone of the public who claims to use the lands, as a public road. To such a suit it is unnecessary to make the Secretary of State a party and it is not barred by an order under s. 137, 15 C. 460 (F.B.) overruling 15 C. 60. See 17 B. 293; 8 H. P. C. R. A. C. 94; 6 B. 670 and 672; 19 W. R. 426 (Civ.), 6 C. 291; 7 Bur. L. T. 23 = 15 Cr. L. J. 259. In 6 B. 670 it was held, where a Magistrate declares certain land to be a public thoroughfare, or part of a public thoroughfare, the party dissatisfied with the Magistrate's order cannot sue the Magistrate, but must sue the Secretary of State for India.

71. When party instituting proceeding can be sued for damages.—The party aggrieved by an order under this section cannot sue the parties who instituted the proceedings before the Magistrate for damages, unless he can show that, in taking such proceedings, they were actuated by malicious motives against him, or intended wrongfully to injure him, 2 B. L. R. 8. N. XV; 2 B. 457.

72. Magistrate's order is not a conclusive determination of title.—A Magistrate's order under this section is not a conclusive determination of the question of title, therefore a person aggrieved by the order can bring a suit for declaration of title against Government, and since public roads were vested in the Government of Bombay, they were interested to deny plaintiff's title to the land, 17 B. 293.

73. Claim for jury does not operate as an estoppel.—A person who on receipt of an order of a Magistrate under this section declaring the existence of a right of way over such person's land, demands the appointment of a jury to try whether such order was reasonable, is not thereby stopped from afterwards suing to establish his right to the exclusive enjoyment of such land. Per FIELD, J., 6 C. 291 = 7 C. L. R. 433.

+Service or notification of order

134. (1) The order shall, if practicable, be served on the person against whom it is made, in manner herein provided for service of a summons

(2) If such order cannot be so served, it shall be notified by proclamation, published in such manner as the Local Government may by rule direct, and a copy thereof shall be stuck up at such place or places as may be fittest for conveying the information to such person

Notes.—1. Orders must be served on individuals personally.—The provisions of Chapter X contemplate orders to be directed and served on persons individually and not addressed generally to the public at large by a proclamation, 8 A. 99; 12 C. L. R. 231.

2. Absence of personal service does not make order illegal. It is sufficient if order is somehow brought to notice of those concerned.—The mere non-service personally of a notice to remove a nuisance is not a sufficient ground to set aside the Magistrate's order, when it appears that the parties did not take the objection before the Magistrate, and that they in fact admitted knowledge of the existence of the notice and sought to excuse their failure to obey it, 5 W. R. 6. The terms of this section and the notification made by the Bengal Government thereunder as to promulgation and issue of an order, are directory, but an omission to follow strictly such direction, though it is an irregularity, does not invalidate the order. Where, therefore, it is shown that the order has been brought to the actual knowledge of the person sought to be affected by it, such omission does not prevent the case coming within s. 188, I. P. C., 18 C. 9; 12 M. 475. Similarly, when the notice was served on the agent and the principal was undoubtedly aware of it, 30 A. 364 When the order is communicated to those concerned before it was made absolute, it is immaterial that the method in which it was brought to their actual notice was not strictly in accordance with the provisions of this section, 2 P. R. 1900 = 24 P. L. R. 1900.

3. Mode of publication of proclamation.—The proclamation referred to in this section shall be published by notification in the Bombay Government Gazette and in such local newspaper, if there be any, as the Magistrate issuing the proclamation thinks fit, and by beat of drum at the place where the order notified by a proclamation is to have effect. Notification No 6067, dated 14th October, 1887—Bombay Government Gazette, Part I, p 866 In Bengal, the proclamation should be notified by beat of drum at the place where the nuisance to be abated or removed is situated Calcutta Gazette, 1883, Pt. III, p 245

135. The person against whom such order is made shall—

- (a) perform within the time "and in the manner" *specified in the order, the act directed thereby, or
- (b) appear in accordance with such order and either show cause against the same, or apply to the Magistrate by whom it was made to appoint a jury to try whether the same is reasonable and proper

Notes.—1. Application for jury must bear stamp.—The application must bear an 8 annas Court fee stamp under Sch. II, Art. I of the Court Fees Act VII of 1870 After such an application, the Magistrate is bound to appoint a jury He cannot decide the matter by a local inquiry, 2 G. L. R. 509; Weir II, 63. See also 9 Bom. L. R. 30 = 5 Cr. L. J. 97.

2. Party cannot show cause and also apply for the appointment of a jury.—The party against whom a conditional order under s 133 is made, cannot both show cause against the order and ask for the appointment of a jury. The present section gives such a person the right to adopt either of the alternatives. If he adopts the former alternative, the Magistrate is bound to take action under s 137, and if he adopts the second alternative, then the Magistrate is bound to take action under s. 138, 13 C. W. N. 367.

3. Application for jury may operate as waiver of plea of bona fide claim.—If a person against whom an order is made under s 133 applies for a jury under this section, he is bound by the verdict of the jury and of right to the subject of contention and to have this claim determined by the Magistrate before the jury proceed with the matter, 7 Bar. L. T. 23 = 15 Cr. L. J. 259. But his application for a jury does not affect the fact that the question of the expediency of discontinuing the alleged nuisance which has been referred to the jury ought not to have been so referred, 25 W. R. 72.

4. Case can be referred to jury only after the Magistrate decides that there is a public right of way.—It is only when the Magistrate is competent to pass an order under s 133 that a jury can be appointed to consider whether it is a reasonable and proper order, and a Magistrate has no jurisdiction unless he finds that the way alleged to be obstructed is one which is or may be lawfully used by the public. The jury is not competent to decide this question, for the decision of this matter affects the right of the Magistrate to interfere under s 133, 3 C. W. N. 345; 10 C. W. N. 845; 7 Bar. L. T. 23 = 15 Cr. L. J. 259; 19 C. L. J. 631 = 18 C. W. N. 1148 = 15 Cr. L. J. 515. In 31 C. 979, 9 C. W. N. 72; it was held to be not a proper reference to ask the jury to decide whether there was a public right of way. See also 12 C. 137 and 696, 15 C. 564; 4 C. W. N. 596; 25 C. 869; 8 C. W. N. 143; 2 P. R. 1903; 5 C. 875, Weir II, 64; 17 C. 682, 25 C. 378; 6 C. W. N. 885; 3 C. L. J. 360 = 3 Cr. L. J. 831; 10 C. W. N. 845 = 4 Cr. L. J. 42; 14 C. W. N. 544 = 11 Cr. L. J. 303. See Notes 50—52 under s 133 & Lab. 225.

5. Before which Magistrate has the party to appear.—See s 133 (1) and Notes 12 and 13 thereto

136. If such person does not perform such act or appear and show cause or apply for the appointment of a jury as required by s 135, he shall be liable to the penalty prescribed in that behalf in section 188 of the Indian Penal Code, and the order shall be made absolute

Consequence of his failing to do so

* Words in inverted commas were added by Act XVIII of 1923

Notes.—1. Punishment for disobedience of order.—“Whoever knowing that by an order promulgated by a public servant lawfully empowered to promulgate such order he is directed to abstain from a certain act or to take certain order with certain property in his possession or under his management disobeys such direction shall, if such disobedience causes or tends to cause obstruction, annoyance, or injury or risk of obstruction, annoyance, or injury, to any person lawfully employed, be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees or with both and if such disobedience causes or tends to cause danger to human life, health, or safety or causes or tends to cause a riot or an affray, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.”

Explanation.—It is not necessary that the offender should intend to produce harm, or contemplate his disobedience as likely to produce harm. It is sufficient that he knows of the order which he disobeys and that his disobedience produces or is likely to produce harm. S 188 I P C. Proceedings under s 188 I P C., can be taken only subject to the provisions of ss 195 and 487 of this Code.

2. Provisions of section are stringent.—The provisions of this section are stringent, because the intention is to create facilities for conditional orders, which Magistrates are authorized to pass under Chapter X in order to prevent danger to the public becoming final without needless delay and thereby promptly to ensure public safety, 12 M. 475 at p. 478.

3. The validity of an order after it becomes absolute cannot be questioned.—Though s 188 refers to the offender as a person directed to abstain from a certain act, or to take certain order with certain property in his possession or under his management yet it is not competent to the accused to re-open the question of possession, etc., by reason of this section which conclusively presumes that the conditional order was correctly made. The words “in that behalf” mean for his failure to comply with the requirements of s 135, 12 M. 475 at p. 478. When once an order has been made absolute it is not competent for the party affected by it to go behind it and question its validity in any way, 13 A. 577. Or re-open the question of its validity in any other proceeding, 2 P. R. 1900 = 24 P. L. R. 1900.

4. But order made without jurisdiction may be questioned.—In distinguishing the case from 12 M. 475, the Court in 20 A. 501 observed “that the subject matter of the order therein being a tank or well in a public street, fell within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate and within the powers conferred by s 133 and the succeeding sections. The ground of contention upon which the conviction was impeached in that case was not that the order made was one of such a nature that the Magistrate was not empowered by the Code to make it, but the person upon whom the order was served was not the person who was responsible for the existing state of things, or who ought to have been made the subject of such order while in this case what we have to consider is whether the public servant making the order in question is lawfully empowered to promulgate that order, as the subject matter of it being in a compound is without his jurisdiction.”

5. No further notice under s. 140 necessary before prosecution.—A person who allows the time fixed by an order under s. 133 to pass by without compliance or protest may be proceeded against under s 188, I P C., without a necessity for a further notice under s 140, 31 M. 230. See also 31 A. 577; 12 M. 475.

6. Magistrate cannot proceed under this section if party appears and shows cause.—If upon the appearance of the accused the Magistrate, without taking his evidence or asking him to produce any proof of his statement that the land on which the dam was had been sold by him to another person a year before at once sanctions his prosecution under this section the conviction will not be sustained as the Magistrate was bound to take evidence and make some inquiry under s. 137, 1 Bom. L. R. 783.

Procedure where he appears to show cause. 137. (1) If he appears and shows cause against the order, the Magistrate shall take evidence in the matter as in a summon-case.

(2) If the Magistrate, is satisfied that the order is not reasonable and proper, no further proceedings shall be taken in the case.

(3) If the Magistrate is not so satisfied, the order shall be made absolute.

Notes.—1. Magistrates bound to take evidence.—Where a person to whom an order has been issued under s 133 appears to show cause against such order, the Magistrate is bound to take the evidence, even if the accused appears after the time fixed, but before the case is taken up, 8 C. L. R. 431; Ratnial 320; 1 Bom. L. R. 783; 11 B. 375; 26 W. R. 7. Both ss. 137 and 138 are imperative in their terms. The Magistrate has no discretion in the matter, 13 C. W. N. 367; 42 C. 702. A Magistrate cannot act on his own opinion, but is bound to take evidence as a basis for the order he has to make. Otherwise the order will be ultra vires and illegal, 11 B 375; Weir II, 62. See also 32 P. R. 1917 (Cr); 23 C. W. N. 1054; 20 A. L. J. 857.

1-A. In an inquiry under this Chapter the Magistrate should proceed to take evidence in support of the order before the person asked to show cause against it is called upon to produce his evidence, 18 Cr. L. J. 848.

2. Magistrate cannot act on personal local investigation without taking evidence. Waiver by party cannot confer jurisdiction.—The language of s 137 is imperative and if the party appears to show cause the only course open to the Magistrate is to take evidence. The law does not contemplate that he should act as an arbitrator as public rights are involved. Even if the parties agree to abide by the decision of the Magistrate, based not upon evidence legally received but upon information gathered upon local inquiry, the order of the Magistrate cannot be supported. No waiver on the part of the parties could confer upon the Magistrate authority to act in a manner not prescribed by the Legislature, 10 C. L. J. 482 = 11 Cr. L. J. 1. Where a Magistrate made an order under this section for the removal of a fence without recording any evidence or drawing up any formal proceedings but acting merely on a local inspection, it was held that the procedure was altogether bad, 13 C. W. N. CCLXXXIII. A Magistrate cannot without calling upon the respondent to adduce evidence, make the order absolute relying on his own inspection 17 M. L. T. 142 = 15 Cr. L. J. 207. See also 20 C. W. N. 1471; 22 C. W. N. 1054.

so as to vitiate the proceedings, 47 B. 89.

3. Magistrate cannot drop proceedings without taking evidence when opposite party shows cause.—Where in a proceeding under s 133 in respect of an alleged obstruction of a public way, the Magistrate made a conditional order, but dropped the proceeding on the opposite party showing cause without following the procedure laid down by s 137, held that as the Legislature has directed in the event that had happened that the Magistrate should take evidence in the matter as in a summons-case, and in so far as he had failed to do that he had not performed the duty cast on him by law. It would be open to the Magistrate to consider when that evidence was taken, whether there was a complete answer against the opposite party or whether it was not a proper case where the parties should be referred to a Civil Court, 42 C. 702.

4. Parties cannot compromise nor Magistrate act as arbitrator.—As in a proceeding under s 133 public rights are involved the matter must be determined upon legal evidence and not made the subject of compromise by the disputing parties. The law does not contemplate that the Magistrate should act as arbitrator, 10 C. L. J. 482 = 11 Cr. L. J. 1. This section is imperative and mandatory. A Magistrate cannot act as an arbitrator even if parties agree to it, but he should record evidence as if it was a summons-case and then dispose of the case, 25 C. L. J. 349 = 21 C. W. N. 926.

5. Magistrate must take evidence on the matter of complaint as also the evidence of the opposite party.—"Shall take evidence in matter the" means shall take evidence upon the matter of the complaint and not simply the evidence which the opposite party might offer. The report or other information which the Magistrate had received before making the conditional order is not evidence against the opposite party, the proceeding under s 133 being entirely ex parte, 24 C. 393; 5 C. 875; 21 W. R. 64; 11 C. 271.

6. As in a summons-case, the complainant must begin.—The complainant has to start proceedings by adducing evidence and then the party showing cause may produce his own evidence if so advised. When this has been done and not before the Magistrate can make the conditional order absolute if he finds sufficient reason for doing so, 31 A. 453 following 24 C. 393. The opposite party is not bound to produce any evidence until the party who has set the law in motion has produced his evidence, 11 A. L. J. 931 = 15 Cr. L. J. 23; 20 A. L. J. 692.

7. Duty of Magistrate to compel the attendance of witnesses.—When in a proceeding under s 133 the defendant applied for the summoning of certain witnesses and also applied on the day of hearing to the Magistrate to compel the attendance of certain witnesses who had been summoned, but did not appear, and the Magistrate merely ordered the application to be filed and made an order against the defendants. Held that the defendant had a right to call upon the Court to compel the attendance of witnesses, 6 C. W. N. 548.

8. Non-appearance of objector on adjourned day—Power of Magistrate to make the order absolute.—When a person appears on the day fixed in obedience to notice issued under s 133, and showed cause, his subsequent failure to appear and produce evidence on the adjourned hearing does not justify the Magistrate to pass the final order absolute until he satisfies himself from evidence recorded before him that there was unlawful obstruction, though the absence of the defendant might be some ground for dispensing with any but very formal evidence, 2 Bom. L. R. 818

8. A conditional order made absolute after a lapse of years owing to non-appearance of objector.—Where a conditional order passed in 1916 was made absolute in 1920, the High Court treated the final order as resting on no conditional order and reversed it, 23 Bom. L. R. 845

9. Illegal order cannot be made absolute.—All that a Magistrate can do under this section is to make absolute the conditional order passed under s. 133. Where, therefore, the conditional order is one which the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to make under s. 133, the subsequent order under this section is also illegal, Ratanlal 516; 16 Cr. L. J. 24 (G.)

10. Second-class Magistrate other than the Magistrate issuing the rule may make the order absolute.—See Note 12 to s. 133

11. Finality of order.—Reference to a jury is entirely optional with the person against whom the order has been made, but if he applies for a jury, he is bound by their verdict. If he does not apply for a jury, but prefers to show cause against the Magistrate's order, the finality of that order after termination of the proceedings would be none the less binding, 14 C. 60. See Notes 3 and 4 to s. 136

12. Where a claim of right raised in answer to order under s. 133 was found to be bona fide and it was ordered that, unless the party sought to establish his right in a Civil Court within a limited time his bona fides would be again questioned in a Criminal Court, held, that the Magistrate should not have made the order without taking evidence adduced by one side or the other, 23 C. W. N. 774.

Procedure where he claims jury

138. (1) On receiving an application under section 135 to appoint a jury, the Magistrate shall—

(a) forthwith appoint a jury consisting of an uneven number of persons not less than five of whom the foreman and one-half of the remaining members shall be nominated by such Magistrate, and the other members by the applicant,

(b) summon such foreman and members to attend at such place and time as the Magistrate thinks fit, and

(c) fix a time within which they are to return their verdict

(2) The time so fixed may for good cause shown, be extended by the Magistrate,

Notes.—1. For Form of the Magistrate's order constituting a jury, see Sch. V, No. 17

2. Punishment for not attending as a juror.—Intentionally not obeying a legal order to attend at a certain place in person or by agent, or departing therefrom without authority, is punishable with simple imprisonment for one month or fine of 500 rupees, or both. In case such disobedience be made to an order requiring personal attendance, etc., in a Court of Justice it is punishable with simple imprisonment for six months, or fine of 1,000 rupees, or both—S. 174, I P C. If the summons does not mention the place or time of the day at which the juror is required to attend, he cannot be convicted for non-attendance S. A. 7. The Magistrate should also give instructions as to what the jury is to do 2 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 384

APPOINTMENT OF JURY.

3. Appointment is imperative.—This section leaves no discretion to a Magistrate. He must appoint a jury if the petitioner applies for it, Weir 11, 63; 23 C. W. N. 387—10 Cr. L. J. 494. His refusal to do so will be wholly without jurisdiction, 19 P. R. 1857. He cannot decide the matter by a local inquiry 2 C. L. R. 609.

4. Principles to be borne in mind in appointing jurors.—The Magistrate should bear in mind that he is supposed to be acting purely in the interests of the public, and should be on his guard against any tendency of using this section as a substitute for litigation in the Civil Courts in order to the settlement of a private dispute. In the present case the question before the Magistrate was whether there had been an obstruction to a public way, to the injury or inconvenience of members of the public to use the same. The informant had no locus standi in the matter once he had performed what was perhaps his duty as a good citizen in calling the attention of the Magistrate to the existence of the nuisance. It is expedient that Magistrates should be on their guard against allowing a proceeding of this sort to assume the character of a private litigation and allowing it to be treated as a dispute to which two private individuals representing opposite interests are the parties. I still more emphatically approve of the principle laid down in the Punjab case that it would be highly improper on the part of a Magistrate to appoint to serve on a jury of this sort, the friends or supporters of the person at whose instance the proceedings under this Chapter are taken. At the same time it must be remembered that it is often not an easy matter to secure the services of a foreman and two jurymen to under take in the public interests an inquiry of this sort, it may be in some village distant from headquarters. The criterion, therefore which I would apply to a case of this sort is whether the person at whose instance the proceedings were instituted was allowed to exercise rights not conferred upon him by law as if he were a party to the litigation and whether as a matter of fact the jurors nominated by the Magistrate could rightly be described as friends or supporters of the aforesaid person.' PER PIGOTT, J. 31 A. 26.

(a) Complainant and his witnesses ought not to be appointed as jurors—It is not competent to any one to exercise the authority of a public Court of Justice as Judge in his own case, and it is plainly against the most elementary principles of right and equity that an applicant for justice to a Criminal Court, or indeed to any other Court, should be compelled to submit his case to the arbitration of his adversary. Accordingly where a Magistrate appointed the complainant and his two witnesses as jurors, the High Court set aside the Magistrate's proceedings as the jury so constituted was not a proper tribunal. 22 W. R. 47.

(b) Friends and supporters of complainant not to be appointed—It would be highly improper on the part of a Magistrate to appoint to serve on the jury the friends or supporters of the person at whose instance the proceedings are instituted 4 P. R. 1897 : 37 A. 26

(c) Nominees of complainant not to be appointed—A Magistrate should exercise his own independent discretion in selecting the members of the jury, and the persons so selected by him should not be nominees of the party interested in upholding the Magistrate's order, 21 W. R. 43; 23 C. 499; 26 C. 869. But there is nothing illegal in a Magistrate ascertaining from the complainant the names of suitable persons to serve on the jury, 37 A. 26.

and—A Magistrate has no power to veto 1 he appoint the friends or supporters of taken. 4 P. R. 1897.

5. Appointment must be made in presence of both parties.—Jurors should be appointed or such appointment cancelled in the presence of the parties and not behind their back, even if any of them be a nominee of the Magistrate 5 G. 878 = 6 G. L. R. 379.

6 Power of appointment cannot be delegated—(a) To another Magistrate—The Magistrate to whom an application is made to appoint a jury, cannot delegate that duty to another Magistrate, Ratanlal 460

(b) To the foreman—See 10 C. L. R. 193.

7. Jury must be legally constituted.—If out of five jurors one is absent a Magistrate cannot go on with the inquiry unless he appoints another juror in his place where one out of five jurors declined to act and the remainder being equally divided the Magistrate declined to pass any order under s. 139 and the case was therefore struck off, held that the course taken by the Magistrate was irregular and that a fresh jury should be summoned and the case inquired into anew, 11 C 84. The foreman cannot substitute a juror in the place of an absent one, and the verdict of such an irregularly constituted jury is not legal, and disobedience of the order based upon such verdict is not punishable under s. 188 I P C, 10 G L R 193. A jury appointed under this section is not legally constituted when only the foreman is appointed by the Magistrate, and the rest of the members by the parties, 16 W. R. 23 = 7 B L R Appx. 57. See Note 9.

8. When constitution is changed, fresh time for verdict must be given.—Whenever from any cause the constitution of the jurors is changed and fresh juror is appointed, the time within which the new jury is to return their verdict must be fixed. Where this is not done, the Magistrate cannot carry out his original order, if there is any delay in the submission of the verdict by the jurors, 14 W. R. 69

9. Appointment of a second jury—Where a jury had fully entertained and considered the matter submitted to it, and the individual members of the jury had given in their opinion to the foreman to report to the Magistrate and the only delay was in the foreman's making the report, it was held, that the Magistrate could not appoint a second jury to consider the matter afresh, but ought to have acted on the report of the first jury which had been given in before he made his final order in the matter. 21 W. R. 55. The Magistrate is competent to appoint a fresh jury only in the event of the jury duly appointed under this section being for some good cause unable to decide the matter submitted to it e.g., death of one of its members before final decision or perverse refusal of its members to hear and decide 44 A. 575 = 20 A. L. J. 472.

DUTIES OF JURY.

10. Adjudication by some only of the jurors appointed bad.—The majority contemplated is a majority arrived at after the deliberation among the jurors appointed, 13 C. 275. The law requires a jurymen to exercise his own understanding on the case submitted to him, and to decide on evidence. He should not blindly follow the opinion of his fellows. Where out of five jurors only two saw the place and the third never visited it, but based his opinion solely on what had been told him by the other two, held, that the finding of the so-called majority was not that of a legal majority, 25 W. R. 4. Where though five jurors were appointed, only four dealt with the case and submitted a report, the other being ill and unable to attend and the report was acted upon the Magistrate held the order of the Magistrate was illegal and must be set aside. Notwithstanding that the jury as a body can act by a majority, that act must be by a majority out of a jury of five people who investigated the case. To hold otherwise would be in effect to say that a jury of three persons would be sufficient because that would be a majority out of a jury of five persons, 11 Cr. L. J. 402 (Cal.) Where a minority of the jury do not attend the meetings, the Magistrate cannot proceed upon a report submitted by the majority; but it is competent for him to proceed under s. 141 and pass orders as he thinks fit, 13 C. 275. See Note 7.

11. Chapter does not lay down any rules of procedure.—There is no special procedure laid down by the Code to be adopted by a jury appointed under this section in coming to a finding on the questions submitted to them, 30 A. 364.

12. Jury cannot decide on mere local inspection without taking evidence.—A jury cannot decide a matter referred to them merely on inspection of the locality without taking evidence, 26 C. 889; 6 C. W. N. 886; 13 C. W. N. 387. See 30 A. 364.

13. The only function of the jury is to decide whether the order is reasonable and proper.—The only function which a jury can exercise is to consider whether the order made by the Magistrate is reasonable and proper, it being no part of their duty to determine the rights of the parties to the property, 5 C. 875 = 6 C. L. R. 379; 31 C. 979; 21 W. R. 10; 3 C. W. N. 345; 10 C. W. N. 845.

14. Jury cannot decide whether a road is public or not.—It is not competent to the jury to decide whether the way obstructed was or was not a public way, 19 C. L. J. 631 = 18 C. W. N. 1148 = 15 Cr. L. J. 815; 10 C. W. N. 845 = 4 Cr. L. J. 42; 14 C. W. N. 344 = 11 Cr. L. J. 305 (C.) = 11 Cr. L. J. 402, 7 Bar. L. T. 23 = 15 Cr. L. J. 259. The Magistrate should himself determine prior to the appointment of a jury whether the road is a public one and not leave the question to the jury, 3 C. L. J. 360 = 3 Cr. L. J. 331.

15. Whether jury can decide that claim is bona fide?—It has been held in 26 C. 889 and other cases (Note 52 at page 211) that it is for the Magistrate to determine whether the objection of a claimant that the way is not public is bona fide, and he cannot in spite of the objection, unless he determines that the matter is not bona fide, refer the matter to the jury. In 30 A. 364 it was however held that where the contention was that the shed over a shop front was not situate in that portion which is admittedly portion of a way lawfully used by the public, but fell within a certain portion of that ground which had been by some Magistrate remitted for use by the persons who had erected shops in that public place, the question was one which the jury was competent to decide. In 18 C. W. N. 1148, the Magistrate submitted the case to the jury without deciding whether the claim was bona fide, the jury finding after collecting the evidence that there was bona fide claim declined to proceed further to decide the question and referred the case to the Magistrate who declined to issue any order under s. 133, the High Court refused to interfere. 4 Lah. 224.

16. Collective opinion of jury to be delivered through foreman.—The jurors are not to give their individual and separate opinions to the Magistrate, but they are to consult together and then express their collective opinion through their foreman with a view to its being acted upon by the Magistrate, if they required evidence to come to some conclusion, it should be produced before them by the Magistrate, 18 A. 158.

EXTENSION OF TIME FOR DELIVERY OF VERDICT.

17. Extension of time.—Sub-clause (2) which is new, sets at rest the conflict between 2 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 334 on the one hand, and 7 B. L. R. Appx. 57 = 16 W. R. 23 and 14 W. R. 69 on the other, as to whether a Magistrate could receive and enforce the award of a jury delivered after the day fixed for the purpose. The Calcutta High Court held that the jury was functus officio after the date so fixed. But the power now conferred by sub-sec. (2) can be exercised only by the Magistrate himself. He cannot delegate that power to the Chairman of the jury, 23 A. 159 at p. 161.

EFFECT OF VERDICT.

16. Question of bona fide right cannot be raised after verdict.—A person who has applied for a jury is bound by their verdict and cannot afterwards raise such a plea as that the obstruction was caused in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right, 1900 A. W. N. 80; 30 A. 364.

19. Grounds of objection to the verdict must be reasonable and specific.—Where a party objects to the verdict of a jury he ought to give the Magistrate reasonable prima facie ground for the opinion that either the jury did not in fact apply a judicial discretion to the case, or that the verdict was such as the jury could not have arrived at by a proper exercise of their discretion upon the materials before them, 23 W. R. 15. The objection must be as specific as possible and not vague and indefinite.

20. When verdict is that order is reasonable, Magistrate bound by it.—Where a jury is appointed to try the reasonableness of the Magistrate's order, the Magistrate is bound to be guided by the decision of the jury. If their report is not clearly expressed, they may be called upon to state definitely, whether the order of the Magistrate is a reasonable and proper one, 12 W. R. 28. Where the order of a Magistrate is referred to the consideration of a jury, and the jury, considered the order so referred to be reasonable and proper, held, that the only order the Magistrate was empowered to make was one founded upon the report of the jury by whose decision he must be guided, 22 W. R. 86; 10 Cr. L. J. 210 (C).

21. When order modified, Magistrate must either accept verdict or drop proceedings.—If the Magistrate does not accept the modification of the jury, he should stop further proceedings. But if he accepts the modification and if the report is not otherwise open to any objection, he is bound to accept the decision of the jury and be guided by it 12 W. R. 28; 22 W. R. 86. In a Calcutta case (Revision No 1146 of 1905) relating to the removal of an obstruction from a public road, the jury was of opinion that the orders of the Magistrate ought to be modified. But the Magistrate called upon the parties to produce their evidence instead of proceeding under this section held, that the procedure adopted by the Magistrate was bad and further the order could not stand, as it did not definitely state what the encroachments were and as it was alleged to have taken place seven or eight years before, and had been acquiesced in for a long time it was not a public nuisance under s 140.

22. Magistrate cannot refer verdict to High Court.—Where the majority of the jury come to a finding which the District Magistrate considers to be illegal, he cannot refer it to the High Court under s 435, because the decision of the jury is not a proceeding in a Criminal Court which the District Magistrate can call for and examine and refer to the High Court. Nor can he take further proceedings in the matter under the Code, Ratanlal 336; 30 A. 364.

139. (1) If the jury or a majority of the jurors find that the order of the Magistrate is reasonable and proper as originally made, or subject to a modification which the Magistrate accepts, the Magistrate shall make the order absolute, subject to such modification (if any).

Procedure where jury finds Magistrate's order to be reasonable

(2) In other cases no further proceedings shall be taken under this Chapter

Note.—Report of the jury containing directions which has been adopted by Magistrate can be enforced as provided for in section 140 (2) 18 Cr. L. J. 305.

An order of the Magistrate rescinding a former order made by him is perfectly valid Ibid

139-A. (1) Where an order is made under section 133 for the purpose of preventing obstruction nuisance or danger to the public in the use of any way, river, channel or place, the Magistrate shall on the appearance before him of the person against whom the order was made, question him as to whether he denies the existence of any public right in respect of the way, river, channel or place, and, if he does so the Magistrate shall, before proceeding under section 137 or section 138 inquire into the matter

Procedure where existence of public right is denied

(2) If in such inquiry the Magistrate finds that there is any reliable evidence in support of such denial he shall stay the proceedings until the matter of the existence of such right has been decided by a competent Civil Court and if he finds that there is no such evidence he shall proceed as laid down in section 137 or section 138 as the case may require

(3) A person who has on being questioned by the Magistrate under sub-section (1) failed to deny the existence of a public right of the nature therein referred to or who having made such denial has failed to adduce reliable evidence in support thereof shall not in the subsequent proceedings be permitted to make any such denial nor shall any question in respect of the existence of any such public right be inquired into by any jury appointed under section 138

Notes.—1 By the insertion of the new section 139-A the Legislature has accepted the view laid down in 42 C. 158. Under this section the Magistrate is competent only to inquire into a claim relating to title and if on such inquiry he finds the claim to be bona fide he is bound to stay the proceedings until the existence of such right has been decided by a competent civil court. See 23 A. L. J. 187 where there was a denial of the existence of public right. See also 29 C. W. N. 649; 30 C. W. N. 645

2 S. 139-A requires only evidence and not proof and the only condition requisite to enable the Magistrate to stay the proceedings is that on the materials before him he shall have no reason to think the evidence false. The intent of s. 139 A (2) is that the Magistrate should neither encroach upon the jurisdiction of the

140. (1) When an order has been made absolute under section 136 section 137 or section 139 the Magistrate shall give notice of the same to the person against whom the order was made and shall further require him to perform the act directed by the order within a time to be fixed in the notice, and inform him that in case of disobedience he will be liable to the penalty provided by section 188 of the Indian Penal Code

(2) If such act is not performed within the time fixed the Magistrate may cause it to be performed and may recover the costs of performing it either by the sale of any building goods or other property removed by his order, or by the distress and sale of any other moveable property of such person within or without the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction. If such other property is without such limits the order shall authorize its attachment and sale when endorsed by the Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property to be attached is found

disobedience to order

(3) No suit shall lie in respect of anything done in good faith under this section

Note—An order for removing certain nuisance was made absolute under section 137. The order was not obeyed and the petitioner applied to the succeeding Magistrate to enforce that order. That application was refused on the ground that the order passed under section 137 was an illegal order. Held that the Magistrate was not justified in going behind the order of his predecessor. The discretion of the Magistrate under section 140 sub-section 2 must be a judicial discretion and no Magistrate has judicial discretion to set as a Court of Appeal and decide whether an order passed by a Magistrate of concurrent jurisdiction was a proper order or not 27 C. W. N. 459

Notes—1 For Form of Magistrate's notice etc. after the finding by a jury see Sch. V No 18. The notice must be served personally and not by advertisements. 1 Ind. Jur. 59

2 Good faith.—See Note 1 to s. 132

3. No further notice necessary when party does not appear.—Whenever the time fixed by an order under s. 133 has been allowed by the person against whom the order was made to pass by without compliance or protest he may be proceeded against at once under s. 188 I. P. C. without further notice under this section 12 M. 475, 13 A. 577; 31 M. 250

4 Final order should be passed by the same Magistrate who made the order absolute.—A Sub-divisional Magistrate having made a conditional order under s. 133 against a person to abate nuisance or repair and show cause before a second-class Magistrate who the order should not be enforced the said person appeared as directed and the order was made absolute under s. 137. The second-class Magistrate then issued a notice and order under this section, requiring the nuisance to be abated within a certain date. The District Magistrate having referred the case on the ground that the second-class Magistrate had no jurisdiction to pass final orders in such cases, held that the order was not illegal, as presumably the Magistrate who issued notice under this section is the same Magistrate indicated in s 137, where no special mention of his class is mentioned as is done in s 135, but, as a general rule, it is undesirable for first-class Magistrates to call on the officer who reports on a nuisance in his administrative capacity to decide judicially whether it is a nuisance or not, 9 M. 201 followed in 25 C. 278. In Weir II, 61, however, where a Deputy Magistrate having made a conditional order under s 133 required the petitioner to appear and show cause before a Taluk Magistrate why the order should not be enforced, held, the Deputy Magistrate having ceased to have jurisdiction in the matter, the Taluk Magistrate alone ought to have proceeded to dispose of the reference made to him in accordance with law, and the Deputy Magistrate had no jurisdiction to make the order absolute under s. 137 (3). See 47 B 89.

5. Liability of accused is for wilful disobedience of lawful order, and not for any relation to property.—It is no answer to a charge preferred under s 188, I P C, that the accused had no control over the property (in regard to which the order is made) either as owner or possessor or otherwise, and that the order was made on an erroneous view of his relation to the property in question. The imputability consists, not in the actual existence of any rural relation between the accused and the property concerning which the order is made, but in wilful disobedience of the order lawfully made by a competent Magistrate under s. 133, 12 M. 475 at p. 477.

6. Accused cannot go behind the order.—In case of prosecution for disobedience of the order made under this section, the accused is not entitled to go behind the order and show that it was one which ought not to have been made, 12 M. 475. But a Magistrate is not warranted in convicting a person for disobedience of an order to abate local nuisances, when the legality of such order is under the consideration of an Appellate Court 2 B. H. C R. Cr. Ca. 884. See Notes 3 and 4 to s 136

7. Practice.—Magistrates convicting under s. 188, I P C, should invariably quote the order which was disobeyed, and not the law under which that order was promulgated—C P Cr Cir No 6 As to quantum of punishment see 10 C. L. R. 193.

141. If the applicant by neglect or otherwise prevents the appointment of the jury, or

Procedure on failure to appoint jury or omission to return verdict

if from any cause the jury appointed do not return their verdict within the time fixed or within such further time as the Magistrate may in his discretion allow, the Magistrate may pass such order as he thinks fit, and such order shall be executed in the manner provided by s 140

Notes—1. May pass such order as he thinks fit.—An order imposing on a person a certain fine for a day and an additional fine for every day he continues the nuisance after conviction is bad 1 B L. R. Or. 113. The order must either be wholly good or wholly bad,

2 Considerations of justice and equity must guide the Magistrate's discretion.—The Magistrate of a district issued an order calling upon the petitioner to remove a building, on the ground that it was an unlawful obstruction upon a high road. A jury of five persons was appointed to report within 15 days whether the order was reasonable and proper. The jurors being without instructions took different views jurors had made no report within the time described the petitioner showed cause, on The order was repeated, and he was punished under s. 188, I P C, for its disobedience and his house was also pulled down, held that the petitioner had shown sufficient cause to satisfy the Magistrate, and the order to pull down the house was not reasonable and proper, held, also that the conviction was bad SAUSSE, C J, remarked —“If the letter of the law had not been departed from it seems that its spirit has not been complied with. The framers of the Code evidently contemplated that considerations of justice and equity should form the rule of the Magistrate's conduct in dealing with alleged nuisances or unlawful obstructions. The exercise of these summary powers requires both experience and discretion in a Magistrate and careful consideration of the rights of property, 2 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 384 Where, in a proceeding under s 133 the jury appointed under s 138 failed to return the verdict on account of certain causes, the petitioner appeared before the Magistrate and prayed for the appointment of a fresh jury, but the Magistrate refused the prayer and proceeded under s 141 made the original order absolute, held that the Magistrate, in so doing did not exercise a proper discretion. He ought to have, in the exercise of his discretion, appointed a fresh jury in compliance with the prayer of the petitioner, 12 Q. W. N. 1047 = 8 Cr. L. J. 233.

3. If jury fails to return verdict, Magistrate may proceed under s. 137.—In 13 Q. W. N. 387 = 10 Cr. L. J. 494, the petitioners against whom a conditional order under s. 133 was made, applied to the Magistrate for showing cause against the order and also for the appointment of jury, but in the end elected to proceed with the application. See 24 A. L. J. 165.

taken any action, after the jury had failed to perform their duty, to move the Magistrate for taking evidence in their behalf. Seem—The petitioners might have been allowed after the jury had failed to perform their duty, to revert to their application for showing cause and to adduce evidence, if they had moved the Magistrate for that purpose. See 24 A. L. J. 165.

142. (1) If a Magistrate making an order under section 133 considers that immediate measures should be taken to prevent imminent danger or injury of a serious kind to the public, he may, whether a jury is to be, or has been, appointed or not issue such an injunction to the person against whom the order was made, as is required to obviate or prevent such danger or injury pending the determination of the matter.

(2) In default of such person forthwith obeying such injunction, the Magistrate may himself use, or cause to be used, such means as he thinks fit to obviate such danger or to prevent such injury.

(3) No suit shall lie in respect of anything done in good faith by a Magistrate under this section.

Notes.—1. For Form of injunction.—Pending inquiry by jury, see Sch. V, No 19.

2. No jurisdiction when danger has passed away.—This section, does not authorize a Magistrate to take proceedings when the danger has passed away, 1 W. R. 8.

3. Danger must be imminent.—No order can be made under this section, unless there is imminent danger or fear or injury of a serious kind to the public involved in the case, and where a Magistrate, who had made an order under s. 133, subsequently directed further inquiry to be made, it was held, that he must be considered to have abandoned his proceedings under this section, and that he should have proceeded under ss. 136 and 137 instead of fining the party charged under s. 188, 1 P. C., 21 W. R. 86.

143. A District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate, or any other Magistrate empowered by the Local Government or the District Magistrate in this behalf may order any person not to repeat or continue a public nuisance, as defined in the Indian Penal Code or any special or local law.

Notes.—1. Definition of 'public nuisance'.—'A person is guilty of a public nuisance who does any act, or is guilty of an illegal omission, which causes any common injury, danger or annoyance to the public or to the people in general who dwell or occupy property in the vicinity, or which must necessarily cause injury, obstruction, danger or annoyance to persons who may have occasion to use any public right. A common nuisance is not excused on the ground that it causes some convenience or advantage,' s. 268 I. P. C.

2. Punishment for repeating or continuing public nuisance.—Whoever repeats or continues a public nuisance, after having been once lawfully convicted of such offence, shall be liable to imprisonment for a term which may extend to

3. For Form of order prohibiting the repetition of a nuisance, etc., see Sch. V, No 20.

4. Special and Local Law.—See definitions, ss. 41 and 42, I. P. C.

5. Magistrate empowered by the Local Government.—In the Punjab, all Magistrates of the first or second class, have been empowered to act under this section—Punjab Gazette, 1883, p. 52 = Punjab Csr., Vol. II, p. 118. In Bombay, all District Superintendents and Assistant Superintendents of Police have been so empowered—Bombay Gazette, 1873 p. 439, and as to Magistrates, see Bombay Gazette, 1872, p. 1325 and 1873, p. 16.

6 Proceedings of Magistrates not empowered—If any Magistrate not being empowered in this behalf makes an order under this section the proceedings are void—See s 530 cl (h)

7 What is not a public nuisance—When persons entitled to use a particular spot dedicated for the communal purpose of cremation used it for that purpose in a manner neither unusual nor calculated to aggravate the inconveniences necessarily incident to such an act as it is generally performed in this country they cannot be convicted of a public nuisance on the ground that their act caused material annoyance and discomfort to persons near the place on the occasion referred to and if a Magistrate makes an order under this section prohibiting such nuisance it is not warranted by this section or by any other law 19 M 464 Skinning of an animal which dies a natural death does not in itself constitute a public nuisance 12 A L J 349 = 15 Cr L J 600 Removal of a plague patient to another place where there are persons living is prima facie within the terms of s 268 I P C, 12 M L T 664 = 15 Cr L J 45

8 The order that is contemplated is one addressed to an individual—Before a person can be legally punished for disobedience of an order under this section there must be proof of the issue of the injunction to the accused individually and that he disobeyed the same and that such disobedience had produced or was likely to produce harm 2 W R 32 Infringement of the order made under this section is punishable under s 292 I P C but the order must be served on an individual personally and not by a proclamation addressed generally to the public at large 8 A 99

9 Executive orders cannot be questioned until their breach is enforced—When an executive officer makes an order or issues a notification under the Code it is not for the judiciary to question the propriety or legality of such order or notification until an attempt is made to enforce the execution of a penalty against a person committing a breach of such order or notification. Then only it becomes the duty of the judicial authority to consider whether the order is properly made or not 6 C 33

10 Revision—Orders under this section are proceedings within the meaning of s 475 is now amended and are therefore open to revision See note (preliminary) to section 435

11 Distinction between ss 143 and 144—This section enables the Magistrate to prevent the doing agora of that which constitutes a public nuisance while s 144 enables him to prevent it for the first time When the order itself is not lawful the repetition or continuance of an act declared by such order to be a public nuisance cannot be made the ground of a proceeding 19 M 464

CHAPTER XI

TEMPORARY ORDERS IN URGENT CASES OF NUISANCE OR APPREHENDED DANGER

144. (1) In cases where in the opinion of District Magistrate a Chief Presidency Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate or of any other Magistrate (not being a Magistrate of the third class) specially empowered by the Local Government or the Chief Presidency Magistrate or the District Magistrate to act under this section (there is sufficient ground for proceeding under this section and) immediate prevention or speedy remedy is desirable

Power to issue order absolute at once in urgent cases of nuisance or apprehended danger such Magistrate may by a written order stating the material facts of the case and served in manner provided by section 134 direct any person to abstain from a certain act or to take certain order with certain property in his possession or under his management if such Magistrate considers that such direction is likely to prevent or tends to prevent obstruction annoyance or injury or risk of obstruction annoyance or injury to any person lawfully employed or danger to human life health or safety or a disturbance of the public tranquillity or a riot or an affray

(2) An order under this section may in cases of emergency or in cases where the circumstances do not admit of the serving in due time of a notice upon the person against whom the order is directed be passed ex parte

(3) An order under this section may be directed to a particular individual or to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place

* Words in brackets were added by Act XVIII of 1923

(4) Any Magistrate may * either on his own motion or on the application of any person aggrieved rescind or alter any order made under this section by himself or any Magistrate subordinate to him or by his predecessor in office

†(5) Where such an application is received the Magistrate shall afford to the applicant an early opportunity of appearing before him either in person or by pleader and showing cause against the order and if the Magistrate rejects the application wholly or in part he shall record in writing his reasons for so doing

(6) No order under this section shall remain in force for more than two months from the making thereof unless in cases of danger to human life health or safety or likelihood of a riot or an affray, the Local Government by notification in the official Gazette otherwise directs

I—COMPETENCY OF MAGISTRATES

Notes.—1 What Magistrates empowered.—The law in sanctioning the power under this section is careful to provide that it shall be committed only to Magistrates whose discretion is presumably guaranteed by their responsible position or by selection.—PER TURNER C.J. in 6 M 203 at p 222 In the Punjab and Upper Burma all Magistrates of the first or second class have been empowered to act under this section. Punjab Gazette 1883 Pt I p 52 In Bombay these powers have been conferred upon Assistant District Superintendents of Police Bombay Gazette 1883 Pt I p 396

2 Proceedings of Magistrate not empowered void.—If any Magistrate not being empowered by law in this behalf issues an order under this section his proceedings are void.—S 130 (1).

3. Who may rescind the order made by an acting incumbent.—Scope of cl (4).—An order passed under this section by a Joint Magistrate while acting as a District Magistrate can be rescinded or altered after his reversion by the then District Magistrate himself and the latter cannot transfer an application for rescission or alteration to the former 16 Cr L J 74 (M).

4. Magistrate not competent to revive order without fresh proceedings.—Where a Magistrate set aside his order and struck the case off the file held that he had no power to revive it without a fresh proceeding 8 C. 580

5. Magistrate not competent to make orders after rule issued by High Court.—When the High Court has issued a rule in any case it takes full seisin of the case and it is the High Court alone that can pass ad interim orders in the case. The Magistrate against whose order the rule is issued has no such jurisdiction 11 C. W. N 79 = 4 Cr L J 433.

6. Magistrate making inquiry under this section competent to take action under s 476.—Having regard to the definition in s 4 (m) a Magistrate making an inquiry before issuing an order under this section is acting in a stage of a judicial proceeding and has therefore jurisdiction to take action under s. 476 if he is of opinion that the evidence given before him is false 19 M 18

6 A. Magistrate whose order under this section was disobeyed is not competent to try the case of disobedience under s 188. 1 P. C. 29 C. L. J 382

II—ACTION UNDER S 144 OR S 145 OR CHAP. X OR CHAP VIII

7. Magistrate has discretion to proceed under s 107 or s 145 or s 144.—Where a party has been found by a Magistrate to be in possession of land about which a dispute occurs the Magistrate is not bound to act under ss. 144 and 145 but has a discretion to proceed either under s. 107 or under ss. 144 and 145 32 C. 988 where 25 M 471 and 7 C. W. N 746 were followed and 7 C. W. N 142 was not followed

8. In disputes about possession of land, whether proceedings should be instituted under s. 144 or s. 145 (1) Madras view.—Proceedings may be instituted under s 144 if there is apprehension of imminent breach of the peace.—When one of the rival parties is found to be in actual possession of the lands in dispute a Magistrate can proceed either under this section or s. 107 or s. 145 25 M 471, where 25 C. 359 is doubted and distinguished. Where disputes relating to possession of lands cause apprehension of an imminent breach of the peace a Magistrate may act under this section instead of under Chapter XII and an order under this section may extend in terms to the prohibition of several acts 3 M 336 If the dispute is as to possession of immovable property an ex parte order under this section would be invalid in the absence of any emergency to deal with the matter, 19 M. L. J. 58. N. 25; (b) Calcutta view.—When possession is in dispute, proceeding must be taken under s 145.—In a dispute regarding land when the question of possession is disputed between the parties, the proper course is to proceed under s 145 deciding the question of possession on evidence and not pass order under this section. Where in a proceeding under this section, the Sub-divisional Magistrate holding that the first party was in possession directed the second party to refrain from interfering with that possession but the District Magistrate in revision holding that the second party was entitled to possession directed them to continue in possession and prohibited the first party from interfering with their possession, held that both orders were bad in law, 11 C. W. N. 271 = 5 Cr. L. J. 76. See also 3 Pat. L. J. 243 and 3 Pat. L. J. 287. A Magistrate being satisfied that a dispute respecting a colliery existed between two parties and a breach of the peace was likely to ensue passed an ex parte order under this section by which both the parties were prevented from exercising any right of possession and before the expiry of the two months during which the said order remained in force, proceedings under s 145 (1) were initiated, held that under the above circumstances, the proper procedure for the Magistrate to have adopted was not to exercise the powers conferred upon him by this section and s 145 either simultaneously or successively, but to act at once under s 145, and if the matter be one of emergency make use of the second proviso to sub-sec. (4) of s 145, rather than have resort to this section. By adopting such a course, he puts himself in a position to settle the dispute between the parties. Otherwise the cause of dispute might still exist at the end of the two months, 27 C. W. N. 785; see 12 W. R. 66. When, however, no claim is made to the possession of the immovable property except to a right in the nature of an easement and there is emergency, s 144 ought to be resorted to 17 C. W. N. 205 = 17 C. L. J. 397 = 13 Cr. L. J. 789. But see 32 C. 966. See also 2 p. 85.

* Words in inverted commas were added by Act XVIII of 1923

9. Whether Magistrate should proceed under Chapter X or this Chapter.—An order under this section cannot be passed in a matter dealt with under s 133, 8 W. R. 87; Wife II, 58; Ratanlal 50. See, however, Note 5 to s 133.

III.—CIRCUMSTANCES WHICH JUSTIFY PROCEEDINGS.

10. Existence of emergency is a condition precedent to passing order.—The circumstances calling for an order must be circumstances of emergency, and an order passed when there was no need of emergency is without jurisdiction, 5 C. 7 = 4 C. L. R. 309 (F.B.), 10 W. R. 53; 21 W. R. 26; 20 W. R. 53; 8 M. L. T. 180 = 11 Cr. L. J. 449; (1910) M. W. N. 354; 38 M. 489. The existence of those circumstances is a condition precedent to the Magistrate having power to proceed, 1 C. L. R. 58, e.g., where there is a probability of a disturbance of public tranquility or a riot, or an affray 23 W. R. 36; and there must be information or evidence to that effect, 24 W. R. 30, and the facts must be set forth in the order fully and in detail, 1 B. L. R. A. C. 20 = 10 W. R. 53; 2 C. W. N. 747, see also 10 B. L. R. 434 = 18 W. R. 47; 1897 A. W. N. 69, 4 A. W. R. 12. Where a Magistrate directed the petitioners to remove certain huts erected by them within three hours from the time of service of order, and there was nothing on the record or in the Magistrate's explanation to show that it was of such a nature, that the circumstances did not admit of the service in due time of the notice upon the petitioner, the High Court set aside the order, 2 C. W. N. 747. If no immediate danger is apprehended, the Magistrate should proceed under s 133 and not under this section. Where a Magistrate dropped a proceeding instituted under s 145 and on the very next day initiated proceedings and issued an order under s 144, held the order was made without jurisdiction, as in the interim after the dropping of proceedings under s 145, no information, that it was necessary for the immediate prevention or as a speedy remedy in respect of an impending breach of the peace to pass such an order has been received, 13 C. W. N. CXIX; see also 14 C. W. N. 234 = 11 Cr. L. J. 49.

11. Order under this section is justifiable only if the direction is likely to prevent (1) obstruction, annoyance or injury to any person lawfully employed, (2) danger to human life, health or safety, (3) a disturbance of the public tranquillity, or a riot, or an affray.—(a) Cannot make order merely for protection of property.—A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to make an order under this section merely for the protection of property, 9 C. 103, see 21 W. R. 26; 8 C. W. N. 373; 13 C. W. N. 188; 18 W. R. 47 (F.B.); (b) Order cannot be made merely for preventing loss to another.—An order cannot be passed under this section which is meant to prevent pecuniary loss to any person. An order stopping the erection of an embankment on the ground that the erection may cause loss to opposite party is illegal, 13 C. W. N. 188; 5 B. L. R. 131; 11 C. W. N. CIVIL. A Magistrate has no authority to prevent a person from excavating a tank in his own land or the apprehension that the house of the opposite party would go down into the bed of the tank when there was no reasonable apprehension of a breach of the peace, 33 C. 876. (c) Preventing of reaping of crops till payment of rent.—Where a Magistrate made certain orders under this section with the object of preventing certain ryots who had grown the crops from reaping the same, so that the rent might be promptly paid, on the information that the ryots were bent upon harvesting the crops without paying the landlord's share, and the landlord, in preventing their doing so, might cause a breach of the peace, held, that the orders were made without jurisdiction, as this section, notwithstanding its comprehensive language, was never intended to cover such a case. If that was the kind of injury for the prevention of which this section was enacted, it would have to be applied in favour of every landlord whose tenants attempt to cut crops without paying the rent due, 8 C. W. N. 873.

IV.—ORDER.

12. For Form of the order to prevent obstruction, not etc., see Sch. V, No 21. In Bengal and Assam a fee of one rupee is chargeable for the written order under this section—Calcutta Gazette 1879, p. 30 (a), Assam Gazette, 1879 p. 596.

13. Contents.—(a) Order must show necessity for speedy remedy by stating material facts—Before a Magistrate can take action under this section, he must be of opinion that immediate prevention or speedy remedy is necessary, and when he has made up his mind that it is so, he must state the material facts in the order. Where it did not appear from the proceedings that the Magistrate was of opinion that immediate prevention or speedy remedy was necessary and the order did not state the material facts, it was set aside, 32 C. 935; 2 C. W. N. 747; 1913 M. W. N. 1003—14 Cr. L. J. 633; see also 33 M. 439. The order must be based on real apprehension properly arrived at, 33 C. 876. But in 30 M. 543, it was held, following 16 M. L. J. 143, that where an order under this section omitted to state the grounds on which the Magistrate came to the conclusion that there was a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace, the omission was not a ground for holding that the proceedings were void that it would, at the most, be only an irregularity and the High Court would not interfere in revision, unless either of the parties had been prejudiced by such omission. (b) Desirable that the order should state the time during which it is to be in force—But the absence of time limit does not vitiate the order, 34 C. 897 overruling 7 C. W. N. 140; 11 C. W. N. 223.

14. Order must be in writing—If there is no written order, a prosecution under s. 188, I P C., for the disobedience of a mere verbal order cannot stand, 36 P. R. 1903, see Note 64 and Ratanlal 30.

15. Order must be confined to the particular act from which danger is apprehended—The application of s. 144 is confined to the particular act from which danger is apprehended and does not authorize an order prohibiting a course of conduct or an occupation involving a series of acts done at certain intervals and spread over a period of time. Therefore, where a Magistrate issued an order prohibiting inoculation and convicted the accused under s. 186, I P C., for disobeying it the High Court set aside the conviction as the order was illegal, Weir II, 67.

16. Order must be specific and definite in its terms—An order to the effect that the petitioner should not go to a certain village, or allow any of his servants or relations or friends to go there is of the most indefinite character both as to time and persons. Such an order cannot be passed under this section against a minor so as to hold him responsible for the acts of other persons 2 C. W. N. 432. Where an order purporting to be made under this section directed the petitioners not to commit any act that may likely induce a breach of the peace and not to take forcible possession of the village, which is not in their possession, held, that the order was indefinite and not in accordance with the terms of the section 11 C. W. N. 121—4 Cr. L. J. 438; see also 11 C. W. N. 223—5 Cr. L. J. 43; 11 C. W. N. 79—4 Cr. L. J. 633. The words 'certain act' mean a definite act. Where a person is directed not to collect rents from the ryots of two Pargannas, no particular ryots being mentioned it was held that such an order did not come within the words 'certain act' and must, therefore, be set aside, 16 C. 80, 19 C. 127, 9 C. W. N. 392. A notice intimating that tenants will be liable to pay a patwari cess is not an order directing landlords to abstain from a certain act, Oudh Ses. Cas 65.

V.—PROCEDURE AND EVIDENCE.

17. Opportunity to show cause must be given—Ordinarily the party against whom an order is made should have an opportunity to show cause against it 10 W. R. 53—1 B. L. R. App. Cr. 20; 5 B. L. R. 131; 14 W. R. 17; 19 M. 18. And on his appearance he should be heard and his witnesses examined. In special and urgent cases alone, may an order be passed ex parte, 3 B. L. R. App. Cr. 4; 6 M. 203 at p. 223 (F.B.), 2 C. W. N. 747. Where a party called upon to show cause appeared in Court ten minutes after an order absolute had been made ex parte and applied to be heard, but the Magistrate declined to do so, held that he ought under the circumstances to have heard the applicant, 2 C. W. N. 572. If the order does not on the face of it show the emergency which rendered it necessary, that will be a ground for setting it aside in revision.

18. Order should be based on evidence—Police report not sufficient—There is nothing to justify a Magistrate making an order on the mere report of a Police-officer or a Mahazarnama, 3 B. L. R. App. Cr. 4—11 W. R. 46; 13 W. R. 19; nor on a mere complaint 20 C. W. N. 261. Where a Magistrate without hearing the petitioner or giving him an opportunity of being heard, and simply upon the foundation of a Police-officer's report, directed the petitioner to abstain from holding a haat upon his land on a certain day, because another party had long been accustomed to hold a haat upon his land adjacent to the petitioner's haat on the day following that on which the petitioner held his haat, it was held, that his order was ultra vires, the Police-officer's report being vague and insufficient, and a private interest of the kind not affording a ground for making an order under this section, 21 W. R. 26; 13 C. W. N. 188. The Magistrate is bound to take evidence. It is not necessary that the information on which he acts should be on record. He may act on oral information, 3 M. 354. Mere personal apprehension of Magistrate not based on any evidence does not justify him in issuing an order under this section, 33 C. 876. See also 24 W. R. 30; 31 C. 990; 32 C. 793.

19. Preliminary order may be cancelled.—Where a Magistrate, on taking evidence finds that his first order was wrong and passed without jurisdiction held that he acted properly in recalling his first order. 13 W. R. 72.

20. Proceedings under this section are judicial.—Both under the old and new Codes inquiries under this section are judicial proceedings within the meaning of s. 4 (m) 19 W. 18. But see 6 M. 203 at p. 222; 3 M. 354. See also 6 B. L. R. 74 = 14 W. R. 46.

VI.—POINTS TO BE NOTED IN PASSING ORDERS.

21. Suspension of private rights.—It is the duty of the Magistrate to limit the interference as much as possible.—When a Magistrate finds that interference with the legal rights of individuals is necessary, it is his duty to limit it as much as possible, and for that purpose he should afterwards hold an inquiry into the circumstances, and determine whether as a matter of fact the act prohibited is likely to lead to a breach of the peace, etc. is within or in excess of the legal rights of the person forbidden to do it. If it is found that a man is doing that which he is legally entitled to do, and that his neighbour chooses to take offence thereat, and to create a disturbance in consequence, it is clear that the duty of the Magistrate is not to continue to deprive the first the exercise of his legal right but to restrain the second from illegally interfering with that exercise, 5 C. 132. His first duty is to secure to every person the enjoyment of his rights under the law, and by measures of precaution to deter those who seek to invade the rights of others, but if he apprehends that the lawful exercise of a right may lead to a civil tumult, and he doubts whether he has available a sufficient force to repress such tumult or to render it innocuous, regard for the public welfare is allowed to override temporarily the private right and the Magistrate is authorized to interdict its exercise, 2 M. 140. The Code declares the authority of the Magistrate to suspend the exercise of rights recognized by law, when such exercise may conflict with other rights of the public or tend to endanger the public peace. But this authority is limited by the special ends it was designed to secure, and is not destructive of the suspended rights 6 M. 203. If a Magistrate apprehends a breach of the peace he can restrain temporarily the exercise, by any private person of his lawful rights to prevent that result, 5 C. W. N. 329, which follows the principle enunciated in 10 B. L. R. 434 = 18 W. R. 47 (F.B.), where the order being of a permanent character was held to be bad. 26 C. W. N. 663; 904.

22. Magistrate is bound to make inquiry and protect legal rights of party found entitled to its exercise.—The object of this section is to enable a Magistrate in cases of emergency, to make an immediate order for the purpose of preventing an imminent breach of the peace etc., but it is not intended to relieve him of the duty of making a proper inquiry into the circumstances which make it likely that such breach of the peace, etc., will occur. It is, therefore, incumbent on him to limit the operation of the order to such reasonable time as may be necessary to enable him to hold a sufficient enquiry, and, if necessary, to deal with the case under this section. A first-class Magistrate issued an order under this section forbidding the Kazi and Mulla to go to the Idga outside the city of D on the Bakri Id, and directing them not to allow others to do so, held, that as it appeared that there was some dispute between the Kazi and the Mulla, each of whom claimed to have the right to read the Kudb: first on the Bakri Id at the Idga the Magistrate should have held an inquiry, and determined which party had the legal right, and then have protected the party he found entitled, in the exercise of that right, 5 C. 132; and that in any case there was nothing to justify the ex-parte issue of the order and the general prohibition to go to the Idga and the injunction against allowing others to go there. See also Ratanlal 987.

23. Scope and duration of the order must be co-extensive with the emergency.—The duration of the authority in the Magistrate to interfere with the private rights of parties is co-extensive with the emergency that justified the exercise of that authority. He cannot issue orders intending to have effect for all time, 2 M. 140; see also 31 C. 990 where the order of the Magistrate was held to be wider than necessary. A Gossain had gone to pay a visit accompanied by a body of retainers and also by persons carrying horns which horns were blown for the glorification of the petitioner and to the annoyance of the party. The Magistrate under this section issued a general order that neither party should use any musical instrument in the neighbourhood to each other's houses, held that the Magistrate cannot pass such a general order though he may forbid the use of musical instruments for the purpose of giving mutual offence 6 W R 40. An order of a Magistrate directing that all music shall cease when a procession is passing a certain place of worship is ultra vires 2 M 140, 22 Bom L R 157.

23. Power to regulate the conduct of religious processions.—A Magistrate has jurisdiction to pass a temporary order under this section prohibiting a procession on the ground that it cannot be allowed without grave danger of a breach of the peace with the force at the Magistrate's disposal 15 Cr L J 30 (M) but in regulating the conduct of processions of Hindus and Muhammadans Magistrates would do well to bear in mind the observations of the Madras High Court which are as follows — Primarily he (the Magistrate) must consult the public safety, and the responsibility thrown on him is great seeing that the Legislature has prohibited all interference with his order by a superior Court. At the same time it is incumbent on the Magistrate to interfere as little as possible with private rights and a custom which might be recognized as not unlawful under a Government that possessed a State religion might be unreasonable now that the Government professes in parity to all creeds. The Magistrate should endeavour to abstain from the appearance of showing favour to one sect at the expense of another though where a sufficient emergency arises private rights must necessarily yield to public security. Mad H C. Pro 13th May, 1885. In 2 M 140 the plaintiffs sought to set aside an order passed by the District Magistrate prohibiting all music while any procession is passing or re-passing the defendant's mosjid. In declaring the order of the Magistrate to be ultra vires the High Court observed as follows — In the proper governance of a country of which different sections of the inhabitants hold widely divergent creeds it is of course necessary that regulation should be established securing the members of each sect in the legitimate performance of their devotional exercises from improper interference on the part of members of other sects and such regulations find a place in the law of British India (J P C, Chap VI).

But at times the right of the several sects to the undisturbed exercise of their religious observances may come into conflict without any criminal intention. In such cases mutual toleration is and must be the only and the proper rule. It has then to be determined how far the conflicting rights interfere with and necessarily annoy each other. It is on the one hand a right recognized by law that an assembly lawfully engaged in the performance of religious worship or religious ceremonies shall not be disturbed. It is on the other hand a right recognized by law that persons may for a lawful purpose whether civil or religious use a common highway by parading it attended by music, so that they do not obstruct the use of it by other persons. If persons passing in procession attended by music pass a place in which others are assembled and engaged in public worship which the music would tend to disturb it is the duty of the persons composing the procession to refrain from such disturbance but assemblies for purpose of worship are held securely in any place at all hours and generally at appointed hours and therefore it is unnecessary that there should be a rule that persons should not at any time pass along a highway in the neighbourhood of a recognized place of worship attended by music. If indeed the procession be of a religious character the prohibition of it may be as real an interference with the free exercise of religion as in allowing it to proceed past an assembly engaged in worship attended with such circumstances as to disturb that worship and if no religious procession is to be allowed to pass a recognized place of worship whether persons are or are not at the time there assembled and engaged in religious worship the members of a numerous set might close every highway to the processions of a sect to which they are opposed by erecting in the neighbourhood of each highway a place of worship. The law in the restrictions it imposes on processions of whatever character does not go beyond the necessity and a Magistrate has no general authority to declare the law on the subject and anticipate a breach of it by a prohibitory order. For the preservation of the public peace he has a special authority and authority limited to certain occasions. The duration of this authority in the Magistrate is co-extensive with the emergency that justified the exercise of the authority."

As to the further exposition of the law relating to processions see 6 M 203, 5 M 304; Weir II, 74, 26 M 554 (F B); Ibid., 579 and 586, 89 M 499, Ratanlal 703, 19 B 693. No person has a right to obstruct others when making lawful use of a public street and customs to the contrary founded on religious intolerance cannot be recognized Weir II, 89, see also 26 M 554 (F B). If the members of any sect desire to prevent the use of the street in the neighbourhood of their houses by the members of another sect their proper course is to erect their houses on streets which are private property. See also 10 Bom L R 1047 = 8 Cr L J 431. The fact that a procession is a luxury is not a sufficient ground for passing an order under this section 15 Cr L J 30 (M).

25. Holding of hauts or markets—Jurisdiction of Magistrates to regulate.—If the conditions required by the section are present, a Magistrate has undoubtedly power to direct a person to abstain from holding a haut, 10 B. L. R. 434 (F.B.), 18 W. R. 47; but such power must be exercised in the light of the following observations. The holding a haut on one's own property is not in itself a wrongful act and therefore, any ulterior consequence which arise from it cannot give rise to any proceeding against the owner of the land for committing an act likely to cause a breach of the peace, unless the ulterior consequences are made the basis of these proceedings. An order directing a man not to use his property in a lawful manner, e.g., not to establish a haut on his own land does not come within the purview of this section, 13 Cr. L. J. 511 (Cal.), 4 C. W. N. 226. The Magistrate or Collector of a district has no power as an executive officer to stop the holding of a market within his district on a particular day when circumstances have not arisen such as would justify his taking action under this section, and even when such circumstances have arisen, the prohibition cannot be made for an indefinite period, 1897 A. W. N. 59. Where an order enjoined the petitioner not to establish a rival market within a quarter of a mile of a certain market place, held, that it was not a proper order under this section, as it did not mention any limit of time and there was nothing in the order to indicate whether the petitioner would be entitled to hold any market at any time within a quarter of a mile. The object of this section is not that the order should be made prescribing the holding of hauts indefinitely within a certain area for two months. This procedure under s. 107 would be the more appropriate remedy, 11 C. W. N. 223 = 5 Cr. L. J. 43; 11 C. W. N. 79 = 4 Cr. L. J. 433. Where the only ground mentioned for the issue of an order under s. 144 restraining the holding of a rival haut was, that the Magistrate was satisfied from the report of the Police that by opening a new haut within half a mile from the old and long-established haut, the petitioners were about to disturb the public tranquility, held, that an injunction could not be issued not to do a lawful act upon a man's own property and that the order in the form in which it was issued was without jurisdiction. The holding of a haut on a man's own property is not in itself a wrongful act and therefore any ulterior consequence which may arise from it cannot give rise to any proceeding against the owner of the land for committing an act likely to cause a breach of the peace, unless these ulterior consequences are made the basis of the proceedings. The law as regards the preservation of public peace is based on an apprehension that either a certain person or certain persons are likely to commit breach of the peace by their own acts or that they are likely to do wrongful acts which may occasion other people to commit breach of the peace, 19 C. W. N. 248. Where two rival Zemindars were holding their hauts, simultaneously every Friday and Wednesday, and the Magistrate made an order under this section directing one of them to hold his hauts on Saturdays and Tuesdays, held that though the section empowers a Magistrate to make an order prohibiting a person from holding a haut on certain specified days of the week, the law does not empower him to direct that the hauts shall be held on certain days, leaving the party no option to hold his haut upon days other than those his rival holds his haut on. Disobedience of such an order is not punishable under s. 188, I P C., 31 C. 990; see 5 C. 7; 4 W. R. 12, 4 C. L. R. 410; 21 W. R. 26; but see 16 C. 9, 18 W. R. 24; 20 W. R. 53; 14 W. R. 46; 11 W. R. 5. See also 29 C. W. N. 411.

An order prohibiting a Zemindar from holding a market on his estate is illegal—5, Revenue, Judicial and Police Journal Calcutta, p. 1155

26. Section does not empower Magistrates to make bye-laws.—No Magistrate is empowered to make a general order such as one directing persons not to allow their cattle or horses to run at large on the public roads or warning them to take proper care of their cattle and that in case of disobedience they would be punished. The order contemplated by the section is one in the nature of an injunction or command and not orders of the nature of regulations or bye-laws, 12 W. R. 36; 3 B. L. R. A Cr. 43; 9 B. L. R. Appx. 36.

27. Order irrevocable in its effect should not be passed.—A Magistrate has no power to issue any order which is by its very nature irrevocable. All that he has power to compel the owner of property is that he should take certain order with it. Such power does not extend to an order to cut down large quantities of trees, 13 W. R. 72, 32 C. 154

28. Magistrate ought not to interfere with execution of Civil Court decree.—A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to make any order under this section which would have the effect of interfering with the execution of a decree of a Civil Court, 17 A. 435; 2 C. W. N. 572. A landlord obtained a decree in a Civil Court against the tenant for possession and obtained delivery of the lands in execution; but the Magistrate at the instance of the tenant passed an order forbidding the landlord from interfering with the possession of the tenant as the landlord was unable to point out the exact lands of which he obtained possession, held, that the order made contrary to the decree of the Civil Court was wrong and the Magistrate was bound to maintain the possession of the landlord.

See 6 C. W. N. 468. R purchased some properties in execution of a mortgage decree and was put in possession of the same. The Magistrate of D purporting to act under this section ordered R or any of his subordinates to refrain from entering upon the lands and properties, and directed him to show cause why the order should not be made absolute or rescinded, held, that looking to the nature of the case and to the language of this section it was clear that the section does not apply to a case like the present and the order purporting to be made under it is bad, 2 C. W. N. 572; 23 C. W. N. 732.

29. Magistrate has no business to adjudicate on rights and has no jurisdiction to decide questions of title or possession.—A Magistrate purporting to act under this section has no business to adjudicate upon rights, and has no jurisdiction to decide upon any question of title or possession. His only duty is to make an order with the object of preventing a breach of the peace, if he considered a breach of the peace imminent, 11 M. L. J. 122 = Weir II, 93. When one person presented a petition under this section alleging that he had the right based upon long usage and custom of compelling another person to bring certain idols, admittedly in the possession and custody of such other, to his place, for the celebration of a festival and the Magistrate directed the person applied against to take the idols to the desired place, held, that there is no provision of law which vests in a Criminal Court the power, first, to decide the question of right and then to proceed to base its order under this section upon it, and that, therefore the Magistrate's order is wholly unwarranted by law and without jurisdiction, 8 C. W. N. 376.

30. Magistrate ought not to usurp the functions of a Civil Court.—A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to direct that certain disputed articles should be placed in the custody of the Court and should remain there for two months or until the decision of a pending civil suit, 12 C. W. N. 1044 = 8 Cr. L. J. 230. After dropping proceedings under s. 145, a Magistrate has no jurisdiction to attach the immoveable property and to pass a prohibitory order under this section, enjoining the parties not to interfere in any way with the attachment, 18 C. W. N. 6XIX. Where an application was made for the renewal of worship in a temple in which the worship had been stopped owing to disputes, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction under the section to direct the re-opening of the temple or the removal of the image and renewal of the worship without innovations, Madras, Cr. Rev. Case 285 of 1906.

VII.—PARTICULAR ORDERS HELD TO BE WITHIN THE SCOPE OF THIS SECTION.

31. Widening of temple gates.—Where a Magistrate directed the hereditary priests of a public temple which is visited at certain periods of the year by large concourse of pilgrims to widen and heighten the doorway, with a view to prevent the dangers arising from overcrowding and to improve the ventilation, held that such order was legal, and the case would have been the same had the temple been a private property, as it is open to all the Hindu public, 6 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 36.

32. Regulating worship in temple.—Where a District Magistrate being of opinion that there was such a risk or danger as is contemplated in this section made an order directing certain specified persons, the Pujaries and Shedaries and the public generally to abstain from interfering with the Badves in the performance of the duly puja of the god Vithoba at Pandarpur and further directed the Badves alone to perform the said puja, held that the District Magistrate had jurisdiction to pass such an order and the High Court could not consistently with s. 435 (3) infra interfere with his discretion in revision 4 Bom. L. R. 582. An order forbidding the celebration of a religious ceremony at a certain place and the removal of idols from that place is good, but if it is coupled with a limitation that the act should not be carried out without the consent of certain persons, then the order is bad unless the limitation is removed 8 C. W. N. 376. As to the power to fix hours of worship, see 6 M. 203 and for power to regulate religious processions see Note 240.

33. Management of temple.—A Magistrate has jurisdiction to make an order directing a person not to interfere with the management of a temple as such an order is within the meaning of the words abstain from a certain act, 24 M. 43; 3 M. 354; 18 M. 402.

34. Regulating entry into a Mosque.—Where apprehending a breach of the peace, a Magistrate directed members of the Hanafi sect to enter a mosque at certain stated hours only, and the members of the Shafi sect at certain other stated hours only, held, the Magistrate had jurisdiction to make the order. Though in form it may be said that the order was not one to abstain from a certain act, in substance and effect it was an order directing certain persons to abstain from certain acts, 24 M. 262.

35. Prohibition of burial.—Under this section an order may properly be made, on sanitary grounds prohibiting burials in certain places, Weir II, 64.

36. Magistrate may forbid slaughter of cattle.—See 18 Cr. L. J. 190 (Oudh) Note 44 and 1383. A. W. N. 258.

VIII.—ORDERS HELD TO BE NOT WITHIN THE PURVIEW OF THE SECTION.

37.—The only orders that may be made under this section are to direct any person (1) to abstain from a certain act or (2) to take certain order with certain property in his possession, etc.

(a) Magistrate cannot take custody of property—An order made with the consent of parties that the Magistrate should take over the custody of certain safes and keys was held to be wholly illegal, 12 C. W. N. 1044 = 8 Cr. L. J. 230; nor can he make any order as to custody of money in respect of which a breach of the peace may take place, 12 W. R. 38 nor order a village munsiff to be in possession of the property, 3 L. W. 498.

(b) Nor can he pass any order regarding custody of children—This section does not empower a Magistrate to pass order regarding the custody and guardianship of children, Weir II, 65.

(c) He cannot direct division of crops between rival claimants—This section does not authorize a Magistrate to make an order for the division of crops between two rival Zemindars, because the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to pass an order of this nature, 32 C. 154.

(d) Regulating boat traffic—An order regulating the boat traffic at a certain landing place on the ground that the overcrowding of the boats was dangerous to the health of the residents of the town, purporting to be passed under this section is bad, not being really within the purview of the section, 25 C. 852.

(e) Cannot attach immovable property—See 13 C. W. N. CXIX.

(f) Cannot direct erection of building—These words are undoubtedly very wide and equally vague, but it must be assumed that the Legislature in using those words in the section did not intend to give a Magistrate such extraordinary powers as would enable him to order, under this section, a building which has fallen down on private grounds to be rebuilt by the owner of the grounds, 17 A. 485.

(g) Cannot regulate holding of haunts—31 C. 990. See Note 25.

38. Removal of embankment, bund, etc.—This section does not authorize a Magistrate to issue an order directing the removal of an embankment whereby adjacent lands are in danger of being flooded, 5 M. H. C. R. Appx. XIX = Weir II, 66; 11 C. W. N. CVII; nor to remove a dam which obstructs the flow of water through an irrigation channel though the erection of such a dam may be prevented for the purpose of preventing a riot or an affray 9 C. 103. A Magistrate has no authority summarily to direct the owner of a tank, in the dry bed of a river to destroy the banks on the ground that they are an obstruction to the public in the lawful enjoyment of the river, and that the stopping of the water interfered with the health of the public, 10 W. R. 36; 1 B. L. R. (S.N.) XXVII. Nor to direct a person to remove a wall erected on land alleged to belong to another person, in the absence of the evidence showing that a riot or affray was likely to occur, 13 W. R. 19; 2 C. W. N. 732.

39. Removal of prostitutes.—A Magistrate ordered certain prostitutes and their Zemindars and/or whom they held the land to remove the houses on the former from a particular site within 24 hours and to take up their quarters on the opposite side of a railway line, on the ground that the visitors to the prostitutes had to cross the railway line and thereby their lives might be endangered, held, that the orders were ultra vires and not covered by the words "such Magistrate may direct any person to abstain from a certain act or to take certain order with certain property in his possession," 2 C. W. N. 70.

40. Disputes as to rents.—The Chapter is for temporary orders in urgent cases of nuisance, and has no application to disputes of market value, which does not come under that category, 22 W. P. 57. In a case of Cr. L. J. 145, it was held that an order retaining a certain body of people from exercising the rights of Melwarndar in relation to certain lands is valid.

41. Disputes about easements.—A right to flow of water and a right to use a pathway across the land of another are rights of use of land and water within the meaning of s. 147 and cannot be adjudicated upon under this section by a Magistrate with subordinate powers, 3 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXIII = Weir II, 65; 19 W. R. 6.

42. Is the scope of this Chapter limited to orders in respect of immovable property?—Chapter XI refers to interference or dealing of some kind with the land itself or with something erected or standing upon it, and is directed to the prevention or direction by prompt order of some definite act on the part of an individual, so that injury or nuisance may not be caused, 19 C. 127. There seems to be nothing in this section to justify this opinion.

IX—SCOPE OF CL (3)—VALIDITY OF ORDERS ADDRESSED TO THE PUBLIC

43. Must the order be addressed to the public 'generally'?—In 8 A 99, it was held that a proclamation by a Magistrate forbidding in general terms any person spreading nightsoil on his fields so as to cause disease or annoyance was ultra vires and not within the scope of Chapter XI. An order may, under s 144, be directed to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place to abstain from a certain act but this provision has no applicability to an order of the nature contained in the Magistrate's proclamation which was directed to a portion of the community and had no concern with the public generally, frequenting or visiting a particular place. It is submitted that this interpretation is too narrow and not justified by the terms of the section. In 16 Cr. L. J. 190 (Oudh) in dealing with the scope of cl. (3) it was pointed out that the word 'public' does not only mean here the corporate body pursuing its public avocation but also means the whole number of individuals who in the circumstances cannot be particularly addressed and an order duly promulgated will have the effect to control either the private or public actions of every such individual according to its tenor. It is quite clear that the proper interpretation of s 144 (3) is that the order may be directed to a particular individual and that when because of the number of particular individuals it is impracticable that the Magistrate could issue notice to each one of them he can issue a general order to the whole number of such particular individuals here designated as the public generally and such order in respect of each particular individual will have the same effect as a separate order served upon him provided of course it has been so promulgated that it has come to his knowledge.

44. Must the order be confined to the public frequenting or visiting a particular place—Scope of cl. (3).—In 8 A. 99 and 14 B. 185 it was held that power of a Magistrate to issue an order under this section is confined to the direction to a particular person to abstain from acts of a certain character or to the public generally to abstain from similar acts when frequenting a particular place. In the latter case the District Magistrate of Broach owing to the prevalence of cholera issued a notification in the form of a proclamation under s. 144 forbidding the public in general to give caste dinners in the City of Broach and it was held that the order was beyond the powers conferred by s. 144. Similarly an order directing all persons in Surat City and all places within five miles of Surat City to abstain from interfering with the destruction of dogs was ultra vires as the District Magistrate has power only to direct an order to a particular individual or to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place. 16 Bom. L. R. 684 = 16 C. L. J. 98. 'Clause (3) cannot conceivably cover the case and the power to direct any person to abstain from a particular thing is not a power to direct the public generally from abstaining. Per HEATON J. ibid. In 15 Cr. L. J. 190 (Oudh) it was however pointed out that s. 144 (3) has nothing to do with the nature of the order which is dealt with in cl. (1) but in one of four sub-sections which refer to the manner of promulgation and to the duration of an order under s 144 (1). It was there held that a general order of a Magistrate in which he set out that whereas separate orders had been issued to 36 persons forbidding them to sacrifice cows or bullocks but as there was reason to believe that other persons to whom such orders were not issued were intending to sacrifice cows or bullocks in connection with the Lukri Id festival it was ordered that no person should sacrifice or cause to be sacrificed any cow or bullock in any place within the boundaries of the City of Ayodhya at any time on the 9th 10th 11th or 12th November was legal and within the scope of s. 144. It is argued that by using the words frequenting or visiting a particular place the Legislature intended to enact that no general order could be directed against residents but rather that such a general order could only be directed against casual or frequent visitors. With this we cannot agree. The intention of the sub-section is to extend rather than to limit the scope of the order so as to include therein even casual or frequent visitors from outside the limits of the particular locality within which the order is to have application.

45. Can the exercise of private rights by the public generally be controlled?—In 16 Cr. L. J. 190 (Oudh), it was contended that the Magistrate had no power under s. 144 to fetter the exercise of a private right in private places such as a house by an order directed to the public generally and that the particular place in cl. (3) must be interpreted to mean a public place but the contention was not accepted. If the Magistrate has power to control the actions of a person in his own private house by a direct order addressed specifically to such person under the second paragraph of cl. (1) then there is no reason why a similar order addressed to the public generally should be ultra vires. In 14 B. 185, the contention that if a notice be issued to the public at large its operation should be confined to a particular place of public resort seem to have found favour with the Bench.

X.—SCOPE OF CLAUSE (5)—DURATION OF ORDER.

46. Order comes into force from the date of the original notice.—As long as an order under this section has legal operation no intermediate or interlocutory order, not contemplated by sub-sec. (4) can be passed. An order issuing notice under s 144, is an order passed under it, and as such could remain in force for two months from its date and the confirmation of the said order on a subsequent day on cause being shown could not extend the period of its operation beyond those two months, 13 G. W. N. 193.

47. Orders to be in force for more than two months not valid.—(a) An order cannot be made directing a person to abstain from taking any part in the management of a temple, until the de facto manager was duly evicted from the management in due course of law as such an order contravenes the provisions of sub-sec (5), 24 M. 45. (b) This section only relates to the passing of provisional order to tide over temporary emergencies, but does not give jurisdiction to a Magistrate to prohibit persons by permanent injunction from taking processions throughout an indefinite future period along public streets, 33 M. 439. (c) There being disputes between relations regarding their share in a certain land, the Magistrate made an order to the effect that the applicant must not plough more than 12 annas share of the land, held, this could not be valid order as it would have effect not merely for two months, but until the parties went to the Civil Court, and further no case of emergency had been made out, 27 G. 918. (d) Where an order directed a party not to interfere with the land in dispute without the order of a competent Court, held, that the Magistrate was not competent to make such an order as it was not limited in time, but on the face of it purported to be of the nature of a perpetual injunction. A Magistrate has no power to direct that an order under this section which must lapse after two months, should be renewed from time to time, 7 G. W. N. 140; 11 G. W. N. 223 = 5 Cr. L. J. 43, but see next Note

48. Mere non-specification of duration of order, does not make the order invalid.—Where an order was made under this section without specifying the time for which it should remain in force, held by the Full Bench, that the order is not bad merely because it did not state that its operation was confined to two months or some shorter period. Under sub-sec. (5) it will be presumed, in the absence of anything to the contrary, in the order itself, that its duration is limited to the full period of two months, 34 G. 897 (F.B.).

49. It is illegal to pass successive orders extending time.—A Magistrate cannot by passing successive orders under this section extend the operation of an order indirectly beyond the time limited by sub-sec (5). 11 G. W. N. 79 = 4 Cr. L. J. 433. A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to pass successive orders and extend the period of two months. If he has jurisdiction to pass two orders he clearly has jurisdiction to pass several. In that case he might without the possibility of interference by this Court pass orders under this section extending over a considerable period of time. If there is really a very serious danger of a breach of the peace, which cannot otherwise be prevented, a Magistrate has under ss 107 and 114 ample power to deal with it 13 G. W. N. CCLXXIII; 3 Pat. L. J. 130. The Magistrate cannot by passing successive orders under the shelter of this section try to clutch at a much more extensive jurisdiction, namely, a jurisdiction to prohibit person by a permanent injunction from taking procession throughout an indefinite future period 33 M. 439; 1913 M. W. N. 1003 = 14 Cr. L. J. 653; (1914) M. W. N. 169 = 15 Cr. L. J. 145. See also 7 G. W. N. 140; 11 G. W. N. 220 = 5 Cr. L. J. 43, 25 G. 832. See also 20 G. W. N. 758; 24 G. L. J. 272 and 16 Cr. L. J. 767 (M.).

50. Magistrate cannot issue perpetual injunction.—Orders under this section have a temporary operation only, 10 A. 115. A Magistrate cannot issue a perpetual injunction under this section, 8 G. 580; 5 C. 7 = 4 C. L. R. 309; 34 G. 897; 22 Bom. L. R. 157.

51. Duty of Magistrate when after expiry of two months danger is still apprehended.—Repeated recourse should not be had to the provisions of s 144 in the same dispute. It is considered probable that danger to the public peace may remain after the expiry of two months from the date of the order under s 144, steps should be taken in due course to obtain an order of Government under cl. (5), recourse should be had to the provisions of Chapter XXI s 107, 16 Cr. L. J. 592 (W.).

Held, that when danger is still apprehended the Local Government is perfectly competent under sub-sec. (5) to extend the period of the Magistrate's order 45 A. 826.

52. Under the Amended Act, High Court has power to revise under a. 433 orders properly made under this section.—Under the old Code the High Court had no power to revise under s 435 orders properly made under ss 143 144 and under Chapter XII of the Code. But under the new amendment of cl. (3) to s 435 such orders can now be revised. See 45 G. 522. See preliminary Note to s 435, p 924

53. High Court rarely interferes with an order under this section when other remedies are open to the aggrieved party, 22 M. L. J. 823.

54. Powers of revision will not be exercised when the order has spent itself.—An order which on the date on which it is sought to be revised by the High Court, ceased to be in force by efflux of time under s 144 (5) should not be interfered with in revision under s. 435, 16 Cr. L. J. 272 (M). Subsec. (4) of this section allows an application to the District Magistrate against an order made by a Subordinate Magistrate. The High Court cannot interfere in revision Ratanlal 516. See, however, 20 G. W. N. 758; 20 G. W. N. 931; 23 C. W. N. 145, 42 M. L. J. 352; 47 M. L. J. 439

55. Executive orders cannot be revised.—An order prohibiting the opening of hauls in a certain place is not a judicial order and therefore is not subject to revision, 21 W. R. 22; nor an order to remove a prostitute, 26 P. R. 1880; nor an order to burn a quantity of grain, 2 P. R. 1880. See also 33 P. R. 1878.

XII.—PROSECUTION FOR DISOBEDIENCE OF ORDER.

56. Practice.—Magistrate convicting under s 188 I P C., should invariably quote the order which was disobeyed, and not the law under which that order was promulgated—C. P. Cr. Cir. No 6. This section and s 188, I P C., should be read together, 1 Agra 23.

57. Sanction necessary.—Sanction is necessary before prosecution. See s 195

58. Legality of order can be questioned on conviction for its disobedience.—On conviction under s. 188, I P C., for disobedience to the order of a Magistrate directing the pruning of hedges, held, that as the circumstances showed that there was no necessity for a speedy remedy the Magistrate had no power to issue the order disobeyed, Ratanlal 50 and 81. Although orders made under this section are not appealable, still if a person be convicted for their disobedience under s. 188, I P C., he might appeal on the ground of their illegality, and the validity of the proceedings would then be inquired into, 8 W. R. 37. See 23 G. W. N. 141. Where an executive officer makes an order or issues a notification under the Code of Criminal Procedure it is not within the province of judicial authority to question the propriety or legality of such order or notification until an attempt is made to enforce the exaction of a penalty against a person committing a breach of such order or notification. It then becomes the duty of the judicial authority to consider whether the order is properly made or not, 6 C. 88, 2 W. R. 32. See 20 G. W. N. 981. See 33 M. L. J. 454

59. Knowledge of the order must be proved.—The conviction would be illegal, unless it is proved that the accused knowing that an order has been promulgated by the proper authorities disobeyed that order, 1 Bom. L. R. 524, 16 C. 9. See Note 64

60. Conviction for disobedience of order will not stand unless there be evidence as to the likely result of such disobedience.—A conviction under s 188 I P C for disobedience of an order made under this section in the absence of evidence as to the likely result of disobedience of such order is bad in law 4 M. H. C. R. Appx. 5; 3 B. L. R. Appx. 149; 10 B. H. C. R. 424, 1886 A. W. N. 251. Although the establishment of rival haul at a place near to an old haul and held on the same day may lead to a breach of the peace it would not be safe or proper that that alone should form sufficient ground for conviction under s 188, I P C., 4 C. W. N. 226. To secure a conviction, there must be definite evidence on record to show that disobedience was likely to lead to a breach of the peace or other harmful result contemplated by the section, 32 C. 793. But if the act of disobedience has tended to cause annoyance, it is sufficient for conviction under s. 188, I P C. Objectionable language such as 'If you drink you will be drinking the blood of your children' speaks for itself and no further evidence is necessary, 10 Bom. L. R. 1047 = 8 Cr. L. J. 431.

61. The order disobeyed must be in writing and duly promulgated.—Where the accused, servants of a contractor, quarried stones from a hill and some coolies were killed owing to an accident, and in consequence the District Magistrate issued an order through some Munsif to stop work, held, the order should have been in writing as required by this section and duly served or promulgated to the public as required by law, 36 P. R. 1903; 17 W. R. 57. As to proof of service of order in order to secure a conviction under s 188 I P C. See 13 A. 577; 14 B. 165; 16 C. 9 and 12 M. 475 and 13 C. 175.

62. Magistrate issuing order cannot punish for its disobedience.—A second-class Magistrate, who issues an order under this section, has no jurisdiction to punish an offender for its disobedience, 10 B. H. C. R. 424, 24 M. 262; Ratanlal 50; 4 C. W. N. 226; 31 C. 990

63. When no offence to disobey orders.—If the person issuing order is not lawfully empowered to promulgate the order no conviction can stand, 3 A. 201; Ratanlal 50 and 81; 1904 A. W. N. 233. If the order is both in substance and in its manner of publication illegal, as being beyond the powers conferred by law, the conviction will not stand 14 B. 165 and 180, 20 A. 501.

64. Sanction for disobedience of order when bad.—No sanction for prosecution for disobedience of order ought to be given unless such disobedience causes or tends to cause annoyance, injury, etc., 14 C. W. N. 234 = 11 Cr. L. J. 49.

XIII.—CIVIL PROCEEDING TO VACATE MAGISTRATE'S ORDER.

65. Civil suit lies to vacate the order.—There is nothing in the provisions of this section which shows that the Legislature intended to deprive a private individual of the redress which the law affords him (when special injury is caused to him) by means of a civil suit 3 C. 20 (F.B.)

66. Magisterial order is a sufficient cause of action to found a suit.—A magisterial order prohibiting people from going in procession in public streets is, without special damage a cause of action for the sustainment of suits by a member of the public for a declaration and injunction with regard to their right to go in procession 19 M. L. J. 617, 20 M. L. J. 119, and see also 50 M. 15; 18 B. 693; 2 B. 457.

67. Limitation for suit for damages.—A suit for an alleged damage caused by an order of a Magistrate purporting to be under s. 144 falls within Art. 2 of the Limitation Act and must be brought within 90 days, 18 In. Ca. 84 (Cal.) See also 18 O. C. 211 = 21 In. Ca. 426.

CHAPTER XII.

DISPUTES AS TO IMMOVABLE PROPERTY

145. (1) Whenever a District Magistrate Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class is satisfied from a Police report or other information that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists concerning any land or water or the boundaries thereof, within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he shall make an order in writing, stating the grounds of his being so satisfied, and requiring the parties concerned in such dispute to attend his Court in person or by pleader within a time to be fixed by such Magistrate, and to put in written statements of their respective claims as respects the fact of actual possession of the subject of dispute

Procedure where dispute concerning land etc. is likely to cause breach of peace

(2) For the purposes of this section the expression 'land or water' includes buildings markets, fisheries, crops or other produce of land and the rents or profits of any such property

(3) A copy of the order shall be served in manner provided by this Code for the service of a summons upon such person or persons as the Magistrate may direct, and at least one copy shall be published by being affixed to some conspicuous place at or near the subject of dispute

(4) The Magistrate shall then without reference to the merits of the claims of any of such parties to a right to possess the subject of dispute peruse the statements so put in, hear the parties receive "all such evidence as may be" produced by them respectively, consider the effect of such evidence, take such further evidence (if any) as he thinks necessary, and if possible, decide whether any and which of the parties was at the date of the order before mentioned in such possession of the said subject Inquiry as to possession.

Provided that if it appears to the Magistrate that any party has within two months next before the date of such order been forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed he may treat the party so dispossessed as if he had been in possession at such date

Provided also, that, if the Magistrate considers the case one of emergency, he may at any time attach the subject of dispute, pending his decision under this section

(5) Nothing in this section shall preclude any party so required to attend or any other person interested, from showing that no such dispute as aforesaid exists or has existed, and in such case the Magistrate shall cancel his said order and all further proceedings thereon shall be stayed, but, subject to such cancellation, the order of the Magistrate under sub-section (1) shall be final

(6) If the Magistrate decides that one of the parties was or should under the first proviso to sub-section (4) be treated as being "in such possession of the said subject, he shall issue an order declaring such party to be entitled to possession thereof until evicted therefrom in due course of law, and forbidding all disturbance of such possession until such eviction," * and when he proceeds under the first proviso to sub-section (4), may restore to possession the party forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed '
 Party in possession to retain possession until legally evicted

† (7) "When any party to any such proceeding dies, the Magistrate may cause the legal representative of the deceased party to be made a party to the proceeding, and shall thereupon continue the inquiry, and if any question arises as to who the legal representative of a deceased party for the purpose of such proceeding is all persons claiming to be representatives of the deceased party shall be made parties thereto,

‡ (8) If the Magistrate is of opinion that any crop or other produce of the property, the subject of dispute, in a proceeding under this section pending before him, is subject to speedy and natural decay, he may make an order for the proper custody or sale of such property, and, upon the completion of the inquiry, shall make such order for the disposal of such property, or the sale proceeds thereof, as he thinks fit

§ (9) The Magistrate may, if he thinks fit at any stage of the proceedings under this section, on the application of either party, issue a summons to any witness directing him to attend or to produce any document or thing

¶ (10) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to be in derogation of the powers of the Magistrate to proceed under section 107 "

Note—The report of the Select Committee says "In view of the objections of the Bengal Government, we do not think sections 145, 147 and 148 should apply to the Presidency towns. We have therefore omitted the first amendment made by clause 27 and the references to Presidency Magistrates and Chief Presidency Magistrate respectively in clauses 29 and 30. In order to meet several difficulties which have arisen in connection with the words receive the evidence produced by them in section 145 cl. (4), we have made an amendment adopting the phraseology of section 244 cl. (1). By sub-clause (7) as newly amended the Magistrate is empowered to inquire who the legal representative of a deceased person is, with a view to bring him on record. Under sub-clause (8), which is newly added, a Magistrate can make orders about the disposal of any crop or produce of land, subject to speedy and natural decay by sale or otherwise. The powers of the Magistrate to proceed under section 107 are expressly reserved under sub-clause (10) which is newly added

Notes.—1. Suggestion.—The chief object of this section is apparently to prevent a breach of the peace, but from decided cases it seems that the parties who resort to a Criminal Court have some ulterior and different object in view, viz., to shift the burden of proof in a subsequent civil suit on the opposite party. See 29 C. 117 (P.C.). Decided cases show that the proceedings before a Magistrate under this section are of a quasi-judicial nature and the Magistrate not being accustomed to civil work must often find it a very difficult task to pronounce an opinion in favour of one or other of the party. In order to defeat this collateral purpose of the complainant, it would be well if it were enacted that instead of deciding the question of actual possession, the Magistrate were only to bind the parties to keep the peace in case there be any imminent danger of breach of the peace.

* Words in the inverted commas were added by Act XVIII of 1922

† Sub-section (7) was substituted by Act XVIII of 1922

‡ Sub-sections (8), (9), (10) were added by Act XI III of 1922 and then make a reference to the Civil Court regarding the question of actual possession. The Civil Court should decide this question as if it were a suit under s 9 of Specific Relief Act and communicate its decision to the Magistrate in question, who will pass final orders in accordance with that decision. This would avoid great deal of trouble to the Magistrate as well as to the parties.

I.—NATURE OF PROCEEDINGS UNDER THIS CHAPTER.

2. Are proceedings 'civil' or 'criminal'?—The proceeding under s 145 is, in reality, a civil one, 33 C. 68 (F.B.), it is quasi-civil, 23 P. R. 1902. The proceeding is a quasi-executive action, 23, B. 179.

3. Under s 526.—In 26 M. 183; 11 O. C. 61 = 7 Cr. L. J. 423; 34 A. 333, it is held that the proceeding under this Chapter is a 'criminal case' within the meaning of s 523 while it is held in 25 B. 179; 8 S. L. R. 215; 5 P. R. 1914, that it is not a 'criminal case' as it does not deal or arise out of a crime already committed. See Note 167

4. Under s 15 of the Letters Patent.—Though the Court dealing with a dispute under this section is a Criminal Court, yet an order under this section is not one made in a 'criminal trial' within the meaning of s. 15 of the Letters Patent and therefore an appeal lies from the order of a single Judge of a Chartered High Court, 17 M. L. J. 138 = 5 Cr. L. J. 343 (F.B.)

5. Is the proceeding 'a case' within the meaning of ss. 192 and 523?—A proceeding is a case within the meaning of s. 192 (1), 22 C. 898; 2 C. L. J. 614 = 3 Cr. L. J. 83; 10 C. W. N. 1095, but not under s. 192 (2), 4 C. W. N. 821; 38 C. 370. See Note 163.

6. Proceeding is an inquiry—s 4 (k)—A proceeding is an inquiry within the meaning of s 350, 13 C. W. N. 420 = 9 Cr. L. J. 278; 37 C. 812. See also 22 C. 898; 28 C. 709.

7. Section 185 does not apply to proceedings under Chapter XII.—Section 185 deals with offences only and has no application to proceedings under s. 145, 12 A. L. J. 390 = 15 Cr. L. J. 820.

8. Proceedings under this section are 'judicial' proceedings.—See s. 4. (1) But order paying over proceeds of the attached property is not an order in the exercise of a judicial power. In the course of proceedings under this section the Magistrate ordered that the crops growing on the attached land should be cut and sold and the proceeds deposited in Court. One of the parties brought a suit against the other and obtained an adjudication in his favour so far as his title to the money in Court was concerned but the suit was dismissed as he had no cause of action against the other party. The Magistrate, when applied to paid over the money to the party who had obtained the declaration in his favour, held, that the Magistrate in paying the money to the proper claimant, was not exercising any judicial power and the High Court therefore could not interfere, 6 C. W. N. 882.

B-A. Proceedings under s 145 of this Code are now included under proceedings within the meaning of s 435. See Notes to that section

II.—COMPETENCY OF MAGISTRATES.

(A)—PERSONAL.

9. Presidency Magistrates.—The Code does not expressly authorize Presidency Magistrates to act under this section. In Madras under s. 7 of Mad. Act III of 1883 the Commissioner of Police who is an ex-officio Magistrate can exercise the powers under this Chapter. In Calcutta and Bombay such Commissioners, although they are not ordinarily Magistrates, can still be invested with the powers necessary for the preservation of the peace and prevention of crime. See Act XIII of 1856 and Bombay Acts IV of 1882 and IV of 1902, also Bengal Act IV of 1866

10. Bench of Magistrates.—Under this Code by virtue of section 15 (2) Benches have power to take proceedings under this section, 3 C. L. R. 263 decided under the Code of 1872 is not applicable.

11. Sessions Judge or High Court or District Magistrate cannot direct initiation of proceedings.—A Session Judge is not competent to order a Magistrate to take action, 20 C. 520, nor the High Court 23 W. R. 58, 30 C. 112; nor a District Magistrate 24 C. 391. See Notes 156 and 157 below

12. Proceedings of Magistrates not empowered void.—If a Magistrate not empowered by law in that behalf, passes an order under this section, his proceedings are void. See s. 530 (f).

(B)—LOCAL.

13. Property must be within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate.—Where a Magistrate drew up proceedings under this section in respect of a fukar, lying partly within and partly without his jurisdiction; held, the order in regard to the part outside the jurisdiction was ultra vires and the whole proceedings were set aside, as they were taken with regard to the fukar as a whole and the Magistrate was allowed the option if he saw fit to do so, to initiate fresh proceedings as to the part of the fukar within the limits of his jurisdiction, 1 C. L. J. 329 = 2 Cr. L. J. 406. This section is not applicable to disputes as to lymalee property, nor does it authorize a Magistrate to adjudicate on any question concerning land beyond the limits of his jurisdiction, 17 W. R. 33.

14. Jurisdiction of Magistrate where situation of property doubtful.—In 12 O. C. 400 = 11 Cr. L. J. 69, however, it was held applying the analogy of s. 182 that where it is uncertain in which of several local areas the land in dispute is situate, inquiry can be made by a Magistrate having jurisdiction over any of such local areas. Even if there is any defect, it is cured by s. 331. The deep stream of the River Ghogra, as it exists at any given point forms the boundary line between the Fyzabad District in Oudh and the Basti District in Agra. A dispute arose between a piece of land between the two channels of the river and it was found that the channel which was towards the Fyzabad side was the deep stream of the river and it was held that the Magistrate of Basti has jurisdiction to proceed under s. 145 18 Cr. L. J. 527 (A.).

15. Magistrate of one district may act on report of Police-officer of another district.—Where a Police-officer of District A made a report to the effect that a breach of the peace was likely to take place in consequence of a dispute concerning a piece of water lying partly within District F and partly within District D, held, that the Magistrate of D had jurisdiction to take proceedings under this section in respect of the water lying within his jurisdiction, 29 C. 885. In such a case it is essential that an order in writing under sub-sec. (1) is under all circumstances made. Otherwise subsequent proceedings would be ultra vires and therefore liable to be set aside as made without jurisdiction 3 A. L. J. 272.

III.—OBJECT OF SECTION.

16. Purpose of section is to preserve public peace.—The object of s. 145 is to bring to an end by a summary process disputes relating to land, etc., which are in their nature likely, if not suppressed, to end in breaches of the peace. The maintenance of the public peace was the object before the mind of the Legislature, 30 C. 155 (F.B.). The procedure prescribed by this section is intended solely for the purposes of preventing breach of the peace. The institution of proceedings is entirely within the discretion of the Magistrate. A party to a proceeding under this section is not in the position of a plaintiff in a civil suit who has set the Court in motion and has a right to require a decision upon the questions raised by him. If a Magistrate either refuses to make an order under sub-sec. (1) or having made such an order, subsequently cancels it, on the ground that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace does not exist, no private person has any status to contest the propriety of his refusal to make any inquiry into the question of possession—30 C. 112; 30 A. 41.

17. Object of section is to deal with actual possession and not with right to possession.—(a) The Magistrate should not deal with the proceedings under this section as if it were a civil suit. The only question the Magistrate has to decide is, who is in actual possession of the land and if he does not do so his order is without jurisdiction, 35 C. 795; 7 C. L. J. 369 = 7 Cr. L. J. 336; 27 C. 918; 17 C. W. N. 944 = 14 Cr. L. J. 289. (b) He cannot call on the parties to furnish a statement of their title. He is not at liberty to enter into the merits of their respective claims as regards the right to possess, except in so far as it might assist him in determining the question of actual possession, 25 B. 179; 6 C. L. J. 182 = 6 Cr. L. J. 192; 7 C. L. J. 359 = 7 Cr. L. J. 336. See also 30 C. 155 (F.B.), 40 C. 982; 15 Cr. L. J. 470 (O.). See Notes under Heading XI, 28 Bom. L. R. 448.

18. Order under this section is intended to be only temporary.—The order of a Magistrate under s. 145 is meant to be only a temporary or tentative order and is to be operative so long only as the rights of the parties are not determined by Civil Court, 29 C. 208; 26 C. 625.

19. Magistrate not bound to come to some conclusion.—In cases coming under this section, the tribunal trying the case is not under the necessity which a Court trying a civil case or ordinary criminal case is under, of coming to a conclusion at all. The Legislature contemplates circumstances in which it may be desirable for a tribunal, presumably unacquainted with the conduct of civil proceedings and strictly a criminal tribunal to say that the facts of the case do not enable it to come to a conclusion 14 C. 361 at p. 354. He may under such circumstances, proceed under s. 146, 5 C. W. N. 900.

IV.—WHEN TO ACT UNDER THIS SECTION AND WHEN UNDER S. 107 OR S. 145.

20. He 'shall' make an order.—The words in this section are mandatory, while those in s. 107 are discretionary, therefore where there is a bona fide dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace about a fishery, a proceeding under this section and not under s. 107 should be instituted, 33 C. 117. Though a Magistrate must proceed under this section when satisfied that a proper case has arisen, he has in effect, and almost certainly by the intention of the Legislature a discretion to determine whether or not a proper case has arisen, and has to be personally satisfied. The word 'shall' in the section leaves no discretion to the Magistrate to take action, if he finds that certain circumstance exists, whether it is mandatory or directory, 1 B. L. R. 50 = 8 Cr. L. J. 170, where 33 C. 68 at p. 79; 8 C. 724; 16 C. 9 are referred to.

20-A. Whether Bengal Alluvial Lands Act (V of 1920 B.C.), s. 3, ousts Magistrate's jurisdiction to deal with probable breach of peace under s. 145 of the Code—Held, it is open to the Magistrate in the case of alluvial lands recently formed to deal with the matter either under Act V of 1920 or under s. 145 of the Code 28 C. W. N. 783.

21. Dispute as to land—Demand for security to keep the peace.—Where a dispute exists about land which is likely to induce a breach of the peace without such breach being imminent, a Magistrate should proceed under this section and not under s. 107, 24 W. R. 67; 25 W. R. 74, which dissents from 22 W. R. 81; 18 W. R. 36; see also 25 W. R. 2; 3 C. W. N. 463; 6 C. W. N. 893; 7 C. W. N. 29; 25 A. 337; 25 C. 559; 35 C. 117. But see 32 C. 966, where it was held following 25 W. 471 and 7 C. W. N. 746, that the Magistrate is not bound to act under s. 144 or this section, but that he has a discretion to proceed either under these sections or under s. 107. See also 9 C. W. N. 551 = 2 Cr. L. J. 272; 12 C. W. N. 606 = 7 Cr. L. J. 403; 7 C. W. N. 143 was expressly not followed in 32 C. 966. The mere fact of a dispute likely to lead to a breach of the peace, being a dispute relating to the possession of land is not sufficient to preclude the Magistrate from proceeding under s. 107 and confine him to proceedings under this section. Per BANERJEE, J., 7 C. W. N. 746. Nor can the fact that the Magistrate may take proceedings under this section, prevent him if in his discretion he should think it right so to do, from taking proceedings under s. 107. Per BRETT, J., Ibid. See also 28 A. 406; 8 N. L. R. 94; 2 B. L. R. 18; 1 B. L. R. 50; 34 A. 449; 9 A. L. J. 693 = 13 Cr. L. J. 566; 36 A. 143. The fact that one party had been bound down to keep the peace under s. 107 does not take away from the Magistrate his jurisdiction to act under this section if so required, 16 Cr. L. J. 211 (M.) 39 C. 469. An order of a Magistrate under section 145 is no bar to his passing an order under s. 107, on the same facts if he is satisfied that notwithstanding the order under s. 145, one of the parties is likely to take the law into his own hands 36 M. 315. See Notes at pages 159-160 and Note 8 to s. 144.

Whether to proceed under s. 107, or this section will depend upon circumstances.—Whether after proceedings under s. 107 it will be proper for the Magistrate to act under this section must depend on the circumstances of each case as it arises, 39 C. 150 (F.B.). Where the Magistrate found that the complainant was in possession of land and the accused were threatening to use violence to him if he should go upon the land, it was held the Magistrate was at liberty to proceed under s. 107 and that his jurisdiction so to proceed was not ousted by the fact that it appeared in the course of the inquiry that the dispute was one relating to land, 9 C. W. N. 551. But in 9 C. W. N. LXXXI proceedings under s. 107 were set aside on the ground that under the special circumstances of the case the more appropriate proceeding would be under this section. See also 7 M. 450; 6 C. 835 = 8 L. R. 217; 27 C. 918; 4 Bom. L. R. 438. Where notice was issued under s. 117, and the Magistrate when he tried the case recorded an order to the effect that the case really came under this section and passed an order in the following words—"In the absence of direct proof that the first party has been unlawfully evicted from possession during the two preceding months, I feel bound to bind down the first party under cl. (6) of s. 145, etc." held that the order was bad and the expression 'bind down' was not correct, 7 C. W. N. 174. Where parties are quarrelling over land one claiming to be in exclusive possession and the other to be in joint possession of the land and there is every likelihood of a breach of the peace taking place, the proper procedure for a Magistrate is to proceed under this section and not under s. 107 1 C. L. J. 632 = 2 Cr. L. J. 631. See also 3 C. L. J. 467 = 5 Cr. L. J. 344; 25 Bom. L. R. 458.

22. Combination of proceedings under Chapters VIII and XII.—It is obviously undesirable to combine proceedings under s. 107, with proceedings under s. 145 and to act against both opposing parties in the same proceedings under s. 107, 8 B. L. R. 207 = 16 Cr. L. J. 235.

23. Parties voluntarily entering into recognizance.—Before commencing inquiry under this Chapter, if the parties profess their readiness to enter into recognizances to keep the peace under Chapter VIII, and a Magistrate takes such recognizances, his proceedings are not illegal, 6 W. R. 4.

24. When possession in dispute, this section preferable to s. 144.—In a dispute regarding land, when the question of possession is in dispute, the proper procedure is to institute a proceeding under this section and decide the question of possession on evidence and not to proceed under s. 144, 11 C. W. N. 271 = 5 Cr. L. J. 76. See also 3 Pat. L. J. 243. But where one of the parties is in actual possession of the land, Magistrate has discretion to proceed either under s. 107, or s. 144 or this section 28 M. 471; 7 C. W. N. 746; 32 C. 966

Y—CONDITIONS REQUISITE TO GIVE JURISDICTION.

25. Essentials to give Magistrate jurisdiction.—A Magistrate would have no jurisdiction unless he was satisfied that there exists a dispute concerning land, etc., and which dispute is likely to induce a breach of the peace, 7 C. 335. The two essentials are that there should be a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace and that the dispute should concern land, etc., 30 C. 455 (F.B.)

A formal order under sub-sec. (1) is absolutely necessary to give the Magistrate jurisdiction—A formal order to this effect under sub-sec. (1) is absolutely necessary to give the Magistrate jurisdiction. When, therefore, a Magistrate issued a notice to the parties under s. 107, and when the case came on for hearing recorded an order wherein he stated that the case was one under this section and proceeded to act under sub-sec. (6), the final order was set aside as altogether bad, 30 C. 443, 32 C. 852; 1907 A. W. N. 49. See also 7 P. R. 1907 = 6 Cr. L. J. 413; 13 Cr. L. J. 296 (C.), 16 M. L. T. 52 = 15 Cr. L. J. 859, 9 P. W. R. 1915 = 92 P. L. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 206 and see Notes under Heading XII (a)

(a) If there is no apprehension of a breach of the peace, there is no jurisdiction.—See 28 C. 446; 33 C. 83, 27 C. 918 and see Notes under Heading VI, 23 C. W. N. 216.

(b) Dispute must be concerning 'actual possession'—Where no proceedings were taken under this section in order to ascertain the actual possession of the land, and where there was nothing to show that there was any probability of a breach of the peace, but where parties were quarrelling regarding their rights to certain property which was claimed on the one hand to be joint in certain shares and on the other exclusively to belong to the other party, and where the Magistrate had to decide questions of fact and Muhammadan Law, held, that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction, 27 C. 918. He can decide only question of actual possession and not of actual rights of the parties. See also 7 C. L. J. 369 = 7 Cr. L. J. 336. See Note 17 and Heading XI (a).

(c) Dispute must concern 'land or water' as interpreted in the section.—See Notes under Heading IX

(d) Subject of dispute must be within the local jurisdiction of the Magistrate.—See Notes 13 to 15

26. Magistrate must carefully follow the procedure laid down.—To institute valid proceedings under this section the procedure laid down herein should be strictly followed sc. (a) there must be a preliminary order as contemplated by sub-sec. (1) (b) the copy of the order must be served upon the parties and affixed to some conspicuous place at or near the subject of dispute and (c) all the parties interested in the land must be heard and evidence taken. Thus where a District Magistrate found on the ground stated by him, that one of the respondents was ploughing a land in order to annoy the complainant who had a right to use the land for condition (a), the proceedings of the District Magistrate with conditions (b) and (c), 7 P. R. 1907 and 981, 28 C. 416; 6 C. W. N. 101; 2 P. R. 1899 (F.B.), 4 L. 66; 1 R. 53.

VI—LIKELIHOOD OF BREACH OF THE PEACE.

27. Meaning of 'likely to cause breach of the peace'—Must the danger be imminent?—There must be a reasonable apprehension that a disturbance of the peace is likely to occur, rendering it necessary for the Magistrate to take immediate steps to prevent it and not merely that it is probable that a breach of the peace may occur in future if proceedings be not taken under this section, 7 C. 385 = 8 C. L. R. 514; 4 C. L. R. 433. If there be no present danger of a breach of the peace, the fact that such a breach of the peace is likely to take place at a future time will not justify a Magistrate in making an order under this section, 7 C. L. R. 237; 8 C. W. N. 890 and see 28 A. 190. But in 18 L. R. 80 = 8 Cr. L. J. 170, it was held that the term 'likely' in this section does not mean that the breach of the peace complained of must be 'imminent' or 'likely to happen immediately,' but simply signifies that there should be a probability or a likelihood of a breach of the peace, referring to 33 C. 33 and 352; 6 C. 835; 20 C. 513, 520; 23 C. 557; 26 C. 625.

(i) Suggestion of the breach of the peace must not be merely colourable—The suggested apprehension of a breach of the peace must not be merely colourable but made to induce the Magistrate to deal with matters properly cognizable by the Civil Court 10 C. 78 = 13 C. L. R. 450; also 5 A. 607; 27 C. 913; 20 C. 513; 7 C. L. R. 352; 23 C. 557; 20 W. R. 87; 27 C. 981, 22 W. R. 79.

(ii) No overt acts necessary—The section does not primarily contemplate cases in which there have already been acts of violence. All the disputants may be persons of peaceable disposition, but if the dispute is in its nature of such a kind that it is likely having regard to the known conditions of society, to lead to a breach of the peace, that is enough to warrant the Magistrate's intervention, 30 C. 155 (F B).

28. Magistrate must satisfy himself that such a dispute exists—To satisfy the requirements of this section Magistrate must himself inquire into the likelihood of a breach of the peace happening, and must come to a judicial decision upon it, and in conducting the subsequent investigation, he must examine the witnesses whom the parties have tendered. It is not enough if he merely states that he has been directed by the Judge to proceed under this section, nor could he deal summarily with the case after a mere inspection of the locality 4 C. W. N. 779. He must examine the witnesses tendered by the parties and come to a judicial conclusion, 9 W. R. 64; 4 C. W. N. 779. And where a Magistrate merely ordered on the complainant's petition that the accused should be summoned to answer the complaint, and on the accused appearing and denying that there was any risk of a breach of the peace, the Magistrate, without determining whether any breach of the peace was likely to occur, or enquiring whether the accused had any evidence, proceeded to take the complainant's evidence and finding that the accused had wrongfully taken possession, ordered the complainant's possession to be restored held, that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction, as he failed to find facts that were necessary to constitute the foundation of his jurisdiction. His order therefore, was set aside, 6 P. R. 1885.

Use of printed forms condemned—Where the statement that the Magistrate was satisfied as to the likelihood of a breach of the peace was in print and not recorded by the Magistrate himself, the use of such forms was condemned, as it is likely in many cases to prevent the Magistrate from applying his mind to a consideration of the materials before him in order to satisfy himself as to whether or not such a dispute as is contemplated by this section exists 9 C. W. N. 51.

29. Proceedings ought not to be instituted when one party is in possession and acting in exercise of his rights.—In investigating a case of dispute as to land between two parties, a Magistrate found that one party was in possession but there being a charge against both parties of rioting under s 147, I P C., he punished both parties held that the party in possession was protected by s. 104, I P C., in maintaining his possession, and the punishment inflicted on him was accordingly remitted 10 W. R. 64. Where a Magistrate found that the persons who attempted to do Baith Pujah, which is said to have provoked the petitioners, were not entitled to perform this puja, held that if the petitioners acted properly within their rights there was no reason to suppose that any breach of the peace was likely to be committed by them, 3 C. W. N. 463.

(i) Proceedings under this section unnecessary when claim to possession not bona fide—Where certain persons wrongfully and without any bona fide claim to possession sought to eject another by force and a breach of the peace was imminent held the Magistrate was not bound to act under this section, but might proceed under s. 107, 23 A. 456. See also the observations in this connection in, 3 Pat. L. J. 243.

(ii) When a party by instituting suit for possession admits the other party is in possession, Magistrate ought not to institute proceedings.—Under this section, a Magistrate has power to intervene and pass a temporary order in regard to the possession of land under dispute, only until one or other of the parties applies for and obtains a determination of his right in a Civil Court. Where, therefore, one of the parties by bringing a civil suit for possession has admitted the other party to be in possession, it was held the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to proceed under this section but might invoke other sections of the Code, if he thought it necessary to take any steps to preserve the peace, 7 C. W. N. 553. But the pendency of a suit under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act does not take away the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, 36 C. 370. See also (1911) 2 M. W. N. 98 (Jour), 5 C. 835.

30. Jurisdiction to initiate proceedings does not depend upon date of dispossession.—The jurisdiction of a Magistrate to initiate proceedings is not determined by the date of dispossession of one of the parties claiming the land but is determined on the apprehension based on reliable information that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists between two parties. Therefore a Magistrate does not act without jurisdiction if he takes action even when the petitioner alleges that dispossession had taken place more than two months prior to the institution of proceedings. 11 A L J 305 = 14 Cr L J 223.

31 Recent decree or order of competent Court may negative absence of dispute.—See Notes under Heading VIII.

VII.—NATURE OF INFORMATION OR REPORT ON WHICH MAGISTRATE MAY ACT.

32 The information must indicate likelihood of a breach of the peace.—Where proceedings instituted on a Police report under this section were dropped because it did not specify the boundaries of the disputed land though it contained all the necessary facts to give the Magistrate jurisdiction and a fresh Police report was sent in stating the boundaries but nothing was stated therein as to any apprehension of a breach of the peace and the Magistrate drew up proceedings referring to both reports held that the proceedings were without jurisdiction as the later report on which he must have acted contained no reference to a breach of the peace. 8 C W N 340, 23 C 657.

33 No hard and fast rule as to the materials or sufficiency of the information.—A Magistrate is not in any way limited as to the materials he might make use of to ground his finding. No complaint is necessary nor is he confined to evidence recorded on oath. 19 W R 10. But a mere telegram is not information. 22 B 949 at p 956. It is absolutely essential that the fact of his being so satisfied and the grounds thereof should appear in his first order directing the issue of notice. 6 C P Cr 21, 2 Bom L R 84, 23 C 416, 4 M L T 213, but see 33 C 352 (P B). Mere reference to a petition made by a private person complaining of the commission of various offences, none of which necessarily involved a breach of the peace is not sufficient to found jurisdiction. 4 C W N 57. He must record a distinct finding that the dispute is such as is likely to cause a breach of the peace. Welr II, 117, Ratanlal 39. It is not sufficient to justify the institution of proceedings under this section that in the course of a trial it appears from the statement of a witness that a breach of the peace is likely to ensue. 20 C 320. A mere petition by an officer in the employ of one of the interested party is not however such information on which a Magistrate can act without receiving further evidence. 29 M 561. The mere statement on oath of one party is not sufficient to justify a Magistrate instituting proceedings. 10 C 78.

34 Grounds when stated by Magistrate must satisfy Revision Court.—The Magistrate is bound to satisfy himself on grounds which are reasonable that a breach of the peace is imminent and the grounds stated by the Magistrate must be such as to satisfy a Court of Revision before which such case may be brought by any of the parties concerned. 20 C 513.

35 Value of Police report.—To act or not on it, left to the discretion of the Magistrate.—Whether or not a Magistrate institutes proceeding under this section is a matter entirely for his discretion and he is in no way bound to act on all that is stated in the Police report before him. 27 C 892. No doubt the Police report upon which the Magistrate found his preliminary order should contain statement of the facts from which the Magistrate may be satisfied as to the likelihood of a breach of the peace but there is no inflexible rule that the Police report should show that the disputing parties are actually assembling men or doing other specific overt acts. No rule can be laid down so as to specify the sufficiency of the materials upon which he takes action. But he must form his own judgment and not proceed upon a mere expression of the opinion of the Police. 23 C 33 where 25 W R 2 and 22 W. R. 79 are dissented from and if there is nothing in the Police report or elsewhere to justify the institution of proceedings under this section so if it does not appear from such report that there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace no proceedings can be instituted and if already instituted they are void and the defect is not cured by s. 537. 20 C 513, C W N 198 = 5 Cr L J 32, 11 C W N 835 = 6 Cr L J 35. It is not sufficient that the Magistrate should believe him a Police report and that he should have given orders thereon but it is his duty to draw up an order satisfying the requirements of the law. 27 C 931, 6 M L T. 91. A Police report in itself is not evidence that a dispute likely to induce a breach of the peace exists although it may be sufficient to justify a Magistrate in instituting proceedings. 7 B L R 329. When the Police report showed that the two parties were disputing about the possession of a tank and that they were big Zemindars and though there was nothing to show there was a likelihood of a breach of the peace yet a breach of the peace was not impossible, held, this report ought not to be made the foundation of a proceeding under this section, and the mere opinion of the Police-officer without sufficient materials should not be acted upon, 11 C. W. N. 835 = 6 Cr. L. J. 36. So also where the Police report states in the vaguest term that each of the parties claim a certain right and that as both are men of substance, there might be a breach of the peace, 11 C. W. N. 198 = 5 Cr. L. J. 32

35-A. Order of superior Magistrate not enough.—A Sub-divisional Magistrate cannot institute proceedings merely on the order of a District Magistrate stating that in his opinion it was the duty of the Sub-divisional Magistrate to institute proceedings under s 145, 24 C. 391.

VIII.—EFFECT OF PRIOR ADJUDICATION BY COMPETENT COURT ON JURISDICTION OF MAGISTRATE TO INSTITUTE PROCEEDING.

36. During pendency of suit for possession whether Magistrate may institute proceedings?—See Note 29 (11) at page 273

37. Decree of competent Court negative existence of dispute.—When the rights of the parties have been determined by Civil Court there is no longer a 'dispute' within the meaning of this section, and the proper course for a Magistrate to pursue, if the defeated party does any act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace is to take action under s 107 of the Code and require from such person security to keep the peace. Per FIELD, J., 6 C. 835 = 8 C. L. R. 217, Ratanlal 482. When a Civil Court decree is passed the right between the litigants is decided, and there is no more place for a summary order which proceeds not upon title but on mere possession, 16 W. R. 24, 26 W. R. 17. 'When the rights of the parties have been determined by a competent Court the dispute is at an end, and it is the duty of the Magistrate to maintain the rights of the successful party. In other words, the defeated party will not be allowed to go to the Criminal Court and alleging the existence of a dispute, invoke the aid of the Magistrate and the Police to neutralize the effect of the decree of a competent Civil Court,' 6 C. 835 at p. 861 = 8 C. L. R. 217 at p. 222. The object of this section is to enable a Magistrate to intervene and pass a temporary order in regard to the possession of the property in dispute, to have effect until the actual right of one of the parties has been determined by any competent Court. It is consequently his duty when that right has been declared, within a time not remote from his taking proceedings under this section, to maintain any order which has been passed by any competent Court, and therefore, to take proceedings which must necessarily have the effect of modifying or cancelling such order, is to assume a jurisdiction which the law does not contemplate. On a breach of the peace being certified to him the Magistrate ought to content himself with declaring that the order of the Civil Court should be maintained and with that view he should assist the possession of any person whose title is found by that Court.—PER PRINSEP J., 26 C. 825 at p. 828. The duty of a Criminal Court when proceeding under s 145 where there is a decree of a Civil Court for possession in respect of the disputed land is to find which party held such Civil Court decree and then to maintain that party in possession 5 C. W. N. 563. Where in execution of a decree a Civil Court had given symbolical possession of the lands in dispute to the first party on the 9th September and proceedings under s 145 were instituted between the parties to the decree in the following December and the Magistrate found and maintained possession for the second party, held that the Magistrate was bound to give effect to the decree of the Civil Court, 29 C. 208. Where eight days prior to the institution of proceedings under this section one of the parties was put in possession of one of several plots in dispute in execution of a Civil Court's decree establishing his right, held, that it was the duty of the Magistrate to have found possession in accordance with the decree of the Civil Court and that an order made by the Magistrate attaching all the plots was made without jurisdiction so far as the plot included in the decree was concerned 32 C. 796; see also 5 C. W. N. 33, where the interval was three months and the 6 C. W. N. 161, where it was held that the disputed boundaries of a fultar having been settled by a Civil Court decree the Magistrate ought to have simply maintained it 5 Pat. L. J. 106; 17 A. L. J. 434.

38. Magistrate disregarding decree of Civil Court acts without jurisdiction.—A Magistrate is not justified in disregarding the decree of a Civil Court. It is his duty to uphold and carry out that decree so far as lies in him to do so, 2 A. L. J. 274 = 2 Cr. L. J. 235 which follows 26 C. 825; see also 2 C. L. J. 147 = 2 Cr. L. J. 572. If a Magistrate fails to decide the effect of a Civil Court decree between the parties on the question of possession he fails to decide an important issue and thereby declines to exercise jurisdiction, 11 Cr. L. J. 184 (C.)

Magistrate should maintain the decree of the Civil Court—A Magistrate ought not to interfere with the execution of a decree of the Civil Court. If called upon to interfere at all, because he apprehends a breach of the peace, he should maintain in possession the person who has been actually put in possession by the Civil Court, 6 W. R. 10. Where in execution of a Civil Court decree in a suit in which only one of the members of a Mitakshara Joint Hindu Family was party, the whole of the family property was delivered over to the purchaser, and subsequently, when the purchaser tried to take possession, the other members, not parties to the suit objected to proceedings being instituted under this section, the Magistrate declared that the purchaser should be put in possession of a fractional share only, held, that the order was made without jurisdiction as the writ of possession showed that the whole of the property had been delivered to the purchaser and it was not open to a Criminal Court to go behind it, 6 C. W. N. 841. When a decree has been passed regarding the whole of any portion of a disputed land, it is the Magistrate's duty to maintain the decree, and he cannot again institute proceedings under this section regarding the land covered by it, 16 W. R. 24, 24 W. R. 17, 24 B. 527; 7 C. L. R. 516; 9 C. W. N. 392. Where symbolical possession of immovable property of a judgment-debtor has, whether rightly or wrongly been duly given by the proper officer of the Civil Court to the purchaser thereof at an execution sale, and such possession has not been subsequently abandoned by the purchaser, a Magistrate is bound to maintain such possession and he has no power to direct that the judgment-debtor, being in actual possession, shall be so maintained until ousted by a Civil Court, 5 C. L. R. 200; 14 C. 169.

It seems contrary to all principles of justice that a judgment debtor should be allowed to retain possession against his decree holder who has actually been given possession against him by a Civil Court, and in a criminal proceeding to assert that possession and by force of the order of the Magistrate drive the decree-holder and auction purchaser back to the Civil Court for a further declaration of his right, 20 C. W. N. 796 = 17 Cr. L. J. 182 = 33 In. Ca. 822; 27 C. W. N. 267. See, however, 16 Cr. L. J. 736 (M).

39 But every decree is not conclusive—The question of possession in a proceeding under this section has to be determined with reference to a specified point of time, upon this question every previous decree of a Civil Court or order of a Criminal Court is not necessarily conclusive, the evidentiary value to be attached to such document must depend on the circumstances of each particular case, 33 C. 33.

(i) Decree must be clear and unambiguous—The observations in 26 C. 825 apply where there is no doubt whatever as to what the Civil Court has done, sc., where it cannot be disputed that a certain party has been declared owner and put in possession by a Civil Court. Where, however, one of the parties contended that he purchased the land itself in execution of a decree and the opposite party contended that what was sold under the decree was not the land, but the right to levy assessment and the decree was ambiguous, held that the Magistrate was within his jurisdiction in deciding that the actual possession was with the opposite party, 6 Bom. L. R. 246. A Magistrate cannot act upon his interpretation of a decision of a Civil Court, 1 C. L. R. 273, he is bound to enquire into possession and that alone, 3 C. L. R. 94, and the order of a Civil Court deciding title must be executed by that Court and not by the Magistrate 2 B. L. R. A. C. 27; see 1 W. R. 25.

(ii) Decree must be recent—Where a Magistrate, on the strength of a decree 23 years old, made an order declaring one of the parties to be in possession and refused to receive oral evidence tendered by the opposite party in proof of present possession held, that the order was bad. Though the decree is presumptive proof of possession, it is not absolutely impossible that the party who obtained the decree 23 years ago should have been subsequently dispossessed 8 C. W. N. 719. In 33 C. 33, the existence of a decree 17 years old was held not to affect the Magistrate's jurisdiction. Where the Civil Court decree was four years old, it was held, the Magistrate was justified in proceeding under this section without giving effect to the decree, 11 C. W. N. 210. In a case like this, it would be most unsafe to act on documentary evidence alone, 5 W. R. 79.

(iii) Question of possession must have been directly in issue in the previous suit—Where the suit in which the decree is passed is neither for declaration of title nor for possession of the disputed lands, but merely one for damages in which the determination of title is incidentally necessary, there is no order of a Civil Court which could be said to be modified or cancelled by a possession under s. 145, see 16 M. L. T. 52 = 13 Cr. L. J. 539. When the question of possession as between the parties to the criminal proceedings was not fought out between them in the previous civil proceedings and if there is any finding about possession in those proceedings, the Magistrate may take it into consideration in arriving at a decision but he ought to arrive at his own finding as to which of the parties was in possession, 15 Cr. L. J. 663 (M).

(iv) Where the decree is not between the same parties, Magistrate may proceed under this section—In 4 C. L. J. 582 = 4 Cr. L. J. 803, it was held that the actual possession of a person, not party to the Civil Court decree in execution of which another person was put in possession, could not be disturbed by a proceeding under this section, and possession given to the decree-holder. Symbolical possession in execution of a foreclosure decree is not effective against a lessee who was not a party to the mortgage suit. When the parties to the proceeding are not parties to the decree and the petitioners were not in possession nor were the respondents put in possession under the decree, the Magistrate has jurisdiction to disregard the decree and proceed under this section, 3 Bur. L. T. 74 = 11 Cr. L. J. 635; see also 5 C. 584; 25 W. R. 74, 4 C. 378, 13 Cr. L. J. 583 (C). A Magistrate taking action under this section cannot base his finding on the question of possession and decide the case in favour of one party on the mere fact that possession was given to that party under a decree in a partition suit to which the second party were not parties, there being no evidence that the first party ever obtained possession as against the petitioners, 17 C. W. N. 56. In 6 C. L. R. 206, symbolical possession under decree against the former owner of the land in dispute had been given to the complainant in execution of those decrees, and he was obstructed from obtaining actual possession by the defendants who were no parties to the suit in which the decrees were passed, and the Magistrate passed an order confirming the complainant in possession, without any evidence that he was in actual possession either before or at the date of inquiry, his order was set aside. The Court remarked — "The Criminal Court may properly inquire into and punish riot or an unlawful assembly if it be proved. But it altogether oversteps its province when it interferes in cases where a purchaser under a decree is resisted in getting actual possession of the property which he has bought." See s. 332 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882. After a redemption decree had been passed by the Civil Court, the mortgagee claimed to be in cultivatory possession and the Magistrate made an order under this section upholding the possession of the mortgagee tenant, held, that the order was properly made as the tenant was in cultivatory possession of the land in dispute and was never disturbed in his possession by the Civil Court decree, 2 A. L. J. 274 = 2 Cr. L. J. 238. It was, however, held in 5 C. W. N. 553; 7 C. W. N. 118 that it is not necessary that the Civil Court decree should be between the parties to proceedings under this section. The Magistrate is bound to maintain a party in possession in accordance with the Civil Court decree, even when one of the parties to the proceedings before him was not a party to the decree and see Note 38 (i).

40. Mere issue of certificate without delivery of possession not protected.—Where the petitioner bought the lands belonging to the counter petitioner's family in execution-sale and the sale was only confirmed and the sale certificate issued, held, there being no delivery of possession whatever, actual or symbolical to the petitioners their rights were not protected by proceedings under s. 145, 31 M. 418. An order for delivery of symbolical possession under O. XXI. R. 96, Civ. P. C. has no bearing on the Magisterial enquiry, 16 Cr. L. J. 736 (M).

41. Co-parcenary property cannot be disturbed till there is actual division.—Even after a Civil Court decree for partition has been passed, the properties must be treated as joint, until the jointness is disturbed by actual division by metes and bounds. No order can be passed under this section in regard to such properties whilst the suit is still pending or before actual division. 8 C. W. N. 433, 23 P. R. 1902.

42. When Magistrate can pass prohibitory order though Civil Court has refused an injunction.—Where the District Court has refused to grant an injunction to restrain the defendant from building on the land on the ground that he was in possession of it, it would still be competent for a Magistrate to issue a prohibitory order if he comes to the conclusion that the issue of such order was expedient for the preservation of the peace, and this was a consideration to which he would be entitled to have regard to, notwithstanding that the Civil Court had on other grounds refused an injunction, 7 M. 460.

43. Is the existence of a decree or order more than 'mere presumptive proof of possession.'—Does it affect the jurisdiction of the Magistrate? It was contended upon the authority of 8 C. 533; 5 C. W. N. 553, that the Magistrate was bound to treat a previous order and decree as conclusive upon the question of possession and should on that basis, have maintained the petitioner in possession. 'In our opinion these cases are clearly distinguishable, and we may add that, if they purport to lay down as an invariable rule, that a Criminal Court in determining the question of possession under s. 145 is concluded by every decree of a Civil Court and every previous order of a Criminal Court relating to the same property, no matter when and under what circumstances such orders were made we are unable to accept this as a correct statement of the law.' The value to be attached to any such piece of evidence must obviously depend upon the particular circumstances of each case. 6 C. 335 distinguished. Again in 26 C. 625, it was laid down that the duty of a Magistrate when the right to possession has been declared within a time not remote from his taking proceedings under s 145 is to maintain any order which has been passed by a competent Court. This statement however appropriate it may be in connection with the facts of the particular case before the Court is obviously not justified by the provision of the statute and regarded as a general proposition is not sufficiently precise to be applicable to all cases. 5 C. W. N. 563; 20 C. 520, 32 C. 796 referred to. Upon a review of these authorities it appears to be clear to us that there is no inflexible rule of law that a Magistrate in deciding the question of possession is concluded by every previous order of a Civil or Criminal Court relating to the subject of dispute and that the weight to be attached to any such previous order must depend upon the facts and circumstances of the particular case. 33 C. 33. I fail to understand how the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to take proceedings under s 145 was affected by the decree (referring to 32 C. 796) provided he is satisfied that the dispute is likely to cause a breach of the peace and chooses to give himself jurisdiction by recording an order under s 145 (1) it is difficult to see looking to the words of the section that his proceedings are ultra vires. 16 M. L. T. 52 = 15 Cr. L. J. 559. In 36 A. 233, the High Court declined to set aside the order of a Magistrate who in spite of the symbolical possession given in June in execution of a decree of a Civil Court to one of the parties found in the following November possession in favour of the other party.

44 Effect of a previous order of a Criminal Court.—(1) Infructuous order under s 522 no bar to proceedings under this section.—Where an order under s 522 is passed, but possession under that section was never as a fact delivered to the petitioners and the order was thus infructuous it is no bar to the jurisdiction of a Criminal Court to proceed under this section as the Court has to deal with the breaches of the peace regarding actual possession of immovable property. 18 C. W. N. 1035 = 15 Cr. L. J. 700.

(11) Fresh proceedings should not be instituted when previous order under s 145 (6) is still in force.—Where an order under cl (6) has been passed the section forbids all disturbance of such possession until evicted in due course of law and a Magistrate should not institute fresh proceedings when such an order is still in force. But where the previous order was merely that the parties had compromised and that according to the terms thereof both sides should be in possession such an order is one falling under cl (a) showing that no dispute existed and not an order cl (6) held that the Magistrate was competent to issue fresh proceedings. 18 C. W. N. 568 = 12 Cr. L. J. 32. But an order under s 145 made a long time ago does not bar fresh proceedings. See 38 C. 33.

(111) Fresh proceedings should not be instituted during pendency of rule issued by High Court.—

improper. 4 C. L. J. 418.

IX—THE 'PROPERTY' WITHIN THE SCOPE OF THE SECTION.

45 Right to ferry comes within the purview of this section.—The right to a ferry i.e. the right to carry passengers and their goods to and fro in a boat across a river cannot be treated apart from the possession of the lands used on either side of the stream for the purpose of landing them. Therefore where the subject matter of dispute is a ferry including the land and water upon which the right to ferry is exercised the case came properly within this section. 26 C. 188. But the right to use a ferry would come under s 147. 3 C. W. N. 148.

46 When fishery rights may be dealt with under this section.—Where there is a bona fide dispute relating to a fishery right proceedings under this section may be instituted. 35 C. 117. The decisions in 12 C. 539 and 13 C. 179 which held that a fishery right not being a dispute concerning any tangible immovable property did not fall within the scope of this section are now superseded by the change in the wording of this section. But the possession of a fishery cannot be dealt with under this section where the parties have joint rights and are not seeking actual possession as this section has always been held to be confined to exclusive possession. 11 C. W. N. 512 referred to. Semble, a Magistrate might have jurisdiction under s 145 (2) if what was in dispute was not a share in the fishery but a share in its profits which are either the fish caught or their price when sold. It may be that a co-owner fishing Julkar holds a part of the profits he derives from his fishing, on behalf of his co-owner and from the necessity of the case is his agent to do so. This would take the case out of the principle laid down in 10 C. W. N. 1088 and 36 C. 985, but is not certain that it would bring it within the principle laid down in 27 C. 259, "11 C. L. J. 412 = 11 Cr. L. J. 370. Cf. 26 C. 449 and 19 C. 544."

46-A. Mining rights fall within the definition of the term land in this section, 4 Pat. L. J. 154

47. Possession of temple.—A dispute regarding the possession of a temple is a dispute regarding tangible immovable property and a Magistrate would be justified in attaching such property under s 146. But an order of attachment of a temple does not necessarily mean that the temple must be closed altogether, Weir II, 110, 112 and 99. See also 17 Cr. L. J. 235 = 34 In. Ca. 651 (M.)

48. Collection of rents.—A right to collect rent over the whole property in dispute comes under this section, 11 C. 413; 16 C. 513, 15 C. 527; 12 M. 88; 19 C. W. N. 959. Where there is no dispute as to the actual shares of co-parceners, but there is dispute as to the right to go in and collect the rents and break up the arrangement by which the rents were collected on behalf of all the co-parceners, held that there was no want of jurisdiction in a Magistrate to take proceedings under this section 27 C. 259; 31 M. 318. But where there is no dispute as to the extent of the respective shares of two parties, or as to the fact of their possession in a village, and the dispute is only as to who is entitled to collect the rents from the tenants such a dispute cannot be dealt with under this section, 10 O. C. 89 = 5 Cr. L. J. 394; 35 C. 986; 10 C. W. N. 1088; 35 A. 143. This section does not refer to a dispute as to right to collect rents of a joint undivided estate in a certain proportion 18 W. R. 36; 9 C. W. N. 392.

49. Disputes about crops or other produce of land.—Chapter XII is headed disputes as to immovable property and it is clear that by these words in subsec. (2) are meant crops or other produce of land attached to the land and not severed from it 30 C. 110; 28 A. 265. A Magistrate has therefore no jurisdiction to adjudicate upon rival claims to crops cut and stored on the thrashing floor. But he has jurisdiction to pass an order dealing with the crops on the land at the date of the order and harvested since the beginning of the disturbance, 13 Cr. L. J. 295 (M) and the mere fact that the crops have been removed does not oust the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, Weir II, 108; see also 5 C. W. N. 105, 19 C. W. N. 959, 8 C. L. J. 242; 15 A. 394; 6 C. W. N. 882 and Note 153. Claims to collection of rent can be made the subject of inquiry under s. 145 and in such enquires the question must always be who was actually collecting rent at the date of the preliminary order, 1915 M. W. N. 267 = 17 M. L. T. 225 = 16 Cr. L. J. 234. Trees may come within the definition of 'land' in section 145 as being "produce of land" but the which is not a part of the tree itself but is a parasitic growth on the tree is not crop or a produce of land. Proceedings held under section 145 in respect of the are therefore without jurisdiction. 24 C. W. N. 1039.

50. What are not 'profits' within the scope of the section.—(a) Collection of offerings in a temple not within this section—Offerings given by worshippers for the worship of any deity are not profits arising out of a building. They arise out of the deity irrespective of the building or the land upon which he may happen to dwell. To hold otherwise would be to allow the Criminal Courts to interfere with the customary laws of this country, 37 C. 578, followed. Where the dispute relates to the right to the offerings only, it is clear that the dispute is about movable property and a declaration under this section, that one of the parties is in possession of such offerings is an order made without jurisdiction 28 C. 387, 5 Pat. L. J. 246.

(b) Dispute as to right to collect fees from sellers in a market does not come within this section—A market in the town of K, belonged to one D. The Police reported to the Sub-divisional Magistrate of K that a breach of the peace was likely to take place between some of the servants of D and one R who was appointed chaudhry of the market for the collection of certain dues by the Ramas and other persons who came to sell their goods. The Magistrate instituted proceedings under s. 107 and after examining the Sub-Inspector, came to the conclusion that the case could not appropriately be proceeded with under s. 107, cancelled the order under s. 107 proceeded under s. 145, after observing the formalities required by that section and passed an order in favour of R. In revision it was contended that the order was one made without jurisdiction, held, setting aside the order, that the dispute in this case did not really concern any tangible immovable property. There was no dispute about the market or the rents or profits of any such property, which admittedly belonged to D. The subject matter in dispute was the remuneration allowed to R for his services in regulating the business of the market on behalf of the Ramas and others whose chaudhry he was and this payment was purely voluntary on their part and was in no way connected with the ordinary rents and profits of the market and was not a perquisite of the Zemindar, but was a personal matter between the Ramas and the chaudhry, and therefore, that the dispute in this case did not relate to the 'profits' of a market within the meaning of this section and the order was one made without jurisdiction. s. 107 is the appropriate section to be applied, 36 A. 143; 20 A. L. J. 694.

(c) Collection of fees from pilgrims not within this section—This section does not empower a Magistrate to institute proceedings in respect of a dispute between two parties relating to a distribution of fees paid by pilgrims at Gaya for performing Sradh ceremony although there may be likelihood of a breach of the peace in consequence of such a dispute. Such fees can in no sense be said to be profits which issue out of land 3 C. L. J. 137 = 3 Cr. L. J. 215

51 *Dispute as to succession to math not within the purview of the section*—A Magistrate cannot proceed under this section in a case of dispute arising out of a right of succession to math and its appurtenances but should apply to the Judge under the provisions of Act XIX of 1841 to appoint a curator or make a curator or make some order with regard to property till the right of succession is determined 11 W. R. 23 = 2 B. L. R. A. C. 27. The grant of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 was not proof of possession nor did it entitle the holder to be put in possession of the property of a deceased person 25 W. R. 16 See also 34 C. 840

52 Jurisdiction over movables in immovable property—This section does not confer upon a Magistrate the same powers of attachment over movables (e.g. salt in salt pans) as over immovable property Ratanlal 891. It has also been held that a Magistrate has no jurisdiction to attach under s. 146 a crop of Mohua no longer growing on the trees 29 A. 266, 30 C. 110. A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to pass any order in respect of the possession of goods and business of a shop in dispute, 23 P. R. 1902. An elephant by itself cannot be attached. If however a forest with elephants in it is attached, proceedings may be taken under this section (1912) M. W. N. 540 = 13 Cr. L. J. 222, see Note 46 above as to profits of a fishery and see also 6 Bom. L. R. 438, where it was held that the right to sandal paste upon an idol could not form the subject matter of proceeding under this section nor the offerings to the idol 38 C. 387, 30 A. L. J. 906

X—PARTIES CONCERNED

(A)—DUTY OF MAGISTRATES

53 Duty of the Magistrate to ascertain and join parties—A Magistrate ought before entering on his inquiry under sub-sec. (4) though not as a preliminary to the institution of proceedings (for which latter purpose) all that is requisite is that he should issue the order under sub-sec. (1) to the parties named in the information to satisfy himself to the best of his ability on the information before him as to who are the persons claiming to be in present possession of the subject of a dispute but that he is not concerned to ascertain what persons have or claim to have mere rights to possession. An order of a Magistrate cannot be vitiated by any error of jurisdiction merely because such inquiry has not been made or carried far enough 30 C. 155 (F. B.) see also 24 C. 55, 21 C. 915, 24 B. 527, 6 C. W. N. 101, 3 C. W. N. 329. See Note 63

54 All persons claiming to be in actual possession and concerned in the dispute should be made parties—Having regard to the object to which the proceeding is directed i.e. the ascertainment of the person actually in possession at the time of the preliminary order under sub-sec. (1) all persons claiming to be in actual possession ought to be made parties and not merely the actual disputants. But it is not necessary that a mere right to possession of the property in dispute should be made parties.

This section contemplates one proceeding against all the parties known or so as to conclude the matter definitely and finally so far as the Criminal Courts are concerned 27 C. 892, 11 Bom. L. R. 377. The publication of a copy of the order at or near the subject matter of dispute is to some extent a general notice to all persons concerned in the dispute and will enable persons not mentioned in the order or personally served to intervene and it may have the effect of bringing in other persons interested to show under sub-sec. (5) that no dispute exists or existed.

(B)—WHO ARE PARTIES CONCERNED

55 Who are parties concerned in dispute?—The section concerns owners as well as occupiers of land. When a Zemindar has let his lands in farm, he his farmers and their occupying ryots are all in their degree, concerned in the dispute as to possession and they ought to be maintained in the possession of the interests which they severally enjoy 5 C. L. R. 287 at p. 289, 23 W. R. 18. Where petitioners alleged that the landlords have fraudulently attempted to dispute their possession by setting up false tenants as cultivators of the lands in dispute the landlords are the real parties 4 C. W. N. 743. Parties concerned in such dispute are not limited to the parties actually concerned in the dispute but include parties concerned in the subject-matter or the dispute who would be affected by the Magistrate's order declaring possession 4 C. W. N. 613; 21 C. 29; 26 C. 185. The words 'parties concerned' do not necessarily mean only the parties who are disputing but include also persons who are interested in or claim a right to the property in dispute 27 C. 892 and 132 C. 859. The object of this section is to obtain a settlement of disputes regarding possession of land as likely to cause a breach of the peace and if it were possible to decide such a matter in the absence of a person who was really interested in the subject matter of the dispute and therefore in the terms of the final order which would be passed the result would be that in order declaring the possession of one of the parties to the proceedings would either operate mischievously in an absent party or from the fact that such order has been passed behind the back of such party it would be inoperative and therefore it would inevitably tend not to a termination of the dispute but to a renewal of it in different directions and between other parties. That was not clearly the object of the law 4 C. W. N. 753 at p. 755. If parties are absent they may be declared ex-parte after due proof of service of notice upon them. For a person to be concerned in a dispute relating to land it is not necessary for him to be present near the land or to have notice of that proceeding when started 20 C. W. N. 878.

54. Parties concerned must be definite and named specifically—One D belonging to a class of Sevastes complained to the District Magistrate that while performing Alankar Pujah for one of his Yajmans in the temple of Shri Pandurang at Pandharpur, B belonging to another sect of Sevastes wrongfully obstructed him, etc. The District Magistrate being satisfied on the report of a Sub-Magistrate as to the existence of a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace passed an order that the sect of Sevastes to which complainant belonged were alone entitled to perform the pujah and that the other sects of Sevastes had no right to perform the same, held that the Magistrate's procedure was defective inasmuch as the original complaint was against one class of Sevastes generally without any particulars being specified whereas the order of the Magistrate was addressed to all classes of Sevastes and though this section required that the parties concerned should be named specifically for they are to be served with notices to attend the Court and state their case no such notices were issued and the parties concerned had no opportunity to put in their respective claims. Therefore the order was set aside, 24 B. 527.

57. When tenants are necessary parties in a dispute between rival Zemindars—Where two rival sets of tenants claim to hold under two rival sets of Zemindars and are disputing about the actual occupation or possession of a plot of land and in a proceeding under this section the Zemindars are made parties but the tenants are not, held that the presence of the tenants is essentially necessary for the proper and effectual decision of the case and that the omission by the Magistrate to join them as parties is illegal and without jurisdiction 27 C. 892, 28 C. 446. But where in a dispute concerning land between the rival tenants of two Zemindars the Zemindars themselves never moved in the matter and were not made parties held on the application of the unsuccessful set of tenants that though it was desirable that the landlords should be made parties the order was not bad for want of jurisdiction as the objection was not bonafide being taken by the unsuccessful party only before the Revision Court 6 C. W. N. 206, see also 33 C. 859. When the dispute is between the Lakhsrajdar and the Pulindar as to the right to collect rent the tenant need not be a party but if it appears that there is a dispute as to the tenants actually in possession the tenants must be made parties 19 C. W. N. 859 = 16 Cr. L. J. 590.

58. Dispute between landlord and tenant—The rule that the possession of the tenant is the possession of the landlord does not apply to cases in which there is a dispute between the tenant and the landlord as to the fact of possession Weir II, 107.

59. Dispute between principal and agent, master and servant—Possession that can be pleaded in a proceeding under this section must be possession based on a claim of right of possession. The possession of an agent or servant which is permissive cannot give a party to a proceeding a locus standi as against his principal or master 10 C. W. N. 1038 = 4 Cr. L. J. 215, 36 C. 986, see also 15 Cr. L. J. 703, 24 A. 443; 23 P. R. 1902, 1914 M. W. N. 795 = 15 Cr. L. J. 669 and Note 71.

60. Representation of principal or master by agent, manager or servant—(a) When master is absent—A Magistrate has jurisdiction under this section to make an order in favour of a person who claims to be in possession of the disputed land as agent to or manager for the proprietors when the latter are not resident in the province 31 C. 48 (F.B.), which renders absolute 21 C. 915 and 916 (Note), 1 C. W. N. 208, 2 C. W. N. 670. The Full Bench held that in sub-sec. (1) 'such possession and that the possession of an agent or manager where the proprietors are absent' is declared to be in possession of the proprietor. See 3 C. L. R. 96 where a

(b) When master is present—Where proceedings are taken in consequence of a breach of the peace being imminent owing to the acts of a person acting as a servant of another who claims to be in possession, no order should be passed unless such latter person is made a party to the proceedings 6 C. L. R. 193, 21 C. 915. But there is no reason why the Full Bench ruling in 31 C. 43 should not also apply to a case where the landlord is within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate. In 32 C. 297, it was held that making the manager a party to the proceedings under this section instead of the Zemindar resident within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate is a mere irregularity or at most an error of law which does not affect the Magistrate's jurisdiction.

61 Receiver cannot be made a party—When a receiver is appointed by a competent Court his possession is the possession of the Court. Such an officer cannot be correctly described as a party interested in a dispute. But even if he could be so described, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to make an order on him under this section without the sanction of the Court that appointed him, 30 C. 593. So also in a dispute between old and new tenants of an estate the receiver who granted new leases to the new tenants and who himself is not in actual possession is not a proper party to the proceedings 9 M. L. T. 502 = 12 Cr. L. J. 185, see also 10 C. 1014, 30 C. 721, 26 M. L. J. 205 = 15 Cr. L. J. 509.

62 Public cannot be a party—See 17 G. W. N. 205 = 17 C. L. J. 397 = 13 Cr. L. J. 789, Note 1.

63 Reversioner not a necessary party—The words "the parties concerned in such dispute" must have been intended to extend to persons other than the actual disputants there may be a dispute between A and B which is likely to cause a breach of the peace to which C is not strictly a party but in which he is nevertheless concerned as claiming to be in possession 30 C. 155. A person whose claim is that he is the next reversioner is not a necessary party because he has no possible right to present possession 24 A. 443 which distinguishes 27 C. 892 and 28 C. 446.

(C)—MIS-JOINDER AND NON-JOINDER OF PARTIES

64 Mis joinder or non joinder of parties does not ordinarily affect jurisdiction—It was laid down by the Full Bench in 30 C. 155 that questions of mis-joinder or non-joinder of parties do not ordinarily affect jurisdiction. Such questions as whether A ought to have been added as being a person likely to be affected by the proceeding, or B omitted as not being concerned in it, or whether C was added at too late a stage and such like are questions of procedure by which the jurisdiction of the Magistrate is not affected. There are proceedings under this section which are not without jurisdiction, merely because the Magistrate on information before him has made parties thereto only those actually in dispute and likely to cause a breach of the peace although it is brought to his notice that another party is interested in the subject matter of the dispute and neither are they bad because some person claiming possession in some way to the lands in dispute or some portion thereof has not been made a party, he not being one of the parties to the dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace so far as it appeared from the information on which the Magistrate acted see also 5 C. W. N. 544, 6 C. W. N. 206. This Full Bench view follows 9 B. L. R. Appx. 39 = 18 W. R. 54, which laid down that the only persons entitled to notice are those concerned in the dispute and the following cases: 21 C. 29, 27 C. 892, 4 C. W. N. 733, 23 C. 446, 5 C. W. N. 67 and 900 and 6 C. W. N. 101 must be read subject to the above observations.

65 Competency of Magistrate to alter or add parties during the course of the proceedings—Up to the time the Magistrate enters upon the inquiry the Magistrate has very wide powers with respect to the persons whom he will bring into the proceedings. He may after or add to the array of parties either of his own motion or on the application of anyone claiming to be concerned in the dispute in the sense that he claims to be in possession. The initial order is no doubt intended to fix a time within which claimants are to come in but it would not be very material even if after the date so fixed but before the opening of the actual inquiry parties are added. If a party is added after the institution of proceedings there is no necessity for fresh proceedings provided the party added was originally concerned in the dispute which is the foundation of the proceedings, 30 C. 155 (F.B.) at pp. 199-199. Where the Magistrate added parties and issued fresh copies of the original proceedings held that he was within jurisdiction 10 C. W. N. 1095 = 4 Cr. L. J. 223. If a Magistrate declines to add a party on the ground that he has no power to join him, he declines jurisdiction and the final order may be set aside as without jurisdiction under s. 435 and s. 15 of the Charter Act—BANERJEE J. in 30 C. 155 (F.B.) But subject to the provisions of sub-sec. (7) the section contains no provision for the addition of parties after the commencement of the inquiry under sub-sec. (4). The person interested in sub-sec. (5) does not come in for the purpose of joining in the proceedings but for bringing it to an end. If a Magistrate for sufficient reasons thought proper after the commencement of the inquiry under sub-sec. (4) to bring in an additional party, that would only be an irregularity and it would not be necessary in consequence to initiate a fresh proceeding, but evidence previously taken ought, if the parties added so require it, to be again taken in their presence, 30 C. 135 (F.B.) at pp 199 and 201; 24 C. 55 and 21 C. 404, which laid down that the addition of new parties would put an end to the proceedings is evidently no longer law having regard to the objects of sub-sec. (3) and the above Full Bench case, which renders obsolete rulings to the like effect in 3 C. W. N. 329; 4 C. W. N. 743 and 83 (Note); 5 C. W. N. 67 and 900; 27 C. 892; 4 C. 630 = 3 C. L. R. 551; 24 C. 55. See also 20 C. W. N. 878.

(D)—WHO MAY SHOW NON-EXISTENCE OF DISPUTE?

66. Strangers interested in land should be allowed to show that there is no dispute.—Where a person applies to be made a party on the ground that he is interested in the land in dispute as a tenant of a part of the property in dispute and there is nothing to show that that is not the case, he should be allowed to show there is no dispute under sub-sec. (5), < 145 37 C. 285. Sub-sec. (5) does not enable a Magistrate to add parties to the proceedings. It enables a stranger to come in and show that no such dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace concerning any land, etc. exists or has existed. He cannot become nor can he be made a party to the dispute which he seeks to show has never existed 3 C. W. N. 329; 30 C. 155; (F.B.), 4 C. 630; 5 C. W. N. 900; see contra 20 C. 526.

67. Order against or in favour of persons not parties.—Where certain of the parties to a proceeding under this section disclaimed all interest, but the Magistrate nevertheless passed an order that they with certain others were in joint possession of the disputed land held that the order was bad for want of jurisdiction 6 C. W. N. 104. See Notes 145 and 146.

XI.—THE 'POSSESSION' WITHIN THE SCOPE OF THE SECTION.

(A)—WHAT CONSTITUTES POSSESSION

68. Section concerned solely with actual physical possession.—Section 145 is concerned solely with the fact of actual physical possession whether lawful or unlawful, whether in contemplation of law enjoyed by the possessor in his own right or on behalf of others. Therefore in proceedings under that section any question as to whether possession is on behalf of others or in one's own right is quite irrelevant, 4 C. W. N. 426. Questions as to the rights of parties raised by their written statements under s 145, are quite irrelevant, as such, proceedings are initiated by the Magistrate in the interests of public order and tranquillity and it is his preliminary order that settles the actual issue between the parties and forms his jurisdiction, 16 Cr. L. J. 525 (M). The possession in regard to which the Magistrate's jurisdiction should be exercised must be of a real and tangible character 33 W. R. 45. Immediate receipt of rent is actual possession, 16 C. 513, but the constructive possession through intermediate holders (locadars) to whom the ryots pay rent is not actual possession 3 C. 320. See also 16 Cr. L. J. 736 (M), 49 C. 177.

69. The possession to be determined is the absolute continuing possession of either party right of public to be in possession for one day in the year.—Where one of the parties to a proceeding under this section representing the public claimed only the right to worship on the disputed land on one day in the year, and the right to make due and proper preparations for the holding of that worship by erecting huts for the purpose of holding pujah, held, that the right of such party to be in possession for one day in the year or to take such steps as are necessary to prepare for the pujah is in the nature of an easement and not in the nature of possession. Proceedings under s 145 are entirely without jurisdiction unless they are directed to the decision of the absolute continuing possession of either party until they are ousted by the order of the Civil Court, 17 C. W. N. 205 = 17 C. L. J. 897 = 13 Cr. L. J. 739; 49 C. 871.

70. Nature of possession when large area in dispute.—When C had the right under a patth to dig for coal and erect the necessary bindings in a certain area and was exercising his right in one portion of the area, and A under a subsequent patth commenced digging for coal in another portion of the same area, held, that the possession in regard to which the Magistrate's jurisdiction should be exercised must be of a real and tangible character. When a party claims under a document or agreement the right of doing certain things over a large extent of territory, the performance of acts under such alleged rights in one portion of the ground over which the right extends, although it may be good and sufficient for the purpose of keeping alive that right so as to be an answer to the plea of limitation raised in a civil suit, is not of itself a sufficient possession on which the Magistrate's order may be based for the purpose of forbidding in a distant locality acts not necessarily in conflict with such possession, though at variance with the right, 23 W. R. 45. See also Note 139

(a) Evidence of possession when the subject-matter of dispute is forest land.—Where the property in dispute is forest land, the right to possession of which is exercised by cutting and removing timber from time to time, it was held that in cases like these, having regard to the nature of the property in dispute, and the mode in which possession may be exercised over it, in order to find which party was in possession at the date of the Magistrate's order, it is necessary to inquire which party was in undisturbed possession of the land in dispute by felling timber and removing the same without objection on the occasion immediately preceding the one on which the dispute arose, and whichever party be found to have been in possession on the occasion should be presumed to have possession at the time when the proceedings were commenced, 15 C. 281. Where it was found that certain jungle lands were in the khas possession of the Zemindar, and the other party, without claiming any easement or claim of right, cut a few trees and encroached upon a small portion of the jungle, such act would not oust the Zemindar's possession 32 C. 287; see also 16 B. 338 at p. 341 L. R.; 13 A. C. 793 at p. 799.

71. Actual possession may also include possession through others.—There may be cases in which a person should properly be said to be in possession, although there was no bodily possession by him. The proper construction of the section is, that by actual possession is meant the possession of the master by his servant, the possession of the landlord by his immediate tenant, the person who pays rent to him, the possession of the person who has the property on the land by the usufructuary, 18 W. R. 11 = 9 B. L. R. 229; immediate receipt of rent is actual possession, 18 C. 513. The mere fact that tenants might have attorned to a stranger, unknown to their landlord, to pay rent to him, has been held not to terminate their previous tenancy so as to affect the possession of their landlord and to deprive him of his right to have recourse to this section in case of a likelihood of a breach of the peace and have his possession of the right to collect rents maintained, 15 C. 527; 27 C. 259 and 892; 19 P. R. 1834. But possession through an intermediat holder is not actual possession.—The constructive possession through intermediate holders (tuccadars) to whom the rents were paid is not such possession as is contemplated by this section, 3 C. 320.

72. How the party came into actual possession is not the matter for inquiry.—A Magistrate has no concern, provided the possession dates more than two months prior to the date of preliminary order, as to how the party in actual possession, obtained possession but has only to pass an order retaining him in possession, 11 C. 385; 6 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 30; 12 C. 521. Under this section the point for inquiry is, not whether any of the claimants has taken possession of the subject of dispute by force, but whether the struggle for it has ceased leaving it in the hands of one of them. If the struggle has ceased, the party in whose hands it remains is in actual possession which the Magistrate is bound to recognize according to the section and authorities. If the struggle is still going on, or if neither party can show its complete control over the subject at the date of the order, neither party is to be regarded as in possession, and the Magistrate is to take action under s. 146.—Per CHATTARJI, J., 6 P. R. 1897; 22 C. 297; 27 Bom. C. R. 1253

In 3 Pat. 869 where the petitioners were wrongfully but peaceably dispossessed and applied to the Magistrate to take proceedings under s. 145 the High Court, in revision rejected the petition and held that even if the petitioners were wrongfully dispossessed, they were not forcibly dispossessed and therefore sub-sec (4) of 145 did not apply

73. Magistrate not concerned with rightful possession.—A Magistrate has no authority to restore to possession a person alleged to have been illegally dispossessed, W. R. 1864, Cr. 5. His duty is to determine actual possession and not rightful possession, 7 Bom. L. R. 18.

74. Magistrate not competent to deal with right to possession.—The Magistrate exceed his jurisdiction when he looks into the right to possession on the merits of the respective titles of the contending parties, 6 C. L. J. 182 = 6 Cr. L. J. 192; 25 B. 179; 35 O. 793; but see 12 O. C. 400 = 11 Cr. L. J. 69 where 31 M. 416 and 6 C. L. J. 182 are dissented from. See Note 17

75. Possession of master and servant, principal and agent.—The possession of an agent or servant is not a fit subject for a proceeding under this section as against his principal, 10 C. W. N. 1033 = 4 Cr. L. J. 215; 38 C. 888. See Note 59 see also 2 L. W. 107 = 16 Cr. L. J. 52

76. Possession given by Amin in butwara proceedings.—The possession given by an Amin in a butwara proceeding is simply one of ownership and not of occupancy. Such possession cannot, therefore, in proceedings under this section, be held to oust tenants occupying lands previous to such delivery of possession, 4 C. 378; 3 C. L. R. 94.

(B)—EVIDENCE AS TO POSSESSION

77. Admission of parties.—See Note 114

78. Documentary evidence.—Documentary evidence would at the best be a most unsafe guide. Oral evidence always has been and must be the principal matter, on which Magistrates must proceed, 23 W. R. 79.

(i) Record of rights—Whatever presumption may be raised by a recently published record of rights it does not of itself establish the factum of possession, 19 C. W. N. 123 = 16 Cr. L. J. 315 and the High Court cannot interfere in revision merely because the Magistrate fails to give effect to the order.

(ii) Census records not evidence—Census records are inadmissible as evidence of possession. See s. 12 of Act X of 1900

(iii) Succession certificate—A certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to collect debts due to the estate of a deceased person, will not authorize a Magistrate in awarding possession, 18 W. R. 34; nor is such a certificate sufficient proof of possession, 23 W. R. 16.

79. How far evidence of title may be used in evidence to prove possession.—(i) Magistrate may consider evidence of title only as a guide upon question of possession—“If a Magistrate uses evidence of title merely in order to guide and assist his mind in coming to a decision upon the question of possession, he would not be transgressing the provisions of this section by using the evidence of title for this limited purpose, but if instead of proceeding to decide as to the actual possession, he virtually puts aside the consideration of this question and determines the question of title alone, he is clearly doing that which the law has forbidden him to do” Per FIELD, J., 7 C. 46 at p. 50 = 8 C. L. R. 243. Approved by PETHERAM, C.J., in 14 C. 169; see also 14 C. 361; 35 C. 795; 6 C. L. J. 162 = 6 Cr. L. J. 192; 34 M. 133; 18 Cr. L. J. 470 (O.), 6 W. R. 61; 3 C. L. R. 84; 13 C. 175; 25 B. 179.

(ii) But proof of title is not proof of possession—The Magistrate may, if necessary, take and consider evidence of title to enable him to decide the question of actual possession, but proof of title is not proof of actual possession, 34 M. 138. Where evidence of possession is available, a Magistrate acts clearly without jurisdiction in deciding the claim of the parties on documentary evidence long anterior to the date of the proceedings, as they are not sufficient proof of the continuance of possession up to the date of the proceedings and the case on record is left absolutely unproved, 18 C. W. N. 700 = 19 C. L. J. 356 = 15 Cr. L. J. 202. In this case the Magistrate declared possession is evidenced by documents relating to a period ten years prior to the proceeding without taking further evidence as to fact of present possession, his order was set aside as made without jurisdiction being contrary to clause (4). No sufficient evidence of possession was produced before the Magistrate, but evidence as to the title of the person in whose favour the Magistrate found was given, and the Magistrate based his decision upon the latter evidence, and determined the case with reference to the merits of the claims of the parties to the right of possession, held, that although the Magistrate would have been justified in looking to the evidence of title in corroboration of the evidence of possession, he was wrong in basing his decision on the evidence of title, 7 C. 46 = 8 C. L. R. 243.

(C)—JOINT POSSESSION.

80. Where possession is found to be joint, Magistrate has no jurisdiction.—“Neither s. 145 nor s. 146 applies to cases of joint possession. The object aimed at by the Legislature is the prevention of the breach of the peace. This can be secured by asking one of the parties to keep away from the property. But where both parties have been in joint possession and are still prepared to commit a breach of the peace by trying to oust one another, it will not be in the interest of the preventive remedy that both should be maintained in possession. It may establish their rights to remain in status quo. It will certainly not help the Magistrate to maintain order and peace. That I take it is the reason of the rule why Courts have declined to declare the joint possession of the contending parties.” Per SESHAGIRI AYYAR, J., in 27 M. L. J. 169 = 15 Cr. L. J. 572. Where the contending parties are admitted in joint possession of disputed lands, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to determine, whether one of them would make use of the land in such a manner as to cause annoyance to the other, 2 C. L. R. 82. This section contemplates a dispute between two parties, each of which asserts a right to hold actual possession of a property as against the other and not a dispute between a party claiming to hold joint possession and another contesting such rights. Such a dispute nearly always arises out of a claim to hold a specific share in the property, and this obviously is a matter which no Criminal Court can properly deal with. Therefore where two parties are in joint possession of the property in dispute, and one of them tries to evict the other so as to endanger the public peace, this section does not apply, and the order allowing one of the parties to be in possession till evicted by law is bad, 4 C. W. N. 426; 7 C. W. N. 118. No order can be made under this section where the dispute is about an undivided share in land or the rent issuing from an undivided share because the subject matter in dispute is uncertain and the boundaries of the land are undefined, 4 C. W. N. 426; 7 C. W. N. 181; a dispute between co-owners as to separate and permissive possession of joint property is not within the scope of this section, 12 C. W. N. 199. S 145 is not intended to regulate the mode of management and when the parties are jointly entitled, an order under s 145 should not be made, 23 C. 80. S 145 clearly refers to exclusive possession and is not capable of being construed to authorize a Magistrate to take cognizance and dispose of disputes regarding joint possession, 23 P. R. 1902 = 135 P. L. R. 902. Where it has been declared that the property is joint and partition has been declared that the property is joint and partition has been ordered, no proceeding under s 145 ought to be held until partition has been effected, 8 C. W. 435. Where the parties are jointly entitled to collect rents and are in joint possession, s 145 is excluded, 10 C. W. N. 1038 = 4 Cr. L. J. 215. Proceedings under this section cannot be instituted with respect to a dispute between parties having joint rights to the land in dispute, each claiming exclusive possession thereof, 11 C. W. N. 512 = 5 Cr. L. J. 296, 40 C. 982; 32 C. 249, 11 A. L. J. 696. See also 11 A. L. J. 696, 32 C. 249; 36 C. 936; 5 A. 607; 19 C. W. N. 959; 17 Cr. L. J. 76.

(1) Possession of parties over partnership party—No proceeding can be taken under this section to determine the question which partner is in exclusive possession as Manager, 32 C. 249.

(2) Possession of trustees over debutter property—Debutter property being by nature impartible and indivisible, the possession of co-sherebais must necessarily be always joint and as such beyond the scope of this section. The possession of one or several co-sherebais who for convenience has been entrusted with the sole management of the debutter property is the possession of an agent or servant as against the other co-sherebais and is not a fit subject of a proceeding under this section when the other co-sherebais claim joint possession, 10 C. W. N. 188 = 4 Cr. L. J. 215 distinguishing 27 C. 259, so also as to burial ground, 25 W. R. 24. Where the second party admitted that they were in possession of a temple on behalf of the Hukhdars which consisted of members both of the first and second parties and the Magistrate found that the party in possession did not claim exclusive possession, held, the ruling in 4 C. W. N. 426 directly applied and the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to pass any order under s 145, as the possession of the second party was on their own allegations not exclusive possession or superior possession but possession on behalf of all the Hukhdars. In Weir II, 99, the successful party was in inclusive possession and in 31 M. 318 the possession of the manager of a Hindu family, which possession was in quality superior to that of the junior members was protected, 16 Cr. L. J. 82 (M.).

(3) Public property.—If the public are declared under s 145 to be in possession of any piece of land, then both parties to the dispute are included in that term and the possession, therefore, is joint possession and the jurisdiction of the Court under this section is ousted. 17 C. W. N. 205 = 17 C. L. J. 397 = 13 Cr. L. J. 789.

81. Magistrate has jurisdiction over joint property possession—(a) Where by express or tacit arrangement possession is with one party, Magistrate may proceed under s 145—Where it is found that one co-sharer is in actual possession and the other is not, the Magistrate may act under this section. Co-sharers in an estate may, by express or tacit arrangement be each separately in actual possession of specified and demarcated portions and in that case there is nothing to prevent proceeding under this section, 40 C. 982; 27 C. 259.

(b) Where one party has superior right, his possession may be upheld—e.g., manager of joint Hindu family—The manager of a Hindu co-parcenary under the Mitakshara law in which the managing member has a recognized position of superiority with defined rights of management and possession independent of the consent of the other members of the family can be protected under s 145, 31 M. 318; 27 C. 259.

(c) Where there is no dispute as to title, but only as to the locality of the property, this section is applicable—But where there is no dispute as to the title, and the only question is whether the disputed plot lies within the boundaries of an estate exclusively owned by one of the parties or within the boundaries of another estate which was the joint property of both the parties, an order could properly be made under this section 7 C. W. N. 462; see 5 C. W. N. 105, where it was admitted by both the contending parties that they were the joint proprietors of Mouzah G and the question was whether certain alluvial lands belonged to that Mouzah or to another Mouzah to which one of them had exclusive right held that the Magistrate had jurisdiction to proceed under this section and attach under s 146 as the land was not in the joint possession of the parties. The subject matter of the dispute must be clearly determined see also 11 C. W. N 198 = 5 Cr. L. J. 32

(d) Where property though joint possession with one party section applies—Where there is a dispute between two rival sets of tenants claiming under joint owners, the Magistrate has jurisdiction to protect the possession of one set of tenants 3 Bur. L. T. 74 = 11 Cr. L. J. 655. So also where the case is one of exclusive possession claimed by each set of landlords through their respective tenants the Magistrate has jurisdiction to pass an order in favour of one tenant against the other persons setting up their tenancy 38 C. 899. The mere fact that there may be a joint title to the land would not prevent the application of s 145 if the Magistrate has found that the possession was with one party 20 C. W. N 518 where 40 C. 982 was referred to. See also 17 M. L. T. 225 = 16 Cr. L. J. 284, 2 Lah. 372

(D)—POINT OF TIME AT WHICH POSSESSION BECOMES MATERIAL

82 The date of the preliminary order is the critical date for determining possession.—The law on this subject is now made clear. The date of the order under sub-sec. (1) is taken as the critical date for the purpose of determining actual possession. This supercedes the decision in the cases reported in 11 C. 885, 12 C. 539, 21 C. 521, 18 M. 41, 20 W. R. 51, 15 B. 152, 13 A. 362, see 32 C. 1093. The question of possession under this section is to be determined with reference to a specified point of time. Upon this question every previous decree of a Civil Court or order of a Criminal Court is not necessarily conclusive. The evidentiary value to be attached to such document must depend upon the circumstances of each particular case 8 C. 835 = 8 C. L. R. 217, 8 C. W. N 583, 25 C. 625, 8 C. W. N 719, 32 C. 796, and 33 C. 33.

83 Possession prior to date of the preliminary order can only be used as a guide.—A Magistrate should find as to who was in possession on the date of his order not on any date anterior to that although previous possession may be a guide to his finding as to peaceful and actual possession on the date of his order 16 Cr. L. J. 239 (M). In this case the Magistrate found possession was with one party on 4th February but failed to give any finding as to who was in possession on the 20th February. The section requires the Magistrate to ascertain who, at the time of his preliminary order, is in actual possession. This inquiry is to be made without reference to the merits of any party to a right to possess Weir II, 98 and 99 which overrule 6 M. H. C. R. Appx. XIII. He is bound to maintain the party in such possession subject however to the first proviso to sub-sec. (4) even when such possession has been obtained by fraud or trickery Ratanlal 27. It is impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule which may be applicable to all cases, as to the exact point of time to which an inquiry under this section must be directed and the time at which possession must be found in one party or the other must be governed by the facts of each particular case. To hold that the Magistrate is precluded from inquiring into anything before the date when he actually commenced his own proceeding might in some cases lead a person who has been acting in an unwarrantable manner to misuse the process of the law so as to enable him to carry out a high handed and improper scheme which could never have been the intention of the Legislature. 22 C. 297. See extract from Sel. Com. Rep. at p. 239. Section 522 is the only provision which would enable a Magistrate to restore the possession of a dispossessed party and this power can only be exercised in cases in which there has been a conviction of an offence attended by criminal force and dispossession has been effected by means of such criminal force Weir II, 98 and 99. Where in respect of land under water the Magistrate finding that there could not be any act of possession by either party within the two months preceding, based his decision in favour of one party upon the fact of possession in the previous years held the order was bad 20 C. W. N 1014.

84 Scope of proviso to cl (4).—The proviso merely recites a circumstance under which the presumption of possession may be made in favour of one of the disputants. It does not debar the Magistrate from deciding the question of actual possession on other grounds also. In any case a Magistrate does not act without jurisdiction if he decides the question of actual possession on grounds other than the presumption referred to in the proviso see if he takes action under the section even when the petitioner alleges that dispossession has taken place more than two months prior to the institution of proceedings 11 A. L. J. 305 = 14 Cr. L. J. 223.

85 Possession how determined when injunction issued under s. 144.—With a view to prevent a breach of the peace in a dispute concerning the possession of a colliery, a Magistrate issued an injunction under s. 144 forbidding both the parties to exercise any act of possession. His successor afterwards initiated proceedings under this section held that as no evidence could be offered to show the possession of either party by reason of the injunction the Magistrate may ascertain the possession immediately before the order of injunction and regard his intervention under s 144 as an attachment suspending the previous possession. For the former possession continued although the lawful exercise of its right had been forbidden for a time. Also that under such circumstances a Magistrate should at once proceed under this section and when necessary attach the land under sub-sec (4) instead of issuing a prohibitory order under s 144 27 C 785. The operation of s 146 is limited to cases in which on the evidence before him the Magistrate is unable to find possession with either of the parties. Where by virtue of an order under s 144 the possession of a party has been interfered with and subsequently proceedings are taken under this section the power conferred by s 146 cannot be used to the prejudice of the party who had been in possession up to the date of the order under s 144 27 C 785. Under the 1872 Code it was held that it was in possession at the time when proceedings were instituted and not at the time the Magistrate came to his final decision that was material 23 W R 81 and 24 W R 78.

86 Subsequent proceeding cannot be treated as continuation of an earlier one.—In determining the point of time at which the factum of possession is material a Magistrate cannot treat a subsequent proceeding as a continuation of an earlier one and cannot refer back to the possession held by one or other of the parties upon the date of the earlier proceeding in deciding which of them should be declared to be in possession on the date of the subsequent proceeding 5 C W N 900 at p 903.

XII—PRELIMINARY ORDER

(A)—ESSENTIAL TO GIVE JURISDICTION

87 Object of the preliminary order.—One object of this is to prevent the Magistrate from rashly interfering with questions of possession which should ordinarily be decided by the Civil Courts 4 C 650 referring to 3 B L R 78. The intention of the law seems to be not only that Magistrates should have sufficient grounds for proceeding under this section but that they should inform the parties concerned of the grounds on which they are proceeding 20 C 529, 24 B 527, 32 C 771.

88 Omission to record an order in writing invalidates all further proceedings.—It is absolutely necessary for a Magistrate to draw up or to have drawn up an order under sub-sec. (1) which in all respects satisfies the requirements of the law. It is not sufficient to have before him the Police report and that he should have given orders thereon that a written order be drawn up within the terms of this section 27 C 981, also Ratanlal 39 and 81. See contra Weir II, 98. Omission to draw up such an order is a question of jurisdiction which renders all the proceedings invalid 1 C L J 432. See also 4 C 650, 30 C 443, 6 C W N 923, 16 Cr L J 628 (Pan), 30 C 165 (F B), 1907 A W N 49, 34 C 840, 32 C 552, 25 A 537, 16 M L T 52 = 1914 M W N 768 = 15 Cr L J 559, 15 Cr L J 424 (A), 169 P L R 1915, 13 Cr L J 296 (A) and Note 25. In 4 W R, 26 it was held that the omission to record proceedings under s 318 of the Code of 1861 is not a mere informality in procedure which if no substantial injustice were done the High Court might overlook. But as one of the parties alleged that he was precluded from adducing evidence by this very omission the proceedings were quashed see 25 W R 74, contra 23 W R 81, 1884 A W N 317, Oagh Cr 173 of 1904 and 2 Wy Cr 1. Though strictly speaking the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to summon the parties without passing the essentially preliminary order see 25 W R 74. But when once they were before him the Magistrate recorded an order complying with cl (1) and the parties quite understood the nature of the proceedings held the further proceedings were not wholly without jurisdiction and the Chief Court refused to interfere 15 P W R 1914 = 68 P L R 1914 = 15 Cr L J 279. See Note 25 1 R 53.

89 Notice under s 107 not substantial compliance with this rule.—Where proceedings were instituted against both parties under s 107 but after their appearance the Magistrate being of opinion that he ought to proceed under this section directed the parties to produce the evidence as to the fact of possession without making any preliminary order under sub-sec (1) held that the making of a formal order under sub-sec (1) is absolutely necessary to the initiation of proceedings under this Chapter and that the omission is a defect affecting the Magistrate's jurisdiction 32 C 552. See also 7 C W N 174. It would appear that 24 W R 16, 6 W R 61 and 8 W R 83 are now obsolete. Where a Magistrate having made an order under s 118 added that a particular person be put in possession held that the latter order was made without jurisdiction, 25 A 537.

90. Notice under s. 147 is not enough.—A Magistrate gave notice under s. 147. Objection was taken that the cases did not fall under s. 147. The Magistrate without deciding that the case fell under s. 145 and without giving notice to the parties of his intention to proceed under s. 145, eventually passed an order purporting to be under s. 145, held that the Magistrate acted without jurisdiction in passing an order under s. 145, without first making an order under the first paragraph of that section, 19 M. L. J. 18 = 5 M. L. T. 403.

91. Notice under s. 144 not enough.—See 16 M. L. T. 52 = 15 Cr. L. J. 859.

92. Order under this section cannot be made as part of proceedings of a trial of an offence.—Orders under this section should not form part of a judgment on a conviction for an offence attended by criminal force, but should form the subject of separate proceedings. Where therefore, an order was made that one of the prosecution witnesses be put in possession of certain land until ousted by a Court of competent jurisdiction and there was no evidence that the witness was dispossessed by the criminal force proved in the case, the order was set aside. Weir II, 400 and 674.

(B)—CONTENTS OF THE PRELIMINARY ORDER

93. The order need not be self-contained—Reference to Police report.—Where an initiatory order under sub-sec. (1) was drawn up in these terms:—Whereas it appears from the Police report, dated 2nd January, 1905, that there exists a dispute which is likely to cause a breach of the peace between the abovenamed parties for the possession of 2 bighas 18 coahs in three plots of land, it is ordered that the said parties do attend, etc., and the Police report set out sufficient grounds for the apprehension of a likelihood of a breach of the peace, held by the Full Bench, that the order was not defective, because it was not self-contained and did not state in express terms the grounds upon which the Magistrate was satisfied that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace existed, when such grounds appeared in the Police report on which the order was founded and to which it made reference in express terms, 33 C. 332 (F.B.) following 13 C. 175 and 20 C. 513. But it is the duty of the Magistrate to record distinctly that which the law requires to be recorded and he performs his duty in a perfunctory and unsatisfactory manner if without stating the grounds he merely refers to a Police report 7 C. 46 distinguishing 6 C. 835. It is not sufficient to have before him a Police report and that he should have given orders thereon that a written order be drawn up within the terms of this section, 27 C. 981. See also 7 C. 46 = 8 C. L. R. 245; 16 M. L. J. 148 = 3 Cr. L. J. 487; 23 M. L. J. 499 = 13 Cr. L. J. 753, and cf 30 M. 548. But see 4 M. L. T. 213; 9 C. W. N. 263 is now overruled.

94. Order must state that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists.—A Magistrate should specify the nature of the information received by him, and state the principal facts which by the exercise of a judicial discretion he derives therefrom, and which in his judgment constitute grounds for believing that a dispute concerning a certain land exists which is likely to induce a breach of the peace, if he does not take measures to prevent it. Unless he is in a position in this way to present clear and rational grounds, capable of being estimated according to their merits on the mere statements of them he has no legal foundation on which to base his investigation inter partes relative to possession. When a Magistrate does not state in his order that a dispute exists which is likely to cause a breach of the peace he has no jurisdiction to take any action under this section, 11 A. L. J. 696, (1907) A. W. N. 49, 28 C. 416; 8 C. P. Cr. 21; 2 Bom. L. R. 86, Weir II, 417. The proceeding recorded by a Deputy Magistrate did not set forth in express language that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace existed in respect of the land in question between A on the one side and B and C on the other, nor did it set forth the grounds upon which he was so satisfied that such dispute existed, held that the proceedings were defective and that although the report of the Police might be taken to be incorporated by reference, yet that was not sufficient to justify the order as it did not show that a breach of the peace was imminent. Unless the parties are able to show that there is such a dispute as is likely to induce a breach of the peace, the Magistrate should hold his hand and not proceed further, 6 C. 835 = 8 C. L. R. 217; 4 C. 650 = 3 C. L. R. 551, 4 C. W. N. 57, 5 C. W. N. 900. Where owing to a dispute amongst several classes of temple the Magistrate that while prohibiting all other classes of temple servants, except the one to which the complainant belonged, from interfering in the said service, held that the order must be construed as having been passed under this section as it did not fall under s. 144, and the order if under this section must be set aside as it (i) did not specify the grounds on which the Magistrate was satisfied that there was a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace, (ii) did not specify the parties against whom the order was made, (iii) as no notice was issued to all the parties concerned, and (iv) as the order interfered with a decree passed by the High Court, 24 B. 577. See also 20 C. 520; 5 W. R. 50; 5 W. R. 14 = 1 Wym. Cr. R. Rul. 17; 27 C. 981; 28 C. 416 and 6 C. W. N. 923; 9 P. W. R. 1915 = 92 P. L. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 206; but see 18 A. L. J. 1140 (contra).

95. Local inquiry conducted by the Magistrate himself does not absolve the Magistrate of his duty to state the grounds—The grounds on which the Magistrate is satisfied there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace, must be stated, even though the Magistrate acts upon a local inquiry held by himself, 9 C. W. N. 621. The object of drawing up a proceeding under sub-sec. (1) is to inform the parties of the grounds or source of information which satisfied the Magistrate that a dispute existed, but where the Magistrate bases his order, on a previous local inquiry held by himself and there is no record of the inquiry, there is nothing to which reference can be made to find out the materials upon which the Magistrate acted, 32 C. 771. It was held in 7 C. W. N. 599, that where a Magistrate held the local inquiry in the presence of all the parties and satisfied himself by that inquiry that there was a likelihood of a breach of the peace and on that finding directed further proceedings under this section it cannot be said that the proceedings were invalid merely because he failed to state the source of information in his order as the source was the inquiry itself, 6 C. W. N. 923 and 27 C. 981 were here referred to and distinguished.

96. Knowledge of the parties may cure defect.—Where there is a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace and the parties are aware of it the Magistrate is not ousted of his jurisdiction under s. 145 merely because it is not stated in the notice that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists, 16 Cr. L. J. 224 (A). Where the parties are fully aware of the matter in dispute, the High Court declined to interfere merely because the initial order did not set forth the grounds of the Magistrate being satisfied of the existence of a dispute being likely, 32 A. 132.

97. Mere non-statement of the grounds where there has been substantial compliance with the section will not vitiate the proceeding—The High Court declined to interfere with the order of a Magistrate, on the ground that though the preliminary order did not set forth as explicitly as it might have set forth, the reasons which satisfied the Magistrate that there was a likelihood of a breach of the peace, there was otherwise a substantial compliance with the requirements of this section, 1905 A. W. N. 260 = 3 Cr. L. J. 43; 1907 A. W. N. 50 = 4 A. L. J. 91 = 5 Cr. L. J. 117; 17 M. L. J. 449; 16 M. L. J. 143 = 3 Cr. L. J. 437; 7 C. W. N. 599. Once the Magistrate is satisfied that a dispute exists likely to cause a breach of the peace, he has jurisdiction and his subsequent action must be considered in relation to procedure and not to jurisdiction. The irregularity, if any would be cured by s. 537, 36 M. 275, see also 30 M. 548; 32 A. 152; the referring judgment in 33 C. 332 (F.B.) and 12 O. & 400 = 11 Cr. L. J. 69; 6 L. W. 165 = 38, in 5 Ca. 833.

98. Subject-matter of dispute should be specified.—An order made under sub-sec. (1) which gives no information as to the subject matter of the dispute and which leaves the persons to whom notice is ordered to be issued quite in the dark as to the property in regard to which they have to set forth their respective claims is in order made without jurisdiction and therefore liable to be set aside in revision, 27 A. 295; 27 C. 991 and 30 C. 443 followed. See also 11 C. W. N. 198 = 5 Cr. L. J. 32. Though it is the rule that the lands in dispute must be thoroughly well ascertained by the specification of boundaries, yet where the parties were not at issue on this matter and neither the Court nor anybody concerned in the dispute was under any misapprehension as to what the disputed lands were and the only point was which party held a Civil Court decree, held, that the non-specification of boundaries of the disputed land did not vitiate the proceedings of the Magistrate, 5 C. W. N. 563.

99. The order should specify the place of inquiry.—Where one of the parties was unable to produce his witnesses owing to his not being informed of the place of trial, the Magistrate being on tour, and the Magistrate, in the absence of this party, made an order in favour of the other party held that the order must be set aside as the party had no notice of the place of trial in sufficient time to procure the attendance of his witnesses, 7 C. W. N. 705.

(C)—SERVICE OF THE PRELIMINARY ORDER AND ITS PUBLICATION

100. Effect of notice not being served on some of the parties.—Where proceedings under this section were taken in the absence of some of the parties concerned, who had no notice of the same, then the proceedings were in law void so far as they were concerned and the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to pass any order, so far as it affected those persons.—Cal H C Cr Rev No 1208 of 1905, see also 35 C. 774; 30 C. 155 (F.B.), 7 P. R. 1931 = 21 P. W. R. 1931 = 8 Cr. L. J. 113; 14 C. W. N. 98; 19 C. W. N. 939. Where on the day fixed for the inquiry under sub-sec. (4) the first party presented a petition stating he had no notice of the date fixed for trial, and that a copy of the order under sub-sec. (1) had not been served on him but the Magistrate without making any investigation whatsoever as to the truth of the allegation proceeded to determine the question of possession and made an order in favour of the second party; held, that the Magistrate was bound to satisfy himself that the notice of the proceeding and a copy of the preliminary order were duly served upon the first party and that his failure to do so vitiated all subsequent proceedings, 8 C. W. N. 76. When objection is taken that the preliminary order has not been served, the Magistrate ought not to be satisfied by the mere written return on the process-server, but should examine the serving peon and allow him to be cross-examined on the point, 8 C. W. N. 719. But if no party has been prejudiced, want of service does not affect the validity of the proceeding 33 C. 68 (F.B.), 30 A. 41; 30 M. 548.

And in 3 B. 169 it is held that the failure to serve the copy of the preliminary order, under s 145 (1) on the respondent and the failure to post the order on the land are irregularities cured by s 537, but Magistrates should nevertheless see that these irregularities do not occur.

101. Service of notice must be on known persons.—Although no particular mode of giving notice calling upon parties under this section to appear before the Magistrate has been provided, yet the language of the section indicates that the notice shall be addressed to known individuals, and not be in the form of a public proclamation or citation, 4 C. 650.

102. Service must be effective.—The mere service of a notice upon a mofussil Namb who takes no steps whatever to consult his employer or act under his directions is not such a notice as is contemplated in this section 17 W. R. 9.

103. Issue of warrant to enforce attendance of absent party is illegal.—In a case under this section, on the date fixed for the filing of written statement, the party in whose favour the order was passed was absent. The Magistrate thereupon issued a warrant for his attendance. held that the matter in issue not being the commission of an offence, but the settlement of a dispute between the contending parties as to the possession of land, it was entirely optional with the parties or anyone of them to attend or not. Therefore the issue of a warrant was illegal, 5 C. W. N. 71. If the party is absent the Magistrate may proceed ex parte, 8 C. W. N. 692; see also 14 C. W. N. 28.

104. Is publication essential or not?—The provision as to publication of the order mentioned in sub-sec. (1) is directory and is a matter of procedure only and omission to comply with it does not destroy the jurisdiction of the Court which arises as soon as the provision of sub-sec. (1) have been complied with. The object of publishing a notice on the subject of dispute is to reach all persons interested therein and unless it be shown that someone interested has been materially prejudiced by the omission to serve the notice the High Court will not interfere. The omission to publish a notice under sub-sec. (3) at some conspicuous place is not an illegality which deprives the Magistrate of his jurisdiction (8 C. W. N. 590 and 9 C. W. N. 909 overruled), 33 C. 63 (F.B.), 30 A. 41; 30 M. 548; 12 O. C. 400 = 11 Cr. L. J. 69; 15 P. W. R. 1914 = 63 P. L. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 279, but if the irregularity has seriously prejudiced any of the parties, the High Court will interfere 35 C. 774, 7 P. R. 1907 = 6 Cr. L. J. 113; 22 P. R. 1916 (Cr.).

(D)—CANCELLATION OF THE PRELIMINARY ORDER

105. Jurisdiction to cancel.—If a Magistrate is satisfied before inquiry commences under sub-sec. (4), no matter where his information comes from, that there is no likelihood of a breach of the peace he may stay or cancel all proceedings, 23 C. 416 and 448; 6 C. W. N. 417; and take no further proceedings. It is not necessary that the information must be confined to what the parties give under sub-sec. (5), 30 C. 112. See also 17 Cr. L. J. 138. But an order saying that, as the Court sees that one party is in possession, it is not necessary to continue the proceedings, is not an order declaring the possession of that party, 4 C. W. N. 417. But when proceedings under this section are cancelled on the ground that there is no likelihood of a breach of the peace the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to allow one of the parties to reap the crops to the exclusion of the other, 3 C. L. J. 573 = 3 Cr. L. J. 468; 46 M. L. J. 565 = 47 M. 713; 49 M. 232.

106. Cancellation must be in accordance with law.—But proceedings under this section should terminate in one or other of the ways contemplated by law. It is improper for the Magistrate to stop the proceedings by recording an order "Parties absent—case filed," 6 C. W. N. 923. In 43 M. L. J., p. 716, a Magistrate initiated proceedings under section 145, cl. (1), attached property but subsequently omitted to proceed with the inquiry, on the ground that an order under section 144 had been passed against one of the parties by another Magistrate and the order had been confirmed by himself. He also directed delivery of the attached properties to one of the parties. Held—that the order of the Magistrate was justified neither by section 145 nor by section 146 and that the High Court could set aside the order in revision.

107. Jurisdiction to cancel order made by predecessor in office.—A Magistrate has jurisdiction to cancel the preliminary order under sub-sec. (1) made by his predecessor and to order the restoration of property attached and placed in the hands of a receiver, Weir II, 108.

108. Power of Magistrate to quash proceeding upon transfer.—Where a proceeding under this section drawn up by a Deputy Magistrate was transferred by the District Magistrate to his own file and then summarily quashed, held that the District Magistrate could only quash the proceeding in accordance with the provisions of sub-sec. (5) on facts being brought to his notice which were sufficient to satisfy him that no dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace existed. Semble—If the District Magistrate after transferring to his own file a proceeding under s. 145, drawn up by a Subordinate Magistrate, quashed the proceeding on a full consideration of the facts and after hearing the objections, if any, of the parties the High Court would not interfere with the order quashing the proceeding. 13 C. W. N. 125.

XIII.—INQUIRY.

(A)—PROCEDURE

109 Procedure to be followed.—In 11 C. 752 it was broadly laid down that a proceeding under s. 145 should be regarded on all points of procedure as in summons-cases and this ruling was followed in 21 C. 29. In 30 C. 808, it was, however, laid down after referring to these cases that it cannot be stated as a rule of law that proceedings under Chapter XII should be regarded, as to procedure, as summons-cases and that the previous cases did not intend to do more than lay down a rule of convenience in a case where special provision was not made by the law. In 32 C. 1093 after referring to the provisions of the Code and the previous decisions stated, it was observed as follows:—“When, however, we turn to s. 145, which finds a place in the Chapter on disputes as to immovable property we find that the Code does not specify that the procedure to be followed is either that prescribed for summons-cases or warrant-cases. On the other hand, cl. (4) provides that the Magistrate shall receive the evidence produced by the disputing parties, consider the effect of such evidence, and take such further evidence, if any, as he thinks necessary. The conclusion seems to us to be irresistible that, although the Legislature, in cases for the taking of securities for keeping the peace and for good behaviour as also in cases of public nuisances has expressly provided that in some specified instances the procedure prescribed for summons-cases and in others the procedure prescribed for warrant-cases shall be followed, and has thus entitled the parties to claim the assistance of the Court, within the limits defined in other parts of the Code in summoning witnesses and in producing evidence yet the Legislature has deliberately omitted to extend the procedure prescribed for summons-cases, or warrant cases to proceedings under s. 145. S. 145 was intended to provide a speedy remedy for the prevention of breaches of the peace arising out of disputes relating to immovable property. The Legislature could hardly have contemplated an elaborate and protracted investigation, the result of which might in many instances, be to defeat the very object in view namely, an effective prevention of a breach of the peace.” The Magistrate may adopt a procedure which will best carry out the object of the Legislature. Cf. the remarks of SADASHI AYYAR, J. in 27 M. L. J. 613 = 15 Cr. L. J. 676.

110. If party absent or fails to file written statement, Magistrate may proceed ex-parte.—(a) If one party fails to put in his appearance, the Magistrate may proceed ex-parte, 6 C. W. N. 923; but he must take evidence, 8 C. W. N. 719; see also 5 C. W. N. 71. (b) Where the parties fail to put in written statements Magistrate may issue an order under s. 146, 14 C. W. N. 80, but not if parties had not sufficient time, 12 C. W. N. 896 = 8 Cr. L. J. 202. A Magistrate has discretion to refuse further time to file the written statement, 8 C. W. N. 642, 14 Cr. L. J. 302 (C).

111. Duty of Magistrate to complete inquiry on the date fixed.—What sub-sec. (4) contemplates is that on the date originally fixed, the Magistrate should take all the evidence that is produced before him and unless he considers it necessary for good reason to require further evidence, should decide then and there if he can, which of the parties is in actual possession. G. L. No. 3 of 1909 at page 10 of Vol. I of the Calcutta General Rules referred to 17 C. W. N. 144 = 17 C. L. J. 610 = 14 Cr. L. J. 40. If the Magistrate should grant adjournment he is not bound to exhaust the processes of the Court in order to enforce the attendance of witnesses that do not appear.

(D)—BOUND TO RECEIVE EVIDENCE

112. Magistrate 'shall' receive evidence.—The Magistrate must examine the parties and take evidence. 17 Bom. L. R. 332 = 3 Bom. Cr. Ca. 43 = 16 Cr. L. J. 434. Though a Magistrate is justified in passing an order under this section in favour of a party who was present at the hearing and against a party not present, he is not entitled to make an order declaring a party to be in possession, without taking evidence, 8 C. W. N. 923; 12 C. W. N. 771 = 3 Cr. L. J. 27; 11 A. L. J. 585 = 14 Cr. L. J. 277. It is not sufficient that there is a mere scintilla of evidence as to the existence of a dispute but there must be some evidence from which the Magistrate may reasonably draw the necessary conclusion of fact 4 M. H. C. R. Appx. XLIX; 7 B. L. R. 322 and 329. A Magistrate cannot pass an order declaring one party to be in possession upon the mere fact that the Police report showed that the other party had admitted possession in the first party, without himself instituting proceedings, 6 M. L. T. 91 = 10 Cr. L. J. 6. A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to make an order under this section based solely on the written statement of one of the parties, without any evidence whatever, though the other party is ex-parte, 8 C. W. N. 642; 12 C. W. N. 771; 14 C. W. N. 212; or one made on local enquiry discarding evidence 10 C. W. N. 181; or on the petition of an officer in the employ of one of the parties 29 M. 561.

113. Failure to receive evidence vitiates proceeding.—The Magistrate is bound to receive and record all the evidence the parties want to produce, 11 A. L. J. 585 = 14 Cr. L. J. 277. The Court must examine the witnesses tendered, 9 W. R. 64; 6 M. H. C. R. Appx. IV. It is not open to the Magistrate to refuse to receive the evidence tendered to him. Since the section enables a party to show that no dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists, such a refusal on the Magistrate's part is ultra vires, and his proceedings therefore are liable to be set aside by the High Court in revision, 29 M. 561; 33 C. 840; 23 P. R. 1902. In 11 C. 762 it was stated that the Magistrate was bound to examine all witnesses produced in Court, no matter what their number was. As to the power to recall and re-examine witnesses in proceedings under the section, see, 540 and 18 W. R. 64. Persons who, though not actually involved in the dispute, are made parties to proceedings because they claim to be in possession of the lands which are the subject matter of such proceedings, should not be shut out from giving evidence in support of their claims. To do so would undoubtedly occasion very serious prejudice and interference with any possession which they might be able to establish, 20 C. 520. Where in a proceeding under this section the Magistrate refused to examine certain witnesses who were present, on behalf of one of the parties, giving as his reason that sufficient evidence had already been recorded, held following 30 C. 508 (foot note) that the Magistrate had acted in contravention of the express terms of sub-sec. (4) and the High Court had power to interfere in revision, 31 C. 635. But in 3 C. L. J. 478 = 3 Cr. L. J. 423, it was said that it was not intended in 31 C. 635 to lay down the broad rule that a Magistrate had no discretion but was bound under all circumstances to examine every witness and that if he omitted to do so, he acted without jurisdiction. In 16 C. 513 the High Court refused to interfere when the Magistrate declined to hear more than a limited number of witnesses. See also 32 C. 1093. Where a Magistrate examined ten of the witnesses produced on behalf of one of the parties but refused to examine any of the witnesses mentioned in a supplemental list, on the ground that the evidence sought to be adduced was worthless, it was held that the Magistrate could not be said to have acted without jurisdiction 24 A. 315. The High Court would have interfered if there was an absolute refusal to hear the witnesses on one side. See also 28 M. L. J. 134 = 16 Cr. L. J. 156, where the High Court refused to interfere, with the remark that Magistrates should always be chary of taking upon themselves the duty of deciding on behalf of the parties which witnesses should be examined. An order made without giving an opportunity to the parties to adduce evidence is bad 4 P. R. 1916 = 17 Cr. L. J. 129 = 32 In Ca. 305. If a Magistrate fails to take evidence or refuses to examine except on the ground of vexation or delay, the witnesses tendered by the parties the order is bad 17 Cr. L. J. 217 = 34 In Ca. 329 (M) 2 L. W. 1203, 38 M. L. J. 73; 5 Pat. L. J. 246.

114. Decision may be based on mere admission.—Although it is necessary ordinarily to record evidence before passing final orders, it cannot be said that it is indispensable to do so when the case is completely given up by the opposite party. An admission made by a Mukhtar that his client had no actual possession is sufficient in a quasi-civil proceedings of this nature. The fact that the Magistrate passed his final order, without recording this admission would not invalidate the order, 7 C. W. N. 331. If one of the parties admits that the other is in possession the Judge is not bound to take any evidence, 9 M. L. T. 91 = 10 Cr. L. J. 47. See (1916) M. W. N. 795 = 15 Cr. L. J. 669. But the mere fact that the Police report showed that one party had admitted possession in the other is not enough, 8 W. L. T. 91 = 10 Cr. L. J. 6.

114-A. Neglect to file written statements not sufficient cause to stop proceedings.—Where a Magistrate has taken any evidence in a case he is not justified in refusing to proceed with it because the parties neglected to file written statements on the day fixed for filing the statements. The Magistrate was wrong in saying that he had nothing before him on which to decide, 11 W. R. 9. When any party applies for time to file his written statement, it is within the discretion of the Magistrate to grant it or not, 8 C. W. N. 642; 12 C. W. N. 896 = 8 Cr. L. J. 202; 14 Cr. L. J. 302 (C).

115. Decision not based on legal evidence bad.—(a) Written statements—The statement made by a party in a written statement requires to be proved as any other statement and therefore in a case under this section, a Magistrate is not competent to pass any order in favour of a party merely on the strength of the written statement filed by him under subsec (1) of the section, 5 C. W. N. 71; 30 C. 112. The Magistrate must examine the parties and take evidence, 17 Bom. L. R. 332 = 3 Bom. Cr. Ca. 45 = 16 Cr. L. J. 434. See also 18 W. R. 11, 33 C. 818; 7 C. W. N. 510; 14 C. W. N. 216; 13 Cr. L. J. 296 (A). 6 P. L. R. 1913 = 2 P. W. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 133. (b) Mere local inquiry and hearsay testimony—Mere local inquiry and statements of parties not on oath are not sufficient data on which a Magistrate can decide what party is in possession of land with regard to which a breach of the peace is apprehended, 16 W. R. 13. Where in a proceeding under this section the Magistrate discarded the evidence on record as unreliable, and decided the case upon what he saw, heard and inferred at a local investigation held by himself, it was held that the Magistrate erred materially in his jurisdiction and the final order was set aside, 10 C. W. N. 181 = 3 Cr. L. J. 193. A Magistrate must decide the question of possession on evidence taken by himself and not according to the result of a local enquiry ordered with the consent of the parties unless they consent to be bound thereby, 3 C. L. R. 134; see also 4 C. W. N. 779, where it was held that a Magistrate cannot summarily deal with the matter after mere inspection of the locality. See also 23 C. W. N. 750. (c) On evidence not adduced by either party—An order for possession under this section made on the evidence of a person who was not a witness of any of the parties such as the Court is bound to examine under subsec (4), is bad, 8 C. W. N. 719. See also 4 P. R. 1916 = 17 Cr. L. J. 129. (d) Evidence recorded by the deputed Magistrate, 48 C. 1056; 37 M. L. J. 589, 31 M. 82, was not followed.

(C).—DUTY OF MAGISTRATE TO ASSIST PARTIES TO ADDUCE EVIDENCE

116 Is it obligatory on the Magistrate to enforce the attendance of witnesses, at the instance of the parties?—(a) Must usually issue summons—When anyone of the parties applies at a proper time for process to secure the attendance of his witnesses, the Magistrate should not arbitrarily refuse his assistance, 11 C. 763, 21 C. 29. A Magistrate who refuses to assist one of the parties to a proceeding under this section in procuring the attendance of his witnesses, thereby deprives that party of a hearing on the only question for the determination of the Court. Such a refusal amounts to a denial of justice and the Magistrate in refusing process acts without jurisdiction, 30 C. 503. Even where the application of the process is somewhat late, the proper order for the Magistrate is not to refuse process on the ground that there was not sufficient time but to allow the petitioner's application on the distinct understanding that the witnesses must be served within sufficient time to enable them to appear, 30 C. 503 (footnote). Where one of the parties to the proceedings under this section applied for summons against a Sub-Inspector and the Magistrate ordered the Sub-Inspector to come with his diaries, but on the date of hearing the Sub-Inspector did not appear and the Magistrate rejected the application of the petitioner asking for summons on the ground that it was vexatious and passed the final order held that the order was without jurisdiction, as the petitioner was not given an opportunity of examining the Sub-Inspector 18 C. W. N. 94 = 15 Cr. L. J. 79. See also 18 W. R. 64.

(b) Is entirely left to the discretion of the Magistrate to issue summons or not—After a review of the previous cases it was laid down in 32 C. 1093 as follows:—“It appears to us to be clear from the provisions of the Code that it is not obligatory upon the Magistrate to assist the parties to a proceeding under s. 145 to produce their witnesses, and they cannot claim as a matter of right that process should be issued by the Court to enable them to bring forward their evidence. In this case one of the parties who had obtained summonses on his witnesses applied on failure of some of them to appear, for fresh summonses against them which the Magistrate refused, and it was held that the Magistrate acted within his powers and in the absence of any prejudice the High Court refused to interfere. Section 145 neither contemplates the summoning of witnesses at the instance of the parties nor renders it obligatory on the Magistrate to compel attendance of any witnesses unless in his discretion he thought it necessary to take the evidence of those witnesses, 33 C. 24 where 32 C. 1093 is followed. A Magistrate is not bound to exhaust the processes of the Court in order to enforce the attendance of witnesses that do not appear. In this case it was held that having regard to the conduct of the party concerned and also to the fact that the witnesses mentioned could not be found the Magistrate acted rightly in refusing to issue process, 17 C. W. N. 144 = 17 C. L. J. 610 = 16 Cr. L. J. 40. It is certainly discretionary to the Magistrate to allow witnesses to be re-summoned on a petition presented towards the end of the enquiry, 17 M. L. T. 225 = 16 Cr. L. J. 284.”

(D)—DEPUTING A MAGISTRATE TO MAKE ENQUIRY

[See sec 148 (1) and Notes 1-6 thereto]

117. How far a Subordinate Magistrate may be deputed to conduct the investigation.—Though s 148 enables a Magistrate acting under this section, to depute a Subordinate Magistrate, to make a local investigation, he ought not to depute to such Subordinate Magistrate, the whole investigation under this section, but, on receipt of the report of such Magistrate should himself take written statements from the parties and receive the evidence produced by them and conclude the investigation under this section. Weir II, 118. A Magistrate cannot refer under s 148 the only issues raised to the Subordinate Magistrate, 10 A. L. J. 463 = 13 Cr. L. J. 777.

118. Decision based entirely on report of deputed Magistrate, if good—Where on the day fixed for an enquiry under this section both parties failed to file their written statements, the Sub-divisional Magistrate deeming a local enquiry necessary for the decision directed a Deputy Magistrate, under s 148, to make the enquiry. On receipt of the report, the Sub-divisional Magistrate passed an order declaring the first party to be entitled to possession. The second party moved the High Court to quash the proceedings on the ground that the Sub-divisional Magistrate had no jurisdiction to make the order in the absence of any evidence on record and also on the ground that he had no jurisdiction to make the order merely on the report of the local investigation, held, that the Magistrate had jurisdiction to decide a case on the report of the Deputy Magistrate made after local inspection. The parties neither asked to be heard nor tendered any evidence which the Magistrate refused. If he had refused he would have been wrong, 17 C. W. N. 131 = 14 Cr. L. J. 302.

119. Magistrate should not base his decision on evidence recorded by the deputed Magistrate.—Where a Magistrate omitted to take evidence as required by sub-sec (4), but based his decision on evidence recorded by a Subordinate Magistrate at the local inquiry, it was held his order was one made without jurisdiction and the order was set aside, 31 M. 82 followed by MILLER, J., in Cr. R. No 3 of 1908 (Madras High Court). See 3 C. L. R. 134; Weir II, 97 and 118; 10 A. L. J. 463 = 13 Cr. L. J. 777. See s 148 (2). But see 37 M. L. J. 589 in which 31 M. 82 is not followed.

(E)—MODE OF RECORDING EVIDENCE

120. Memorandum of evidence not sufficient.—See s 356 When in a proceeding under s 140 the Magistrate only made a memorandum of the evidence purporting to act under sub-sec (3) of s. 356 held setting aside the final order of the Magistrate that the provisions of sub-sec (1) of s. 356 are imperative. Sub-sec (3) applies only to cases in which the evidence recorded under sub-sec (1) is not recorded in the Magistrate's own handwriting, 42 C. 331

121. Magistrate may act on evidence taken before his predecessor.—It was formerly held that where a Magistrate decided the question of possession upon evidence not taken before him but taken before his predecessor, his proceedings were liable to be set aside by the High Court, 23 W. R. 62, 4 M. H. C. R. Appx. XX, Weir II, 97. But now s. 350 would govern such a case as a proceeding under this Chapter is an inquiry within the meaning of s. 4 (4) 22 C. 898 See also 10 C. W. N. 1095 = 4 Cr. L. J. 223 13 C. W. N. 420 = 9 Cr. L. J. 278 and Note 184

(F)—DEATH OF PARTIES

122. Proceedings shall not abate by death.—Even under the old section proceedings under this section did not abate by reason only of the death of any of the parties thereto. But there was no express provision to bring on record the legal representatives of a deceased party. But now under the amendment by Act XVIII of 1923, sub-clause (7) to section 145 specially provides for bringing on the record the legal representatives of a deceased party. So under the new amendment, 21 C. 404 is no longer law.

(G)—REFERENCE TO ARBITRATION

123. Reference to arbitration not proper.—The procedure laid down by this section does not contemplate that the question as to who is in actual possession should be delegated, even by consent of parties to arbitrators. The section directs the Magistrate himself to receive the evidence produced by the parties and on a consideration thereof to come to a decision, 32 C. 532. But where parties themselves applied that the matter might be referred to arbitrators and the Magistrate made an order in terms of the award, the High Court refused to interfere on the ground that the party was not entitled to object to the course pursued at his request 6 C. W. N. 109. See also 15 C. W. N. 271; 25 C. W. N. 719.

But in 3 P. 288, 32 C. 532 was cited with approval and it was held that the scheme of an inquiry under s 145 of the Code being retrospective and not prospective, an award made on a reference to arbitration by the parties, awarding possession of plots in dispute to one of the parties or dividing the plots between the parties cannot be the basis of an order under s 145. Per FOSTER, J., there might conceivably be certain instances in which the parties have agreed that the Court should refer the matter in dispute to arbitration for the purpose of deciding the question as to who is in actual possession at the time of the proceedings.

124. Where matter has been referred, Magistrate should take the finding of the arbitrator into consideration.—In 7 C. W. N. 461, the parties agreed that the question of possession should be decided by an arbitrator and pending the award, the property was attached under s 146. After delivery of the award, the Magistrate refused to raise the attachment, held, that the Magistrate was bound to bring the proceedings under this section to their proper and legal termination by finding which party was in actual possession and for that purpose was bound to take the finding of fact by the arbitrator into consideration. See also 3 Pat. L. J. 248.

(H)—ATTACHMENT—PROVISO TO CLAUSE (4)

125. Duration of attachment under cl. (4).—An order for attachment under the proviso to cl. (4) should only authorize attachment pending the Magistrate's decision under s 145 and not until a decree or order of Civil Court is obtained, 8 S. L. B. 207 = 16 Cr. L. J. 233.

126. Attachment and postponement of proceedings sine die.—A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to pass an order postponing sine die a proceeding under s. 145 at the same time retaining under attachment the property covered by these proceedings, on reasons extraneous to the proceedings, 13 C. W. N. 104 = 8 C. L. J. 264 = 9 Cr. L. J. 35. But see 13 C. W. N. 801.

127. When attachment under s 146 can be made.—See Notes under Heading II to s 146.

(I)—RECEIVER

128. Appointment of receiver under proviso to cl. (4) illegal.—The appointment of a receiver under this section even before the commencement of the inquiry is illegal. The only section authorizing such a step is cl. (2) of s 146 and that section authorizes attachment in certain cases only after the conclusion of the inquiry, 8 M. L. T. 314 = (1910) M. W. N. 821 = 11 Cr. L. J. 536. In 13 Cr. L. J. 295 (M) however, it was held that a Magistrate may appoint a receiver to be in possession of the property but such a person will only be the agent or servant of the Magistrate acting under his order. It is an administrative order passed for the management of the property which he has attached. The right to attach carries with it the right to take the necessary steps for its custody and management.

XIV.—JOINT INQUIRY INTO SEVERAL CASES.

129. Joint hearing of the cases of several claimants.—Where one set of persons asks the Magistrate to be maintained in possession against another set of persons and the latter asserts that they hold the land in different and independent parcels severally, the Magistrate should not pass an order declaring the former set in possession against the latter set but should distinctly specify which is entitled as against which, and to which portion of the land in question. Otherwise it would render it necessary for the party out of possession to make all persons defendants in any civil suit brought to recover possession of the land, 15 C. 31; 18 C. 513. But it was held in the Full Bench Case of 30 C. 155 that where in the same proceedings, some of the parties are concerned only with several portions of the land in dispute, the Magistrate is not without jurisdiction to deal with the case and that it is not necessary there should be separate and distinct proceedings in respect of each person. Such irregularities anyhow do not affect the jurisdiction of the Magistrate. In 8 L. R. 23 = 9 Cr. L. J. 263, it was held that when several accused persons were found to be in possession of different and separate pieces of land alleged to be the property of the complainant, the accused could not be tried jointly.

130. One proceeding with respect to several plots of land with several persons not bad.—Where a Magistrate drew up one proceeding with respect to several plots of land claimed to be in the possession of different persons held, that the procedure adopted by the Magistrate was not bad as it was not shown that any of the parties had been precluded from giving any evidence and no party was prejudiced by the Magistrate not taking separate proceedings, 5 C. W. N. 544. Similarly in 6 C. W. N. 206, where it was objected that inasmuch as the tenants arrayed on different sides claimed certain specific plots and that those should have been separately defined and made the subject of distinct cases it was held, that although it may be desirable in proceedings under this section to deal with each dispute separately, it is impossible to extend to such proceedings the strict rules of procedure which is generally observed in civil actions. See also 21 W. R. 53.

131 When property in dispute is divisible into several plots, Magistrate may declare possession in respect of each plot.—See Notes 139 and 140

132 One dispute as to several plots may be dealt within one proceeding.—A dispute having arisen as to the possession of 109 plots of land to which a claim to possession was made by the ryots of village A on the one hand and by the ryots of village B on the other, the Magistrate instituted proceedings in respect of all the 109 plots but having taken evidence debar in his order with 12 only directing that the ryots of village A should be kept in possession held that it appearing that all the 109 plots were covered by the same state of circumstances the Magistrate exercised a sound discretion in dealing with the case as he did. 10 C. L. R. 523 When the dispute is one the fact that it embraces several distinct parcels of lands is not sufficient to necessitate an independent proceeding in respect of each. 30 C. 153 (F B)

133 One proceeding with respect to large number of distinct villages is illegal.—When the dispute is alleged to exist in 230 villages each village stands on its own footing and the Magistrate will be acting ultra vires if he clubbed together 230 subjects of dispute and treated them as one. The Legislature does not contemplate whole-sale proceedings of this sort. The Magistrate should decide which party, at the date of his order was in actual possession of this or that village and confirm that possession instead of arbitrarily finding that one party was in possession of all the villages. 29 M. 561 See, however 16 C. 513.

134 Joint trial of separate cases is illegal.—Where a Magistrate tried cases against different persons under this section jointly and justified his action as having been taken by consent of the parties, held that however convenient this course may be, the parties in all cases not being the same the procedure was not legal. Therefore the trial of each case should be separate. 4 C. W. N. 748 Similarly where two investigations were before a Magistrate who after deciding one of the cases remarked in the other that because the lands adjoined he had taken the evidence in the two cases together and found it unnecessary to continue the inquiry further it was held that the parties kept out of possession were entitled to a full enquiry, 8 W. R. 63.

135 Objection as to joint trial may be waived.—Where at the instance of the petitioner a Magistrate tried a number of cases under s 14a in one proceeding held that though the proceeding was irregular it did not lie in the mouth of the petitioner to object to the illegality because he was one of the persons who petitioned the Magistrate to adopt that course. 14 C. W. N. CXXXIII

136 Proceedings under this section must be separate from trials for offences.—Weir II, 574. See Note 92

XY—FINAL ORDER

(A)—FORM AND CONTENTS

Note.—Whether sections 366 and 371 do or do not apply to an order under section 14a the Magistrate must give reasons for his decision sufficient to enable the High Court to determine whether he has complied with the terms of sub-section (4) and directed his mind to the consideration of the evidence and whether he has acted with jurisdiction in making his final order. A final order merely stating that a certain number of witnesses were examined, pleadings heard and the oral and documentary evidence considered in light of the arguments is not a proper one. Re trial ordered. 49 C. 187

137 Form of final order made under sub sec (6).—Form No. 22 Sch V, shows how a formal order declaring possession and forbidding disturbance is to be drawn up. 14 C. W. N. 78 = 11 Cr. L. J. 26 The form ought to be borne in mind by a Magistrate taking steps under the Chapter.

(5) Magistrate to sign his name in full to an order under this section.—A Magistrate should sign his name in full to a judicial order under this section and should also note his official position. 12 C. W. N. 771 = 8 Cr. L. J. 27

138 What the order should contain.—(1) Where an order is made in favour of a party holding that he is in possession of a part of the disputed property the boundaries of the plot must be given so as to specify it. 14 C. W. N. XCVIII If it covers land not included in the injunctory order it is bad. 11 C. W. N. XLIII; 7 C. W. N. 462 and 553 (2) The order should embody a clear finding as to which of the parties was in possession of the disputed land at the date of the order under s 145 (1) and it is not enough to find who was in possession a year before the date of proceedings. 9 Cr. L. J. 505 The Magistrate must give a finding as is required by law regarding possession of either or both the contending parties on the date of his order, and if he fails to do so he fails to exercise his jurisdiction. He has to find as to who was in possession on the date of his order not on any date anterior to that. 16 Cr. L. J. 239 (M) (3) It should not contain any directions as to delivery or possession. 14 C. W. N. 78 = 11 C. L. J. 26 The Magistrate must find that the dispute between the parties is likely to cause a breach of the peace. 9 P. W. R. 1915 = 92 P. L. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 206

In proceedings under s 145 of the code where Magistrate issues an order under cl 6 without deciding which party was in possession on the date of the preliminary order he acts without jurisdiction and the High Court can interfere in revision.

139 Distinct and separate orders in respect of portions of the subject of dispute in the proceedings may be made—In a proceeding under II is section regarding certain plots of land the Magistrate found that one of the parties was in possession of four plots which were marked by distinct boundaries and were distinguishable from the rest and confirmed the party in possession thereof but as to two other plots he attached them under s 146 as they were not so distinguishable. In revision it was contended that being unable to find either party in possession of the whole of the subject matter it was the duty of the Magistrate to attach the whole of the lands in dispute held that the words subject of dispute in this and the following sections refer either to the whole or to any component part or parts thereof. If the component parts are distinct and separable from the rest it cannot rightly be held that because the Magistrate is not able to find possession of one of the component parts of the subject matter in dispute with either party he is found to attach the whole although that component part is distinct and separable from the rest. If on the other hand the subject matter in dispute is indivisible and must be dealt with as a whole as was the case in 22 C. 297, it must be dealt with in such a way as to make in regard to it one single order either under this section or the next 5 C. W. N 710, and where a Magistrate finds that one party has been in possession of a portion of the land in dispute and the other party in possession of the rest and the possession of the one is not likely to interfere with the enjoyment of possession of the remaining portion by the other, the Magistrate can maintain both the parties in possession of their respective portions 11 C. W. N 743 = 5 Cr. L. J 490 where 22 C. 297 is referred to and distinguished. See also 14 C. W. N LXXIX, 21 W. R. 55, 9 C. W. N 887. Where however the disputed land in respect of which proceedings under s 146 were instituted consisted of several plots all held by tenants on a yearly rent of half the produce and the parties to the proceedings were the lakhrajdar and the pindar the dispute between whom was as to the right to collect rent it appeared that as regards some of the plots there was a dispute as to what tenants were in possession held that as regard the plots about which there was a dispute as to the tenants in possession the Magistrate should not have passed any order in these proceedings in the absence of the tenants because they might be very seriously prejudiced by an order in favour of one or other of the parties to these proceedings. 19 C. W. N 939.

140 Proper order when parties are in possession of portions of subject matter which is indivisible—In a proceeding under s 145 regarding dispute between two parties concerning certain collieries it appeared that the first party were certainly in possession of the building which contained the office where the business of the collieries was transacted and where all the cash books and the papers of the business were kept and that the second party had during a period of about 14 days prior to the commencement of the proceedings succeeded in obtaining the possession of the pits wharves tramways etc of the colliery by what the Court considered to be an high handed and improper scheme and acting in an unwarrantable manner. The Magistrate considering himself bound to find who was in actual possession at the date of the proceedings by himself passed an order in favour of the second party held that such order was bad and that as the second party was not in possession of the whole of the property in dispute and the effect was to place them in possession of the portion that was in the possession of the first party the proper order to make under such circumstances was one under this section attaching the property 22 C. 297. But if the component parts are distinct and separate the Magistrate may if necessary deal with the different parts differently 5 C. W. N 710, 24 W. R. 73, 11 C. W. N 198 = 5 Cr. L. J 32 and see Note under Heading XI (a) above.

141 Final order must not deal with plots not included in preliminary order—The Magistrate would be exceeding his jurisdiction if his final order covers plots not included in the preliminary order under s 145. (1) 11 C. W. N XLIII. When in a proceeding under this section a question is raised as to the identity of the land in dispute the Magistrate is bound before going further to ascertain and identify the lands so that neither party may be in doubt as to the specific lands in respect of which proceedings are taken. A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to decide a dispute as to lands in excess of those referred to in his preliminary order 7 W. N 462 and 558. Query—Whether an order made by a Magistrate giving a party to a proceeding under this section possession of a greater extent of land than is claimed by him may be questioned as one made without jurisdiction? 7 C. W. N 462. Where in a proceeding under s. 145 dealing with several plots of land a preceding Magistrate cancelled the proceedings in respect of some specified plots his successor is not competent to pass a final order in respect of the plots excepted 17 Cr. L. J 236 = 34 In Ca 1006 (Patna).

142. Alteration of preliminary order.—Where a Magistrate recorded a preliminary order under this section and his successor, on the same materials, revised those proceedings altering their entire character, converting the dispute regarding the actual possession of land into a dispute regarding the collection of rent, held, it was an abuse of jurisdiction on the part of the Magistrate so to alter the proceedings—an abuse which would justify the intervention of the High Court in revision, 27 C. 892.

143. Effect of the final order.—Although the section does not expressly authorize the Court to put the successful party into possession, the effect of it is to entitle him to take possession 7 C. L. J. 547 = 12 C. W. N. 696. The principle enunciated in L. R. 8 I. A. 123 and L. R. 11 I. A. 37, that an order though erroneously made is nevertheless valid until reversal upon appeal applies to an order under this section, such an order is final and binding upon the parties and those claiming under them. Although the order confers no title, the fact of possession remains and the persons in possession can only be evicted by a person who can prove a better right to the possession himself, 4 Bom. L. R. 167. A Magistrate's finding as to the fact of actual possession is conclusive, but not so of the Muntaldar under Bombay Act III of 1876, 5 B. 387. See also 26 B. 333; 15 B. 238; 4 Bom. L. R. 167.

(B)—PERSONS BOUND BY THE FINAL ORDER

144. Witnesses not bound by order.—The mere fact of a person being examined as a witness in such a case does not make him a 'party' bound by order, 18 M. 51.

145. Order only binding on actual parties to proceedings.—Where an order was made between A on the one side, and B and the three tenants of B on the other, declaring that A was in possession of the property in dispute, held, that this order was only binding on the actual parties to the case before the Magistrate, and that subsequent tenants of B could not be criminally punished for disobeying the order in question, 3 B. L. R. Ap Cr. 13; followed in 18 M. 51; 3 C. W. N. 329. A person cannot be convicted under s 188 I P C, of disobedience of an order made under this section unless it be shown that the order was in fact addressed to him 7 C. L. R. 291. A person cannot be punished when the order has been passed on no proper inquiry, 16 P. W. R. 1913 = 92 P. L. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 63.

Contra—on all persons who have notice—in 21 C 404, RAMPI, J., expressed a different view, and it has been decided in 11 Bom. L. R. 377 that "the provisions of s 145 make it clear that the parties whom the Magistrate has to deal with are not merely the actual parties to, but all persons who may be concerned in the dispute, the object being to prevent a breach of the peace. Therefore it is not the actual parties but all parties who may have notice of the proceedings that are bound by the order. A person purchasing from one against whom an order was made and with knowledge of such order, is liable to be punished also, 13 C. 175.

XVI.—CERTAIN ORDERS IN EXCESS OF THE MAGISTRATE'S JURISDICTION.

146. Order on persons not parties to the proceedings.—An order under this section or s 146 directing persons who are not parties to the proceedings under this section to do a thing with respect to the property in dispute or warning them that any rights to property they might have must be settled in a Civil Court is ultra vires Weir II, 106. So is an order under subsec. (6) made in favour of four persons two of whom claimed no interest in the property in dispute, 6 C. W. N. 101. See Notes 67 and 145 above.

147. Proceedings by way of execution of final order bad.—There is no specific provision in the Code authorizing a Magistrate to take proceedings in the nature of execution (e.g., directing the Police to give possession) after passing orders under s 145. Disobedience to such orders can be dealt with under s 188 I P C. It is doubtful whether they can be forced otherwise 14 C. W. N. 78 = 11 Cr. L. J. 26. Under s 145 a Magistrate has no jurisdiction to oust one person and place another in possession of a property, such power is conferred by s 522 and can be exercised only if there be conviction of an offence 13 A. L. J. 932 = 16 Cr. L. J. 714. A party in whose favour an order is made is entitled to take possession, 12 C. W. N. 696. The effect of the order is to entitle the successful party to take possession, 7 C. L. J. 547.

148. No power to direct how possession is to be exercised or the land has to be used.—Where a Magistrate found firstly that both parties were in possession of separate rooms in the same building, and secondly that they had both joint possession of certain rooms in which the family documents and other valuables were kept and directed on the first finding that the separate possession should continue and on the second finding that the rooms, except in the presence of certain public officers, held on the facts that the order as to continuance of separate possession was not improper, but that the order as to not opening the rooms except in the presence of public officers was illegal, inasmuch as the Magistrate had not been unable to find which party was in possession and had not found that neither party was in possession Weir II, 108 'Where in a proceeding under this section the Magistrate found that the disputed land was in possession of the second party, but directed that two pathways on the disputed and should remain intact and only the remainder of the land should remain in possession of the second party held, the Magistrate was not competent to pass such an order, 17 C W N. 793 = 14 Cr. L. J. 391 In a dispute concerning land the Magistrate, having found one party to be in possession, had no power to give the opposite party found not to be in possession permission to cultivate the disputed land pending the decision of any possessory suit he might bring, 18 W. R. 27. Nor, that one or several joint owners should not use the land in such a manner as to cause 'annoyance to another, 2 C. L. R. 62. Nor can the Magistrate decide the method by which the possession is to be exercised of the agency by which the person in possession is to collect the profits, 35 C. 986, Note 147

But in a Bombay case it was held that there is no reason why a Magistrate, in proceedings initiated under s 145 of the Code should not grant a right of way to one of the parties over the property in dispute, 48 B 512 = 26 Bom. L. R.

149. No power to put party into possession or direct the erection of boundary marks.—Where a Magistrate made an order under this section declaring one of the parties to be entitled to possession until evicted in due course of law, and further ordered that boundary marks by pillars should be laid down, defining the limits of the possession of the respective parties, held, that the section does not empower the Magistrate to put any party in possession or to lay down the boundary marks of the subject of dispute and a person removing such boundary marks cannot be held guilty under s 434 I P C, 27 A. 300; Note 147

150. Removal of structure or award of damages.—Where B erected a bundh on land claimed both by him and A and in proceedings under this section between A and B, the Magistrate dealt with the matter as if he had to try a question of title and made an order (i) declaring that A was entitled to the land, (ii) directing B to remove the bundh, and (iii) further directed that B should pay A certain amount as damages. Held (a) that the Magistrate was bound to inquire as to which party was in possession and not treat the case as if the matter before him was one solely of title, (b) that the Magistrate under this section had no power to direct the bundh to be removed and (c) that the Magistrate was not competent to make an order as to damages. Even under s 148, the Magistrate has no power to make an order as to costs other than those incurred for witnesses or pleader's fee, or both, 32 O 602 followed in 6 P. L. R. 1913 = 2 P. W. R. 1913 = 14 Cr L J 128 where the order was as to the removal of platforms. The Magistrate has no power to remove any superstructure on the disputed land

151. Magistrate has no jurisdiction finally to settle the differences between the parties—This section does not empower a Magistrate to make an order permanently settling the difference of the parties.—Mad H C Pro, 23rd Jan, 1883 It is a misconception of the aim and object of the law to set at rest questions of title to possession of land, 17 W. R. 3, 35 C. 793 Interference on the part of the Magistracy in a case of a purely civil nature is most mischievous 4 M. H. C. R. Appx 49, the primary object of the section being the preservation of the peace 21 C 29

152. Magistrate has no power to forbid payment or collection of rents.—It is not open to a Magistrate acting under s 145 to forbid one party from collecting rents until he can prove his claim before a competent Court and to forbid another party to pay rent 4 C W. N. CXXIII

153. Orders regarding crops—A Magistrate cannot order that a person shall be maintained in possession until he has reaped a crop, and then that he shall give way to another, 1 C. L. R. 136 Nor has he jurisdiction to allow one of the parties to reap the crops to the exclusion of the other when the Magistrate cancels proceedings 3 C L J. 573 = 3 Cr. L. J. 465 Nor has he jurisdiction to direct a division of the crops grown on the land the subject matter of proceedings 3 C L J 242 Nor to order the proceeds of crops on the land attached Mimus expenses to be handed over to one of the parties 7 C. L. J. 359 = 7 Cr. L. J. 336 Nor has he any power to direct the produce to be delivered to one of the parties when he releases the attachment, 16 Cr. L. J. 104 (M) Although an order to the Police under this section directing them to take charge of the crops in dispute may not be strictly legal yet when in the execution of such order the Police were merely guarding such crops the owner cannot exercise any right of private defence by way of seizing and carrying off into confinement several of the Policemen 9 C W N. 125

153-A. A Magistrate should not make a supplementary order without hearing the other party, 22 C W.

153-B. Where it was found that one party was in possession on behalf of himself and another, both being members of the same family, Held that the order of the Magistrate declaring the former to be in possession was without jurisdiction, 23 C. W. N. 1051. A Magistrate has no power to pass a temporary order pending his decision of the question of possession under this section, 22 Cr. L. J. 43.

XVII.—REVIEW AND REVIVAL OF PROCEEDINGS.

154. Magistrate may amend order.—When the order of a Magistrate under this section is not definite in regard to the description and boundaries of the property which is the subject of the order, such order can be amended and made more definite by the Magistrate on application by a party to the proceeding, Weir II, 107.

155. But not competent to review—There is no authority for holding that a Magistrate can review a final order passed by himself under this section, 35 C. 350; 16 O. C. 192 = 14 Cr. L. J. 605; 24 A. L. J. 227.

156. District Magistrate has no jurisdiction to revive an order once cancelled—Where a case under this section has been dismissed or struck off the file by a Subordinate Magistrate on the ground that the Police report does not disclose any apprehension of a breach of the peace, a District Magistrate has no power to revive the old case and direct further inquiry, 20 C. 729. But where a Subordinate Magistrate expressed an opinion that there was no ground to take proceedings under this section on a Police report the District Magistrate can, on the same Police report, initiate proceedings under this section independently, 29 C. 242.

157. High Court will not interfere with an order of cancellation—The High Court has no power to interfere in revision with an order of a Magistrate, cancelling a preliminary order under sub-sec. (1) on the ground that there no longer existed a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace, whatever might be the source of the information on which the Magistrate has acted, 30 C. 112; 13 C. W. N. 125. See 28 C. 446, 2 Lah. 364. But see s. 435 as amended and Notes thereon, now orders under Chp XII are proceedings within the meaning of s. 435.

158. Further inquiry.—When a case under this section is dismissed or struck off the file, a District Magistrate or Sessions Judge has no power to order further inquiry under s. 437, 20 C. 729. Nor has the High Court, 30 C. 112.

159. New proceedings ought not to be instituted on old materials—Under this section proceedings cannot be renewed after the dispute has been settled, and an order has been made that the case be struck off. Under such circumstances a new proceeding would not be justified only on the materials upon which the proceeding struck off was based, 20 C. 867. Nor can any further inquiry be ordered under s. 437. To enable the Magistrate to take fresh proceedings it would be necessary to set forth new materials 6 C. W. N. 923. It is competent to a Magistrate to institute fresh proceedings when in the previous proceeding the parties had compromised, 15 C. W. N. 569 = 12 Cr. L. J. 22. See also 4 C. L. J. 418 and Note 44 3 Lah. 401.

160. Fresh proceedings should not be instituted during pendency of rule—During the pendency of a rule issued by the High Court to show cause why the order of a District Magistrate under this section should not be set aside, a Magistrate subordinate to the District Magistrate instituted a fresh proceeding in respect of the same subject matter. Held, that the fresh proceedings were highly irregular and improper, 4 C. L. J. 418.

161. Fresh proceedings not to be instituted when previous order still in force.—Where an order under be in possession, such an order is one falling under cl. (5) showing that no dispute existed and not an order under cl. (6). The Magistrate is competent to issue fresh proceedings, 15 C. W. N. 569 = 12 Cr. L. J. 32.

162. District Magistrate cannot direct Subordinate Magistrate to institute proceedings.—A District Magistrate has no authority to direct a Sub-divisional Magistrate to take action under this section, 21 C. 391.

XVIII.—TRANSFER.

163. Transfer of cases instituted under this section.—The general power conferred by ss. 192 and 528 of the Code upon a District or Sub-divisional Magistrate to transfer or withdraw any case for inquiry or trial by any Magistrate subordinate to him is not taken away or cut down by anything in this section, 22 C. 898 and 10 C. W. N. 1093. But a Magistrate of the first class, who is empowered to transfer cases under s. 192 (2), is not competent to transfer cases under this section, 4 C. W. N. 821; 36 C. 370. See also 24 A. 151 and 5 C. W. N. 656; 79

C 392 It was held in 2 C L J 614 = 3 Cr L J 83 that proceedings under this section are criminal cases and a Magistrate has power to transfer them under ss 192 and 528. There is therefore no illegality in a Magistrate transferring a case under this section to a Subordinate Magistrate and even if there were any it would be cured by s 529 (f). In 36 C 370 It was held that a Subordinate Magistrate cannot be empowered under s 192 (2) to transfer proceedings under this section. But a transfer of such proceedings made by a Subordinate Magistrate empowered under s 192 (2) is a legal defect curable by s 529. See also 22 C 898, 26 M 183, 5 C W N 586, 31 C 350, 28 C 709. But see 25 B 179. In 28 C 709 it was held that an investigation of a case under this section is an inquiry and the Court taking cognizance of it a Criminal Court within the meaning of the Code.

164 Transfer may be made pending final order.—The jurisdiction to make a final order under this section is not personal to the Magistrate who institutes the proceedings and a District Magistrate may of his own motion transfer a case under this Chapter to a Magistrate of the first class subordinate to him. 10 C. W. N. 1095 = 4 Cr L J 223, 23 C 898.

165 Magistrate trying on transfer, need not have local jurisdiction.—Where the District Magistrate transferred a case under this section to a Deputy Magistrate to try it himself or to make it over to another Magistrate and the Deputy Magistrate transferred the case to another Magistrate not having local jurisdiction over the subject matter of the proceedings and such Magistrate tried the case and passed the final order it was contended (i) that the order authorizing the Deputy Magistrate to transfer to another Magistrate was bad under s 192 (2) and (ii) that the final order by the trying Magistrate was bad as he had no local jurisdiction. Held that the irregularity if any under s 192 (2) was cured by s 529 (j) and that the trying Magistrate had jurisdiction. 3 C. W. N. 886. The trying Magistrate may on transfer add parties and issue fresh copies of original proceedings. 30 C 155, 10 C W N 1095 = 4 Cr L J 223.

166 Successor can continue proceedings.—When in the course of a proceeding one Magistrate is transferred and another comes in his place the latter if of competent jurisdiction can deal with the proceeding. under s 300. 13 C W N 420 = 9 Cr L J 278, 37 C 812. See Note 121.

167 High Court's power to transfer.—(a) Under s 26—In 26 M 183, 34 A 533, 11 O C 61 = 7 Cr L J 423, it was held that the High Court has power to transfer as the case was one over which a Criminal Court exercises jurisdiction. So also GHOSE J in 28 C 709. In 25 B 179, 18 C. W. N. 393 = 15 Cr L J 359, 8 B. L. R. 213 = 16 Cr L J 249, 5 P. R. 1914 = 15 Cr L J 363, it was held that s 26 had no application to cases under Chapter XII which are not criminal cases. So also TAYLOR J in 28 C 709. It is proposed to amend s 526 by omitting the word criminal in criminal cases.

(b) Under s 15 of the High Courts Act and s 29 of the Letters Patent—See 28 C 709 and Note 4.

XIX.—REFERENCE

168 Reference.—Power of Sessions Judge with proceedings under this section.—Under the old Code the Sessions Judge had no power even to call for the record under s. 433 of proceedings under s 145. But under the new amendment of s 433 by the omission of sub-sec. (3) a Sessions Judge has power to refer under s. 438 because he is now authorized to call for the record of proceedings under s 145 under s 433. So it will be seen now that the decisions in 20 C 520, 23 P. R. (1902) have lost their importance.

XX.—REVISION AND POWERS OF THE HIGH COURT

169 Law before the new amendment of section 435 of the Code.—Before the omission of sub-clause (j) of s 433 declaring proceedings under ss. 143, 144 and proceedings under Chap. XII and s 176 to be not within the meaning of s 433 it was held by all the High Courts that although they could not interfere under ss 433 and 439 with proceedings under this Chapter still it was invariably held that the High Courts could interfere under their general powers of interference by virtue of the Letters Patent and the High Courts Act. It was also held that the High Court had power under section 107 of the Government of India Act (5 and 6 Geo V. c. 61) to set aside proceedings under section 145 (49 C 522, but see 41 A 302 contra). But now since the omission of sub-sec. (j) of section 433 of the Code it is clear that the Legislature wishes to confer powers of revision over orders under sections 143, 144, 176 and Chap. XII.

It is of interest to note that 48 C 522 while holding under the old section 435 that the High Court has power to interfere under section 107 of the Government of India Act has also held that under section 107 the Court has power to make such consequential and incidental orders as may be necessary in the interest of power to reach and remedy all forms of judicial high handedness though the Code contains no provision analogous to section 141 of the Code of Civil Procedure. But now it should be noted that section 541 (a) expressly provides for such inherent powers of the High Court to make such orders as are necessary in the exercise of justice.

170 Order as to costs in revision.—The High Court, in dealing as a Court of Revision with an application under this section, cannot make any order as to the costs of such application. Ordh (A.C.) 277; but the Madras High Court, in L. P. Appeal No. 88 of 1908 held that costs may be awarded by the High Court. See No. 105 of 1908 Cr. App. 85 M. L. J. 106 which holds that costs cannot be granted by the High Court in revising a proceeding under section 145 of the Code. 45 M. L. J. 262.

Contra to this the Bombay High Court has held that it is competent to the High Court in its criminal revisional jurisdiction to award costs of a revision proceeding before it under s. 145 of the Code. 27 Bom. L. R. 1233.

171 Magistrate cannot go behind the order of the High Court.—Where the High Court decided that a case fell under the Chapter and directed the District Magistrate to take the case on his file and the District Magistrate transferred the case to another Magistrate. Held that the latter Magistrate was bound to inquire into the matter and it was not open to him to go behind the order of the High Court. 3 Bom. L. R. 416. But where an order made by a Magistrate having been set aside by the High Court, the successful party went to the Magistrate to have the High Court's order executed the Magistrate then drew up a fresh preliminary order under subsec. (1) and after due inquiry made a final order under subsec. (6), substantially similar to the order, that was set aside by the High Court. Held that the question whether a Magistrate had sufficient materials before him to justify his action was not a question of jurisdiction and it could not be gone into by the High Court. All. Cr. Rev. 709 of 1905.

172. During the pendency of a rule issued by the High Court, the Subordinate Courts ought not to issue fresh proceedings.—The District Magistrate made a final order on the 5th September 1905. On the 21st December 1905 the High Court issued a rule on the District Magistrate to show cause why the order should not be set aside and this rule was made absolute on the 2nd February 1906. In the meantime a Deputy Magistrate subordinate to the same District Magistrate, instituted fresh proceedings on the old materials on the 12th January, 1906. Held that during the pendency of the rule in the High Court, proceedings in the Lower Court in the same matter must be considered to have been stayed and it was not only irregular but highly improper to institute such proceedings when a rule is issued on a District Magistrate staying further proceedings. All Subordinate Magistrates are bound to obey the orders of the High Court, and no Subordinate Magistrate would be justified in carrying on proceedings with reference to the property in dispute—the subject matter of the rule. Also when the order of the District Magistrate is still in force, there is no reason to suppose that there was any apprehension of a breach of the peace. 4 C. L. J. 418 = 5 Cr. L. J. 397.

173 Letters Patent Appeal from the order of a single Judge.—Although the authority invested with power to decide a dispute under this section is not a Court of civil jurisdiction but a Criminal Court an order passed in revision by a single Judge of the High Court under this section is not one made in a criminal trial. So an appeal lies under s. 15 of the Letters Patent to a Bench. 17 M. L. J. 158 = 5 Cr. L. J. 343, even when the order merely dismisses the revision petition. 16 Cr. L. J. 239 (M.) Cf. 29 C. 236; 18 M. L. J. 408 and 16 M. L. J. 394.

XXI—EFFECT OF ORDER UNDER THIS CHAPTER ON CIVIL PROCEEDINGS

174 Admissibility of orders under s. 145 as evidence in civil cases.—In 29 C. 187 (P.C.) the Privy Council pointed out that orders under this section are admissible in evidence on general principles and under s. 13 of the Indian Evidence Act to show the fact that such orders were made as to who the parties were who the land in dispute was and as to who was declared entitled to retain possession. But they decide no question of title.

175 Suit to recover property comprised in the order under s. 145 by party bound by the order or anyone claiming under him, must be brought within three years from the date of the final order.—See Art. 47 of the Limitation Act 1908. All persons bound by or parties to an order under this section and any other persons claiming the property through any such person under a title derived subsequent to the order must sue within three years from the date of the order under Art. 47 of the Limitation Act now in force of 1908. 23 C. 731, 19 C. 866, 6 C. L. R. 93. 18-12-11 18-12-11 18-12-11 18-12-11 18-12-11 18-12-11 18-12-11 18-12-11 18-12-11 18-12-11

(1) Who are bound—An order passed against a tenant may not bind the real owner, 2 B. L. R. 5 N. 1, an order against the lessee may not bind the lessor. 24 W. R. 128 (Civ.) 11 C. 562, 11 C. L. R. 122.

(ii) Starting point of limitation—For a suit to recover property in respect of which an order under s 145 has been made the period of limitation runs from the date of the order of the Magistrate and not from the date on which a rule issued by High Court under s 15 of the Charter Act against the Magistrate's order was finally disposed of 12 C W N 840, 6 C 709 If limitation has once begun to run the plaintiff cannot have a fresh starting point from the date of subsequent attachment by the Criminal Court 23 C. 86

(iii) To what orders the article applies—Art 47 is applicable even though the Magistrate acted illegally and with irregularity in not making proper enquiries provided the plaintiff had notice of the proceedings though the notice is not served in due course of law 38 M 532 But if no order is made respecting the possession of immovable property Art 47 is inapplicable 16 I C 633 (C) 3 W R 174 (Civ) 11 W R 477 (Civ) 20 W R 318 (Civ) nor is the article applicable to an order of attachment under s 146 as the order is not an order respecting the possession of property 1 M 309, 26 M 410, 20 A 120, but see 23 C. 86

(iv) To what suits the article applies—This article applies only to suits by the unsuccessful party to recover possession and not to a suit by the successful party to recover possession 6 C. L. R. 93, nor to a suit by the unsuccessful party for confirmation of possession 10 W R 24 (Civ) nor to a suit for partition. Cf 5 B 25, 15 B 299

(v) Article 47 does not apply when attachment is under s 146—An order made under section 146 for the attachment of the property in dispute is not an order respecting the possession of such property Consequently a suit brought by one of the claimants against the other for possession is not governed by Art. 47 Sch II of the Limitation Act 1897 A W N 214 20 A 120, 1 M 309, 4 N W P H C. R. 1868, p. 65, 25 C. 86, 28 M 410

178 Limitation when property attached under s. 146—As attachment under section 146 operates in law for purposes of limitation simply as detention or custody of the property by the Magistrate who pending the decision of a Civil Court of competent jurisdiction holds it merely on behalf of the party entitled on the date of attachment whether he be one of the actual parties to the dispute before him or any other For purposes of limitation the seizure or legal possession will during the attachment be in the true owner and the attachment by the Magistrate will not amount either to dispossession of the owner or to his discontinuing possession. Such title of the true owner cannot be extinguished by the operation of s 28 of the Limitation Act 1877 however long such attachment may continue 26 M 410 Thus in 32 C. 856, it was held that the effect of attachment of lands in dispute between two sets of tenants is that the Magistrate takes possession on behalf of such of the tenants as might eventually establish right to possession The fact that neither set of tenants brought any suit to establish their title to the lands or paid any rent for them to the landlord for nine years cannot be said to constitute an abandonment of the land by the rightful tenants see also 28 C. 86 But if limitation has already begun to run against a party the attachment under this section cannot furnish a fresh starting point 5 C W N 160

177 Burden of proof in subsequent civil suit.—In a suit brought by the party defeated in the criminal proceedings the burden of proving his title to possession lies on the plaintiff 4 C. W N 597 (P.C.) 6 C. W N 336 (P.C.) 29 C. 137

178 Can the unsuccessful party institute suit under s 9 of the Specific Relief Act?—No—20 W R 12 (Civ) It was held that although this section does not expressly authorize the Court to put the successful party into possession the effect of it is to entitle him to take it and the unsuccessful party cannot be said to be dispossessed otherwise than in due course of law so as to give rise to a cause of action for a suit under s 9 of the Specific Relief Act 7 C L J 557 But where there was forcible dispossession immediately prior to the institution of proceedings under s 145 and the wrongdoer's possession was maintained by the Criminal Court a suit under s 9 will lie 30 A 331

179 Is the unsuccessful party bound to sue for possession?—The comprehensive proposition that whenever an order under s. 145 has been made the necessary consequence is the actual dispossession of the unsuccessful party so as to compel him to sue for possession cannot be maintained 16 In Ca 898 (C) Where owing to his inability to decide which of the parties is in possession a Magistrate appoints a receiver under s 146 a party thereto is justified in instituting a suit for declaration only and is not bound to ask for recovery of possession on of land 15 C W N 758

180 Possession of receiver is possession of party rightfully entitled for all purposes.—The possession of a receiver must be deemed to be possession of the party rightfully entitled to the property for all purposes and not merely for the purposes of limitation (1911) 2 M. W. N. J. 109 = 13 Cr. L. J. 23.

181. No suit lies for damages for getting wrongful attachment.—No suit lies to recover damages suffered by plaintiff by reason of his land having been kept under attachment for a year under an erroneous order under s. 146. Cr. P. C. from the defendant upon whose complaint the enquiry leading up to the order was instituted. 14 C. W. N. 96—10 C. L. J. 326

182. Unsuccessful party not liable for damages to property during attachment.—A party to the proceedings under this Chapter sued the other for damages to the part of the property consequent upon an order of attachment under s. 146. Held that the damages for the loss of profits were not the probable result of the defendant's act being the consequence of the Magistrate's order and that the defendant was not liable in damages as no action will lie against any person for procuring an erroneous decision of a Court of Justice. 9 In. C.A. 333 (C.) 6 M. 426, 12 Cr. L. J. 14 (C.) 20 A. L. J. 205

183. Civil suit for costs.—A civil suit brought by a witness to recover costs incurred in appearing, to give evidence in proceedings under this section is maintainable. 8 C. W. N. 179; but a suit to enforce the order of Magistrate granting costs will not lie. 11 C. W. N. CCLXII

184. Possessory proceeding is not notice to quit.—Proceedings under this section are not a sufficient demand of possession for the purpose of maintaining an ejectment suit. 4 C. 339

185. Mamlatdar's power to make a possessory order not ousted by order under this section.—The jurisdiction of the Mamlatdar under s. 10 of Bom. Act III of 1876 to entertain a possessory suit is not taken away by the fact that a Magistrate had made an order under this section, because while the Magistrate finds possession on a particular date, the Mamlatdar determines who was in possession before that date. 26 B. 353. See also 5 B. 357.

186. Order of Magistrate maintaining possession is no bar to appointment of a receiver by Civil Court.—The Code of Civil Procedure and the powers of Civil Courts under that Code are in no way fettered by any order that may be passed by a Magistrate under this section. The Magistrate's order is only intended to control any period up to the time when the Civil Court takes seizure of the matter and passes such orders as may be necessary for the protection of the property. It decides no question of title, 39 C. 187. Therefore the existence of an order under this section in respect of any immovable property would not prevent a Civil Court from appointing a receiver in respect of the same property under s. 503 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882, 23 A. 214. Any order passed under this section ceases to have effect when the party aggrieved by it obtains an order from the Civil Court declaring his rights as against such order. 1 C. L. R. 62

187. Has a Civil Court power to appoint receiver superseding receiver appointed by Magistrate?—When a receiver is appointed by a Magistrate under s. 146 (2) the Civil Court has no power to appoint a receiver in supersession of the receiver appointed by the Magistrate and such an interlocutory order cannot have the effect of discharging the Magistrate's attachment or enable the Court to remove the Magistrate's receiver.

When however the Civil Court thinks that a receiver should be appointed it should make an order appointing a receiver conditionally on the Magistrate withdrawing his attachment and it would be a wise and proper exercise of discretion on the Magistrate's part to withdraw his attachment on being informed of the order of the Civil Court. In the absence of good reason to the contrary, the Civil Court should continue the receiver appointed by the Magistrate. 40 C. 862. See also 27 C. 259 and 1900 A. W. N. 22 for the effect of an order of a Civil Court appointing a receiver.

188. Whether pleader engaged in proceeding under this Chapter, disqualified to act for the other side in subsequent civil suit?—Where a pleader who has appeared for a party in proceedings under s. 145 seeks to appear for the opposite party in a subsequent civil suit flowing out of such proceedings, he ought to satisfy the Court that in acting in the subsequent proceedings he has not as a fact obtained from his previous client any knowledge useful to his present client or anything which is not now public property. 33 M. 650. A professional gentleman should as far as possible stick to the side who first employed him. It might be a very good practice if when gentlemen were offered instructions in any connected case that they should at least in the first place inform their first clients. 16 Cr. L. J. 420 (F.B.).

189. There is an inflexible rule of law that a Magistrate is concluded by every previous order of a Civil or Criminal Court relating to a property in dispute, 30 C. L. J. 123

- 146. (1) If the Magistrate decides that none of the parties was then in such possession or is unable to satisfy himself as to which of them was then in such possession of the subject of dispute he may attach it until a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties thereto or the person entitled to possession thereof

Power to attach subject of dispute

Provided that the District Magistrate or the Magistrate who has attached the subject of dispute may withdraw the attachment at any time if he is satisfied that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace in regard to the subject of dispute

(2) When the Magistrate attaches the subject of dispute he may if he thinks fit appoint a receiver of the property the subject matter in dispute has been appointed by any Civil Court appoint a receiver thereof, who subject to the control of the Magistrate shall have all the powers of a receiver appointed under the Code of Civil Procedure

* Provided that in the event of a receiver of the property, the subject of dispute being subsequently appointed by any Civil Court possession shall be made over to him by the receiver appointed by the Magistrate who shall thereupon be discharged

Note.—Proviso to sub-sec. (1) and sub-sec. (2) are new Section 146 is amended so as to enable the District Magistrate or the Magistrate attaching the subject of dispute to withdraw the attachment at any time after being satisfied that there is no likelihood of the breach of the peace The proviso to sub-clause (2) which is newly added makes express provision for the delivery of the subject of dispute into the hands of a receiver subsequently appointed by any Civil Court

Power of receiver—See Civil Procedure Code V of 1908 Ord. XL which corresponds to s. 503 of the Code of 1882

1—SCOPE OF SECTION

2 Construction of section—Parties—The parties contemplated by this section are the parties concerned in the dispute relating to land or water as mentioned in s. 145 123 P. L. R. 1911—18 P. W. R. 1911—12 Cr. L. J. 403 The word then means the point of time at which possession becomes material See 33 C. 66, 27 C. 785 and Notes under Heading XI (c) to s. 145

3 S. 146 is a corollary to s. 145—Magistrate must act after recording preliminary proceeding under s. 145—S. 146 is a sort of corollary to s. 145 and the legality of an order under s. 146 depends on its having been preceded by legal proceedings under s. 145 If that proceedings under s. 145 are void for want of jurisdiction an order under s. 146 cannot stand 16 M. L. T. 32 = 15 Cr. L. J. 539; 40 C. 105 referred to A Magistrate cannot summarily pass an order of attachment without regarding preliminary proceedings under the preceding section. It is only when after regarding such a proceeding and taking evidence he decides that neither party is in possession or that he cannot satisfy himself as to which party is in possession that he can attach the land in dispute 1 C. L. R. 86 See also Weir II, 108 He has no jurisdiction to attach unless there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace as a result of conflicting claims and proceedings under s. 145 have been instituted 2 A. II—WHEN ATTACHMENT MAY BE MADE

4. Jurisdiction to attach arises only when neither party is in possession or adjudication of possession is impossible.—It is only when after recording a preliminary proceeding and recording evidence he decides that neither party is in possession or that he cannot satisfy himself as to which party is in possession, that he can attach the land in dispute 1 C. L. R. 86, Weir II, 108 Unless the Magistrate records a finding that he is unable to find which party is in actual possession he cannot pass an order under s. 146 16 Cr. L. J. 239 (M) The section applies only when the Magistrate finds that neither of the parties is in possession 9 C. W. N. 897 = 1 C. L. J. 331 = 2 Cr. L. J. 408; 5 C. W. N. 105 A Magistrate may pass an order under this section only when it is not possible on the evidence to decide as to the fact of possession The special provisions of this section are not meant to relieve the Magistrate from the duty of deciding on the ment but only allows an order for attachment to be made when it is not possible to decide which party is in possession. Weir II, 110; 8 M. L. T. 447 = 11 Cr. L. J. 860; 42 C. 105. A Magistrate can attach property only on the ground that he cannot satisfy himself as to which of the parties is in possession and not on his inability to decide on the rights of the parties. 6 Bom. L. R. 723. But the Magistrate is neither called upon nor empowered to consider the question of right of possession. 7 Bom. L. R. 15 = 2 Cr. L. J. 23. See also 27 C. 785.

But where certain Muhammadans complained against certain Hindus about the use of certain well and the Magistrate attached the well under s. 146. Held that the real question of decision before the Magistrate was whether Muhammadans also had a right to use the well and therefore there was no jurisdiction for preventing the Hindus from using the same. 23 A. L. J. 41.

5. Inability to adjudicate must be after inquiry.—A Magistrate is empowered to appoint a receiver under cl. (2) only after the termination of the inquiry as to possession conducted under cl. (4) only of s. 145. A Magistrate acts ultra vires if he appoints a receiver before the completion of the inquiry. 13 Cr. L. J. 536 (M). The doubt on which a Magistrate can act must arise from his inability to decide on evidence offered by the contending parties as to their possession and not on a doubt entertained without such inquiry. 1 C. L. R. 273. Unless and until a Magistrate has made the inquiry contemplated by s. 145 that is to say, unless he has received and considered the evidence produced before him by the parties the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to proceed under s. 146. 13 Cr. L. J. 470 (O). See also 12 C. W. N. 596 = 5 Cr. L. J. 202; 60 C. 105.

6. Magistrate bound to take evidence before attaching property.—A Magistrate is bound before attaching the property in dispute to take evidence for the purpose of ascertaining who was in actual possession of the subject of dispute, and to record his grounds for being satisfied that a breach of the peace was likely to occur. 18 W. R. 4. A Magistrate acts without jurisdiction in passing an order under this section without hearing witnesses who might have been called before him. 16 C. W. N. XCI. Where a Magistrate after refusing to grant time to a party to produce evidence, heard the parties and being unable to satisfy himself as to which of them was in possession attached the subject-matter in dispute, held that the Magistrate acted without jurisdiction and his order was illegal. 12 C. W. N. 596 = 8 Cr. L. J. 212. Where the order was on no evidence produced by either side and the land was attached under s. 146 held that the Magistrate acted without jurisdiction as he had taken no evidence. 42 C. 105. A Magistrate cannot without an inquiry attach the property pending the decision of a competent Civil Court. 1 S. L. R. 33 = 9 Cr. L. J. 272. But if the parties will not adduce evidence even if sufficient time was given to them the Magistrate may proceed under this section. 16 C. W. N. 80 = 11 Cr. L. J. 27.

7. Magistrate ordering attachment without considering the evidence acts without jurisdiction.—A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to pass an order under this section without investigating the question in the light of evidence. 11 Cr. L. J. 91 (L). In 16 C. W. N. XCI such an order was set aside but the Magistrate was directed to continue the proceedings under s. 145 and make the necessary orders after hearing the witnesses. 23 C. W. N. 910.

8. Section inapplicable when there is no doubt as to actual possession.—In a dispute between the wife of a lunatic and the manager of his estate with regard to the possession of certain property, it was proved that the wife was in actual possession, but there was a doubt whether she was not in possession merely as agent for her husband. Held, that the Magistrate ought not to have attached the property on the ground that he was unable to decide who was in possession. 3 C. L. R. 94. A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to proceed under this section when he finds that possession is actually with one party (Mad Cr. R. P. 11 of 1906).

(a) Section inapplicable when contending parties are in possession by turns.—When a Magistrate found that both the parties were in possession of a choultry by turns and passed an order of attachment Held that if the parties were in possession by turns, it was possible for the Magistrate to decide as to who was in possession at the date of the order and no order under this section could be made (Mad Cr. R. P. 99 and 149 of 1904).

(b) No jurisdiction when both parties are in possession.—When both parties are in possession no order can be made under s. 146. 27 M. L. J. 180 = 14 Cr. L. J. 579. Where proceedings under this Chapter have intention of the Legislature is obviously to maintain the status quo, and consequently the order of attachment was set aside, 9 C. W. N. 887=1 C. L. J. 331 = 2 Cr. L. J. 408. See also Weir II, 108

9. Where land in dispute is not in the possession of the rival contending parties, order of attachment is proper.—In a matter under s 145 between two rival Zemindars claiming to hold certain alluvial lands of which they admitted to be joint proprietors, but neither of them was in joint possession, the Magistrate passed an order of attachment, under this section of the lands as well as the crops standing thereon. Held, that no question of jurisdiction arose there was no ground for the exercise of revisional powers, 5 C. W. N. 105.

III.—WHAT PROPERTY MAY BE ATTACHED.

10. Attachment not desirable when dispute is about petty strips of land.—Where the dispute is regarding a narrow strip of land at the base of a hedge forming the boundary between two contiguous estates the Magistrate, instead of attaching such land, should find for one party or the other on the evidence with reference to the points of possession, 4 W. R. 26. Attaching the land is not a satisfactory way of settling a petty dispute of this description.

11. Crops cut and stored cannot be attached.—A Magistrate has no jurisdiction under this section to attach crops cut and stored, the word crops in s 145 (2) being limited to standing crops attached to the land. 30 C. 110. But the mere fact that the crops which are the subject of the dispute have been removed from the land is not sufficient to oust the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, Weir II, 108. See also 13 Cr. L. J. 295 (M).

12. Land recently delivered in accordance with Civil Court decree not to be attached.—Where the petitioner was put in possession of certain lands in execution of a Civil Court decree and evidence of the decree and of the possession given thereunder was placed before the Magistrate, but in spite of this he made an order of attachment under this section. Held that the order directing the lands to be attached was made without jurisdiction and that it was the duty of the Magistrate to have found possession in accordance with the decree of the Civil Court, 32 C. 796; 24 A. L. J. 399.

13. Where the lower Courts found that there was likelihood of breach of peace and that neither party was in possession of the immovable and movable property in dispute of a certain muth, and passed an order of attachment under s 146. Held that the movable property being appurtenant to the muth, the order of attaching the same was valid. 24 A. L. J. 383.

IV.—PROFITS OF ATTACHED PROPERTY.

13-A. Powers of Magistrate to deal with profits of attached property.—A Magistrate after passing orders under this section is entitled to refuse to hand over the value of the produce to any of the parties to the dispute, but he has no power to treat the profits claimed as derelict and as the property of Government, 123 P. L. R. 1911 = 18 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 403. Where a forest is attached, the Magistrate is entitled to take possession of the elephants therein (1912) M. W. N. 549 = 13 Cr. L. J. 222. When once the Magistrate has cancelled his preliminary order and released the immovable property from attachment, he has no jurisdiction to direct the delivery of the collected produce to one of the contending parties. The proper course to take under the circumstances is to retain the produce until one or the other of the parties obtained an order of a Civil Court. If the property is perishable or difficult to keep in safe custody it might be sold and the proceeds kept in deposit, 16 Cr. L. J. 104 (M). The Magistrate is not entitled after the final decision of the Civil Court, to retain in his hands, the profits derived from the attached property during the period of attachment, 1893 A. W. N. 100. See also 17 Cr. L. J. 331 (M) where 17 M. L. T. 392 was followed. 46 M. L. J. 563.

Where the Magistrate made an order for attachment of land and arranged for the collection of produce in order to avoid future litigation about the actual amount of produce collected by the petitioner, held, that the Magistrate has acted in excess of his powers conferred by the statute and that the order is therefore void and must be set aside, 7 L. 134.

14. Rights of receiver to accretions.—Where a receiver has been appointed under s 146 in respect of any property in dispute, he is entitled unless some special circumstance is established not only to the subject matter of the proceedings, but also to all accretions to the property and gives good title to a tenant under him. 34 C. W. N. 681 = 11 Cr. L. J. 288.

V.—DURATION OF ATTACHMENT.

15. Attachments should be withdrawn when party entitled to possession comes forward.—A Magistrate finding himself unable to determine which party was in possession of the subject of dispute ordered it to be attached. After the attachment had taken place, a third person came in and represented that neither of the contending parties had any interest in the land, as the land was leased to a person who was dead, and his right not being transferable, he, as landlord, took possession. The Magistrate did not remove the attachment, observing that the landlord's possession was without colour of law. Held that the Magistrate ought to have withdrawn his order when he found the property in dispute in possession of the landlord, 24 W. R. 40.

16. Decision of Court determining rights of attachment.—A Magistrate ceases to have authority to retain the property after a competent Civil Court determines the rights of parties, 7 Bar. L. T. 293. A person who after the attachment obtains the order of a Survey Court in his favour is entitled to have the attachment released because the order of the Collector under the Pengal Survey Act 1875 (B.C.) is a determination by a competent Court of the right of the persons entitled to the possession of the land 37 C. 331. So also is the decision of a Civil Court 14 C. W. N. XCI. It is the duty of a Magistrate to withdraw the attachment as soon as it is brought to his notice that a competent Court has determined the right of parties or the person entitled to possession, 17 M. L. T. 392. A Magistrate cannot keep going the attachment in spite of a decree of the Civil Court on the ground that the other party was going to appeal, 7 Bar. L. T. 293 = 15 Cr. L. J. 500. See also 17 Cr. L. J. 331 (M.) where 17 M. L. T. 392 was followed and it was held that the Magistrate should withdraw the attachment when there has been an adjudication in favour of some at least of the parties.

But in 30 C. W. N. 646 it was held that the entry in the Record of Rights could at best be treated as presumptive evidence of the relation of landlord and tenant, but could not be regarded as constituting the final adjudication of a competent Court within the meaning of s. 146 (1) and therefore the attachment need not have been released. But see 44 A. 879 below. Note 17 below.

17. Jurisdiction where right is to be determined by Revenue Court.—This section does not give jurisdiction to pass an order of attachment in a dispute between parties whose right regarding such dispute would have to be determined by a Revenue Court, 15 A. 394. But now the words 'Competent Court' has been substituted for 'Civil Court' in sub-sec. (1). The words "Competent Court" include a Revenue Court 46 A. 879. See 30 C. W. N. 646 above.

18. After release from attachment a fresh attachment may be ordered only after fresh proceedings.—Where a Magistrate being in doubt as to which of two parties was the rightful owner, attached it in order to prevent a breach of the peace, and later released it from attachment on the parties coming to an agreement but subsequently re-attached it on the appearance of a third claimant from whose attempt to obtain possession a breach of the peace was apprehended. Held that the Magistrate was only competent to order fresh attachment after taking the preliminary steps set forth in s. 145 and if on completion of the inquiry he found himself in the position described in this section and if there was any dispute, he ought to have proceeded de novo under this Chapter or have recourse to proceedings under Chapter VIII, 35 W. R. 68.

19-A. Parties not being able to give satisfactory proof of possession property was attached under this section and party referred to a Civil Court. The Civil Court held in favour of one party and that party applying to the Magistrate to raise the attachment that Magistrate reported to the District Magistrate who directed fresh proceedings under s. 145 to be taken. Held these proceedings were absolutely without jurisdiction, 17 A. L. J. 434.

VI.—PARTIES BOUND BY THE ATTACHMENT.

19. Order of attachment binds only persons who are parties to proceedings under s. 145.—A final order under this section cannot be made against persons who were not made parties to the proceeding under s. 145, or who were not in the case regarded by the Magistrate as such though notices had been issued upon them to file written statements and they had only entered appearance, but had done nothing else. Magistrates should be aware that one of the first principles on which Courts proceed is that judicial proceedings cannot bind a person who is not a party to them 3 C. W. N. 329. Therefore in a dispute about alluvial land of which neither party was admittedly in possession, the Magistrate passed an order for attaching the land as well as the crops standing thereon, it was held that so far as the crops were concerned the order of attachment was bad and without jurisdiction. For, the crops belonged to the tenants who grew them and they were not parties to proceedings, there being no dispute between them, the effect of the order would be prejudicial to their interests 5 C. W. N. 105. See also 123 P. L. R. 1911 = 18 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 403 and Notes to s. 145 under Heading XX (b).

20. Does not bind parties newly added.—Where a Magistrate added new parties in the course of proceedings under s. 145 and, being unable to find on the evidence which of the contending parties was in possession of the disputed property, attached it under this section it was held that the order of attachment was bind so far as it affected the possession of the party newly added 4 C. W. N. LXXXIII.

VII—EFFECT OF ATTACHMENT AND RECEIVERS APPOINTMENT

21 Trespass upon attached property is punishable criminally—A person who trespasses upon and cultivates immovable property which has been attached by a Magistrate under this section commits the offence of criminal trespass and is punishable under s 447 I P C 8 M L J 253.

22 Disobedience of an order under this section—Disobedience to an order under this section is not an offence falling under s 188 I P C and is not punishable as such 8 M L J 253—Weir I 143, and a Magistrate whose order attaching land has been disobeyed cannot himself try the accused for disobedience 13 C. W. N CCXXIII Cf Ratanlal 904

REVISION

23 Under the newly amended ss 435 and 439 the Sessions Court and the District Magistrate and the High Court have power of revising proceedings and orders under Chapter VII as such proceedings and orders have become revisable because of the omission of clause (3) from s 435 by the amending Act XVIII of 1923

24 High Courts power of revision in the appointment of a receiver—The High Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the petition for the appointment of a receiver pending the disposal of a criminal revision petition preferred against an order of the lower Court passed under s 145 of the Code 49 M L J 593

147. (1) Whenever any District Magistrate Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class is satisfied from a Police report or other information that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists regarding any alleged right of user of any land or water as explained in section 145 sub-section (2) (whether such right be claimed as an easement or otherwise) within the local limits of his jurisdiction he may make an order in writing stating the grounds of his being so satisfied and requiring the parties concerned in such dispute to attend the Court in person or by pleader within a time to be fixed by such Magistrate and to put in written statements of their respective claims and shall thereafter inquire into the matter in the manner provided in section 145 and the provisions of that section shall as far as may be be applicable in the case of such inquiry

Disputes concerning rights of use of immovable property etc

(2) If it appears to such Magistrate that such right exists he may make an order prohibiting any interference with the exercise of such right

Provided that no such order shall be made where the right is exercisable at all times of the year unless such right has been exercised within three months next before the institution of the inquiry or where the right is exercisable only at particular seasons or on particular occasions unless the right has been exercised during the last of such seasons or on the last of such occasion is before such institution

(3) If it appears to such Magistrate that such right does not exist he may make an order prohibiting any exercise of the alleged right

(4) An order under this section shall be subject to any subsequent decision of a Civil Court of competent jurisdiction

Note—Doubts have been expressed as to the procedure to be followed in cases under section 147. The recent amendments were introduced with a view to make it clear that the procedure laid down by section 145 is to be followed in cases of rights in to or over land or easements covered by section 147. It is also made clear that under this section a Magistrate can make an order prohibiting any exercise of an alleged right or prohibiting any interference with such alleged right subject to any subsequent decision of a Civil Court of competent jurisdiction as provided in cl (4) of the present section (see Sel Com Rep clauses 27 to 30).

Form of the order—In passing an order under this section the Court should adopt the Form No 4 Sch V 13 C W N 859 = 10 Cr L J 292 and see Notes below

I—APPLICATION OF SECTION

2 Duty of Magistrate to protect rights.—Where rights are threatened the Magistrate has jurisdiction to protect persons lawfully exercising their rights by prohibiting the persons from interfering with the exercise of that right 21 M L J 457 = (1911) M W N 46. See also 6 M L J 193 and 7 M 49. A Magistrate is bound to investigate a case in which the complainant alleged that his right of way is interfered with and ought not to refer him to the Civil Court 14 W R 23; but see 26 W R 20.

3. Where proceedings may involve a long and complicated inquiry, it is desirable that parties should be bound down to keep the peace.—Where the settlement of a dispute involves issues of right which can only be properly determined by a Civil Court and if a breach of the peace is likely to arise from such a dispute the proper course for the Magistrate to take is to bind down one if not both of the parties 4 C W N 779; 23 C 557; 26 C 923; Ratanlal 462; 29 M 97. Magistrates should not institute proceedings under this section unless they are satisfied that a real danger of the evil for the prevention of which the procedure was devised does in fact exist. Such inquiries may lead to injustice being done from defective procedure and a Magistrate would be wise not to use the section in cases where it must involve a long and complicated inquiry and the presence of a large number of people when the remedy of binding down a few persons to keep the peace is ready to his hand, 21 C 727; 23 C 557.

4. Where dispute concerns the possession of land, etc., and not merely the user of it, this section inapplicable.—A Magistrate cannot owing to the difficulty in attaching a property under s. 146 pass an order under this section. Section 147 is intended to apply only to cases where there might be disputes concerning the right of use of any land or water as distinct from disputes as to the title to possession of the land itself for which provision is made by ss. 145 and 146 16 O C 192 = 14 Cr L J 803.

5 Dispute likely to lead to a breach of the peace must exist.—In order to found the jurisdiction of a Magistrate it is necessary that a dispute exists between two persons concerning the right to the use of any land or water or any right of way, the jurisdiction is intended for the purpose of preserving the public peace. It does not convert the Magistrate into a Civil Court which is to determine the rights between parties or to consider and discuss any questions of proprietary damage done to individuals 22 W R 48. See 10 C 78 and 11 B 584. If the materials upon which the proceedings are based do not disclose the fact that there is an imminent danger of a breach of the peace the Magistrate should not take action under this section. Any evidence taken in the course of trial cannot give him jurisdiction which he does not otherwise possess 23 C 557; 20 C 520; 23 W R 74; 4 C L R 493; 7 C L R 352; 7 C 355; 20 C 513; 2 C W N 670; 6 M L J 193; 5 C 194.

6 No jurisdiction when the rights of parties have been judicially determined.—If on entering on an inquiry a Magistrate finds that the rights of the parties have been judicially ascertained he should not make any investigation into the matter as he could not assume that a dispute would be continued on a question which has been set at rest by judicial decision on the rights of parties 11 B 586. If he apprehends a breach of the peace he should proceed under Chapter VIII Ratanlal 462; 14 B 25.

II—WHAT RIGHTS MAY BE MADE THE SUBJECT-MATTER OF PROCEEDINGS

7 No jurisdiction where matters in dispute are not adjudicable by a Civil Court.—Where the matters in dispute are not adjudicable by a Civil Court this section does not give a Magistrate jurisdiction to interdict the persons named in his order e.g. from taking part in certain ceremonies in the temples specified 14 B 25. He should act under Chap. VIII if he apprehends a breach of the peace.

8 Is the section limited to rights to use land or water in the possession of others?—The proviso to deal with the rights of the user of land or water in the possession of others is intended to deal with the rights of the user of land or water in the possession of others. The words that the user to which the dispute relates is a user by a party other than the party in possession (7 M 460 followed while 4 C W N 779 not followed), and that the alteration of the language of the Code seems to be with the object of enlarging rather than restricting the scope of the section. The section is wide enough to cover a case like this where the user is by the person in possession 29 M 97.

9 Does the section apply to rights, arising out of contract or is it limited to recurring rights (in the nature of easements)?—Landlord and tenant.—A dispute between a landlord and his tenant regarding the right of the latter to re-construct a gola which has fallen down does not properly come under this section as the settlement of such a dispute involves issues of right which can properly be determined only by a Civil Court, and if a breach of the peace is likely to arise from such a dispute the proper course for the Magistrate to take is to bind down one if not both of the parties. The right of use of land contemplated by s. 147 is one of an entirely different description resembling a right of easement, not one arising from the terms of a contract between land lord and tenant in this matter (see proviso). If this right in dispute is exercisable at all times of this year it must have been exercised within three months next before the institution of the inquiry under s. 147. The right to erect or recreate a gola is not of this description, 4 C. W. N. 779. In 29 M. 97, it was held that the enclosing by a tenant of cultivable lands by a wall instead of a hedge is not prima facie an interference with the landlord's rights and ought not to be interfered with under this section by a Magistrate being a matter to be settled by a Civil Court. In such a case if a breach of the peace is apprehended security must be taken from the party in possession. See also 15 C. L. J. 267, 16 Bom. L. R. 29.

10. The right must have been exercised within three months.—An order as to the removal of an obstruction from a public way cannot be made unless the right has been exercised within three months prior to the institution of proceedings. 105 P. L. R. 1909; 14 Cr. L. J. 303 (C). See also 21 C. 727. Where however, a dispute existed concerning the right of use of certain water for irrigation and the Magistrate expressed his final order thus: To summarise the evidence the Court is of opinion that the first party, the Thikadar and Zemindar of B have proved an uninterrupted use of the water of this Calo for twenty years which they have enjoyed as an easement and as of right. Held that the objection that the Magistrate has not found that the right in dispute had been exercised within either of the periods mentioned in this section is not sustainable as the finding in the order is sufficient for the case 5 C. W. N. 67.

10-A. Non-exercise of the right must be within the control of the person claiming the right.—Where the applicants claimed a right to take a religious car on a certain day every year, but in the year 1924 they were unable to exercise that right owing to objections raised by the opponents. In 1925 they asked for an order to carry the car on that day, but the Magistrate declined to make an order under s. 147 of the Code on the ground that the applicants had not exercised that right in the preceding year. On application to the High Court held that the order of the Magistrate prohibiting the applicants from exercising their rights was wrong. The proviso to sub-sec. (2) to s. 147 of the Code contemplates a non-exercise of the right for reasons within the control of the persons claiming the right. 27 Bom. L. R. 1058.

11 Does the section apply to the 'right to officiate' in a mosque or temple?—(a) Yes according to Madr. s and Pombay. Where a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace is shown to exist concerning the right to perform a religious ceremony in a mosque the Magistrate may exercise the powers conferred by this section 11 M. 323. The right to perform religious worship in a temple comes under s. 147 and not under s. 145 3 Bom. L. R. 416. In 29 M. 237, the right to use a mosque by persons claiming to officiate as lazis was held to be within the scope of the section. So also a dispute as to the right to enter the temple and officiate at the kumbabishekam ceremony whenever it is necessary to perform it. 27 M. L. J. 587 = 16 M. L. T. 427 = 15 Cr. L. J. 671. AILING J. dissenting from 29 M. 237 and 27 M. L. J. 587 and approving 37 C. 578, held that the words 'land or water' are used in s. 147 in their ordinary significance without the extended meaning assigned to them in s. 145 and the words therefore will not cover the right to perform 'puja' in a temple nor the right of the management of the temple itself. 17 Cr. L. J. 235 = 34 In Ca. 631 (M), 43 M. L. J. 528.

12 Contra Calcutta.—In 37 C. 578 it was however, laid down dissenting from 29 M. 237 and 11 M. 323 that though s. 147 is not in terms confined to easements but relates to any dispute concerning the right of use of land or water the section does not cover a dispute to perform the duties of a Pujan in a temple as the dispute is not about the use of land. It is the worship which is disputed and not the use of the land. In 33 C. 387, this ruling was approved but the dispute there was as regards the offerings made in a temple and it was held that the offerings given by the worshippers for the worship of any deity are not profits arising out of a building and the dispute is one about movable property. 52 C. 939.

13. Right to use of a pathway.—A right to a flow of water and a right to use a pathway across the how long and if he finds him to be in possession should retain him in it leaving the owner of the land to refer the question of right to the easement to the Civil Court. He should not decide against the complainant because he may have another right of way leading to the same place 2 W. R. 64.

14. Right of using a highway.—(a) The conveyance of a corpse along a highway is not an unlawful use of the highway except when danger to the public health is occasioned thereby. Therefore an order preventing a Hindu funeral procession from passing along a highway to which the Muhammadans objected is bad in law, 7 M. 49; 8 M. L. J. 193. It is doubtful whether this section applies to such cases at all. Anyhow a Magistrate has no jurisdiction to pass an order under this section or § 145 unless he finds that but for the order, there will be a breach of the peace, Weir II, 117.

(b) Religious processions.—A Magistrate is not authorized under this section to make an order prohibiting religious processions where the right to prevent the procession is not found to exist Ratanlal 543. A Magistrate has jurisdiction under § 147 to pass orders even against the right of passage through a public street 15 Cr. L. J. 767 = 31 In. Ca. 367 (M.)

13. Obstruction to use of water for irrigation.—Where it was found that the first party had a right to the flow of water for purposes of irrigation from a certain channel passing through the village of the second party who obstructed such flow by erecting certain bunds. Held that the Magistrate is competent under this section to direct that the obstruction be removed, 5 C. W. N. 67; 36 C. 923; Oadh S. C. No. 64 and 13 W. R. 51; Weir II, 63.

14. Right to let off water.—The right which is claimed is a natural right of every landholder to the use and enjoyment of his own land and among the necessary incidents to such enjoyment is the right to let off water by the natural course in which it has always flowed and would always flow so as to prevent inundation of his own land. When the second party erected a bund on the boundary of the first party's village to prevent the flow of such water held, that the erection of such bund was an infringement of that natural right, and the Magistrate had jurisdiction to direct the first party to remove the bund with the assistance of the Police, 15 C. L. J. 267 = 12 Cr. L. J. 319. Section 147 is not confined to mere easements. See also 39 C. 560.

15. A right to take water from a well.—Where Christians were prevented by Hindus from the lawful exercise of their right to take water from a well, held, that the Magistrate had jurisdiction under this section to pass an order forbidding the Hindus from interfering with the exercise of that right, (1911) M. W. N. 44.

16. Rights to fisheries and ferries.—It was held that the words "right to do anything in or upon tangible immovable property" included right of fishing, 23 C. 85, 23 C. 557, and a Magistrate is competent to take action under this section in case of any dispute concerning the exercise of Julkar right. As to ferry right, see 26 C. 188; 3 C. W. N. 145 and Notes under Heading 15 to § 145.

17. Easements.—For definition, see s. 4 of Act V of 1882. This term includes profits a prendre, 23 C. 55. This section is not confined to cases of easement acquired by uninterrupted enjoyment for twenty years as provided by s. 26 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), 13 C. W. N. 839 = 10 Cr. L. J. 292.

20. Right to sandal paste over an idol.—On a complaint being made that the right to take sandal paste from the idol of Shri Pundurang belonged to the complainants and their right was unlawfully disputed and the dispute was likely to cause a breach of the peace an order was made declaring the complainants' right to the paste and directing that the accused should remove the paste and hand it over to the complainants. Held, that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction. It was not a dispute concerning the right of use of any land or water or of any right of way or easement over the same. If the Magistrate was of opinion that a breach of the peace was likely he ought to have proceeded under Chapter VIII. 4 Bom. L. R. 433

21. Rights which are not within the scope of this section.—(a) Right of privacy.—The right of privacy is not a right in the assertion of which a person can be justified in entering upon the premises of another and closing the windows and doors, nor is it a right to prevent the doing of anything in or upon any tangible immovable property, within the meaning of this section. Ratanlal 357.

(b) Right to use privy.—A privy is neither a land nor a water nor the use of it an easement over the same within the meaning of this section, and a Magistrate has no jurisdiction under this section to deal with the same, 15 Bom. L. R. 329 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 72 = 14 Cr. L. J. 400

(c) Obstruction to drain.—The obstruction of a drain into which the sewage of the complainant's house falls, does not come under this section 5 W. R. 55 = 1 Wym. Cr. Ral. 52. In such a case, a civil suit and an injunction would be the proper remedy. See 5 W. R. 57 = 1 Wym. Cr. Ral. 50, which relates to an obstructing wall.

(d) Right of a tenant to put up a wall.—See 4 C. W. N. 779 and 29 M. 97 in Note 10

(e) Right to worship.—See 37 C. 878; 38 C. 387 and Note 12 above.

III.—INQUIRY.

(A)—PROCEDURE

22. Necessity of recording order before issue of process.—This section does not require the Magistrate as § 147 does, to formally record a proceeding stating the grounds of his being satisfied that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists before he can institute proceedings under it, though it requires the Magistrate to be satisfied upon proper materials before him that such a dispute does exist, 2 C. W. N. 670. Possibly the reference to s 145 is only to sub-sec. (4). Failure to record a proceeding under this section does not render the order of the Magistrate bad 27 M. L. J. 587 = 16 M. L. T. 427 = 15 Cr. L. J. 671. It is to be noted that the words 'in the manner provided by s 145' were not in the Code of 1882 under which 2 C. W. N. 670 was decided. Anyhow the inquiry contemplated does not necessarily include the preliminary order. See 21 C. 727.

23. Mode of proceeding must be as under s. 145.—A case under s 147 is to be decided by the same procedure and on the same principles as a case under s 145, 38 C. 337. An order under this section is within jurisdiction if it was passed on proceedings under s 133, without any action in accordance with s 145. Section 147 clearly says that the procedure under this section shall be as under s 145 which includes the filing of written statements taking of evidence and if necessary, local investigation. 15 C. W. N. 667 = 12 Cr. L. J. 43.

(B)—NOTICE TO PARTIES AND EVIDENCE

24. Mode of inquiry and taking evidence.—Notice to principal parties necessary.—The inquiry contemplated by this section, is a judicial inquiry and the opinion formed by a Magistrate must be a judicial one, based on evidence legally recorded by him in the manner provided by s 356 and on due notice to the persons who respectively claim to deny the right, the subject of dispute. Notice to servants of such person is not equivalent to notice to them and in such cases actual notice should be given to all persons claiming or denying the right and interested in the subject matter of the inquiry 21 C. 737, 2 C. W. N. 670. Want of notice vitiates proceedings, 105 P. L. R. 1909.

25. Ex-parte order illegal.—Where a complaint was made to a Magistrate that an obstruction had been raised and existed on land reserved by Government and dedicated as a public road, held, that an ex-parte order directing the party in possession not to retain possession of the land until he should obtain the decision of a competent Civil Court adjudging him to be entitled to exclusive possession with a further direction to remove the obstruction was bad in law 4 M. L. J. 121. The word 'may' does not make inquiry optional with the Magistrate. Unlike an order under s 133 the inquiry under this section should precede any order. See also 21 C. 727.

26. Burden of proof.—A Magistrate has a discretion whether he will interfere in a case of a dispute under this section. The complainant must make out a sufficient case for the interference of the Magistrate. 11 W. R. 3. Persons who claim a right of restraining other people from exercising ordinary proprietary rights over their own land must establish the same, i.e., the burden of proof lies on them, 11 C. 52. In this case it objected to, a neighbouring Zemindar cutting a bund situated in B's land.

27. Legal proof of user necessary.—This section does not refer to stale cases, and no order can be passed thereunder without legal proof that the subject of dispute is open to the use of the public or any person or class of persons, 5 W. R. 57. There must be a finding that the right was exercised within three months 14 Cr. L. J. 303 (C). An order under the section cannot be made without some evidence in proof of the allegation contained in the written statement, where the party who, in the ordinary course of things would oppose the order, does not expressly admit the allegations made by the other party. An order therefore based solely on the written statement of one of the parties is illegal, even though the other party is ex-parte, 30 C. 918. But where the allegations of one party are admitted by the other, no evidence is necessary in addition to the written statement, 7 C. W. N. 351. The jurisdiction given by this section to decide for a time the right to enjoyment of property should not be exercised except on clear and satisfactory proof. Where the only evidence is that of user, it should be such as to show satisfactorily acts of enjoyment exercised as a matter of right and permitted uninterruptedly for some considerable length of time, 4 M. H. C. R. Ap. XXVI. But any intermittent encroachment on the part of a person who claims no easement or customary right would not affect the title or possession of the superior landlord, 31 C. 48 (L. R. 13 A. C. 793 at p. 799). The possession of the intruder, ineffectual for the purpose of transferring title, ceases upon its abandonment to be effectual for any purpose. It does not leave behind it any cloud on the title of the rightful owner, 32 C. 287.

28. Summary disposal of case without evidence on inspection of locality.—In a matter under this section as under s 145 a Magistrate is bound to hear the evidence tendered by the parties, he cannot summarily deal with it after inspection of the locality, 4 C. W. N. 779; 9 W. R. 84 and 7 B. L. R. 329; 3 Bom. L. R. 416. Where a Magistrate made an order under this section declaring possession to be with a certain person without making any inquiry as to the party in possession, it was held to be illegal and was set aside under s. 15 of the Charter Act, 29 M. 237, and Notes 1, 3 and 6 to s. 148.

(C)—PARTIES

29 Parties to the inquiry—Owners not necessary—For the purpose of the enquiry contemplated by this section it is sufficient if the persons who claim for themselves the right though that right is derived from others are made parties. The owners are no necessary parties 23 G. 55 See 2 G. W. N. 870

30 Adding parties to the proceedings.—A Magistrate is not competent to add parties to the proceedings under this section any more than he can to proceedings under s. 145, 5 G. W. N. 67. But see Note 6 to s. 145 as the effect of the Full Bench Ruling in 30 G. 135

31 Though order ineffectual as against persons not parties to proceedings, it is not bad as regards the other parties.—Where a dispute existed concerning the right to use certain water for the purpose of irrigation and after declaring the existence of that right in favour of the first party, the Magistrate coupled with them other persons who were not parties to the proceedings held that the order is bad so far as regards persons who were not parties to the proceedings but that does not make the whole order illegal so as to make it ineffectual as to him on those to whom it was properly directed 5 G. W. N. 67. And so also the order in favour of persons not parties is illegal 7 M. 460. See also Notes under Heading A (b) to s. 145

(D)—NATURE OF ORDER

32 No power to make a declaratory order.—This section is not intended to provide a substitute for civil suit to declare the rights of parties 6 W. R. 74, but see 14 W. R. 23. Nor does it enable a Magistrate to make a purely declaratory order. It only enables him to prevent arbitrary interruptions by any person of rights actually enjoyed, which have been exercised by the public or a person or a class of persons 5 G. 194. See also 24 W. R. 20. An order which declares that as between the contending parties certain land in dispute does not belong to the public is not one the contravention of which can form the subject of an order under s. 188 I. P. C., 24 W. R. 20

33. Competence of a Magistrate to direct removal of an obstruction.—Language of the section inartistic.—It is obvious that this section has not been happily expressed and that if strictly construed it is meaningless. A Magistrate empowered to enquire into a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace concerning the right of use of land or water including any right of way or other easement over the same and it is clearly the object of the law that by his order he shall settle that dispute, and that his order is to be in force until the party against whom the order is passed shall have obtained the decision of a competent Court in his favour.

No provision is made for a case in which the Magistrate's order may be modified though from the nature of the matter in issue this may constantly happen. But what does the section mean by stating that the Magistrate's order is to permit such thing to be done or to direct that such thing shall not be done? The word such must refer to something in the context but the section is silent in this respect. An explanation is suggested that such thing means the matter in dispute connected with the right of use of land or water. This may be what was intended. It is to be regretted that the law should have been so imperfectly and inartistically expressed. AR PRINSIP in 5 G. W. N. 67, wherein it was held that the Magistrate was competent to direct the removal of an obstruction to a right of way caused by the erection of hauls there being a likelihood of a breach of the peace in consequence of the obstruction and this was followed in 5 G. W. N. 333, 30 G. 223, 15 G. L. J. 267 = 12 Cr. L. J. 319, 39 G. 550. But it was held by the Madras High Court in 4 M. 121 that a Magistrate has no jurisdiction under this section to direct the removal of any obstruction to a public way and see Weir I, 143, Weir II, 118, where it was held that an order directing a person to remove a fence so as to allow of the use of an alleged right of way cannot be passed by a Magistrate under this section and disobedience of such an order is not an offence under s. 188 I. P. C. This case was followed in 15 Cr. L. J. 291 (M). A Magistrate should proceed under Chapter X for the removal of an unlawful obstruction from a thoroughfare 5 W. R. 5. But in 26 M. L. J. 233 = 15 M. L. T. 230 = (1914) M. W. N. 394 = 15 Cr. L. J. 362, it was held that the fact that s. 133 expressly provided for an order by a Magistrate directing removal of obstruction to a pathway did not necessarily imply that no similar order can be passed in proceedings under this section even where a person had obstructed a pathway by a fence. A Magistrate has jurisdiction under this section to direct such a person not to obstruct the pathway 4 M. 121 and Weir II, 143 144 were not followed. A suggestion was made that 4 M. 121 might be distinguished on the ground that that obstruction in that case was a permanent one while in this case the obstruction was flimsy.

In 30 G. W. N. 238 it was held that the change in the wording of s. 147 was made with a view to make it clear that the Magistrate has only the power to issue a prohibitory order restraining any person from doing any act interfering with the right of another when the Magistrate finds that it exists. But the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to make an order in the nature of a mandatory injunction.

34 Can the Magistrate order the Police to remove obstruction?—Where on a party failing to remove a bund in pursuance of an order under this section the Magistrate ordered the Police to remove the bund held that the order must be set aside. There was no indication in the Code that the Legislature intended the Magistrate to carry out an order under this section through the agency of the Police. The section clearly contemplates orders directed to the persons who are parties to the dispute. 36 C 923, distinguishing 5 C W N 67 and 335. In 15 C L J 267 = 12 Cr L J 319, however, it was held following 5 C W N 67 and 335 and distinguishing 36 C 923 that Magistrate has jurisdiction to order the Police to assist a party in removing a bund or obstruction. This decision was followed in 39 C 560.

35 Duration of the order must be fixed—An order made under this section is bad in form unless it specifies the time for which it is to operate. Therefore a first-class Magistrate cannot forbid certain persons from taking part in any of the ceremonies in or appertaining to certain temples. 14 B 25 Cf 34 C 897 (FB)

36 Such rights—For meaning of the expression see 23 C W N 956

IV.—REVISION

37 Revision—The High Court will not interfere with the discretion of the Magistrate. 7 M 460, 29 M 97, 18 Cr L J 359. But if the order is one made without jurisdiction or if the Magistrate has not followed the procedure laid down the High Court will interfere. 103 P L R 1909 and see Notes under Heading XX to ss 145 and 485 (3).

146. (1) Whenever a local inquiry is necessary for the purposes of this Chapter *any District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate may depute any Magistrate subordinate to him to make the inquiry, and may furnish him with such written instructions as may seem necessary for his guidance and may declare by whom the whole or any part of the necessary expenses of the inquiry shall be paid.

(2) The report of the person so deputed may be read as evidence in the case.

(3) When any costs have been incurred by any party to a proceeding under this Chapter the Magistrate passing a decision under section 145 section 146 or section 147 may direct by whom such costs shall be paid whether by such party or any other party to the proceeding and whether in whole or in part or proportion. Such costs may include any expenses incurred in respect of witnesses and of pleaders fees which the Court may consider reasonable.

Note—The last sentence of subsection (3) is now added by Act XVIII of 1923

LOCAL INQUIRY

1 Local investigation when to be ordered—Local investigation should only be ordered in cases where it is absolutely required by the Courts on subordinate points for a determination of the main issue in the case. For instance in cases in which it is necessary to ascertain by measurement disputed areas of land or to ascertain whether particular lands are identical with lands detailed in documents and in such like cases. When however any fact can be elicited by evidence that evidence should be heard by the Court itself—Cal H C Cr No 41 of 1886. In a case where levels and the fall of water are concerned local inspection is eminently necessary. 15 C L J 267 = 12 Cr L J 319. Local inquiry may be ordered even after rejecting application for time for filing written statement. 15 Cr L J 302 (C). See also Ord XXVI ss 9 to 12 of the Code of Civil Procedure which provide for the conduct of a local investigation by a duly appointed Commissioner.

2 Local inquiry should not be directed to matters which may be proved by oral evidence—The local inquiry referred to in the section should be restricted solely to some question relating to the features of the property about which the dispute has arisen and should not be directed to any matter which can be proved before the Magistrate by oral evidence such as the question of actual possession.—Per PRINSEP J 3 C L R, 134. See also Weir II, 118, 31 M 82, 10 A L J 465. See Notes under Heading XIII (a) to s 145. But see 37 M L J 589 in which 31 M 82 is not followed.

3. Who ought to be deputed to make the local inquiry—The duty of making the local inquiry should be deputed to a Magistrate not to a Cum a goe. 7 C L R, 332. And it must be a personal inquiry by the person deputed. 5 C W N 686

* The words "for witnesses and pleaders fees or to be" have been omitted by Act XVIII of 1923

4. Trying Magistrate may himself make local inquiry.—The rule that in criminal cases, Courts are only justified in acting on the evidence which is before them in cases under s. 145, nothing in law to the contrary notwithstanding, is not a rule of law, but a rule of evidence, and does not act upon hearsay evidence. 15 C. L. J. 257 = 12 Cr. L. J. 319; 12 C. W. N. 898 = 8 Cr. L. J. 202. The trying Magistrate may himself make the local inquiry, 5 C. W. N. 696.

5. Not necessary to examine deputed Magistrate as a witness.—This is an enabling section authorizing the District or Subdivisional Magistrate to depute any Subordinate Magistrate to make a local inquiry and in that case the Magistrate's report may be read as evidence without his being examined on oath, 12 Cr. L. J. 430 (C). But the Magistrate cannot refer the only issues raised in the case to a Subordinate Magistrate and decide the case without examining any witnesses merely on the report of the Subordinate Magistrate, 10 A. L. J. 463 = 12 Cr. L. J. 777.

6. Parties entitled to copy of report of local inquiry.—When such inquiry has been made and the result reported, it becomes part of the proceedings in the case and the party affected by it is entitled to be acquainted with the results thereof, and to have an opportunity of rebutting the report of such inquiry, if he thinks it necessary, 21 W. R. 23.

COSTS.

7. Cost cannot be awarded where there is no decision.—An order allowing the petitioners to withdraw a case initiated under s. 145 cannot be considered a decision and that being so, the Magistrate cannot while following the withdrawal direct him to pay the costs of the counter petitioners, 9 M. L. T. 324 = 12 Cr. L. J. 49.

8. Assessment of costs within the discretion of the Magistrate.—A wide discretion as to costs is given to the Magistrate by sub-section (3), but in assessing costs he should not fix an arbitrary sum (Cal. H. C. Cr. Ref. 477 of 1902). If the costs are such as fall within the scope of the section the High Court will not consider whether they are excessive or deficient, 13 C. W. N. 811 = 12 Cr. L. J. 376. But the order must give particulars as to how the Magistrate arrived at the figure, else the order will be set aside, 14 C. W. N. 73.

9. What costs may be directed to be paid.—The only costs which the Magistrate may under this section direct to be paid are costs which have been incurred as witnesses, or pleaders' fees, or both, 32 C. 602. (a) Damages.—A Magistrate has no power under this section to direct that one party should pay another damages apart from such costs. He cannot include costs for cutting crops which have been attached. 32 C. 602. (b) Penalty for insufficient stamp duty.—A Magistrate is not entitled to deal with penalties on documents not properly stamped by reason of s. 44 (3) of the Stamp Act. S. 44 (3) of the Stamp Act cannot clothe the Magistrate with jurisdiction to deal with costs other than those provided for by s. 148 (3), 13 M. L. T. 224 = 12 Cr. L. J. 297; 15 Cr. L. J. 210 (M). (c) Extra fee and travelling expenses.—Nor should he include additional costs incurred for extra fees and for travelling and other expenses of a like nature incurred by bringing Pleaders or Counsel from a distance, 9 C. W. N. 837 = 1 C. L. J. 331 = 2 Cr. L. J. 408.

10. Costs to be awarded by Magistrate when passing decision.—The order must be made within a reasonable time after the disposal of the main question.—The law is that the order of costs must be made within a reasonable time and after notice to the other side. There is no decision of this Court which lays down that an order for costs must necessarily be made at the time the judgment is delivered, 15 C. L. J. 267 = 12 Cr. L. J. 319; 15 C. W. N. 811 = 12 Cr. L. J. 376; Mad. Cr. R. P. No. 332 of 1905. An order of costs should be a rule, be made at the time of the passing of the main order when the facts are fresh in mind of the Magistrate, 13 O. C. 66 = 11 Cr. L. J. 335. The award of costs should be made by the Magistrate at the time of passing his decision under s. 145, in the same manner as under s. 218 Civ. P. C., the order for costs of any application should be made when the application is disposed of, 22 C. 337. The words 'at the time' were explained in 15 C. W. N. 811 = 12 Cr. L. J. 376 to mean while the same Magistrate is still sitting and the parties are able to appear before him, 23 C. 37; 28 C. 302. In 29 M. 373, it was laid down that though the award of costs under this section should almost invariably be contemporaneous with the decision of main question and the order passed thereon under s. 145 yet the fact that costs were awarded subsequently, would not render the award invalid, especially where the circumstances of the case require the postponement of the question of costs. But no order in the matter should be passed, except within a reasonable time after the disposal of the main question and in the presence of both the parties. It is in the discretion of the Magistrate to refuse to award costs if there has been unnecessary delay in applying for costs, 47 Cal. 974.

34 Can the Magistrate order the Police to remove obstruction?—Where on a party failing to remove a bund in pursuance of an order under this section the Magistrate ordered the Police to remove the bund held that the order must be set aside. There was no indication in the Code that the Legislature intended the Magistrate to carry out an order under this section through the agency of the Police. The section clearly contemplates orders directed to the persons who are parties to the dispute, 36 C 923, distinguishing 5 C. W. N 67 and 335 In 15 C L J 267 = 12 Cr L J 319, however, it was held following 5 C. W. N 67 and 335 and distinguishing 36 C. 923 that Magistrate has jurisdiction to order the Police to assist a party in removing an obstruction. This decision was followed in 39 C. 560

35 Duration of the order must be fixed—An order, made under this section is bad in form, unless it specifies the time for which it is to operate. Therefore a first-class Magistrate cannot forbid certain persons from taking part in any of the ceremonies in or appertaining to certain temples 14 B 25 Cf 34 C. 897 (F B)

36 Such rights—For meaning of the expression see 23 C W N 956

IV.—REVISION

37 Revision—The High Court will not interfere with the discretion of the Magistrate 7 M 460, 29 M 97, 15 Cr. L J 359 But if the order is one made without jurisdiction or if the Magistrate has not followed the procedure laid down the High Court will interfere 105 P. L R 1909 and see Notes under Heading XX to ss 145 and 485 (8).

146. (1) Whenever a local inquiry is necessary for the purposes of this Chapter,* any District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate may depute any Magistrate subordinate to him to make the inquiry, and may furnish him with such written instructions as may seem necessary for his guidance and may declare by whom the whole or any part of the necessary expenses of the inquiry shall be paid

(2) The report of the person so deputed may be read as evidence in the case

(3) When any costs have been incurred by any party to a proceeding under this

Chapter the Magistrate passing a decision under section 145 section 146 or section 147 may direct by whom such costs shall be paid, whether by such party or any other party to the proceeding and whether in whole, or in part or proportion. Such costs may include any expenses incurred in respect of witnesses and of pleaders fees which the Court may consider reasonable

LOCAL INQUIRY.

1 Local investigation when to be ordered—Local investigation should only be ordered in cases where they are absolutely required by the Courts on subordinate points for a determination of the main issue in the case for instance in cases in which it is necessary to ascertain by measurement disputed areas of land or to ascertain whether particular lands are identical with lands detailed in documents and in such like cases. 3. Who ought to be deputed to make the local inquiry—The duty of making the local inquiry should be deputed to a Magistrate not to a Cannogee 7 C. L. R. 352 And it must be a personal inquiry by the person deputed 5 C. W. N 686

* The words "for witnesses or pleaders fees or both" have been omitted by Act XVIII of 1923

4. Trying Magistrate may himself make local inquiry.—The rule that in criminal cases, Courts are only justified in holding cases under s. 147 nothing in law to prevent what he saw and does not act upon hearsay evidence. 13 C. L. J. 257 = 12 Cr. L. J. 319; 12 C. W. N. 896 = 8 Cr. L. J. 202. The trying Magistrate may himself make the local inquiry, 5 C. W. N. 636.

5 Not necessary to examine deputed Magistrate as a witness.—This is an enabling section authorizing the District or Sub-divisional Magistrate to depute any Subordinate Magistrate to make a local inquiry and in that case the Magistrate's report may be read as evidence without his being examined on oath. 12 Cr. L. J. 439 (C). But the Magistrate cannot refer the only issues raised in the case to a Subordinate Magistrate and decide the case without examining any witnesses merely on the report of the Subordinate Magistrate, 10 A. L. J. 463 = 13 Cr. L. J. 777.

6 Parties entitled to copy of report of local inquiry.—When such inquiry has been made and the result reported, it becomes part of the proceedings in the case and the party affected by it is entitled to be acquainted with the results thereof, and to have an opportunity of rebutting the report of such inquiry, if he thinks it necessary, 21 W. R. 23.

COSTS.

7. Cost cannot be awarded where there is no decision.—An order allowing the petitioners to withdraw a case initiated under s. 145 cannot be considered a decision and that being so, the Magistrate cannot while following the withdrawal direct him to pay the costs of the counter petitioners, 9 W. L. T. 324 = 12 Cr. L. J. 49.

8. Assessment of costs within the discretion of the Magistrate.—A wide discretion as to costs is given to the Magistrate by sub-section (3), but in assessing costs he should not fix an arbitrary sum (Cal. H. C. Cr. Ref. 477 of 1902). If the costs are such as fall within the scope of the section the High Court will not consider whether they are excessive or deficient, 15 C. W. N. 811 = 12 Cr. L. J. 376. But the order must give particulars as to how the Magistrate arrived at the figure, else the order will be set aside, 16 C. W. N. 73.

9. What costs may be directed to be paid.—The only costs which the Magistrate may under this section direct to be paid are costs which have been incurred as witnesses, or pleaders' fees, or both, 32 C. 602. (a) Damages—A Magistrate has no power under this section to direct that one party should pay another damages apart from such costs. He cannot include costs for cutting crops which have been attached. 32 C. 602.

10. Costs to be awarded by Magistrate when passing decision.—The order must be made within a reasonable time after the disposal of the main question.—The law is that the order of costs must be made within a reasonable time and after notice to the other side. There is no decision of this Court which lays down that an order for costs must necessarily be made at the time the judgment is delivered, 15 C. L. J. 267 = 12 Cr. L. J. 319; 15 C. W. N. 811 = 12 Cr. L. J. 376, Mad. Cr. R. P. No. 352 of 1903. An order of costs should as a rule, be made at the time of the passing of the main order when the facts are fresh in mind of the Magistrate, 13 O. C. 66 = 11 Cr. L. J. 335. The award of costs should be made by the Magistrate at the time of passing his decision under s. 145, in the same manner as under s. 218, Civ. P. C., the order for costs of any application should be made when the application is disposed of. 22 C. 337. The words 'at the time' were explained in 15 C. W. N. 811 = 12 Cr. L. J. 376 to mean while the same Magistrate is still sitting and the parties are able to especially where the circumstances of the case require the postponement of the question of costs. But no order in the matter should be passed, except within a reasonable time after the disposal of the main question and in the presence of both the parties. It is in the discretion of the Magistrate to refuse to award costs if there has been unnecessary delay in applying for costs, 47 Cal. 974.

11. Delay in applying would be sufficient ground to refuse costs.—Order for costs and assessment of the same should not be made by the Magistrate, after a long interval, and without allowing all the parties affected an opportunity to appear and show cause 24 C. 757; 10 C. W. N. 1030 = 4 Cr. L. J. 171; 29 M. 373.

12. Only trying Magistrate may order costs.—It is only the Magistrate who passes the order under ss 145, 146 or 147 that can decide by whom costs are to be paid in such a case, though the actual assessment may be made by his successor. Section 148 cannot be interpreted as authorizing the successor of the Magistrate who passed the order under s. 145 to award costs to the successful party. Where a final order declaring possession was made under s. 145 on 14th June, 1909 and no application for costs was put in until 6th October, 1909, when the Magistrate who made the final order had left the district and the Magistrate succeeding made an order granting costs, the order was set aside as without jurisdiction (21 C. 609; 22 C. 334 and 337; 23 C. 27; 24 C. 757 and 29 M. 373 considered), 13 O. G. 66 = 11 Cr. L. J. 333.

13. Assessment of costs may be made by Magistrate's successor.—Where a decision has been given in a case under s 145, and an order for costs has been made at the same time and by the same Magistrate, there is no objection to the amount of such costs being afterwards assessed by a different Magistrate, if an application for that purpose is made to him within a reasonable time, 22 C. 334; 23 C. 37; 23 C. 302; 10 C. W. N. 1030 = 4 Cr. L. J. 171, 15 C. W. N. 811 = 12 Cr. L. J. 376; 27 M. L. J. 613 = 16 M. L. T. 343 = 15 Cr. L. J. 876. Once an order for costs has been made, there is no reason why the amount should not be subsequently assessed, as is done in civil cases, 14 M. L. T. 195 = (1913) M. W. N. 771 = 14 Cr. L. J. 870. In this case, the Magistrate directed that a certain party should pay the costs without specifying the amount and fixed the amount subsequently having heard both the parties on the matter.

14 Award of or assessment of costs must be made after notice to party affected.—A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to pass an order under this section, making a party liable for a certain sum as costs, without notice to him so that he might have an opportunity of contesting the same, 28 C. 302 Proceedings under ss. 145 and 147 are quasi-civil in their nature. An order for, and the assessment of, costs under this section should be made at the time of passing decision under s. 145 in the presence of parties or subsequently after notice, 28 C. 767; 29 M. 373; 14 C. W. N. 55; 13 C. W. N. 170; 15 C. W. N. 311 = 12 Cr. L. J. 376 Previous order directing costs cannot be set aside without notice. 10 C. W. N. 1030 = 4 Cr. L. J. 171.

15 Assessment of costs may be made in favour of legal representative of party.—At the time of passing the final order, the Magistrate directed payment of costs, but through some negligence in the Magistrate's office the costs were not included. Nearly three years later, the successful party having died, his son applied to the successor in office of the Magistrate to have the costs assessed, held, that the application by the son was sustainable and that he was entitled to have his costs, 27 M. L. J. 813 = 16 M. L. T. 243 = 15 Cr. L. J. 676. Courts should always lean in favour of that view or the law which would enable a party who has got an order in his favour to obtain the fruits of that order. Courts have power within reasonable limits to enact rules of procedure for this purpose, when the Legislature has not enacted such rules and there is no prohibition. Per Sadasiva Ayyar J.

16. Power of High Court to order costs.—The Madras High Court in Letters Patent Appeal 88 of 1908, held that costs may be awarded by the High Court, contra see Oudh (SC) 277. See also 43 M. 282; 27 Bom. C. R. 1353 and also Note 170 to section 145 above.

17. Revision.—When a Magistrate awards costs which are not mentioned in the section it is open to the High Court to interfere in revision 13 M. L. J. 225 = 13 Cr. L. J. 297. In 4 C. W. N. 83 it was held that the CHAPTER XIII.

PREVENTIVE ACTION OF THE POLICE

Police to prevent cognizable offences

149. Every Police-officer may interpose for the purpose of preventing, and shall, to the best of his ability, prevent the commission of any cognizable offence.

Notes.—1. Prevention of cognizable offences.—I or definition, see s. 4 (f) and the General Police Act of 1861 printed as Appendix XIV

2. Interposition of the Police for prevention.—By s. 151, a Police-officer may arrest without warrant, if it appears to him that the commission of an offence cannot otherwise be prevented. Should he do so, his subsequent procedure must be regulated by s. 60. An officer in charge of a Police-station can proceed to inquire into such offences when they have been committed within the limits of such station. He should, however, when a complaint is made to him reduce such complaint into writing, and enter the substance thereof in the diary, whether the occurrence which is the subject of the complaint took place within his jurisdiction or not.—Beng Pol Man., 2nd Ed. p. 274

3. Police-officers to secure the goodwill of the people, etc., for prevention and detection of crime.—Police-officers shall themselves and shall encourage their subordinates, to endeavour to secure the general goodwill of the people and the assistance of the leaders of the different communities in the prevention and detection of crime, and generally in furtherance of the object of Government, and they shall become acquainted with the herdman of a place within their jurisdiction, which may be important as the scene of offences, of large gatherings or for any other reason. With a view to the repression of any tendency on the part of the Police to harass village officials to oppress or to be corrupt, such officers shall, from time to time, make unexpected visits of inspection to the different stations and posts in their jurisdiction, and shall, at all times exhibit the utmost accessibility to the people, cultivate the friendship of well-disposed persons, and by visits to towns and villages, unattended by Police or other officials, ascertain the feelings of the people and facts enabling them to check the reports of their subordinates.—Punjab Rules and Chap. XXIV, p. 282

4. Duty of Commissioner as to prevention and detection of crime.—I or the purpose of prevention and detection of crime, the Commissioner or Deputy Inspector-General is mainly responsible. The Commissioner will see the maintenance of cordial and intelligent co-operation between the Police in the different districts and between the Police and the Magistracy, the organisation of security proceedings under the Cr. P. C. the surveillance of bad characters, and the measures for the control of crime on the borders of British Territory and Native States. The Commissioner will satisfy himself that important cases are investigated on the spot by a suitable Agency, and that gazetted Police-officers take an adequate share in this work. He will give attention to special type of crime, such as the traffic in women, commonly known as Barda Faroshi, and the theft of arms.—Punjab Pol. Cir., p. 214, para. 486

5. Co-operation of village servants.—It is most important that the Police should secure the hearty co-operation of the landed proprietors, and especially of the village headmen or Mukhadams. These functionaries can do so much either to assist or to thwart the Police that it must always be an object to enlist them on the side of order. They must invariably be treated with the consideration due to their position, and care must be taken that they are not unnecessarily harassed. Amongst a well-disposed peaceable population nothing is more irritating to both the people and their landlords than the unnecessary intrusion and prying of the Police. The Police will find in the village watchmen, when judiciously managed and kindly treated, their best allies in repressing and detecting crime, while if they oppress and tyrannize over them, they will soon discover that none can more effectually thwart and baffle their efforts.—C. P. Pol. Man., 56

150. Every Police-officer receiving information of a design to commit any cognizable offence shall communicate such information to the Police-officer to whom he is subordinate, and to any other officer whose duty it is to prevent or take cognizance of the commission of any such offence.

Note.—See ss. 82—85 as to the powers and duties of a Police-officer. The duties under this section must be performed without reference to local jurisdiction. If he does not, he is liable under s. 176, I P C. See also s. 119, I P C.

As to suspicion in respect of a cognizable offence, see s. 157.

151. A Police-officer knowing of a design to commit any cognizable offence may arrest without orders from a Magistrate and without a warrant, the person so designing, if it appears to such officer that the commission of the offence cannot be otherwise prevented.

Arrest to prevent such offences

Note.—Arrest without warrant made under this section must be reported to the District or Sub-divisional Magistrate see s 62 The provisions of ss. 60 to 63 must be strictly followed in such cases

152. A Police-officer may of his own authority interpose to prevent any injury attempted to be committed in his view to any public property, movable or immovable or the removal or injury of any public land mark or buoy or other mark used for navigation

Notes—1 Every Forest-officer and Police-officer shall prevent and may interfere for the purpose of preventing the commission of any Forest offence—S 64 Act VII of 1878 (Forests)

2 Public property—see public road building lamp post land mark mile-stone or a tree in a public avenue or Government forest The offences in relation to these are set forth in ss 430 to 433 I P C But a Police-officer cannot arrest without a warrant in the case of an injury to a public land mark s 434 I P C as it is not cognizable

3. Arrest without warrant.—If a Police-officer is obstructed in the execution of his duty he may arrest him without warrant S 54 cl 5

153. (1) Any officer in charge of a Police station may, without a warrant, enter any place within the limits of such station for the purpose of inspecting or searching for any weights or measures or instruments for weighing used or kept therein whenever he has reason to believe that there are in such place any weights measures or instruments for weighing which are false

(2) If he finds in such place any weights measures or instruments for weighing which are false he may seize the same and shall forthwith give information of such seizure to a Magistrate having jurisdiction

Notes—1 This section does not apply to the Police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay or similar powers in Calcutta see ss. 55 and 56 of Bengal Act IV of 1866 (Calcutta Police) and in Bombay Act IV of 1902. As to Madras see also Madras Act III of 1888 s 32 which provides that the Commissioner of Police should keep in his office standard weights and measures

2 Power limited to Police-officer in charge of station—The power under this section is confined to an officer in charge of a Police-station—see s 4 (g) to be exercised within the limits of his jurisdiction See s 551 as to powers of superior Police-officers

3. False weights and measures—See Act XXXI of 1871 relating to weights and measures of capacity and the rules framed under s 11 of that Act See also Chapter VIII I P C. as to offences relating to weights and measures

PART V.

CHAPTER XIV

INFORMATION TO THE POLICE AND THEIR POWERS TO INVESTIGATE

Note.—This Chapter except s 155 does not apply to the Police in the Presidency town of Calcutta, 15 C. 595 at p 606, 21 B 495 As to Bombay see Note 2 to s. 155 and see Note 18 to s. 1 As to the powers of the officers of the Criminal Investigation Department see 35 M 267—359

154. Every information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence if given orally to an officer in charge of a Police station shall be reduced to writing by him or under his direction and be read over to the informant, and every such information whether given in writing or reduced to writing as aforesaid shall be signed by the person giving it and the substance thereof shall be entered in a book to be kept by such officer in such form as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf

I.—FIRST INFORMATION.

Notes.—1. Section applies to offences committed outside the local limits of the station.—There is nothing in this section to prevent a Station House Officer receiving and recording the information of a cognizable offence committed outside his station limits though he has no power under s 157 to conduct an investigation. The Code is silent as to the correct procedure to be adopted by the Station House Officer in such cases, 1914 M. W. N. 332 = 15 Cr. L. J. 672.

2. First information, its nature and importance.—The first information is the basis upon which an investigation under this Chapter commences. It is apparently thought that the information on which an investigation is commenced, is not the first information of the offence and that when in the course of the investigation, something has been elicited which shows that an offence has been committed a first information can be recorded. This is certainly not what the Law contemplates. In nearly every trial, it is important that it should be known to the judicial officer, what were the facts given out immediately after the occurrence and reported to the Police and the object of a first information is to render him so acquainted, 7 C. W. N. 345, 8 C. W. N. 218; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 14 = 12 Cr. L. J. 497; 16 C. W. N. 145 = 13 Cr. L. J. 65; 17 C. W. N. 1213. See (1911) 2 M. W. N. 373 = 12 Cr. L. J. 551, where accused's name was not mentioned in the first report when it should have been mentioned. See also 14 P. W. R. 1009 = 11 Cr. L. J. 99; 23 P. W. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 539; 26 P. W. R. 1915. The first information is the basis of the case, and whether it be true or false, it at any rate usually represents what was intended by the informant to be the case set up by him at the time. All Criminal Courts should therefore bear in mind the importance of examining, when there appears to be any necessity to do so, the first information of an offence reduced to writing in accordance with this section. In view of the notorious tendency in this country to improve upon the original statement of facts, to strengthen the case as it proceeds, and sometimes to add to the persons originally named as the offenders, it is of great importance to know what was said at first. This is specially the case where the Court has to deal with evidence of recognition or where the facts of the crime are established, but the question whether all the persons charged with its commission actually participated in it appears to admit of doubt.—C P Cr Cir, Part II, No 9. In addition to the entry of the first information in the diary, if the Police-officer makes any memorandum of what the first informant said, that memorandum should also be produced, 7 C. W. N. 345; 17 C. W. N. 295 and 4 C. W. N. 49, see also 47 A. 280 = 23 A. L. J. 14.

3. The first information must be recorded at once.—Statement recorded during investigation, not first information.—A, finding his brother M to be missing, gave information to the Police, but the Sub-Inspector did not record it as required by his section. Nevertheless he commenced investigation, and after four days when the matter had so developed that there was some reason to believe that M had been murdered, he for the first time recorded a statement from A as the first information held that such a practice was contrary to the provisions of this section and a statement recorded under such circumstances cannot be regarded as a first information. Any statement recorded as in this case several days after the commencement of the investigation, and after there had been some development is not only no first information but has very little or no value at all as the original story has because it can be made to fit into the case as then developed, 11 C. W. N. 554 = 6 Cr. L. J. 85; 18 C. W. N. 145 = 13 Cr. L. J. 65. Where on the information given by a Chowkidar, which was first recorded in the Station Diary, a Sub-Inspector went to the hospital and took down the statement of the dying man and filed it as the first information, held that the statement could in no sense be regarded as the first information and the statement so regarded is not evidence except to refresh the memory of the person taking it down, 6 C. W. N. 921.

The word "information" in s 154 of the Code means something in the nature of a complaint or accusation. The information referred to in s 154 may come from more than one source and more than one such information may be recorded at or about the same time but once the Police have taken active steps to investigate, any written statements taken by them fall within s 162 and are inadmissible in evidence. 2 Pat. 517.

4. First information not by itself evidence.—How it may be made use of at the trial.—Although a report of the commission of an offence made at a thana may be used in a criminal trial to corroborate or cross-examine a witness, such reports are not evidence of the existence of the facts therein mentioned, 1897 A. W. N. 47. Where certain statements relating to the commission of an offence were made by J to H for the purpose of informing the Police and H reported the statement to the officer in charge of a Police-station who recorded it and the record was admitted in evidence and relied on as the first information, held, that the so called first information ought not to have been used as evidence, because it was a reproduction by H of the statement said to have been made to him by J and although the evidence given by J could be contradicted by the evidence of H, proving the statements made by J to H, it could not under s 155 (3) of the Indian Evidence Act, be contradicted by, 'what the Police Sub-Inspector recorded as the first information of H' 8 C. W. N. 218 'The first information is a document of great importance and in the practice it is always and very rightly produced and proved in criminal trials. But it is not a piece of substantive evidence and it can be used only as a previous statement admissible to corroborate or contradict the author of it.' Per CARNDUFF, J in 17 C. W. N. 1213 = 15 Cr. L. J. 642 See also 15 C. W. N. 198 = 11 Cr. L. J. 557; 16 Cr. L. J. 62. (Sind)

5 Actual words of complainant to be taken down in recording first information.—What the law requires is not a first information drawn up by a Police-officer and finally settled by an attorney, but the statement of the person himself giving the first information, 16 C. W. N. 143 = 13 Cr. L. J. 65 It is of the utmost importance, in recording the first information that the actual words of the complainant should be used and not an (Urdu) translation of them. The recorder should take down the complaint as it is made, and not merely his own impression of what the complaint meant to say. Some Police-officers have been dismissed for falsely entering a report made at the station such falsification would have been impossible if the actual words of the complainant had been taken down, read over to him, and signed by him in token of their being correct.—Reg and Ord. N-W P, p 268

6 Desirable that the informant should be questioned and all information obtained.—If a Police-officer makes an investigation, he is entitled to examine the person giving the information and the latter is bound to answer all questions other than those the answers to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge or to a penalty or forfeiture, 8 B. 216 If the information be tendered in writing, it will be endorsed with the date of presentation and the person tendering it will be required to sign it (if he has not already done so) If the written information relates to facts with which the person tendering it is acquainted and which he is able and willing to state orally, the mere incident that a written report is presented does not make it unnecessary to take down the information from the reporter's own lips. If the person who brings the written information knows nothing of the facts to which it refers, he should be required to state the circumstances under which he brought it. The written information will, in any case, be kept on record and acted on or not, as may seem proper. When the information relates to the theft of property, the informant must be asked to give a detailed list of the articles stolen, and should be closely questioned as to any noticeable mark or marks or other peculiarities of the articles which may afford hope of recognition. For instance an ornament may have been broken or repaired a brass vessel may have been dented or scratched by a blow or by a fall, a shawl torn and mended. Some individuality of construction is often to be found in the work of certain craftsmen. The complainant will be required, too, to state the value of each article and the weight and name of maker (if he can give them) of any gold or silver ornament stolen.—C P Pol. Man, p 147

7 Special instructions for recording.—If the information be given orally, it must be recorded in plain and simple language as nearly as possible in the informant's own words. The use of technical or legal expressions, or high flown language or of lengthy and involved sentences, is forbidden. If the information, whether given orally or presented in writing, be not complete in itself, the Police-officer should elicit by interrogation such further information as may be necessary. If a particular person be charged or suspected, the facts on which the suspicion is based should be clearly set forth. The informant should be required to distinguish what he professes to know personally from matters of which he has heard only second hand. Police-officers are strictly forbidden to make merely a note of the information and to defer drawing up the first information report until they have made further inquiries into the complaint. The informant's statement, when complete, should be read over to him, and he must sign it. The report should show that this has been done. In serious cases the statement should be read over to the informant in the presence of one or more respectable and uninterested witnesses, who should also be asked to sign it.—Beng. Pol. Code, p 372 But a so-called information, that is, one recorded in the course of an investigation not being the first information, need not be signed and would, if signed, be contrary to the provisions of s 162

8 Information not a complaint.—No Court-fee.—Information to the Police is not a complaint in the strict technical sense of s. 4 (h) and it is not chargeable with any Court fee under Act VII of 1870. See s. 19, cl. xxi of the Court Fees Act

9. Punishment for making a false entry.—Where a Station House Officer refused to enter in the Station Diary a report made to him concerning the commission of an offence and entered instead in the diary a totally different and false report as that which was made to him he was found liable under s. 177 I P C, 20 A. 131-

II—FALSE INFORMATION

10 Prosecution for false information to Police.—As to the liability for prosecution for giving false information to the Police see S C. 231; 8 C. L. R. 255; 7 C. 87; 8 C. L. R. 357, 25 W. R. 10; 8 C. L. R. 289, 27 M. 127; 6 C. 496 = 7 C. L. R. 467; 8 C. 552. See contra 7 M. 292. Even if the statement made to the Police-officers is not reduced to writing as required by this section the informant may be convicted of preferring a false charge under s. 211, I P. C. 27 M. 127. But the mere despatch of a telegram falsely stating that a dacoity has been committed without mentioning any names does not constitute a false charge under s. 211 1914 M. W. N. 382 = 15 Cr. L. J. 622.

11 Prosecution for false information to Village Magistrate who forwards complaint to Police.—When a person gives information or makes his complaint to the Village Magistrate who in accordance with his duty under s. 45 submits the complaint to the Police, the complainant sets the criminal law in motion just as effectually as an information given under this section and is liable to be convicted under s. 211 31 M. 258 (31 M. 505 dissented from). Contra SANKARAN NAIR J., following 31 M. 506 held that such an information to the Village Munsiff cannot be regarded as one legally under s. 104 but was one really under s. 161. In 20 M. L. J. 132 = 11 Cr. L. J. 256, it was held that if the law had already been set in motion against the complainant when the accused made the statement to the Police, the basis of the charge under s. 211 the proceedings could not be said to have been instituted by the statement of the accused and so 32 M. 258 did not apply. Such a statement was one under s. 162 and the accused could not be convicted under s. 211 I I C. 31 M. 506 followed.

12 No compensation when information given to Village Magistrate.—It has been held in (1914) 2 M. W. N. 558 = 10 M. L. T. 850 = 13 Cr. L. J. 29 follo. crit. 25 M. 667 that compensation cannot be granted under s. 204 to an accused when the information was given to a Village Magistrate who forwarded it to the Police.

13. Composition of offence no answer.—The fact that an offence alleged to have been committed has been compounded is no conclusive answer to a charge made against the prosecutor under s. 211 I I C. 11 C. 79.

14 Sanction for prosecution for giving false information.—No sanction is necessary for prosecution for giving false information to the Police 24 W. R. 41, 5 C. 184, 3 A. 322, 7 M. 292.

15 Punishment for giving false information.—Giving false information to a public servant in order to cause him to use his lawful power to the injury or annoyance of any person is punishable with imprisonment for six months or fine of Rs 1,000 or both—S. 182 I P. C. See also s. 203 I P. C.

III—COGNIZABLE OFFENCES

16 Under the Indian Penal Code

(1) All offences under Chapter XII (Coin and Government stamps) are cognizable.

(2) All offences against the human body (Chapter XI) are cognizable excepting—

(a) Those relating to miscarriage and unborn children (ss. 312 to 316). (b) Simple hurt s. 323 (c) Simple assault ss. 322, 355, 358. (d) Buying a person as slave s. 370. (e) Keeping a person in confinement after writ of release has been issued s. 345.

(3) All offences against property (Chapter XII) are cognizable excepting—

(a) Extortion ss. 384, 389. (b) Criminal misappropriation ss. 403 and 404. (c) Criminal breach of trust by a public servant or a banker, s. 409. (d) Cheating ss. 417 to 420. (e) Fraudulent deeds and disposition of property. (f) Mischief generally, and mischief by removing a land mark. ss. 426, 427 and 434.

(4) The offences of rioting and being a member of an unlawful assembly (ss. 143 to 148). Personating a public servant (ss. 170 and 171). Resistance to apprehension, escape from custody (ss. 224 to 226) and harbouring offenders (ss. 212 to 216).

17. Under the Railway Act IX of 1890.—S. 100—Railway servants drunk on duty. S. 101—Railway servants endangering the safety of persons. S. 119—Male persons entering carriage or other place reserved for females. S. 120—Intoxication or indecency on the part of any person, or interfering with the comfort of passengers or extinguishing a lamp. S. 121—Obstructing Railway servant in his duty. S. 126—Maliciously wrecking or attempting to wreck a train. S. 127—Maliciously hurting or attempting to hurt persons travelling by rail. Ss. 128, 129—Endangering safety of persons travelling by Railway by (a) wilful act or omission, (b) rash or negligent act or omission. S. 130 (1)—Minor guilt of offences noted in ss. 126 to 129.

IV.—SHALL BE SIGNED.

18 First information must be proved only by the written record—Having record to the provisions of this section and s. 91 of the Evidence Act, the only legal proof of the terms of a complaint of a cognizable offence to the Police is the written record of the same, excepting where secondary evidence of its contents is admissible. It would be most unsafe if in cases under s. 211, I. P. C., a Policeman's report of what a complainant contained could be accepted as sufficient proof of its contents without insisting on the production of the document itself if it were in any way procurable. 1 Bar B. E. 572

19 Refusal to sign is punishable—Refusal to sign a statement made to a public servant when required so to do is punishable with simple imprisonment for three months, or fine of Rs. 500 or both.—S. 180 I. P. C.

V.—FIRST INFORMATION REPORT.

19-A Report of first information not part of a judicial record—Neither a Judge nor a Magistrate can direct that a complaint which the Police are required by this section to reduce to writing, shall be retained as part of the judicial record of the investigation before the Magistrate. But the substance of the complaint is to be entered in the Police-officer's diary, and the Magistrate can call for and inspect the same. The record would be more conveniently retained in the custody of the Police-officer than filed in the Magistrate's office.

20 First Information Report.—This report is drawn out and submitted under this section and s. 157, whereby the officer in charge of a Police-station is ordered, upon information received, to send a report to the Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of such offence upon a Police report. See s. 190. This section directs every complaint or information preferred to an officer in charge of a Police-station shall be reduced to writing and entered in a book. When in the absence of the Sub-Inspector or Head Constable a station or outpost is left in charge of a constable he cannot accept any complaint or prepare and submit the first information report of any crime reported to him unless the Local Government shall have given powers to such officers under s. 4 (b). He will, however, enter in the Station Diary an abstract of the complaint for the information of the District Superintendent, and will report the complaint to the officers in charge of the station or outpost, as the case may be by sending the complainant or informant with a note of the same to him.

Heinous crime—Whenever a report is received of the occurrence of heinous crime during the absence of the Sub-Inspector or other officer above the rank of constable, the writer (or other) constable competent to make the entry in the Station Diary, will also arrange to send immediate information to the Sub-District Inspector, or if the facts of the case as may occur in dacoity, murder, etc., require the immediate apprehension of the accused he will make arrangements accordingly. When the report of heinous crime relates to an occurrence outside the jurisdiction of the officer to whom the report is made, he will at once send information to the Police-station within whose jurisdiction the occurrence took place and if circumstances of the case warrant it will effect the apprehension of the accused. The instructions regarding early apprehension in the cases alluded to above apply equally to all officers receiving information of the occurrence of heinous crime. In dacoities where the scene of occurrence is within reasonable distance of the line of rail, the officer, Sub-Inspector, Head Constable or Writer Constable, to whom the report is made at the station will ascertain and note in the Station Diary whether information was conveyed through the Station Master to the nearest Railway Police.

Cognizable cases—Every cognizable complaint preferred before the Police, whether prima facie false or true whether serious or petty, whether relative to an offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code or any Special or Local law shall ordinarily be reported in the above form. Police-officers should not when complaints of grievous hurt or other cognizable offence are made at Police-stations, await the result of the medical examination of the injured person or of any injury before recording a first information under this section. No general order to the contrary must be allowed to exist in any district. A first information report must be sent in immediately after intimation of a cognizable case is given whether it be given by the complainant in person by a person not personally interested in the case, by a Chowkidar through the Magistrate on complaint or by petitioner in any other way whatever. It is not optional with an officer in charge of a Police-station to defer the submission of the first information report till he has made a preliminary inquiry into the truth or otherwise of the complaint.

Vague rumours of crime—The informant's statement as to such a rumour should find place in the Station Diary and if on inquiry the rumour prove well founded a first information report should be at once submitted.—Peng Pol. Code p. 368

21 Form and Contents of report.—For the form (memorandum of crimes and other occurrences) prescribed by the Local Government of Madras see Mad. Pol. Man Vol II Form No 44. The report should contain the following particulars—(1) date and hour of receipt at Police-station of first information (2) nature of information and parties concerned, (3) crime reported and value and details of property stolen if any, (4) date of occurrence of the crime (5) place of occurrence, direction and distance from Police-station taken by officer in charge of station

22. The Code contemplates two distinct records—This section appears to provide for two distinct records the former of which may be called for and made use of by the Magistrate or other judicial officer trying the case to which the record relates whilst of the other judicial cognizance can be taken only so far as the matter of inquiry affects the conduct of the Police-officer who prepared the record

(a) First record—The first record should simply contain the plain statement or deposition of the person making the complaint or giving information to the Police-officer, without any additional matter elicited by interrogation or comment on the part of the officer receiving the complaint, and there is nothing in the law to prevent such complaint or statement being brought to the Police-station in written form. The law requires that before action is taken upon the complaint it shall be placed upon record either by the complainant himself or by the officer before whom the complaint is lodged. That judicial cognizance may be taken of this record in the trial of the case to which it refers is plainly to be inferred from the absence of any proviso to the contrary

(b) Second record or report—The second record provided by this section is purely for Police purposes, for the information of the superior officers of Police and the future guidance of the officer in charge of the Police-station. This as other subjects of record in Police Diary is expressly declared to be excluded from judicial cognizance except in so far as the subject of inquiry relates to the conduct of the Police-officer in connection with the case to which this record has reference. Ordinarily, it ought not to be sent to the Magistrate trying the case but if at the trial, the Magistrate requires the production of the diary, it must be produced. The Government cannot impose any limit upon the discretion of Magistrates in calling for evidence or in judging what is or is not evidence according to law. Although the diary kept by a Police-officer is not evidence of the facts stated therein except against that officer, it may be evidence of other facts.—Eng Pol Man 2nd Ed p 376

VI—GENERAL DIARY.

23. "Book to be kept by such officer"—This book is the General Diary also known as the Station Diary or Station House Register. The entries in this diary are prima facie proof that such complaints as are therein contained were actually made and recorded though of course they prove nothing as to the truth or falsity of the information. Under s. 44 of Act V of 1861 (Police) the Station House Officer should record in this diary all complaints, and charges preferred, the names of the persons arrested the names of the complainants the offences charged the weapons or property that may have been taken from their possession or otherwise and the names of witnesses who shall have been examined. The Magistrate of the district is at liberty to call for and inspect such diary. As to their evidentiary value See 8 C. 154 = 10 C. L. R. 51 and 11 B. H. C. R. 120. In recording the substance of information names of persons accused must be given in full but not the list of stolen property.—C I Pol Man p 148. This diary is to be distinguished from the Special Diary referred to in s. 172 and which contains proceedings in the investigation

VII—MISCELLANEOUS

24 Copies and production of Police records—No document precept or official paper or any kind or any copy of such paper belonging to or in the custody of the Police will be furnished to any private individual or other person not authorized by law to require it unless on receipt of a competent Court or order of a competent authority requiring him to give it be presented to the Superintendent of Police.—Mad Pol Man p 118

25 Complaint against a refugee in British Territory by Feudatory Chief—When a Feudatory Chief or his agent or subject lodges a complaint at a Police post that any person has committed an offence cognizable by the Police and has taken refuge in British territory the Police-officer in charge of the post will receive and deal with the complaint precisely as it had been made recording a crime committed within his jurisdiction. Having satisfied himself that there are reasonable grounds for suspicion against the accused he will proceed against him as directed by law. If he arrests him he will transmit him to the headquarters station with a full report to be disposed of as the District Magistrate may direct.—C P Pol Man p 186

26 Powers of superior Police-officers—Under s. 531 any Police-officer superior in rank to an officer in charge of a Police-station may exercise the same power throughout the local area to which he is appointed as may be exercised by Station House Officer within the limits of his station. See 35 M. 247 at p. 359 for the powers of officers of the Criminal Investigation Department to investigate offences

27 Maps and plans to be sent in murder and other heinous cases—In all cases of murder or culpable homicide the Police-officer shall prepare and send with the special diary a plan showing the position

IV—SHALL BE SIGNED

18 First information must be proved only by the written record—Having record to the provisions of this section and s 91 of the Evidence Act the only legal proof of the terms of a complaint of a cognizable offence to the Police is the written record of the same excepting where secondary evidence of its contents is admissible. It would be most unsafe if in cases under s. 211 I P C a Policeman's report of what a complaint contained could be accepted as sufficient proof of its contents without insisting on the production of the document itself if it were in any way procurable. 1 Bar 8 R 572

19 Refusal to sign is punishable—Refusal to sign a statement made to a public servant when required so to do is punishable with simple imprisonment for three months, or fine of Rs 500 or both—S 180 I P C

V.—FIRST INFORMATION REPORT.

19 A Report of first information not part of a judicial record—Neither a Judge nor a Magistrate can direct that a complaint which the Police are required by this section to reduce to writing shall be retained as part of the judicial record of the investigation before the Magistrate. But the substance of the complaint is to be entered in the Police-officer's diary, and the Magistrate can call for and inspect the same. The record would be more conveniently retained in the custody of the Police-officer than filed in the Magistrate's office.

20 First Information Report—This report is drawn out and submitted under this section and s 157 whereby the officer in charge of a Police-station is ordered, upon information received to send a report to the Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of such offence upon a Police report. See s 190. This section directs every complaint or information preferred to an officer in charge of a Police-station shall be reduced to writing and entered in a book. When in the absence of the Sub-Inspector or Head Constable a station or outpost is left in charge of a constable he cannot accept any complaint or prepare and submit the first information report of any crime reported to him unless the Local Government shall have given powers to such officers under s 4 (f). He will however, enter in the Station Diary an abstract of the complaint for the information of the District Superintendent and will report the complaint to the officers in charge of the station or outpost as the case may be by sending the complainant or informant with a note of the same to him.

Heinous crime—Whenever a report is received of the occurrence of heinous crime during the absence of the Sub-Inspector or other officer above the rank of constable, the writer (or other) constable competent to make the entry in the Station Diary, will also arrange to send immediate information to the Sub-District Inspector or if the facts of the case as may occur in dacoity, murder, etc. require the immediate apprehension of the accused he will make arrangements accordingly. When the report of heinous crime relates to an occurrence outside the jurisdiction of the officer to whom the report is made he will at once send information to the Police-station within whose jurisdiction the occurrence took place and if circumstances of the case warrant it will effect the apprehension of the accused. The instructions regarding early apprehension in the cases alluded to above apply equally to all officers receiving information of the occurrence of heinous crime. In dacoities where the scene of occurrence is within reasonable distance of the line of rail the officer, Sub-Inspector, Head Constable or Writer Constable to whom the report is made at the station will ascertain and note in the Station Diary whether information was conveyed through the Station Master to the nearest Railway Police.

Cognizable cases—Every cognizable complaint preferred before the Police whether prima facie false or true whether serious or petty, whether relative to an offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code or any Special or Local law, shall ordinarily be reported in the above form. Police-officers should not when complaints of grievous hurt or other cognizable offence are made at Police-stations, await the result of the medical examination of the injured person or of any injury before recording a first information under this section. No general order to the contrary must be allowed to exist in any district. A first information report must be sent in immediately after intimation of a cognizable case is given whether it be given by the complainant in person by a person not personally interested in the case, by a Chowkidar through the Magistrate on complaint or by petitioner in any other way whatever. It is not optional with an officer in charge of a Police-station to defer the submission of the first information report till he has made a preliminary inquiry into the truth or otherwise of the complaint.

Vague rumours of crime—The informant's statement as to such a rumour should find place in the Station Diary and if on inquiry the rumour prove well founded a first information report should be at once submitted—Peng Pol C de p 368

21 Form and Contents of report.—For the form (memorandum of crimes and other occurrences) prescribed by the Local Government of Madras see Mad Pol Man Vol II Form No 44. The report should contain the following particulars—(1) date and hour of receipt at Police-station of first information (2) nature of information and parties concerned, (3) crime reported and value and details of property stolen, if any, (4) date of occurrence of the crime (5) place of occurrence direction and distance from Police-station, taken by officer in charge of station

22. The Code contemplates two distinct records—This section appears to provide for two distinct records, the former of which may be called for and made use of by the Magistrate or other judicial officer trying the case to which the record relates whilst the other judicial cognizance can be taken only so far as the matter of inquiry affects the conduct of the Police-officer who prepared the record

(a) First record—The first record should simply contain the plain statement or deposition of the person making the complaint or giving information to the Police-officer, without any additional matter elicited by interrogation or comment on the part of the officer receiving the complaint, and there is nothing in the law to prevent such complaint or statement being brought to the Police station in written form The law requires that before action is taken upon the complaint it shall be placed upon record either by the complainant himself or by the officer before whom the complaint is lodged That judicial cognizance may be taken of this record in the trial of the case to which it refers is plainly to be inferred from the absence of any proviso to the contrary

(b) Second record or report—The second record provided by this section is purely for Police purposes, for the information of the superior officers of Police, and the future guidance of the officer in charge of the Police-station This, as other subjects of record in Police Diary is expressly declared to be excluded from judicial cognizance except in so far as the subject of inquiry relates to the conduct of the Police-officer in connection with the case to which this record has reference Ordinarily, it ought not to be sent to the Magistrate trying the case, but if at the trial, the Magistrate requires the production of the diary, it must be produced The Government cannot impose any limit upon the discretion of Magistrates in calling for evidence or in judging what is or is not evidence according to law Although the diary kept by a Police-officer is not evidence of the facts stated therein except against that officer, it may be evidence of other facts.—Leg Pol Man 2nd Ed p 376

VI.—GENERAL DIARY.

23. "Book to be kept by such officer"—This book is the General Diary also known is the Station Diary or Station House Register The entries in this diary are prima facie proof that such complaints as are therein contained were actually made and recorded though of course they prove nothing as to the truth or falsity of the information Under s 44 of Act V of 1861 (Police) the Station House Officer should record in this diary all complaints and charges preferred the names of the persons arrested the names of the complainants the offences charged the weapons or property that may have been taken from their possession or otherwise and the names of witnesses who shall have been examined The Magistrate of the district is at liberty to call for and inspect such diary As to their evidentiary value See 8 C 134—10 C L R 51 and 14 B R C R 120 In recording the substance of information names of persons accused must be given in full but not the list of stolen property—C P Pol Man p 148 This diary is to be distinguished from the Special Diary referred to in s 172 and which contains proceedings in the investigation

VII.—MISCELLANEOUS.

24. Copies and production of Police records—No document precept or official paper of any kind or any copy of such paper, belonging to or in the custody of the Police will be furnished to any private individual or other person not authorized by law to require it, unless a precept of a competent Court or order of a competent authority requiring him to give it, be presented to the Superintendent of Police—Mad Pol Man p 118

25. Complaint against a refugee in British Territory by Fendatory Chief—When a Fendatory Chief or his agent or subject lodges a complaint at a Police post that any person has committed an offence cognizable by the Police and has taken refuge in British territory, the Police-officer in charge of the post will receive and deal with the complaint precisely as if it had been made recording a crime committed within his jurisdiction Having satisfied himself that there are reasonable grounds for suspicion against the accused he will proceed against him as directed by law If he arrests him he will transmit him to the headquarters station with a full report to be disposed of as the District Magistrate may direct.—C P Pol Man, p 186

26. Powers of superior Police-officers.—Under s 551 any Police-officer superior in rank to an officer in charge of a Police-station may exercise the same power throughout the local area to which he is appointed as may be exercised by Station House Officer within the limits of his station. See 35 M. 247 at p 339 for the powers of officers of the Criminal Investigation Department to investigate offences

27. Maps and plans to be sent in murder and other heinous cases—In all culpable homicide, the Police-officer shall prepare and send with the special diary a plan sh of the body when found and the premises or neighbourhood in such detail as to render the relative position of all the important features of the locality apparent and his plan will be sent up to the trying officer with the charge-sheet. In other cases of dacoity or robbery or heavy larceny plans of the locality shall be sent in the same manner. (The Bengal Police Code requires plans or maps also in the cases of serious riot and mail robbery p 394.) In every case when a plan is sent the name of the person who is prepared to prove its correctness must be noted upon it so that when the case is sent up the Magistrate may summon him to give evidence to the accuracy of the plan if he thinks it necessary—Reg and Ord N W P, s 10 p 269. The map should if possible be drawn to scale but this is not essential it should show all particulars calculated to be of use to the Court trying the case such as the place of occurrence the surrounding rooms or houses, the houses of witnesses etc. etc. with their relative positions and distances, the number of the case and the name of the accused should be given at the top and the signature of the draftsman should be at the foot. The draftsman should also be produced as a witness at the trial and evidence should be elicited to show who pointed out to him the various places marked in the map. Ordinarily maps will not be required in cases other than those mentioned above but the investigating officer may in his discretion prepare and send up a map in any other case. Police-officers should be careful to see that all important places position of houses and of witnesses are marked as far as possible.—Peng Pol Code p 384. See also Ord and Rul Punj p 384 and Punj Cr, Chapter I IV para 49 Oudh Cr Dig p 9 which make similar provisions.

28 Maps and plans must be properly proved—When a map of the scene of an offence, which has been prepared by or under the direction of the investigating officer is produced in Court it should be properly proved. The witnesses should be asked Did you show the Investigating Police-officer the spot where the murder was committed? Did you show him the spot where you were standing when you saw the murder committed? And the Police-officer should ask Are the spots indicated by you in the map the spots shown to you by the witnesses as the spot where the murder was committed and the spots where they said they were standing when they saw the murder was committed? The answers to these questions will connect what the map tells about the spot referred to with the evidence of eye-witnesses who speak from their own knowledge. Police-officers should indicate distances in maps by Kadams or paces a Kadam being understood to mean one ordinary step—C P Pol Min p 206.

29 Medical examination of persons to be with their consent—In all criminal cases in which the examination of a person by a medical officer is deemed expedient the Police are warned against sending him or her for examination without consent first obtained or if the person so to be examined is a minor without the consent of the guardian or other person having lawful charge of that person. The consent, when obtained shall be recorded in the presence of witnesses and embodied in a report which shall be forwarded to the Civil Surgeon along with the person who is to be examined by him—Reg and Ord N W P s 10 p 278 C P Cr Cir Part V No 13.

Under instructions from the Local (Punjab) Government Police-officers are informed that no examination by a medical officer of a living woman or person whether she be a complainant or accused can be made without her consent and a written order from a Magistrate addressed to a medical officer directing him to make such examination. In all cases therefore when the Police may consider such an examination necessary the woman must be taken before a Magistrate for orders Rul and Ord Punj p 390. See also Punj Cr Chapter LII para 6.

When in cases of alleged rape etc. the examination of the person of the complainant by a doctor appears desirable Police-officers should clearly understand that cases of this kind require to be investigated with great care and judgment. Statements made at the time should be accurately noted.—Dom Pol Man p 93.

30 Magistrate to determine sanity of lunatic offenders—It is not a part of the duty of the Police to determine whether the person charged with the cognizable offence was insane or not when he committed the offence though the fact of such apparent insanity should be mentioned in the Special Diary the investigating officers shall deal with the case in the ordinary way and send up the accused for trial if the offence be proved against him. The Magistrate will determine any doubts as to the accused's sanity in accordance with the procedure laid down in Chapter XXXIV of the Criminal Procedure Code.—Reg and Ord N W P s 10 p 376.

31 Rules as to arrest and detention of accused—The Government considers that the provisions of Chapters V and XIV of this Code supply ample facilities to the Police for a thorough inquiry into every class of crime and for the detection and arrest of offenders. District Superintendents of Police are thereto called upon to impress upon their subordinates the absolute necessity of instructing themselves and of acting in conformity with the law and are warned that should they pass over irregularities on the part of the latter they will themselves be held responsible.—Reg. and Ord. N. W. P. s. 10 p. 7-8.

32. Police-station Officers not to be frequently transferred.—An officer in charge of a Police-station shall be retained in such charge for at least two years except for good reasons which shall be reported through the Commissioner to the Inspector General of Police his removal when necessary, shall if possible be timed so as to come in at the end of the year or half-year. It is obviously impossible for a Station Officer to become acquainted with the circle to become familiar with its evil characters, to win the confidence of the Clowdus and extract effective aid from them if he is not left at a station for a space of two or three years.—Reg. and Ord. V. H. P. s. 10 p. 24.

155. 1 When information is given to an officer in charge of a Police-station of the commission within the limits of such station of a non-cognizable offence, he shall enter in a book to be kept as aforesaid the substance of such information and refer the informant to the Magistrate.

(2) No Police-officer shall investigate a non-cognizable case without the order of a Magistrate of the first or second class having power to try such case or commit the same for trial or of a Presidency Magistrate.

(3) Any Police-officer receiving such order may exercise the same powers in respect of the investigation (except the power to arrest without warrant) as an officer in charge of a Police-station may exercise in a cognizable case.

Notes—1 Application of section to Police of Bombay and Calcutta.—This section so far as it relates to the Police in the town of Bombay is repealed by s. 2 (1) and Schedule to the City of Bombay Police Act Bom. Act IV of 1902. Its application to the Calcutta Police is due to the reference to Presidency Magistrate in sub-sec. (2). See Note 1 to section 164.

2. Powers of Police and Magistrates in non cognizable cases.—This section deals only with the powers of Police-officers. It confers no power or authority on Magistrates to direct a local investigation by the Police or call for a Police report 12 B 161. But in § Bom L R 339 = 4 Cr L J 183 it was held that a Magistrate was empowered under sub-sec. (2) to refer cases of non-cognizable offences to the Police for investigation and report and under s. 106 (3) cases of cognizable offences. See also 4 L B R 137 = 7 Cr L J 416, 10 W R 49, 16 C. W. N 1049 = 13 Cr L J 691, 1914 U B R. 19 = 16 Cr L J 87, and Note 4 to s. 156. Upon information given of the commission of a non-cognizable offence a Police-officer can instead of merely referring the informant to a Magistrate under s. 105 (1) report the case to Magistrate under s. 155 (2) who can under such circumstances order an investigation without first taking cognizance of the offence under s. 190 Section 155 (2) read with s. 529 (b) and Schedules III II (2) leaves no doubt on the point 6 M L T 239 = 11 Cr L J 156. See also 16 C. W. N 1049 = 13 Cr L J 691, 1914 U B R 19 = 16 Cr L J 97.

The object of the Legislature being to allow aggrieved parties direct access to justice without the intervention of the Police the Calcutta High Court in its circular dated 20th July 1871 cautions Magistrates especially in summons-cases and non-cognizable cases against the indiscriminate use of the Police agency for ascertaining facts regarding which the Magistrate is bound to form his own conclusion on evidence given before him.

3. What Magistrates empowered.—The powers contained herein are exercisable only by Magistrates of the second class and upwards.—Sch. III cl. 2 and in addition they must have power to try the case or to commit it for trial. If a Magistrate not empowered erroneously and in good faith orders a Police investigation in a non-cognizable case his proceedings shall not be void. See s. 529 (b).

4 Delegation of duty to other Police-officer.—It is questionable whether a Police Inspector ordered by a Magistrate to investigate a non-cognizable offence can legally delegate the duty of making the investigation to a Chief Constable Ratanlal 438.

5 Police Report of non-cognizable offence if a "complaint."—The officer receiving information cannot submit a report. If of his own motion as where he has himself seen the alleged offence committed he makes a formal report or complaint, that will amount to a complaint as defined in s. 4 (h) 26 B 150. The person who gives the information may himself be a Police-officer. See Note 11 to s. 4 and Notes to s. 190.

6 Consequence of entering false report in Station Diary.—A Police-officer at a Police-station who, being as such officer bound to enter all reports brought to him of cognizable or non-cognizable offences in the Station Diary refused to enter a report made to him concerning the commission of an offence and entered instead in the diary a totally different and false report as that which was made to him is guilty of the offence mentioned in s 177 I P C 20 A 151

7 Improper use of statement made to Police.—In 10 C 256 it was held that statements of witnesses or confessions taken at a Police investigation are not as far as their subject-matter is concerned any more the property of the Police than the property of the prisoners and that a pleader was not guilty of misconduct in making use of copies of such documents for the benefit of his client when delivered to him by the client however improperly the client may have become possessed of them provided the pleader was neither a party nor privy to the obtaining of them

8 Police procedure where investigation ordered.—If an order is given by a competent Magistrate for an investigation by the Police (under s 202) into the truth or falsehood of a complaint of a non-cognizable offence a Police-officer may institute and carry through an investigation into the offence just as if it were a cognizable one—with this exception that he cannot arrest and challin the accused or any other person in the event of his investigation leading him to believe any particular individual to be guilty. All that he can do is to report the result of his investigation. If however the investigation reveals that the offence is really a cognizable one it is the duty of the Police-officer at once to bring the offence on the Crime Register, to report to the Magistrate that he is dealing with the offence under s 157 and to act accordingly.—C P Pol Man, p 163. See Note 9 to s. 156

9. Duty of Police to send report to Magistrate after investigation.—Police cannot independently institute proceedings under s 211, I P C.—Information of the commission of a non-cognizable case was given to the Police who obtained the authority of a Magistrate under s 145 to investigate the case without submitting any report to the Magistrate under s 173 the Police after some investigation instituted proceedings against the informant under s 211 and obtained a conviction held the conviction was illegal. The case had not come to an end and could not come to an end without an order of the Magistrate. This being so it is contrary to the method and the spirit contrary indeed to the whole system of our criminal procedure that the Police should be allowed to prosecute in the way they have done without even having the case disposed of by a Magistrate. The point is one of technicality but of very great importance. One need say little to show how absolutely contrary to our system things would be if the Police were allowed independently of the Magistrate to take proceedings as they have done here in cases which had never been disposed of by Magistrate 17 Bom L R 69—16 Cr L J 161

10 Statements made to the Police under sections 154 and 155 cannot be used as evidence or made the foundation of a charge of defamation.—Statements made to the Police as the result of action taken under section 154 or section 155 of the Code of Criminal Procedure are privileged statements and as such cannot be used as evidence or made the foundation of a charge of defamation. Further inasmuch as a statement in order to be defamatory within the meaning of section 499 I P C must be made with a certain intention a statement made primarily with the object that the person making it should escape from a difficulty cannot be made the subject of a criminal charge merely because it contains matter which may be harmful to the reputation of other people or hurtful to their feelings 41 A 311

156. (1) Any officer in charge of Police station may without the order of a Magistrate investigate any cognizable case which a Court having jurisdiction over the local area within the limits of such station would have power to inquire into or try under the provisions of Chapter XV relating to the place of inquiry or trial

(2) No proceeding of a Police-officer in any such case shall at any stage be called in question on the ground that the case was one which such officer was not empowered under this section to investigate

(3) Any Magistrate empowered under section 190 may order such an investigation as above mentioned

Notes.—1. Investigation not a judicial proceeding.—Having regard to s. 4 (m), the investigation by a Police-officer is not a stage of a judicial proceeding, because the Station House Officer has no power to record evidence on oath and though persons examined by him are bound to answer under sub-sec. (2) to s. 161, all questions put to them, they are no longer bound to answer truly. See definition of "judicial proceeding" and Notes thereunder.

2. Powers of superior Police-officers to investigate.—Under s. 551 Police-officers superior in rank to an officer in charge of a Police-station may exercise the same powers throughout the local area to which they are appointed, as may be exercised by such within the limits of his station. An Inspector of a Provincial Criminal Investigation Department has jurisdiction to investigate in any part of the Province, as a Presidency or Province may well be held to be the local area to which he is appointed. It was so held by the majority of the Judges in 35 M 397. The minority was of opinion that the Criminal Investigation Department was created to assist the ordinary Police force in the detection of certain crimes and an Inspector of that department was not entitled to exercise the same powers as the officer in charge of a Police-station under s. 156. See (1919) M. W. N. 199.

3. Effect of application of Chap. XV.—The effect of applying the provisions of Chap. XV, relating to the place of inquiry or trial, to Police investigations in cognizable cases is to give the Station House Officer power to investigate cases over which more than one Court has jurisdiction, as e.g. murder in desert under sub-section (1) of s. 181. In 1893 A. W. N. 124 it was pointed out that the reference to Chap. XV, in this section did not limit the application of s. 156 to offences only, but the investigation may extend to cases within the scope of s. 53. See also 15 A 11.

4. Is a Magistrate competent under this section to order investigation by Police when complaint made to him.—It is the duty of a Magistrate on presentation of a complaint of any offence, to immediately proceed in the manner laid down in Chap. XVI and the Magistrate has no option of referring it to the Police for investigation under sec. 156 (3). If an alternative procedure to that laid down in sec. 200 had been intended it would have found place in Chap. XVI and not in Chap. XIV which deals with the procedure and powers of Police in which information of an offence is given to a Police-officer. 10 M L T. 120—1911 (2) M W 74—12 Cr. L. J. 453, 30 C 923 was referred to and distinguished on the ground that their Lordships in that case pronounced no opinion on the legality of the Magistrate's action in omitting to proceed as laid down in s. 200 but merely considered the effect of such omission on orders subsequently passed by him as it under the offence was cognizable or non-cognizable and then L. made his representation to the Magistrate who then sent it to the Police to investigate and it was contended that the Magistrate could only proceed under Chap. XVI and that he had no power to direct investigation. Held that the Magistrate had power to direct investigation by the Police. If it was a cognizable offence he had power under s. 156 (3) and if it was non-cognizable he had this power because he had taken cognizance of the offence under cl (c) s. 190 and not upon a complaint. Chap. XVI did not apply. See also Note 3 to s. 156. As to whether a Magistrate can refuse which has been duly made to him on the ground that it relates to an offence therefore have been made to the Police, it was held by the Punjab Chief Magistrate, that a Magistrate cannot refuse when properly called on to do so on the ground that the complainant might reasonably have had recourse to the Police instead of to the Magistrate. The question remains as to whether a Magistrate after having taken cognizance may not properly call on the Police to assist in investigating the case. It seems to the Judges that a Magistrate who has taken cognizance under s. 190 of an offence cognizable by the Police may, after complying with the provisions of s. 200 and issuing his process (if he sees no reasons for doubting the truth of the complaint and otherwise find sufficient ground for proceeding), give information of the case to the Police-officer having jurisdiction with a view to his further investigating its facts and circumstances in the manner laid down in s. 157. In such a case as is contemplated the Police-officer would not have to take measures for the discovery and arrest of the offender, as the supposed offender would be known, and a process would have been issued by the Magistrate to compel his appearance but in other respects it would rest with him to take steps to secure the case being properly brought before the Court, and he would be responsible that the witnesses named by the complainant to the Magistrate were supplemented by any others who might be necessary to complete the case for the prosecution.

The above remarks proceed on the assumption that the complainant to the Magistrate knows or thinks he knows who has injured him. In cases of complaint of a cognizable offence against an unknown offender the Magistrate would have to record under s 203 that there were in his judgment no sufficient grounds for proceeding. It would also be open to him to communicate to the Police the information supplied to him or to leave it to the complainant either to apply to the Police or to take such other measure as he thought proper for discovering the offender—Punj Cir, Vol II p 163 et seq

5 Sessions Judge cannot direct investigation by Police—Section 156 only empowers Magistrates to direct investigation and a Court of Sessions therefore has no power to direct investigation 11 P R. 1910 = 16 P W R. 1910 = 11 Cr L J 330

6 Scope of clause (3)—Cl (3) enables a Magistrate to direct an investigation even when he has received no report or complaint

7 Duty of Magistrate where there is delay in investigation—Where there is great delay in the investigation by the Police it is the duty of the committing Magistrate and failing him of the Sessions Judge to enquire fully into the circumstances of the delay, and to consider its bearing on the prosecution story 2 Bom L R. 1902

8 Police inquiry need not be exhaustive, but it must be impartial.—A Police-officer would not discharge his duty if he declined to listen to or call for information tendered by the accused, which went directly to negative the charge against him. But if the evidence was of a nature which if adduced and believed would still leave the accused under such a degree of suspicion as would justify his transmission before the Magistrate then the Police are not bound to delay the inquiry with a view to such investigation.—Mad Pol Man, p 90

9 Police procedure.—The following tabulated form (taken from the Madras Police Manual shows the proper procedure under this Code on receipt of a complaint or information of the commission of a cognizable offence and on receipt of an order from a Magistrate to investigate a non-cognizable offence—

Cognizable Cases

CIRCUMSTANCES	PROCEDURE
1 The facts appear to constitute a cognizable offence. No person accused or if accused not arrested Station House Officer determines to enter on an investigation either at the scene of the alleged crime (sec. 157) or at the station house [s. 157 proviso (a)]	Send original information whether it be the Village Magistrate's Report or the information written or dictated by complainant or informant with Occurrence Report (Form No 44, Vol II) to the Magistrate having jurisdiction
2 The facts do not appear to constitute an offence or in cases of petty nature there is no chance of procuring any evidence so that the Police think that there is no necessity for entering on an investigation [s. 157 proviso (b)]	Send original information whether it be the Village Magistrate's Report or the information written or dictated by complainant or informant with Occurrence Report to the Magistrate having jurisdiction explaining reasons for not investigating
3 Accused arrested on sufficient grounds. Investigation cannot be completed within 24 hours	Send accused at once to the nearest Magistrate with Crime Occurrence Memo containing in exact copy of entries regarding the case in Station House Report.
(a) On completion of the investigation the case is found to be true	Note—If the accused is forwarded to a Magistrate other than the Magistrate having jurisdiction Occurrence Report as in Case I must be sent to the latter. Send Charge-sheet (Form No 45 Vol II) to the Magistrate having jurisdiction

(b) On completion of the investigation the case is found to be false.	Send Referred Charge-sheet (Form No. 46 Vol. II) to the Magistrate having jurisdiction through Divisional Inspector
4 On completion of the investigation the case is found to be true, the Police have done all in their power to find the offender or offenders and have failed.	Send Form No 47 through the Inspector of the Division to the Magistrate having jurisdiction.
5 The accused arrested. Inquiry likely to be completed within 24 hours	Detain the accused. Send Occurrence Report as in Case I
(a) On completion of investigation the case is found to be true	Send the accused (or in bailable cases bail bond) with Charge-sheet to the Magistrate having jurisdiction.
(b) On completion of investigation the case is found to be false or evidence is insufficient to justify transmission of the accused to Magistrate.	Release the accused on bail and send bond with Referred Charge-sheet through Divisional Inspector or to the Magistrate having jurisdiction
6 The accused not found but after investigation, the case is found to be true and such facts elicited as would justify his arrest	Send Charge-sheet to the Magistrate having jurisdiction asking for warrant
7 The accused not arrested or no person accused. After full investigation it is found that no offence has been committed	Send Referred Charge-sheet through Divisional Inspector to the Magistrate having jurisdiction.
8 After investigation it is found that the facts constitute an offence of a less grave nature than at first alleged e.g. charge of robbery found to amount in fact only to theft	Send Referred Charge-sheet through Divisional Inspector to the Magistrate having jurisdiction asking for authority to correct the record
9 The parties conciliated in a compoundable cognizable case request the Police to stop investigation on the ground that a compromise has been effected	Send Referred Charge-sheet through Divisional Inspector to the Magistrate having jurisdiction for orders.

Non Cognizable Cases

1 After investigation ordered by Magistrate case found to be true	Send Charge-sheet to the Magistrate by whom the case was referred
2 After investigation ordered by Magistrate case found to be false	Send Referred Charge-sheet to the Magistrate by whom the case was referred, through Divisional Inspector
3 The accused arrested under s. 57 name and residence not ascertained within 24 hours.	Send the accused with Occurrence Report to the Magistrate having jurisdiction
4 The accused arrested under s. 57, name and residence ascertained within 24 hours.	Release the accused and send bond with Occurrence Report to the Magistrate having jurisdiction.

Notes—(1) Station House Officers should endeavour to ascertain the truth and real nature of the case from the complainant and get the charge put up in its true character

(2) A report will be made to the Magistrate under s. 173 in all cases investigated by the Police irrespective of results.

(3) An investigation is held to be completed—(a) When the Police have done all in their power to find the offender or offenders and have failed. (b) When the Police arrest and charge an offender (c) When the Police refer is false a charge that they have investigated.

(4) The results of Police investigation into cases connected with other Government departments or establishments, should be communicated at once by the Police-officer making the investigation, to the local head of such department or establishment.

157. (1) If, from information received or otherwise, an officer in charge of a Police-station has reason to suspect the commission of an offence which he is empowered under section 156 to investigate, he shall forthwith send a report of the same to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of such offence upon a Police report, and shall proceed in person or shall depute one of his subordinate officers "not being below such rank as the Local Government may by general or special order, prescribed in this behalf" and to proceed, to the spot, to investigate the facts and circumstances of the case, "and if necessary, to take measures for the discovery and arrest of the offender

(a) When any information as to the commission of any such offence is given against any person by name and the case is not of a serious nature, the officer in charge of a Police-station need not proceed in person or depute a subordinate officer to make an investigation on the spot,

(b) If it appear to the officer in charge of a Police-station that there is no sufficient ground for entering on an investigation, he shall not investigate the case

(2) In each of the cases mentioned in clauses (a) and (b) of the proviso to sub-sec (1), the officer in charge of the Police-station shall state in his said report his reasons for not fully complying with the requirements of that sub-section, "and in the case mentioned in clause (b) such officer shall also forthwith notify to the informant, if any, in such manner as may be prescribed by the Local Government, the fact that he will not investigate the case or cause it to be investigated"

Note.—The addition made to sub-section (2) makes it obligatory on the Police to inform the complainant if the complaint is not investigated.

Notes 1—The difference between s 154 and s 157—is this, that whereas every information covered by the former section must be reduced to writing as provided in that section, it is only information which raises a reasonable suspicion of the commission of a cognizable offence within the jurisdiction of a Police-officer to whom it is given which compels action under the latter section, although, of course, a report would be sent to the Magistrate—Punj Cr Chap XLV, p 171

2 From information received.—The words "from information received" refer to the information given in s. 154, 44 C. W. N. 326 = 11 Cr. L. J. 201, 1914 M. W. N. 382 = 15 Cr. L. J. 622

REPORT.

3. First report of an offence.—"Occurrence Report."—The report required by this section is the first report of an offence, which an officer in charge of Police-station is required to make to a Magistrate as soon as he receives information of an offence and before entering on its investigation. It is to be made direct to the Magistrate in order that he may have an early information and be in a position to act, if necessary, under s 159 of the Code. A certified copy of the original crime report made by the Police pahil to the officer in charge of a Police-station should be attached to the latter's first report.—Bom. Pol Man, p 91 The report under this section is the preliminary report before investigation commences—3 C. W. N 351, 33 A. 30, 1899 A. W. N 87

4. Necessity for report.—Responsibility of Magistrates.—Failure to send the report required by this section is a serious breach of duty which may lead to failure of justice 4 B. L. R. 33 = 11 Cr. L. J. 498 This section requires that immediate intimation of every complaint or information preferred to an officer in charge of a Police-station of the commission of a cognizable offence shall be sent to the Magistrate having jurisdiction. The object of this provision is obvious and it involves more than a mere technical compliance with the law

* The words in the inverted commas, viz not be engaged in the behalf of and the one mentioned in clause (b) cause it to be investigated were added by Act XV III of 1921. measures and and in

The Magistrate is primarily responsible for the condition of the district as regards repressible crime, and he is not at liberty to divest himself of that responsibility, or to relax that supervision over crime which the law intends that he should exercise. It is his duty to know and consider each cognizable case as soon after its occurrence as possible. He should not rest content with reading the challan when the case comes up for trial, but he should watch the various steps taken by the Police and advise them in all cases whenever it may be necessary. Moreover, it is for the Magistrate, by the continuous study of diaries, to acquaint himself with what is going on of the salient and special kind referred to in the Code, as matters for his attention and possible interference. It is for the Police to keep the Magistrate constantly informed of them, Smyth, p. 83.

5. Intimation of offences to Magistrates.—District Magistrates should keep District Superintendents of Police informed as to the offences which each Magistrate in the district is (according to the class of the Magistrate and the general arrangements for the distribution of cases) to enquire into or try, in order that Police-officers may always know who is the Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of a particular offence to whom the report referred to in this section is to be sent. C P Cr Cr, Part II, No 10

6. Transmission of the Report in Burma.—In Burma, reports of the nature referred to in this section must be submitted to the Magistrate having jurisdiction through the District Superintendent of Police, or, if no such officer be resident at the station through the Assistant Superintendent of Police, or, if there be no Assistant Superintendent in the station, through the Inspector. If no District Superintendent, Assistant Superintendent or Inspector is resident at the station the report must be submitted to the Magistrate having jurisdiction.—Bur Gazette, 1879 Part II, p 189

INVESTIGATION.

7. Investigation under s. 157 does not include every inquiry which a Police-officer may make.—Most investigations are initiated on information recorded under s. 154 and vouched for by the informant. But the Police must frequently hear of alleged offences from less reliable sources, e.g. village gossip, or the receipt of telegram, which, so far as authenticity goes stands in no better position. In such cases it is discretionary with the officer to take action or not before deciding as to the course to adopt, he may frequently deem it well to make a few preliminary and informal inquiries as to whether there is anything in what he has heard to render a formal investigation desirable. 1915 M W N. 382 = 15 Cr. L. J. 622.

8. Does this section empower the Police of one circle to investigate an offence in another?—In 12 P. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 551, it was held that in s. 157 there was no provision preventing the Police of one Police-station from acting under that section in the jurisdiction of another Police-station.

9. Investigation to be conducted on the spot if possible.—Police-officers, when inquiring into cases under this Chapter, should not ordinarily send for persons who appear to be acquainted with the facts and circumstances of cases under enquiry to the station house for examination. It is true that Police-officers have the power to require attendance of witnesses. But this should never be done, save as a last resource or when circumstances render it necessary. Police-officers should always bear in mind that they are mere detective officers going about, noting (in their note-books) such information as they may be able to obtain with a view to future proceedings, that this will be far better obtained by going from house to house, and conversing with persons in the manner least likely to rouse their fears and cause reluctance to make disclosures that may result in their being obliged to appear before a Court of Justice to give evidence publicly, a public examination at a station house will always have this effect and therefore should be avoided as far as possible. Whereas if the convenience of the people be studied and enquiry conducted in a conciliating and judicious manner, people will more readily disclose what they know. At the same time, it is obvious that private enquiries must be very carefully watched, and men so employed be closely and constantly supervised.—Mad Pol. Man, p 90

10. Investigation in petty cases of theft in Madras.—The Police will record and report, but not investigate cases of petty thefts not exceeding one rupee. Such cases are cognizable by heads of villages. If complaints of such offences are made to the Police they will refer the complainant to the Village Magistrates. Heads of villages are required by cl. 2, s. 6, Reg. IV of 1821 to report to the Police, after disposal, all such cases of petty thefts in which they shall have exercised the power of punishment granted to them. The Police will of course investigate such cases and prosecute them before the regular Magistrates under the sections of the Penal Code, if attended with aggravating circumstances, or if committed by old offenders or by professional thieves. They will similarly prosecute before the regular Magistracy all cases of salt in which the value of the salt involved (cost price plus duty) amounts to more than four annas, and also all cases of petty thefts, no matter how small is the value of the property lost which occur in Railway trains or on the premises attached to Railway lines or stations Mad. Pol Mun Vol I pp 74 and 75

11 Rules to guide Police-officers to use their discretion in taking up investigation of cognizable offences.—Abstention from investigation—Bengal.—The discretion to be exercised regarding this matter is vested in the Police-officer and the responsibility of properly exercising it rests with him. As a guide however to the manner in which this discretion might be exercised the following broad principles are laid down —

I: Every reported cognizable offence should be investigated when an investigation is asked for

II No investigation should ordinarily be made into the following classes of cases unless an investigation is asked for —

- (1) Cases of house-breaking or attempted house breaking when there is no theft and no clue to the offender
- (2) Theft cases where the property reported to be stolen is—
 - (a) less than Rs 5 in value and
 - (b) of such a nature as not to be easily identifiable such as grain or fruit and
 - (c) the informant has no suspicion as to the offender
- (3) Assault cases when other charges such as theft are superadded and the latter appear to be more than doubtful
- (4) Cases in which the criminality of the act charged depends upon the decision of a question in dispute such as a question of title or possession which it is within the province only of a Civil Court or of a Criminal Court under Chap VIII or Chap XII of this Code, to decide

Police-officers must understand these are not hard and fast rules to be blindly followed in every case. These instructions indicate only general principles and Police-officers are bound by law to exercise their discretion in every cognizable case that is reported to them — Beng Pol Code pp 374 and 375

United Provinces.—In the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh no investigation can be made without the request of the injured person in cases of theft under ss 379 and 380 of the Penal Code in which the value of the stolen property is less than Rs 10 in cases of house-breaking by day under s. 403 and 404 and attempt at house-breaking of this nature unless there has been theft of property to the value of Rs 10 or upwards and in case of attempt at house-breaking by night under ss 456—459 of the Penal Code — Pol Mun A II P and Oudh Sec A p 139

Madras.—Investigation as a rule should never be refused unless it is clear that (a) there will be no evidence forthcoming (b) the case is so trivial that it is best for all parties to leave it alone (c) the case is clearly a civil one (d) the case is really a petty assault to which theft may have been added. It must be remembered that investigation does not necessarily mean an investigation at the spot. Under provision (a) a Police-officer in trivial cases may decline to go to the spot and very often should do so. But refusal of investigation is a different matter and when there is a definite complaint of a serious crime even if the complaint appears at first sight false the complaint should almost always be registered and investigation held. It is difficult to lay down any rule on the subject but the following rules may perhaps be of some assistance —

- (a) As a rule every complaint of a cognizable offence should be investigated either at the station or by visiting the scene of the alleged crime.
- (b) As a rule there should be only two reasons for refusing investigation —
 - (i) the triviality of the offence
 - (ii) the absence of any procurable evidence in cases of a petty nature

Under (i) in this (Madras) Presidency all cases of theft where the value of property is under one rupee may and should be as a rule refused investigation and the parties referred to the Village Magistrate. In all other cases the Police should investigate.

Under (ii) it must be remembered that it is only the absence of evidence and not the fact that the Police think it false that should be a reason for non investigation. Such cases would be complaints of attempts at house-breaking, where no theft is alleged to have taken place and the complainant is unable to give any reason for suspecting anybody—petty thefts of property under Rs. 3 in value where there is no clue whatever and the property is perishable and unidentifiable

In such cases as these last, however the action of the Police should be most carefully watched and any tendency to refuse investigation in cases other than those which strictly come under cl. 2 immediately checked.

It must be remembered that the mere suspicion that the evidence offered is false is no reason for non investigation and whenever the complainant alleges the existence of any evidence the case should be enquired into.

Practically the only cases in which much doubt can arise about the proper action of the Police are those in which the complaints are of attempted house-breaking and in such cases if the complainant alleges that he has reasons for suspecting any particular person or it is the case that there have been more attempts than one in the same village within a short time or that there have been suspicious characters seen near the village recently the Police should not refuse to investigate—Mid. Pol Man Vol I p 311

12 Where one Police-officer sees no ground, another Police officer cannot investigate—When no sufficient ground for investigation has been found by an officer in charge of a Police station no other officer is competent to make such investigation unless he is authorized by a Magistrate so to do—Ct H C Cir O dated 20th July 1871

158. Every report sent to a Magistrate under section 157 shall if the Local Government Reports under s 157 so directs be submitted through such superior officer of Police as the Local Govt. appoints in that behalf

(2) Such superior officer may give such instructions to the officer in charge of the Police-station as he thinks fit and shall after recording such instructions on such report transmit the same without delay to the Magistrate

Note.—As to Burm. see Note 7 to s 157

159. Such Magistrate, on receiving such report may direct an investigation or if he thinks fit at once proceed or depute any Magistrate subordinate to him to proceed to hold a preliminary inquiry into or otherwise to dispose of the case in manner provided in this Code

Power to hold investigation or preliminary inquiry

Notes.—1 Magistrate may proceed under this section only when preliminary report under s. 157 is sent—An inquiry can be made under this section only on a Police report submitted within the terms of s 157 & a report made before the completion of the Police investigation or inquiry but where such report is submitted after investigation the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to act under this section 4 G. W. N 331 In this case information was laid before the Police charging a person with criminal trespass into a house with intent to have improper intercourse with one of the female inmates thereof and the Police reported that they did not believe that the object was to commit the offence stated but that they were not disinclined to believe the charge of trespass held that the report was not one under s 157 and the Magistrate in such a case had no jurisdiction to act under this section and his action not being a judicial proceeding the direction of the Magistrate to prosecute the complainant for an offence under s 211 was set aside This case was followed in 32 A. 30

(1) Magistrate has no power to make further inquiry when Police report is made after full inquiry—It is only on receiving a report under s. 157 that a Magistrate is competent to hold a preliminary inquiry under this section. Where therefore a report of the commission of an offence has been made by the Police after full inquiry into the truth of the information given them as to the commission of an offence the Magistrate to whom such report is made has no jurisdiction either under the section or under s 207 to make a further inquiry into the same matter, 1899 A. W. N 87. The object of inquiry (or investigation) is to ascertain whether there are grounds for believing the accusation to be well founded. The section does not authorize a further inquiry. See also 32 A. 30, 17 G. W. N 824.

(2) Section not applicable when complaint made direct to Magistrate—If a complaint is made to a Magistrate himself he is bound to proceed under s. 200 30 G. 923, 10 M. L. T. 120 = (1911) 2 M. W. N 74 = 12 Cr. L. J. 453 and Note 4 to s. 156
